Understanding Yourself

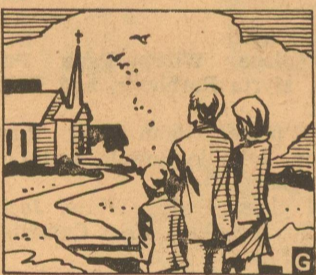

Helpful Ideas From The International Lutheran Laymen's League

LISTENING FOR GOD

Many husbands are deaf. At least, their wives think so. They tune out things they don't want to hear.

Is God deaf? Many people wonder about that. Some of them actually think He is.

God does things in His own way, but He acts. He hears and He answers. The answer may not be exactly the one you're looking for right now, but He answers. It takes faith to know God in that way, and that is the way He is.

Sometimes you wish He would answer your prayer right now in the way in which you want it answered. He doesn't; you are exasperated and your exasperation comes out in that very understandable question, "Is God deaf?"

No, God is not deaf. He hears and He gives, more than you can ever ask or think. That's the way God does things, in His own practical, Godlike way.

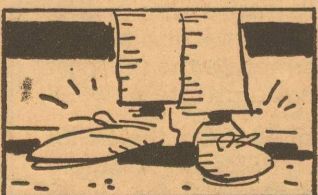

For a free reprint of the Lutheran Hour sermon called "Is God Deaf?" send your name and address to The International Lutheran Laymen's League, 2185 Hampton Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri 63139.

It is said that the first public library was founded in Athens in 540 B.C.

Keeping fingers crossed to ensure against disaster, comes from the superstition that making the sign of the cross will avert bad luck.

Some people believe that if you put on your right sock and shoe before you put on your left sock and shoe you will have a good day.

Tuna Spaghetti For Budget Meals

Packaged dinners can provide you with an economical and easy way to feed your family without skimping on quality or appetite appeal.

Italian style spaghetti dinner, the base for Tangy Tuna Spaghetti is only about 18¢ per serving "as is." Home economists in The Kraft Kitchens have used their imaginations to create an interesting yet economical variation on this basic dinner by adding canned tuna, milk, green pepper strips and shredded natural cheddar cheese. Served with a green salad and fruit and cookies for dessert, Tangy Tuna Spaghetti makes a special occasion of an everyday meal.

You can use your own ingenuity to vary basic spaghetti dinners. Here are some more ideas. Prepare tangy Italian style spaghetti dinner and sauce as directed on package. Add browned pork sausage, zucchini and mushroom slices to sauce; heat thoroughly and serve over spaghetti. Or make a spaghetti-cheese casserole. Just layer hot prepared dinner with mozzarella and cottage cheese in a shallow baking dish. Bake in moderate oven until bubbly.

When you're looking for economy and fine flavor, don't overlook packaged dinners as a way to stretch your food budget . . . tastefully.

Tangy Tuna Spaghetti

- 1 cup green pepper strips
- 1/4 cup Parkay margarine, melted
- 1 pkg. Kraft tangy Italian

- style spaghetti dinner
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 cups milk
- 1 6-1/2-oz. can tuna, drained, flaked
- 1 cup (4 oz.) shredded Kraft sharp natural cheddar cheese
- Sauté green pepper in margarine; blend in The Herb Spice Mix and flour. Gradually add milk; cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Add tuna. Cover; simmer 10 minutes. Add cheese, stirring until melted. Prepare spaghetti as directed on package; toss with The Grated Parmesan Cheese. Pour sauce over spaghetti mixture. 4 to 6 servings. Variation: Substitute 1 cup chopped cooked chicken or turkey for tuna.

Triumphs Of Science

There is new evidence on the animal research level to suggest that marijuana smoking may be detrimental to the health of the chronic user.

Tests on animals show that marijuana, when administered in daily doses approximating human intake, impairs immunological defense mechanisms, disturbs the normal functioning and growth of some vital organs, evokes aggressive behavior, retards the reproductive processes via reduction of the level of hormones circulating in the blood, and increases the number of faulty pregnancies (those in which the fertilized egg does not develop).

Though further confirmatory work must be undertaken, animal studies are important prerequisites to safe experimentation on humans. For the clinical approach, the physician is dependent upon laboratory animal data to alert him to the potentially harmful side effects of marijuana.

Only recently have analytical procedures become available for measuring the levels of delta-9-tetrahydrocannabinol (THC), the major psychoactive ingredient of marijuana in blood and tissue. The Mason Research Institute (MRI) of EG&G, Inc., a Massachusetts-based scientific corporation, is now entering significant new phases of testing long-term toxicity studies of marijuana.

One-year tests on animals, equal in human terms to 21 years, are being carried out using an MRI perfected inhalation technique.

The research represents one of the most extensive efforts yet made to determine the chronic effects of marijuana use and will include post-test studies to determine whether impaired processes revert to normal after marijuana intake stops.

Future research will contend with sources of marijuana, since its chemical content differs depending on where it is grown.

It is also possible that synthetic chemicals related to those in marijuana may prove beneficial when prescribed. THC itself has been found valuable in combatting glaucoma.

According to Dr. Harris Rosenkrantz, vice president and director of biochemistry at EG&G's Mason Institute, in measuring the value of laboratory research, considerable attention is paid to the degree of control attainable. Clinical studies, on the other hand, may encounter variables having a strong bearing on the results obtained. It is a relatively routine matter to exert control over animal colonies, regulating precisely their environment, their diet, and the drug dose they receive. Human subjects are not as easily manageable, and their measured reactions to marijuana use may be influenced by a variety of factors of which the experimenter is not aware, such as poor nutritional habits, emotional instability, and the use of alcohol and/or drugs in combination with marijuana.

SOLAR HEATING—HOW IT WORKS

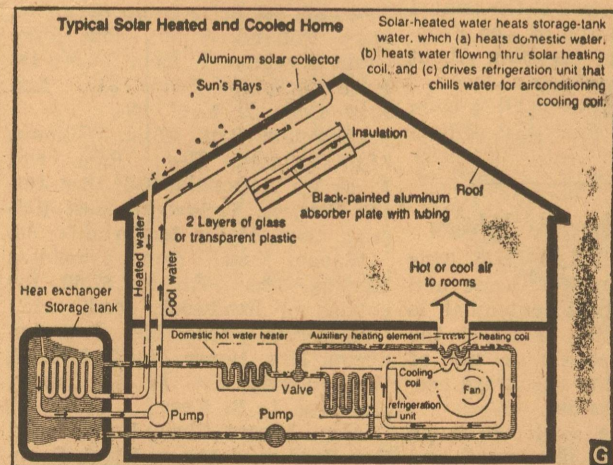

A surprisingly small number of people know very much about a very old energy source that scientists are saying could be the new wave of the future—the sun.

Solar energy has the potential to cut America's heating and cooling energy consumption by a fourth.

According to experts at the Aluminum Association, solar energy can be converted to heat via collectors. These flat plates, resembling large picture windows, are installed on the roof of a home, facing south, to get the most sun. About 500 square feet of collector area will supply most of the heat for an average home in a moderate climate.

The collectors usually consist of an aluminum frame containing an aluminum collector plate (holding a number of aluminum fins), colored black to increase heat absorption. They are usually made of aluminum because that metal is lightweight, corrosion-resistant and an excellent heat conductor and very cost effective.

The entire assembly is covered with two layers of glass or special plastic with an air space between. Like an insulated window, this double-paned cover reduces heat loss, thereby increasing the collector's heat-trapping efficiency. It is backed by conventional insulation which also helps to hold the heat.

A fluid, usually treated water, flows through the collector, picking up heat from the aluminum absorber.

This heated water flows to a storage tank where it transfers its warmth to a conventional hot water or air system for distribution around the building by traditional methods. Since peak heat requirements and peak sunshine don't usually occur at the same time, the heat is often stored as hot water and can still be used after a few days of cold and cloudiness.

Air conditioning can also be run with solar energy, when the heated water is run through an absorptive cooling system.

Already installed in hundreds of buildings, solar energy, it has been predicted, will be used to heat and cool about half the new homes that will be built in 1985. The energy situation being what it is, that would seem to be more than just a lot of hot air.

UNDERSTANDING OUR ECONOMY

HOW TO GET MORE FOR LESS

Surprising as it may seem there is a way to get more out of less.

The "more" in this case is electrical products and the less is the amount of energy they use.

For example, today's new electric generating plants are producing more power from less fuel. Back in the early days of this century, such plants used 3½ pounds of coal to produce a kilowatt-hour of electricity. But today's plants, equipped with modern steam turbine-generators, use less than 11 ounces of coal to produce a kilowatt-hour.

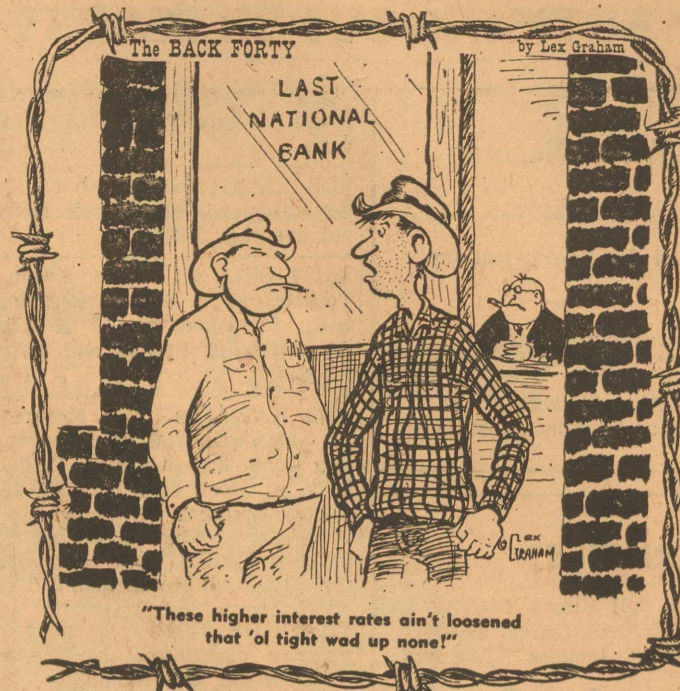

Many cities are now using an energy-saving street lighting system which produces twice as much light as ordinary systems on the same amount of electricity. Communities using the new Lucalux system, as it is called, are not only conserving energy but making streets safer at the same time.

Other ways are being found to stretch our energy resources. Among these are home appliances which work better, yet use less current. And electric generation systems using nuclear power can help save dwindling reserves of oil and gas for jobs that these fuels do best.

Two older, yet formerly unused energy sources, are being explored to give us more for less. They are underground steam and rubbish. An especially designed turbine-generator, the largest of its kind in the world, is now being built in Lynn, Mass., by the General Electric Company to be driven by steam from beneath the Earth's crust. At the same manufacturing plant, a nearby waste-burning facility will supply steam generated from trash to meet the energy needs in thousands of manufacturing jobs.

Still another energy saver now coming on line is the combined cycle generating plant. It uses the exhaust heat from gas turbines to produce steam for steam turbines, thus wringing even more electricity from each unit of fuel.

Getting more for less is good news for the American public, especially in these times of spiraling energy costs.

Is Your Bathroom Neglected?

— Why Not Pretty It Up... —

Is there anyone, anywhere, who hasn't said at one time or another, "This room looks a mess!"

A comment like this could refer to any room in the home, but the bathroom is often the most neglected and drab room.

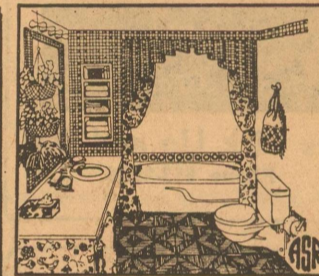

A prettier bathroom could easily help inspire the entire family to keep it clean and looking nice. When it comes to decor, the bathroom deserves as much attention as any other room. By making a few sensible and interesting changes, there'll be no need to apologize for its appearance.

While many bathrooms today are better equipped than they were a generation ago, many people feel their bathrooms are inconvenient, bedraggled and just don't look nice enough.

Since it's impossible to stretch the walls of an existing bath to accommodate one of the new oversize tubs, and since just about everyone is complaining that dollars don't go very far today, the economical route to take is to redo the bathroom by making simple and imaginative changes.

The Scott Paper Company's Home Service Center has some tips on how to accomplish this inexpensively and creatively. By scouting around, you'll become aware of the variety of products that can help you achieve comfort, convenience and a delightful appearance.

For instance, there are a wide variety of wall-mounted or floor-mounted "caddies," in brass, chrome or lucite, that will solve storage problems in a decorative fashion. Wicker baskets, in all shapes and sizes, are functional and smart looking additions to the bathroom.

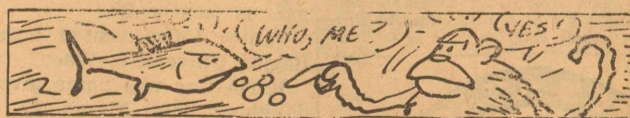

Color can do wonders, too. You can paint a supergraphic on one wall — stencils are available for this purpose. Today's easy-care wall coverings, in addition to the conventional paint and tile, can withstand the rough and tumble of bathroom use and still remain beautiful. Very often they come with color-matched shower curtains, window curtains and floor coverings.

As you transform the bath with color, follow through on the smallest details. Necessary paper products are perfect for that. Lady Scott bath and facial tissues in matching designs and a variety of colors are an inexpensive way to add just the right touch to the bath. Some people find that Lady Scott white-on-white bath and facial tissue adds a sophisticated and pleasing look, especially in a bathroom where daring colors are used on the walls and floor.

Another stunt that can brighten your bath in a hurry is to copy the avant-garde decorators who make their baths miniature greenhouses or art galleries. An area filled with inexpensive plants looks cheerful, and the moisture from the shower helps them thrive. A wall hung with pictures, family photos, prints cut from magazines, or good museum reproductions, is certain to bring you compliments about the creative flair that is uniquely yours.

According to tests, a mouse's favorite food is chocolate.

BIBLE QUESTIONS
QUESTION: "How does the Bible relate to such claims as made by some like: 'Sonora Caverns - 60,000,000 years old'?"
ANSWER: The Bible again STANDS as the authority. Space doesn't permit a thorough discussion, but consider these basic thoughts: Every blatant declaration such as the above finds its root in the ignorance of the one making the claim, and the gullibility of those who pay attention to it.
To support such a claim, a scientist must have an accurate measurement of a stable material from which to build a THEORY. The fact has come to light, that the methods of measurement, such as radio-active isotopes, radiocarbons, astronomic, with the lead-age methods, Rubidium, Potassium, etc. are postulated upon certain assumptions. For an example, IF, in the formative processes of lead, made from Uranium 238 to Lead 206, there are no further influences exerted upon the process, and this remained constant, or uniform, an estimate could be made. There is, however, such problems as the loss of Radon 222 causing a rais-

How You Can Save Energy Doing the Laundry

Can the energy-conscious homemaker help cut her utility bills in the laundry room? Yes, indeed, says a report issued by the Consumers Institute for General Electric and Hotpoint.

The answer is to shift from washing everything in hot water and giving it a warm water rinse, to washing in warm water (at least 80° F) and rinsing in cold water, says Jane Butel, manager of the Consumers Institute.

For a typical homemaker who does 410 wash loads a year (that's right—some 34 a month is average), the switch from hot wash/warm rinse to warm wash/cold rinse will save about 7,100 gallons of hot water annually.

Translating that into dollars and cents, if you heat water electrically you could save up to $55 a year on electricity. That's figuring the cost at the projected national average of 3.4¢ kwhr—which is considerably below the going rate in many areas, such as the mid-Atlantic states and Florida.

Even if you heat water with natural gas, you'll save about $11 a year (at 15¢/100 cu. ft.). But, just as important, says Ms. Butel, you'll be developing a habit which will pay off as gas prices keep rising, or should you later move to an area where new natural gas hookups are banned.

"Many consumers can use lower wash temperatures and still obtain very adequate cleaning," says Ms. Butel. Laboratory tests, she says, show that cleaning increases only slightly as water temperatures go above 80 degrees. However, she cautions, at temperatures much below 80 degrees cleaning ability drops off sharply.

For exceptionally heavy soil, water temperature can be adjusted for the best compromise between energy saving and cleaning.

An often voiced concern is whether warm water washing and cold water rinsing is sanitary. "Families with small children or illnesses are generally worried about sanitation," says Ms. Butel, "but they can use the warm water wash/cold rinse formula, too."

"While lower wash temperatures do result in an increase in the number of bacteria remaining on the fabric at the end of the wash cycle," she pointed out, "bacteria removal is about 99% when both an automatic dryer and chemical additives, such as chlorine bleach, are used."

For families that must dry clothes on indoor lines, Ms. Butel recommends using a 20-minute wash cycle in 140 degree water plus chlorine bleach for items prone to bacterial concentration, such as diapers, and for all washable apparel (where consistent with garment-care labeling) during times of illness.

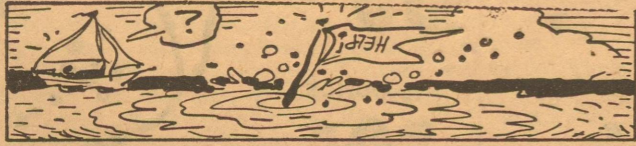

In addition to the money and energy to be saved, consumers will find that doing the home laundry in water that is less than hot has two other benefits: it will help keep colors brighter and will lessen wrinkling of permanent press fabrics.

Think of your car as an athlete which needs to warm up gradually. Rev-up slowly.

To keep rice and macaroni products from sticking, put two teaspoons of cooking oil in the water. They'll glisten and stand apart.

At sea, when a flag is flown upside down it is a signal of distress.

Less Drudgery...
... More Living

That's what retirement has meant to Fred and Frances. Of course, they spent close to forty years getting themselves ready.

They learned the richness of living... the adventures of believing and serving and sacrificing. They surrounded themselves with people who care, who are concerned, who like helping others. They based their lives on truths and ideals that do not change with every passing opportunity or disappointment. They found God.

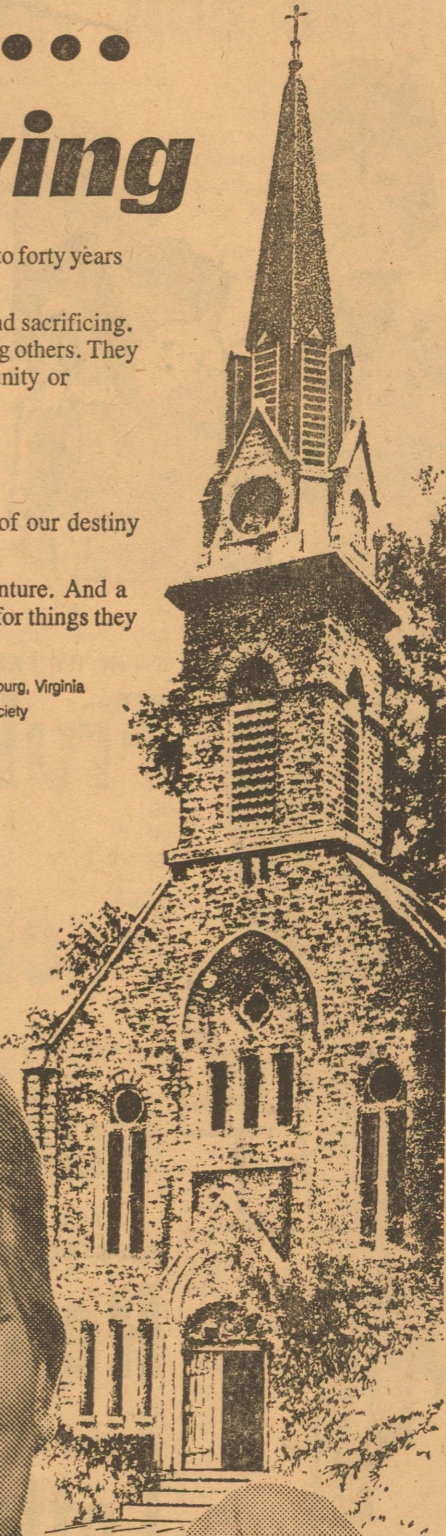

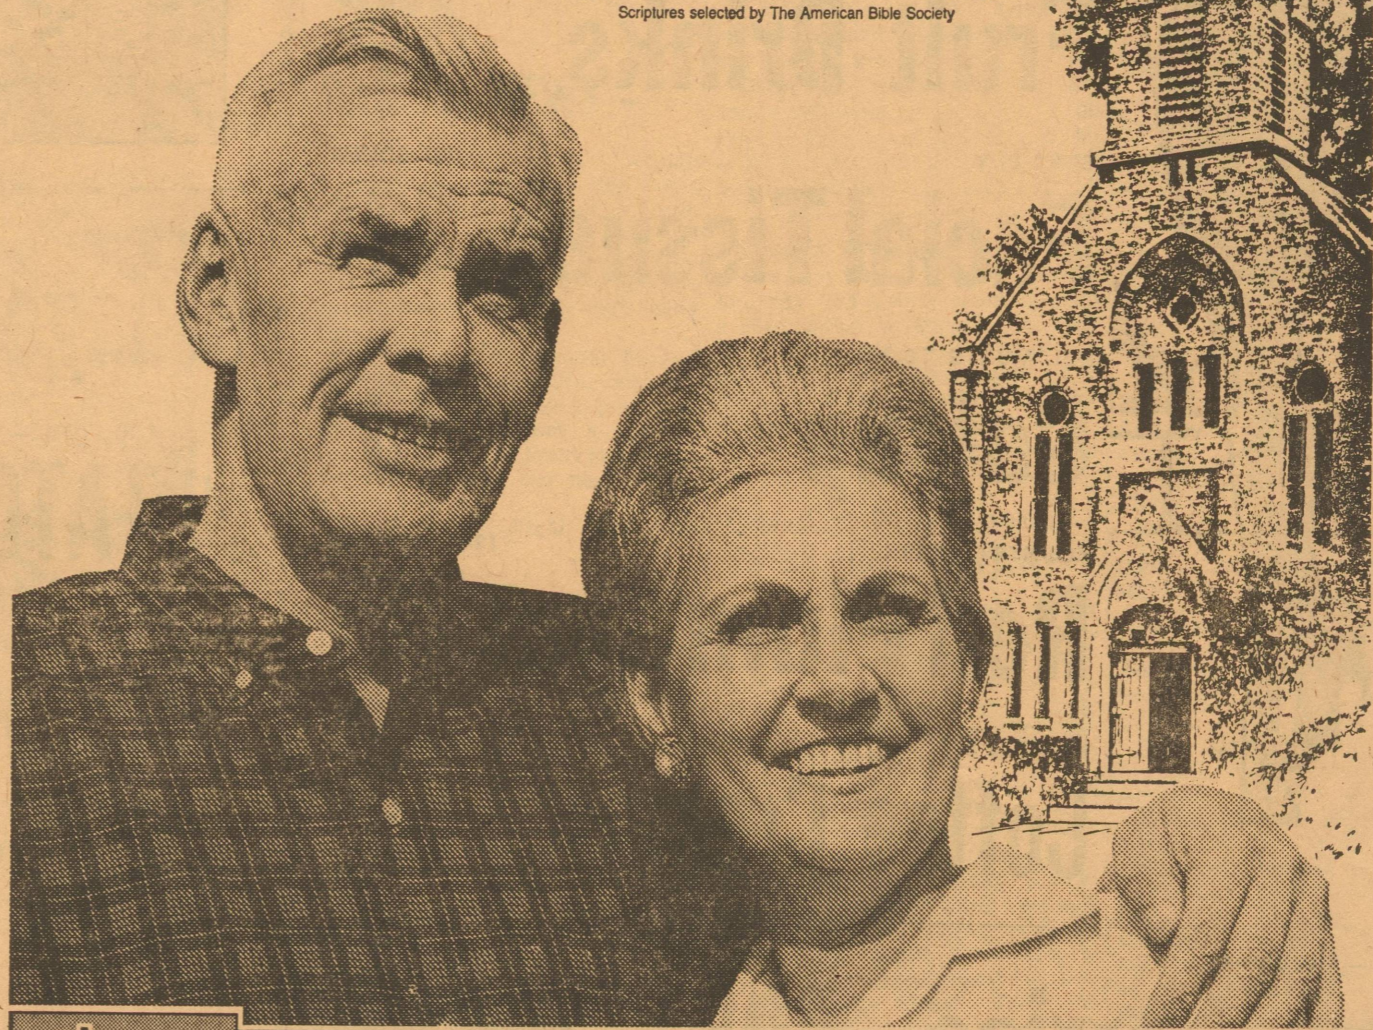

Now they are prepared to enjoy the rest of life.

Not the REST. Who looks forward to idleness?

Rather THE REST... the years not yet lived... the unfolding culmination of our destiny as children of God.

In the lives of Fred and Frances, retirement has been one more Christian adventure. And a blessing to their church, their community and their family. They have more time now for things they ALWAYS valued most.
