Gallup, N. M., Police Chief Believes Kidnaping "Hoax"

Disappearance Of 2 Men Baffles Law Enforcers

GALLUP, New Mexico, (AP)—Law enforcement agencies, some openly skeptical and others obviously puzzled, were searching Friday for Robert Minor, New York communist leader, and David Levinson, Philadelphia attorney for International labor defense, assertedly kidnaped by a band of hooded men.

Police Chief Presley Kelsey believes the "disappearance" was a "hoax."

A woman associate of the two men, Mrs. Joe Bartol, related the sensation tale of Minor and Levinson being abducted Thursday at midnight from a parked car in which she was discussing a case with her husband, a known character with murder in the April 4th jobs riot which took a toll of three lives. Searching officers were unable to find any trace of the reputedly missing men.

WASHINGTON
By Ray Tucker

Bear—It looks like curtains for Harold Ickes, star of the New Deal drama up to now. His role in the spending of the $4,000,000,000 designated to end the depression appears to be minor. President Roosevelt tried hard to placate all his prima donnas, but everybody on the inside knows that Frank Walker and Harry Hopkins will run the relief show.

Here's how it will work out: Mr. Walker will scrutinize all projects and submit them to the President and the Allotment Board headed by Mr. Ickes. The President has made it clear that Mr. Walker will "recommend," and it's a safe bet that Walker-approved plans will get the board's O.K. nine times out of ten. Mr. Ickes has only one vote on this 22-man agency, and he has many enemies among his associates. They think that he has soared too high and spread himself too much.

Next Mr. Hopkins takes charge in his inimitable way. He hates red tape as much as Mr. Ickes does on it. Hopkins will supervise construction, purchase materials, fix wages, hire workers and keep things moving. Mr. Roosevelt expects him to duplicate his record of employing 4,000,000 C.W.A. workers in a few months. Thus Walker will plan, Hopkins will perform and Ickes will growl.

Farmers And Ranchers Are Given Warning

Against Permitting Live Stock To Roam On State Highways

Farmers and ranchers were warned Friday against permitting livestock to roam on the state highway.

State Highway Patrolman Joe Fletcher quoted from the penal code which specifically prohibits free live stock from state highways in Howard county.

An increasing number of automobile wrecks have been due to collisions with domestic animals on highways near here lately. They have created a menace to drivers, Fletcher said.

According to article 1370, social option of the penal code, anyone who "shall knowingly permit any horses, mules, jacks, jennets and cattle to run at large shall be fined not less than $5 nor more than $200."

He disclosed that all real property within the city limits had been measured and checked as to dimensions, area, construction type, improvements, utilities, foundations, and land valuations.

The survey, he said, was made for the purpose of giving "the exact worth of the property and placing a just value on each piece of property without partiality to anyone."

Values on many homes have been reduced according to the survey report, while some of the larger places have been raised.

The heralds, Edna Earl Bradham, and Winona Edwards took their places on each side of the stage. The roses were the first to be called, and Bobbie Joe Grant, Margaret Spivey, Mary Alice McKimney, Lois Jane Bryant, Joy Rountree and Marjorie Parker came forth. They sang their song and then took their places at the side of the stage. The roses were followed by the violets, Gladine Fletcher, Vera Mae Wimberly, Mary Ellen Butler, Ruby Mae McCluskey, Elizabeth Davis, Francis Menor, Jeannette Blackwell and Helen Waldrum.

The sunflowers were little boys dressed in yellow and brown; Charles Gressett, Virgil Green, Jr., W. C. Filler, Bobby Cowley, Wyrion Davis, Harold Shaw, J. C. Coffman, G. B. ## COLBERT PROPORTIONS PERFECT

Hollywood's stylists, the world is discovering, are the best in the world. But their most charming creations mean nothing until they are shown off on the figure of a woman who knows how to wear them.

Such a woman, according to Travis Banton, one of the film colony's foremost designers, is Claudette Colbert, lovely brunette star of Paramount's "Private Worlds," which comes to the Ritz Tuesday and Wednesday. There's something about the Colbert figure that brings out the best in a gown, Banton explains.

What does it take to rate such praise? Well, perhaps you'll find the answer in these statistics on Claudette's figure. Get out your tape measure, and get busy—and if you come anywhere near the Colbert measurements, you can give yourself three good-sized pat on your back—and know that it's a back that deserves it.

Claudette's height is 5 feet, 3 inches; her weight, 107 pounds. Add a few more pounds if you're taller, but your basic measurements must be the same. Her neck measures 13 1/2 inches, her bust 32 1/2 inches. Her waist is a mere 25 1/2 inches, and her hips exactly ten inches larger, which, according to the best authorities, is just as it should be.

Mrs. Colbert has exceptionally lovely arms and Mr. Banton finds this a great asset in designing formal gowns for her. Her upper arm measures 11 1/2 inches, her lower arm, 8 1/2 inches, and her wrist, 6 inches.

With a figure like that, it's no wonder that stylists like to design clothes for Claudette. One of Mr. Banton's latest creations for her is the party gown which she wears in "Private Worlds" and which is shown above. It's of dark brown taffeta (stunning with her hair!) The elbow-puffed sleeves and the intimate detail lines make jewelry of any kind unnecessary.

TODAY and TOMORROW

By WALTER LIPPMANN
The President's Speech: Oughts, Musts and Dont's

It is interesting to compare the President's legislative program, as outlined in his radio speech of Sunday evening, with the report on business prospects published on Monday morning by the National Association of Manufacturers. The President's statement that never since his inauguration has he "felt so unmistakably the atmosphere of recovery" is matched by the report which says that "careful analysis of the business outlook indicates that the country is closer to breaking the back of the depression than at any time since the forces of recovery began working through the world in 1932."

When we compare the legislative measures which the President indorses with those which the Manufacturers' report specifically says that Congress ought not pass, we find the following result:

1. The President desires some kind of extension of the N.R.A. Presumably the Manufacturers agree since their report does not put N.R.A. on the "don't" list.
2. The President asks for legislation to regulate highway, water and air transportation so as to make the competition with the railroads more equal. Presumably the Manufacturers favor this legislation.
3. The President asks for old age pensions and unemployment insurance. The Manufacturers accept the old age pensions but oppose the unemployment insurance.

4. The President asks for a utility bill to eliminate "unnecessary holding companies." The Manufacturers wish to leave the question alone.
5. The President asks for the banking bill. The Manufacturers oppose it though presumably they are opposed only to that part of the bill which centralizes the control of credit.

So, as between the President and the National Manufacturers' association, the points at issue are (1) unemployment insurance, (2) the utility holding company bill, (3) the second section of the banking bill.

If the manufacturers are right in saying that "recovery is within our grasp" provided that their legislative program is followed, then recovery can not be greatly imperiled by the President's legislative program. Who will say, for example, that unemployment insurance can not be begun to operate for some years, will stop or retard recovery now? Granted that there are many headaches in unemployment insurance, which is what I happen to think, they can not be important for a long time to come. Who will say that the recovery of business can be seriously endangered because by 1940 in Securities Exchange Commission must ask the Federal courts to begin to dissolve those giant utility holding companies which have not gone through a voluntary reorganization? Who will say that the recovery of business can be seriously affected if the control of open market operations, the discount rate and reserve requirements is formally vested in the Federal Reserve Board or in the Board plus a committee of the governor of the reserve banks?

These are important issues, but they are not fundamental issues. From the long point of view it is important to decide them as wisely as possible; from the point of view of business recovery in the next few years it is most desirable to settle them, remove them from politics, and then work them out by voluntary action, administrative adjustment, and judicial decision.

It is fairly evident that the Administration's program of domestic legislation, in so far as anyone can now foresee the future, is really very far advanced and is near to being completed for the balance of Mr. Roosevelt's term. There is nothing that he absolutely has to have on which there is vital disagreement. Something must be done about N.R.A. to avoid the confusion of an abrupt ending on June 16. But unemployment insurance, the utility bill and the disputed part of the banking bill could be passed, could be compromised, or could be laid on the table without vitally affecting the course of recovery. Barring emergencies that can not now be anticipated, Mr. Roosevelt has already obtained from Congress all the powers and all the extraordinary money that he has to have for the balance of his term and what remains of his program falls into the category of "ought" rather than of "must."

This accounts, I should suppose, for the confident and quiet tone of his radio speech. He does not have to coerce Congress because Congress has already given him what he really needs. It accounts too for the lack of any invective against the opposition to the left and to the right. The answer to both is recovery rather than vituperation, and in so far as recovery can be induced by domestic measures, he is free to devote himself to recovery for the balance of his term and is amply equipped with all the necessary power.

The really vital issues which confront him are not in his relations with Congress or with industry or with the A. F. of L. or with the bankers or with Senator Long and Father Coughlin. His vital difficulty is international, in the strangling of the export trade and the disturbance of the American price levels. This is where the situation is not under control. The greatest threat to recovery comes from the fact that our economic system acts and reacts so sharply with international forces that at present lie outside the sphere of our effective action.

For example, beginning early in February we find a sharp rise in commodity prices as measured by Moody's index and in industrial securities as measured by Dow-Jones. Both reach a peak in the middle of February. In that period the pound sterling is somewhere between $4.85 and $4.89. Suddenly, round about Washington's birthday, the pound sterling starts to fall and reaches below $4.75 in the first week of March. Down comes commodity prices and security prices which reach their bottoms about the middle of March. Then sterling starts to climb back to parity and up go commodity and security prices.

Maybe there is no connection. Maybe it is all an accident and a coincidence. Maybe the American markets go up and down in the extraordinary fashion because the country is happy and depressed at what it hears from Washington. Personally, however, I do not believe it. Though I can not prove it, it looks to me as if the country was happy or depressed, Mr. Roosevelt's prestige rising or falling, discontent increasing or abating because the American economy is being inflated or deflated, stimulated or depressed, by forces originating in the international manipulation of the exchange, of gold, of silver and of the world price level. If that is true, then it is fixed our attention on that which should be looking at the forces that are now really affecting the course of recovery.

LAST PRE-NUPTIAL PARTY GIVEN FOR MISS WILKE AT LOVELY A. M. FISHER HOME

Five Table Of Bridge Players And Many Tea Guests Enjoy Afternoon And Bring Prospective Bride Nice Array Of Gifts

Climaxing the round of social events for the past three weeks that have complimented Miss Mary Alice Wilke, whose marriage to Edgar Poe Woodard of Stanton is set for Saturday evening, was the attractively planned bridge-shower given by Mrs. Albert M. Fisher Thursday afternoon.

The Fisher home in Edwards Heights was charmingly decorated for the occasion.

On the dining room table was a clever little bridge covered with ferns and flowers. At one end of it stood a miniature bride and bridegroom facing a minister and at the other a small automobile waiting to whisk the couple away on their honeymoon. Over the table hung a wedding veil constructed of white ribbon and lilies of the valley, the same bell under which Mrs. Fisher stood during her wedding ceremony.

Roses, pansies and a profusion of spring flowers from the hostess' garden decorated the rooms. The hostess, gowned in an unusually lovely frock of green, that carried out her party colors met her guests at the door. Miss Wilke wore a tailored afternoon frock of navy blue organdy trimmed in red tulle and white military braids. Mrs. Wilke wore a dress of black crepe trimmed with silver.

Five tables of guests played bridge and won prizes according to the number of honors they held or whether they doubled and won from rhymed directions on the table. Each guest selected her prize and kept it till the end of the games before opening it.

After the guests had progressed five times, the arrival of little Miss Marjio Thurman at the front door announcing a shower outside broke up the bridge. Marjio, attired in a raincoat, hat and carrying umbrella, asked for Miss Wilke, who let her in. She presented the honor with a traveling bag of gifts; these were then opened and admired. An unusually pretty refreshment plate, served at the close, carried out the color scheme of green and white.

Favors were little green umbrellas holding salted nuts; these were passed on a tray by Marjio, while the hostess passed plates holding green cream moulded in the shape of a wedding bell, a square of cakes laced in white and topped with rosebuds in spring colors, green candy, and canapes.

In addition to the players several guests came in at the tea hour. This list included Mmes. Ira Thurman, Vivian Nichols, W. F. Fahrnkamp, N. W. McKinley, G. T. Hall, Albert Allen, E. P. Woodard of Stanton, mother of the prospective groom, and Miss Beryl Tidwell of Stanton, a cousin of the groom, who will be in the wedding.

Those playing bridge were: Misses Wilke, Mary Vance Kenester; Mmes. George Wilke, A. E. Service, E. O. Ellington, R. F. Harris, Jr., R. C. Strain, Lee Hanson, Hubert C. Stipp, W. F. Cushing, J. B. Young, V. Van Gieson, Seth H. Parsons, J. D. Biles, John Clarke, C. W. Cunningham, R. Homer McNew, Noel T. Lawson, Victor Melinger, Emil Fahrnkamp.

Junior Hyperions Already Selling Tickets For Lecture Thursday

The members of the Junior Hyperion club have already launched their ticket sale for the last book review of this season, which will be given next Thursday afternoon at the Settles hotel.

The Junior Hyperion club has devoted its time this year to study of contemporary literature, each member giving one book review which occupied the entire program. Mrs. Ira Thurman, president, gave the story of Nijinsky, as told by his wife, Romola.

She has therefore been asked to review the story of this man, the world's most famous dancer, which she so ably reviewed before the club.

Mrs. Thurman is a Big Spring girl, the daughter of Mrs. Will Manger who resided here before going to San Antonio to make her home. After being graduated from the local high school Mrs. Thurman attended Valparaiso University in Indiana and studied expression at the Bush Temple-Conservatory in Chicago.

Her teacher and inspiration in expression was Mrs. May Julia Riley McKinley, head of the Bush Temple-Conservatory, one of the outstanding teachers of expression in the United States. She was a pupil of Sothern's, the famous actor. Mrs. Thurman has kept in touch with her teacher since her marriage, until the last year or two. Mrs. Thurman taught expression in Baird and in Big Spring, before her marriage which took her to Los Angeles to live for several years. She has made her home in Big Spring for six years, since her return with her husband and daughter, Marjio.

The club will use the funds from this review to add to its fund for buying new juveniles for the library shelves. Mrs. E. T. Cardwell has already helped the club select a list of standard children's classics which the library did not have. These have been ordered and are now arriving. But the shelves will hold many more books and the Junior Hyperion club wants to fill them. It hopes to make the children's department of the library adequate for the needs of the town, and this means a fairly large outlay of money for books, since the state aid did not materialize, as the members first expected. Those desiring tickets are asked to get in touch with any member of the club, or with Mmes. Ralph Houston, Hubert C. Stipp, G. T. Hall, who constitute the book review committee.

Chapter 38 LESLIE'S QUESTION

Leslie Harris had never married, to Miss Julia Pratt's keen and continued disappointment. About the time of the birth of the Stinson twins she had gone to Kansas City, and as the local paper put it, "accepted" a position in Kansas City's largest department store.

There, to New Concord's amazed surprise, she had in five or six years worked up from a humble clerk in the basement to the assistant to the head of the department of women's wear, and twice a year went East with the buyer to help select gowns and frocks.

All of the feminine half of New Concord who could afford it, except Jane Stinson, bought their gowns and frocks from Leslie as a matter of course. It was decided that this not inconsiderable patronage was responsible for Leslie's success. How else could a simple little dear like Leslie have attained to such business eminence?

Leslie, as a dressmaker, was sought after, had tabbed a natural pater about lines and colors and styles from her babyhood and she did know how to wear her clothes, but of course she was not really clever. It was said that she made seventy dollars a week, but New Concord did not believe it.

Why? Not half the professional men in her home town made so much.

Leslie continued to spend every other Sunday with her mother and father. She came one warm April afternoon to bring Miss Julia some yellow and lavender tulips. "Miss Julia, like your flowers always do better than mine," Miss Julia grumbled as she arranged her gift in a vase, "even though you're not here to look after them properly."

"They know how much I count on them," Leslie laughed. "I'll take them I cannot bear it in the city unless I know they're here blooming for me. And then of course father does take wonderful care of them. He's a better gardener than I ever was."

"It's a fine thing for your father for any man, digging and planting in the good warm earth."

"It keeps him busy," Leslie said. And changed the subject. A little later she had drifted over to the table where the vase stood and by pulling a tulip here, loosening another there, had changed a life into a happy bunch of suffering blooms to a lovely group that relaxed gratefully in the sunshine.

With her nose buried in the tulips, Leslie said, "Miss Julia, what's the matter with Jimmy . . . with James Stinson?"

"Matter? I don't know that anything's the matter. What do you mean?"

Leslie turned and seated herself on the edge of the table, facing Miss Julia. "He's so changed. You must see it. I sat behind him in church. He looked so . . . so dispirited. And there are such deep lines about his mouth. Is it Jane who's done this to him? Or what?"

"I don't know. I don't think so. Jane's made him a fine wife. Everyone says so. I suppose the trouble is, if there is any, that we all expect too much of James in the beginning. He expected too much of himself. And he's old enough to realize that he's just . . . just another run of the mill and nothing out of the way. I dare say it hurts."

"I don't think that's fair, Miss Julia. It seems to be the fashion in New Concord to belittle everything James does. He's only thirty-one or two and already he's made a name . . . a small name, but a name . . . all over this section for his sound sense and trustworthiness and his real ability as a leader in court. Mr. Ellison hears all the newspaper gossip. He says James has won cases that would do credit to any city lawyer of twice his age. And he's made a living for himself in a country town. Why then does New Concord laugh at him? Why do they dare refer to him as 'poor James'?"

"Because James doesn't value himself enough, I suppose. If a man doesn't think any too well of himself, he's noticed that nobody else does."

"James thought well enough of himself before he was married. Miss Julia, you know as well as I that it's Jane. I only see him at long intervals. And every time I notice the change. Jane is murdering him by inches."

"Yes, I mean just that. It's nothing short of murder to kill a man's self respect, his belief in himself. Miss Julia, can't you do something? Talk to Jane. Make her see that what she does to James she does to herself. If James' life is a failure, Jane's life is a failure, too. She doesn't seem to realize that though it's so obvious. Someone must wake her up, point it out to her."

"There may be something in what you say," Miss Julia said unasily. "Jane isn't always as tactful as she might be. Perhaps she doesn't handle him just right, though I know she means the best in the world."

"And you will talk to her?"

"I'll try. I'm afraid it will be difficult."

Miss Julia went to call on Jane and as Jane had expected her they had tea in the back parlor. Jane was in a good humor. It always pleased her to have an occasion to use her beautiful silver tea service.

Miss Julia in her embarrassment ate five sandwiches and a large piece of chocolate cake before she could gather courage to broach the subject which had inspired her visit. At last she put down her cup, pushed back her plate and plunged in head foremost.

"Jane," she said, "I've come here to talk to you frankly about James and I'm scared to death. I've been interested in James since before he was born. It occurred to me the other day that we, you and I and all of us who love James, haven't been quite fair to him. Because we expected too much of him, expected miracles perhaps, we've got into the habit of making light of the very substantial things James has already accomplished."

Miss Julia went on to quote Leslie, enlarging on James' past and present achievements. Jane listened impatiently, studying Miss Julia's embarrassed face curiously.

PENDERGAST'S SON AND BRIDE

More than 1,000 persons jammed into a Kansas City church to witness the wedding of Thomas J. Pendergast, Jr. (above), son of the Democratic chieftain, to Miss Mary Louise Weyer. The bride, shown above with her husband after the ceremony, wore a white satin gown with a five-yard train. They were to spend their honeymoon in Honolulu. (Associated Press Photo)

"Certainly James has made a living," Jane said, dryly, when Miss Julia paused. "So have most of the men of his age and condition. With the Judge to push him and his grandfather's name behind him I don't see how he could have helped it. But I confess I expected more from James than a bare living."

"I hardly call this exactly bare," commented Miss Julia tartly, with an appraising glance at the richly furnished room.

"You know perfectly well father gave me this house. If I had to depend on what James made I'd be living in a dump."

"You'd be living in James' own house . . . one of the handsomest houses in town."

"Yes, out in Niggerville with darkies for neighbors. No thank you, that if you were dependent on James you would be living in a dump, you make other people think of with you and I don't mean to sense, my child. You've got plenty of common sense. Think it over and you'll find that I'm right."

"Has James been complaining to you? Or is it the Judge? That doddering old idiot always has hated me, always has been jealous of me. I suppose James writes to him and he passes it on to you."

"You know how James was brought up? Fed with a silver spoon, waited on, deferred to like a little king."

be seen whether he can "take it" as well as dish it out—and some observers who know him well have their doubts. Coughlin's announcement that he will retire to the role of "teacher and interpreter" when the National Union is organized—plus his abstention from Milo Reno's Iowa party—are taken as evidence that he realized he has plunged too deeply into unknown waters and is trying to get back to shore. But keen watchers are convinced his caution comes too late. Now that he's in politics over his ears he can't withdraw—and is far more vulnerable in consequence. Students of his speeches say an intelligent attack could easily prove him as inconsistent as April weather—especially about labor. You hear it said that a comparatively modest expenditure—say $150,000—skillfully used for counter-publicity could smash his influence and his movement to shreds. Watch for an aggressive campaign to "that end. There are plenty of New Yorkers—and many conservatives—who would be glad to chip in for such a cause.

must be filed by registered corporations is slowing up registration a lot. Many companies rate this a worse intrusion on their privacy than the disclosure of officers' salaries and stock holdings. The commission may have to retreat to the extent of promising not to publish the information before it gets a satisfactory response.

A Window Box Of All-American Flowers

All-America trials would be interesting as well as decorative, would it not? Such a box can easily be grown. In the 1935 list of winners are several subjects suitable for window box planting. Petunia Martha Washington, nasturtiums Scarlet Gleam and Glorious Gleam hybrids, dianthus laciniatus splendens, and the annual anchusa. Blue Bird, would grow satisfactorily in window boxes. The dianthus is an annual pink, of brilliant crimson, and the anchusa is a forget-me-not flower of indigo blue.

Among the 1934 winners which had a continuous popularity since their selection last year the petunia Pink Gem would be excellent. It is a dwarf, compact and bush miniature of the giant sorts, standing from 6 to 8 inches in height. Another gold-medal winner was the linaria Fairy Bouquet, with its snapdragon appearance and easy culture. It blooms quickly and is a trim and dainty flower growing to about 8 inches. If color range is desired you will surely find it here, because it has a variety of brilliant tones. For a tiny sparkler, the verben Spectrum Red would be good. Build your window box of good strong material, so that the constant moisture will not warp and destroy it. A few holes in the bottom, covered with broken pieces of crockery, is good for drainage. On account of the small amount of soil in a window box, it is necessary to give your flowers plenty of water and plant food. Apply the plant food with a spoon, making sure not to get it on the plants. Water the box twice a day in exceptionally hot weather.

If you wish other subjects for your window box, one or more of the annual vines will prove decorative, and a plant or two of night-scented stocks, hidden behind the taller sorts will exude a delightful fragrance in the evening. The garden club movement is becoming increasingly popular all over the country. Few cities are without a garden organization to work for the beautification of the municipality either through individual efforts in home surroundings, or in public betterment in park and public ground planting. Every gardener might well join such an organization, or, if there is none, help to organize one. Usually it is a small group of from 10 to 25 garden enthusiasts. The machinery of organization is simple. A constitution is adopted stating the objects of the organization, the qualifications of members, methods of admitting new members and specifying the officers and their duties. The latter consist of a president and a secretary, the first usually naming the needed committee.

One of the chief qualifications required in garden clubs is that each member shall be a dirt gardener—that is, shall work in the garden, plant seed, and do other work and not entrust it entirely to an employee. The holding of shows is one of the most important functions of garden clubs. For this purpose a chairman is appointed to direct the work of a show committee, making out the lists of plants to be exhibited, the classes, decide upon and solicit prizes if the show is to be competitive and select judges. Non-competitive shows are becoming popular, too, owing to the difficulties of getting judges and to the ill feeling often engendered in the awarding of prizes.

One of the fine tasks undertaken by many clubs is the furnishing of flowers and fresh vegetables to hospitals and orphanages. Meetings are usually held every two weeks, rotating among the members who act as hosts. Many clubs make them luncheon affairs and others afternoon teas. They have become an important and very pleasant social function. The routine of the meetings usually consists in the study of the various phases of gardening, members being appointed in rotation to present subjects such as rock gardening, design, or on the various popular plants such as peonies, lilies, gladioli, dahlias, or chrysanthemums.

The spirit of the garden club movement is a fine one, and it is

Four Cities Ask For '36 WTCC Meet

Wichita Falls, Amarillo, Brownwood, Ft. Worth Throw Hats In Ring

(Special To The Herald)

PLAINVIEW—With the seventh annual convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce just two weeks distant, four cities have cast their hats into the ring for next year's meet, it was announced today at convention headquarters. They are Wichita Falls, Brownwood, Amarillo, and Fort Worth.

Each city is expected to make a strong fight for the convention, it was reported to headquarters Tuesday, and is already organizing its plans for an effective campaign to bring back the 1936 convention.

Amarillo was runner-up in the convention city contest last year, being defeated by Plainview by a very few votes. The Panhandle city is expected to storm Plainview this year at convention time with one of the largest organized groups of delegates and visitors, coming down with a large motorcade, plans for which are already under way, it was stated today.

Amarillo directors to the West Texas Chamber are Wilbur Hawk, a past president of the organization, Lawrence Hazy and Roy Cullum. Amarillo was a number of years ago, active in the organization of the regional chamber, numbering this time among its citizens men who were among the founders, and who have maintained an interest in the development of the chamber.

Special Train From Wichita Falls
Wichita Falls boosters will come on a special train, according to reports received at convention headquarters. Directors to the West Texas Chamber are W. B. Hamilton and Walter Cline, both past presidents, and Linton H. Estes.

Wichita Falls in making its bid for the 1936 convention is putting on a strong drive for memberships.

and expects to bring a large delegation to Plainview to help in its fight.

Brownwood Planning Motorcade
Brownwood is planning a large motorcade and will have a strong well organized group in Plainview to put up a fight for the 1936 convention. P. B. Budworth is director to the Chamber from Brownwood. This city, which entertained the organization several years ago, wants the convention back in that part of the country, according to advice received Tuesday at convention headquarters, and is expecting to put up a good scrap in order to get it.

Fort Worth In Ring
Fort Worth is coming to Plainview in numbers, and after the 1936 convention, according to word received here today. A special train, carrying at least 100 Fort Worth business men, is being arranged, it was stated. Fort Worth will ask for the convention for the first time since 1927.

The West Texas Chamber of Commerce was formed in Fort Worth 17 years ago, it was stated by C. C. Patterson, convention chairman of that city, and only one convention had been held there since that time, in 1928. Directors to the West Texas Chamber are Amon G. Carter, Van Zandt Jarvis and T. B. Yarbrough.
