Thanksgiving Greeting Issue

Next week's issue of The Success—for Thursday, Nov. 28th—will be our annual Thanksgiving Greeting Edition, with advertising, write-ups, etc., carrying out the theme of this most American of holidays. Our public-spirited merchants will have greeting carrying out the theme of Thanksgiving time.

We plan to have the Thanksgiving issue in the mail for our readers early next Wednesday morning in order to reach them that day, one day ahead of Thanksgiving Day itself.

There will be just three days of school next week. Thursday and Friday, Nov. 28 & 29, are designated as school holidays, so students and faculty will have a four-day holiday coming up.

The collective concern of area residents continues for Mrs. Gail Whitten, who continues a patient in the burns center at Galveston, and her infant daughter, who is still in Shannon hospital.

Wednesday of last week, a bake sale for the Whitten Fund was held at the Memorial Building and it was considered a success. It is reported in more detail on page 2.

Now another Bazaar has been set for Saturday, December 7th, also at the Memorial Building and it too will benefit the Whitten Fund. Read the announcement ad at the bottom of page 4 which The Success is running as a public service to our readers. The event set for Dec. 7th is designated a Food Sale, Handicrafts and Rummage Sale.

When 24 inches of rain fell here in less than two months, it brought on all kinds of trouble for just about everyone.

For one thing it brought about 10 weeks of muddy football fields.

For another it brought water-logged fields and delayed cotton gathering back at least three months.

Then along with water-logged fields there developed water-logged septic tanks—and that included yours truly.

Of course Eldorado is supplied with a generous system of sewers, but outlying areas like mine have to do with septic tanks which have served well for over 25 years.

This includes all the farm homes beyond the city limits. They all had septic tank trouble in recent weeks.

One person who has been busy during this period has been N. A. (Slim) Green.

Along with being a plumber, he has equipment for pumping out septic tanks and has answered calls from Eldorado as well as rural homes.

Mason Wins District

Mason defeated Menard last Friday night to take the District 9A grid title for the '74 season just ended.

Bake Sale Benefit For Whitten Fund Was A Huge Success

The Bake Sale held Wednesday November 13 at the Memorial Building, to raise money for the Whitten Fund, was a huge success. The people of the County gathered around 9:00 a.m. and tables were loaded with homemade goodies, canned goods, jellies, relishes, peppers, green beans, etc. The super cooks of Schleicher County so graciously baked and displayed their items and they were sold as fast as they could be marked and placed on the tables. There were various other items donated and everything was sold.

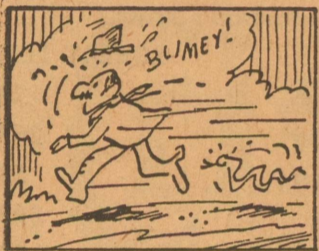

There was a line of people just waiting for a new item to arrive.

The very last customer of the sale was a couple of travelers who stopped at a local service station and saw the sign we had displayed; they talked with an employee and learned what the Whitten Fund stood for; then they asked for directions to the Memorial Building. When they arrived the only thing left for sale was two pints of homemade jelly which the travelers purchased and paid a nice price for.

The sale shows there are no finer people in the whole world than Eldorado. —Rep.

Potatoes And Their Uses

Regardless of how potatoes are served—baked, boiled or fried—they are one of the most popular items on the dinner table. Being readily available due to the many production areas, harvest dates, and the variety and maturity dates, they remain our number one vegetable. There are two main types—red and russet.

Potatoes should be purchased according to the way you plan to use them. Russet potatoes are best for baking and reds are a more general purpose potato, adapting to boiling, mashing and frying.

Medium size potatoes are best for general use. It's easy to estimate the number of servings and there is less waste in peeling than with small ones. Small potatoes may be preferred for boiling whole, larger potatoes for baking.

Regardless of the type of potato, be sure to select those of good quality—potatoes that are firm, smooth and well shaped. It's hard to judge the quality of potatoes covered with dirt, so select those that are reasonably clean. Avoid those with green color and/or blemishes. Bagged potatoes usually sell some cheaper per pound than loose potatoes. Read the labels on the bag for net weight, grade, name and address of the packer. The most common grade of potatoes is the U. S. No. 1.

Store potatoes at home in an area that is cool, dark and well ventilated. This helps to prevent sprouting, shriveling and decay. Refrigerator storage is not recommended because the potato starch changes to sugar with a resultant sweet taste when cooked.

Potatoes are relatively low in calories and are a good source of protein and vitamins. Cooking in their jackets and paring potatoes very thin helps them retain their valuable nutrients. A small boiled potato with very little butter comes to less than 100 calories. It's extra butter and sour cream that add calories, not the potato itself.

"Don't Buy A Pig In A Poke!"

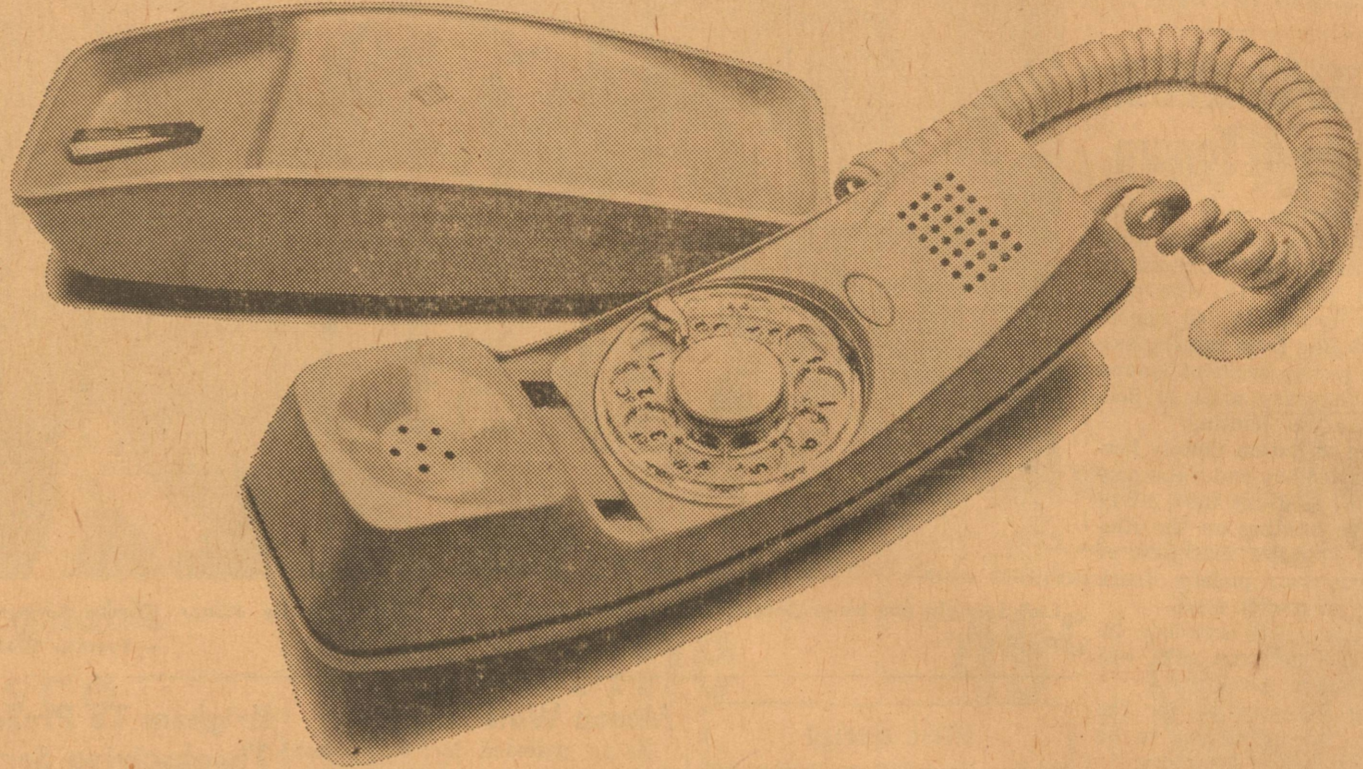

A "poke" is a colloquial term for a bag. This common expression advises buyers to buy only after looking at the merchandise. To give you a better look at the bacon you buy, the U. S. Department of Agriculture has a regulation that requires all bacon packages to have a transparent area at least 1 1/2 inches wide revealing at least 70% of the length of a representative slice.

To meet this requirement, many bacon packages have a new "back window"; some simply show a full slice in a front window. Here's what you should look for when looking through the window.

Look at the representative slice in the window to see how much lean and fat it contains. Select according to your taste, but remember that most of the bacon produced has a lean to fat ratio about like slices two or three. Do you like your bacon crispy or chewy? Distribution of lean, thickness of slice and cooking time are factors that determine whether bacon will be crispy or chewy. When fried, bacon with several strips of lean distributed throughout the slice will tend to be more crispy, while bacon with the same amount of lean concentrated in fewer but larger sections will tend to be more chewy.

Check Lawns For Brown Patch

The arrival of cool weather and recent rains have caused the spread of brown patch in St. Augustine grass lawns. Brown patch is a fungus disease that occurs in early fall and is characterized by circular patterns of dead grass from 1 to 50 feet in diameter. Grass at the outer edge of the affected area may appear dark and wilted and have a yellow "halo."

You can diagnose the disease by pulling a leaf blade from the runner. If it pulls free with only slight pressure, the grass is affected. In some cases a circular pattern is not noticeable and a large area of grass may be thinned and eventually killed by the disease. This often occurs in St. Augustinegrass growing in shady, moist areas.

Some effective fungicides for control of the disease are PCNB (Terraclor), manez zinc-iron complex (Fore), chlorothalonil (Daconil 2787) and benomyl (Benlate).

If the disease has affected your lawn every year, apply a fungicide before the disease appears. If brown patch occurs only occasionally, apply a fungicide at the first sign of the disease.

Watch For Prussic Acid Poisoning

Animals that graze on pasture or forage that has recently been hit by a frost are subject to prussic acid poisoning. Among grasses that are especially toxic to animals after a frost are Johnsongrass, Sudan and other sorghum hybrids.

Prussic acid poisoning is a disease which prevents oxygen in the blood from reaching the tissues and thus causes death due to suffocation.

Symptoms of the disease are suffocation and muscular twitching, and the animal may have his head turned toward his flank. The blood of the animal has a bright red color. Animals usually become affected within 10 to 15 minutes after eating toxic material and rarely survive more than one or two hours.

Livestock should not be allowed access to wilted material after a frost until it has dried completely. Grazing should also be prevented after a rain when new sprouts begin to form on plants.

Wilted material will usually dry out in a day or two of strong sunlight. New growth usually becomes non-toxic within a week to 10 days after a rain and can then be grazed safely by livestock.

If you're not sure about your pasture, have a veterinarian check it with a picrate test or have a sample checked in a lab.

One way to check a pasture is to turn out a less valuable animal that has been without hay or grass for 24 hours. A hungry animal will fill up faster and show toxic symptoms if the plant material is dangerous.

If you think your animal shows signs of prussic acid poisoning, don't hesitate to call a veterinarian immediately.

Crape Myrtles For Landscape Beauty

Few plants offer as much beauty for so little care as do crape myrtles. The tree's multitude of blooms provides plenty of color during the not too-summer, and its trunk and branches are attractive during the winter months. The leaves also offer fall color.

Crape myrtles, which grow abundantly over the entire state, are adapted to a wide variety of cultural and environmental conditions and need little care.

In many areas where large plants are not suitable, dwarf varieties of crape myrtle are being used for mass plantings. These are pruned heavily during the winter to induce more blooming in the spring.

Crape myrtles thrive best in sunny locations which have good, well drained soil. Application of a complete fertilizer will make for faster growth and more blooms.

One of the worst pests of the crape myrtle is powdery mildew. The disease can be controlled with Actidione PM and Benomyl.

Crape myrtles can be easily propagated from cuttings taken in early winter and placed in a moist area. Transplanting large plants is easiest when they are dormant, white container grown nursery plants can be moved at any time.

In the 1860's the Princess of Wales suffered a slight accident which for a time caused her to walk with an almost imperceptible limp. In a spirit of servile imitation, many of the women about the court also adopted this method of walking!

Range seeding and brush management are two of the conservation practices being planned and applied by ranchers in the Eldorado Divide Soil and Water Conservation District. The amount of brush management by remaining undesirable brush is far more than the acres of range seeding that has been applied. However for the past 12 years more of the acreage of brush management done mechanically is being re-seeded than in past years. Approximately 17,375 acres of range seeding was on the land in Schleicher county as of July, 1974.

The amount of range seeding applied each year began increasing in 1962. This was due to the fact that the District was activated into the Great Plains Conservation Program. Following brush management done mechanically on rangeland under GPCP contracts, range seeding is always applied, except under one condition. Rangeland in good condition having a sufficient amount of the high forage producing grasses does not require range seeding following brush management done by dozing or rootplowing.

Prior to 1962 very little range seeding had been done and a good stand of grass obtained. This was due to several things, most of which were due to planting methods and management following planting. Due to the fact that range seeding was not a success, ranchers were reluctant to plant grass.

The success of range seeding on places in the Great Plains Conservation is ample evidence that it can be applied. Even in the dry years since 1962 an adequate stand of grass has been obtained with only a very few exceptions.

Numerous factors essential in establishing a good stand of grass are: good quality seed with pound per acre planted based on pure live seed basis; proper preparation of seedbed; right distribution of seed for area being seeded; proper planting time; weed control when needed and feasible; and full deferment from the beginning of the growing season until after frost for two successive years. Range seeding has been carried out on nearly all land following brush management done by dozing or root-plowing and some range seeding has been done where brush management was not needed. Cost share assistance is available to producers with GPCP contracts on all rangeland needing re-seeding and on cropland being put back to rangeland.

Brush management can be done whereby enough is left for wildlife protection while most all of the undesirable brush is removed. Following brush management more of the rainfall is available for use by forage producing plants. When range seeding is done to establish more of the higher forage producing grasses, more feed per acre can be produced. More feed means more beef, mutton, wool or whatever the product being produced on rangeland.

After brush management and range seeding have been successfully carried out, the process of proper range management has just begun. Without the application and maintenance of all the needed soil, water and plant conservation practices, rangeland will soon be back in the same poor condition low in production. When proper grazing use, deferment as needed and maintenance of brush management is carried out rangeland continues to improve until the maximum potential production is reached.

Through June 1st this year 35 GPCP contracts had been prepared on 99,122 acres. Only one of the contracts did not have any brush management and two contracts did not have any range seeding to be cost shared on. Two new contracts have been approved recently and both have brush management and range seeding as a part of the contract. Three producers are presently being assisted by technicians of the Soil Conservation Service in preparing a GPCP contract for their farm or ranch. Applications for assistance in preparing GPCP contracts are being taken by SCS technicians assisting the District.

But No Ban This Year—

Prudent Use Of Holiday Lights Urged —Sawhill

Federal Energy Administrator John C. Sawhill announced today that holiday lighting will not be singled out this year for voluntary or involuntary curtailment.

"Our slogan, 'Don't be Fuelish,' means be prudent—perhaps fewer Christmas lights indoors and out," Mr. Sawhill said. "Sound energy conservation practices must continue. We must all reduce commercial lighting, adjust heating and cooling thermostats, improve home and commercial building insulation, reduce our driving, and strictly observe the 55-mile-per-hour speed limit. If we do all of those things, we will save enough energy to permit the decorative lighting which means so much to so many Americans on our holidays."

Mr. Sawhill has released a brochure, "Tips for Energy Savers," including a suggestion to "Reduce or eliminate ornamental lights except on special holidays or festive occasions."

"Christmas is not only one of our most festive occasions," Mr. Sawhill said, "the holiday selling season also is recognized for its importance to the economy—locally and nationally—and this need not and should not detract from the religious event being observed. Certainly, decorative lighting, itself, can uplift the spirit and add to the enjoyment of the holidays in our homes, stores, streets, and neighborhoods."

"I suggest that we can have our holiday lights and save, too, by taking sensible and tasteful—but not wasteful—conservation measures. One way to do this is to use low-wattage "cooler" and midget lamps on Christmas trees and in other decorative lighting. They use considerably less electricity than larger bulbs. Another way to compensate for both outdoor and indoor holiday lighting is to turn off regular lights in the same room or area while decorative lamps are on. Prudence also is called for in the lighting of community trees and other outdoor displays. This constraint need not be anything more demanding than simply turning them off nightly at a reasonable hour (10 to 10:30 p.m., for example).

"All of these steps will reduce the energy consumed and save money as well. I commend them to you as worthy national objectives which also are in keeping with the spirit of the holidays."

People once believed that fern seeds would make them invisible.

In Germany, fir trees were once believed to be able to cure gout.

In some parts of rural England, it's believed that fat from the snake that bit you will cure snakebite.

Somebody's trying to take something that belongs to you.

Right here in Texas

In fact, somebody's trying to take something that belongs to all of us; freedom of speech. Somebody's undermining your right to communicate, to listen, to have all available information on a given subject.

Somebody's trying to tell certain Arkansas companies they may not advertise their services. But advertising is just another word for communication. It is public information; it gives you a choice. It encourages new and better ways of doing things and helps continue the development of newer, better and more economical consumer goods.

Now, however, the right of certain Texas companies to communicate with their customers is in danger. This could ultimately have more far-reaching effects on free speech as we know it.

Right now, we want you to think very long, very hard and very deeply about advertising and about the good it does in America. We want you to think about its effect on business, on your own entertainment, on radio, television, newspapers and magazines, on your right to know.

We want you to think about the effect advertising has on your company's sales, and how the sales of your company affect your own life-style.

Right now, we want you to think very long, very hard and very deeply about the issue of free speech. Then we want you to write Governor Dolph Briscoe, State Capitol, Austin, Texas 78711, and your legislators and your friends and tell them how you feel.

The ball is in your hands. It's up to you not to drop it.

Advertising is everybody's business.

Market Report

College Station, Tex.—Turkey prices are much lower than they were last year, Mrs. Gwendolyn Clyatt said this week.

"Price dips are due to this year's good turkey crop and very high cold-storage holdings," the consumer marketing information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, said.

However, if turkey still doesn't fit the holiday food budget this year, consumers can choose turkey parts—or switch to another entree entirely, Mrs. Clyatt added.

Choices include chicken, ham, or certain beef cuts.

"A variety of steaks, chuck, rib and rump roasts—and ground beef—are meat market features."

Commenting on Thanksgiving vegetables, the specialist said sweet potatoes will reach their peak in time for the holiday, and white potatoes—at much lower prices than last year—are in abundant supply.

"Broccoli and Brussels sprouts are now in their peak season, and bulk turnips and rutabagas are readily available."

Carrots, cabbage, squash and dry yellow onions are other economically priced selections.

"Also, cranberries are abundant—with prices near or slightly below last year's levels."

Holiday fruits include tangelos, with 40% of that crop coming to market this month. However, tangerine supplies won't peak until December, the specialist said.

Mrs. Clyatt termed Texas grapefruit flavor "delightful" this season and reported a supply increase. "Buy it by the bag," she added. Grapes, bananas, oranges and pineapples are other good fruit choices.

"New crop pecans are on the market at prices near those of last year, but there will be a price increase as the season advances, because this year's crop is smaller," Mrs. Clyatt predicted.

Termining rice "an important staple," the specialist reported it plentiful now. This year's crop is 22% greater than last year's.

On buying eggs, she cautioned consumers to choose those from refrigerated cases—"also, read labels carefully for grade and size."

"Medium-size eggs are likely to be close to large-size in price. Larger sizes are the better buy, if there's less than a seven-cent price spread (per dozen eggs) between one size and the next smaller size in the same grade."

Consumer Watchwords: "Waste" is the villain that breaks the holiday food budget.

If turkey is the Thanksgiving choice, usually there will be enough meat left over for one or two special turkey dishes.

Also, simmer the bones for soup stock.

Newsman Out

Rep. Bill Clayton of Springlake, expected to be named speaker next January, said consideration is being given to barring news reporters and other non-legislators from the House of Representatives floor.

No firm decision has been made, however, Clayton stated. Meanwhile, the House administration committee named a three-man sub-committee to consider what facilities may be made available for reporters covering the legislature if they are banned from the floor during legislative debate.

Clayton said he considered the move only in the interest of promoting "decorum" in the legislative process. He said onlookers at the capitol are dismayed by what they see on the House floor, and anything that helps restore order may be a public service.

Quick Ones . . .

Atty. Gen. Hill proposed creation of an underground water conservation district to deal with the subsidence problem in the Harris County area.

Gov. Briscoe requested declaration of Reeves and Hill counties as disaster areas due to losses to farmers and ranchers because of adverse weather conditions.

Plans were announced for a $155 million expansion of the International Paper Company's pulp and paper mill in Texarkana.

Teachers will ask the legislature for a billion dollar salary raise—providing $8,200 starting minimum, and an average $595 above the national median.

Austin, Tex.—The whopping state surplus expected to be available to the legislature will permit $500 million in new spending without generating tax bills for another eight years.

This was the good news handed a House revenue and taxation sub-committee last week.

However, Texas Research League added the warning that spending all the billion dollar surplus in sight would make a $1.43 billion tax bill necessary in 1977.

Legislative Budget Board has told lawmakers present spending levels, plus mandatory increases for state employee salaries and emergency school aid, will "leave over" $1.502 billion at the end of fiscal 1977.

A TRL projection handed the legislative sub-committee discussed creation of a tax stabilization fund as one alternative for dealing with the unprecedented surplus.

Creation of the fund would make it possible to avoid new state taxes for at least eight years and still permit new program spending of $250 million a year increasing to $500 million a year by the 1982-1983 biennium, TRL calculated.

However, TRL conceded: "It may be unrealistic to suggest that the next three sessions of the Texas legislature might be willing to hold in trust such a large surplus solely for the purpose of avoiding tax increases in future years. There is no historic precedent for such restraint."

School Aid Altered

An attorney general's opinion, hailed as one of the most significant in recent months, signaled a new approach to state formulas for finance aid to schools.

Atty. Gen. John Hill held the Commissioner of Education should require county tax assessors to report the percentage of market value used in determining assessed property value.

And he said the commissioner should use that data in "computing the county economic index to achieve uniformity of property values of each county as compared with every other county."

Education Commissioner Dr. M. L. Brockett last week wrote all county tax officials requesting the data, and said it will be used for computing the 1975-76 economic index to be considered by the State

Special Gift

You could pass the tree a hundred times without seeing the bright little bird peeping out.

Nature neglected to give man such camouflage. In the scheme of things he is actually quite obvious. But God created man in His image—a much greater asset. He was given a strong body and a mind with which to think. And He has given us a very special gift; the miracle of Faith.

Yes, Faith is a gift. It comes only through our seeking, and the quest is not an easy one. Strangely enough, you might not find Faith in church. But there you will discover where to begin to look for it.
