Post Script

With passing of the run-off Democratic primary Saturday, Bob Krueger emerged as winner and he will meet Doug Harlan of San Antonio, the Republican nominee, in November in the General Election. Now it's the "battle of the bachelor Ph D's" and both Krueger and Harlan can be expected to intensify their campaigns during the five months that remain between now and November 5th.

Winning of the Democratic primary is no longer "tantamount to election" as used to be said.

Krueger won much support in out-lying counties of the 21st Congressional District during the two Democratic primaries held recently. But Krueger will not have an automatic ride into office in November since Republican Doug Harlan can count on considerable support from the populous San Antonio area.

Both Krueger and Harlan hope to succeed retiring O. C. Fisher who was first elected to office 32 years ago when Tom Green and adjacent counties comprised the 21st Congressional district.

About 8:00 o'clock Friday night a big black cloud hit Eldorado bringing cold strong winds, carrying with it an hour or more of driving dust and sand.

It didn't do anything for Eldorado except to bring more delightful cooling weather. San Angelo got the brunt of it, but it apparently caused no damage there, either.

We seem to be in an area where erratic weather conditions can appear almost without notice.

Saturday night at 10:00 o'clock, Eldorado, Sonora and Tom Green were again in a weather alert. On Sunday morning residents awoke to find we had had four to five-tenths of an inch of moisture.

Vaughan Resigns As Local Baptist Pastor

KENNETH VAUGHAN

Resigning as pastor of The First Baptist Church here recently was the Rev. Kenneth Vaughan, who has served in the local pastorate for 11½ years. He came here in January of 1963 from Eden.

Rev. Vaughan has accepted the call to the First Baptist Church at Comanche, Texas, and will move his family there June 10-12 where the Vaughan children will enter the AA school in the fall.

During Rev. Vaughan's term as pastor, the Baptist church building had the front remodeled, the educational extension was added to the east side, and the heating and air conditioning systems were renovated, all in about 1964.

This past year, the auditorium underwent a $50,000 renovating project.

A pulpit committee has been named to help procure a new pastor. The members are Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Robinson Jr., Guy Whitaker, Ronnie Mittel, and Granvil Hext.

Rev. Vaughan will preach his final services here this coming Sunday, and then arrange his move to Comanche the following week.

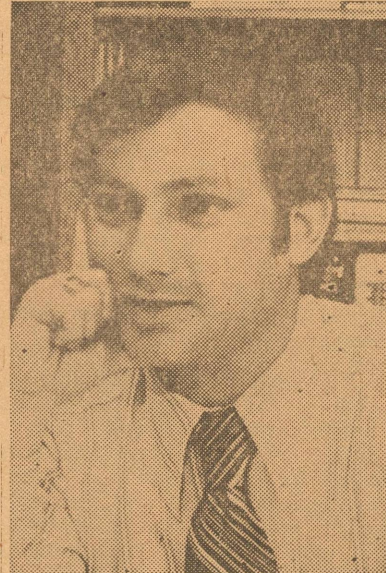

It's Krueger vs. Harlan in November . . .

Ovie's Influence Wanes

OVIE CLARK FISHER

Retiring Congressman

When he announced last year that he would retire as Congressman at the end of the current election year, O. C. Fisher threw his support to San Antonio attorney and State Senator Nelson Wolff. But while Wolff emerged tops in the first Democratic Primary on May 4th, he lost the run-off Saturday to Bob Krueger of New Braunfels. So now Fisher will presumably make plans to retire to his Junction ranch on his $30,000 a year Congressional retirement, after his successor comes into office.

Safeguard Premises Before Vacation Trip

(by John L. Hill, Attorney General) Austin, Texas.—Vacation bound? There is a chance you might also be heading for trouble if you haven't taken certain precautions before leaving home.

Law enforcement experts and our Consumer Protection Division attorneys say that what is vacation time for most folks is working time for many burglars, pickpockets, and con men.

They suggest that you plan in advance to burglar-proof your home and to guard against possible thefts or consumer frauds on your trip. While the number of such occurrences is small compared to the number of vacationers, it only takes one bad experience to ruin a trip.

Here's a list of things to check before you leave:

—Stop mail, newspaper, and other deliveries.

—Tell a neighbor or your apartment manager that you will be gone and ask them to keep an eye on the place.

—Leave a few lights on or buy an automatic timer to turn certain lights on and off each evening.

—Cut your lawn just before leaving, and, if you will be gone a long time, have someone cut it while you're away.

—Check all windows and doors to make sure they are locked. A sliding glass patio door can be more securely fastened by wedging a stick at the top or bottom of the door.

—Check with your local police if you plan an extended vacation. Many forces offer a "close patrol" of homes where persons are away. If your police force does, you will need to tell them what cars or persons, if any, will be making authorized visits to your house.

—Avoid mentioning to casual acquaintances or strangers that you will be on vacation.

—Before leaving, engrave all valuables in your home and those you will be taking with you in the car with your driver's license or social security number. Some police forces will loan you an engraver to mark your belongings and will register your number on their master list. This may discourage burglars from taking your goods and can make identification of recovered stolen goods much simpler.

After taking precautions to secure your home from burglars while you are gone, don't let down your guard when you get into the car and drive away. There are a few things to remember during your trip, too:

—Make sure you have had your car serviced and thoroughly checked before leaving and always get out of the car to watch when having it serviced on the road or at a service station. There are a few unscrupulous persons who sometimes take advantage of tourists with out-of-state license plates. If your car was given a clean bill of health before you left, you can better evaluate warnings about faulty fuel pumps, air filters, batteries, etc.

—Take traveler's checks or use credit cards, and keep a list of your credit card numbers in a safe spot.

—Men should avoid keeping bill-folds in back pockets, or at least button the pocket if possible. To discourage pickpockets, use the inside coat pocket or a money belt.

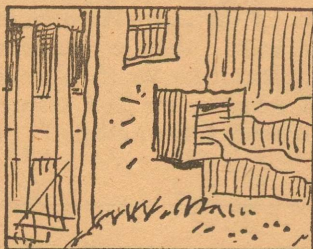

—Women should select a purse with a secure clasp or zipper and keep a hand over the opening when carrying it.

—Don't wear unusually expensive or flashy jewelry or display large rolls of bills.

—Never boast of wealth or possessions or tell strangers your home town or address.

—Check valuables at your hotel desk for safekeeping.

You could be taken advantage of in more subtle ways, too. Many people spend large amounts of their money on vacation souvenirs without examining them carefully. Many souvenir items are cheaply made, over-priced, and of little or no practical value. Try to set a limit on the amount of money you spend on things you're likely to throw away or put in a closet later.

The door won't be open on hot days any more—Grant's tomb is air-conditioned!

Market Report

College Station, Tex.—It's a good time for meat "madcaps" to stock up, according to most sources.

One is Mrs. Gwendolyn Clyatt, consumer marketing information specialist with the Texas A&M University System.

She reports beef production higher than last year, pork prices down a little, and turkeys available "in record quantities with very attractive prices."

"Beef specials take careful shopping and likely will include chuck cuts, round steak, liver and ground meat. Pork values will be Boston butt, quarter-loin chops, loin-end roasts, smoked picnics and hams."

Turning to vegetables, Mrs. Clyatt said there's "good news" for onion lovers—big crops and prices about half what they were last year.

"More lettuce is available, as are escarole, endiv, beet tops and leaf lettuce. Carrots, celery, cabbage, tomatoes, radishes, cooking greens, cucumbers and yellow squash are other choices.

"Peaches are on the market, but prices are high. Cantaloupe, honeydew and watermelon prices are relatively high.

"Citrus supplies are only fair, as the end of the season is near, and apple prices are trending upward as supplies dwindle," Mrs. Clyatt added.

Consumer Watchwords: Buy fresh strawberries now, if you want some for later use.

Although supplies are increasing—with prices only moderate—the season is short, so consumers should buy strawberries now and freeze them.

A Southern superstition warns that you should never put a letter in your girl friend's left hand, or your friendship will come to an end... on a bad note!

Warner First Bicentennial Administrator

Vice President Gerald Ford listens as John W. Warner speaks during swearing in ceremonies.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — John W. Warner, former Secretary of the Navy, was sworn in recently by Vice President Gerald R. Ford as the first national Administrator of the federal American Revolution Bicentennial Administration. Prior to the ceremony, which took place on the steps of the Capitol, Mr. Warner appeared before a senate subcommittee chaired by Senator Alan Bible. He pledged to work jointly with both the Executive and Legislative branches of the government in achieving a successful commemoration of our Nation's 200th anniversary.

"Our Nation's Bicentennial, I firmly believe, is coming at a most critical time in our history, Mr. Warner told the Committee. "From every corner of our great nation I perceive a longing on the part of Americans to rediscover, to reassert and to rally to the ideals of the American democracy."

"The responsibility of myself and the staff of the Administration is to provide a delicate balance between leading and helping. Within the Federal sector, we will lead and coordinate; within the 50 states, territories, Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia, we will provide professional help in response to requests. All this is to be achieved, and I cannot stress this too strongly, on a nonpartisanship basis.

"Giving due recognition to the 13 original colonies, our efforts and our resources should be spread as evenly as possible across the 50 states, territories, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia. The yardstick by which the success of the Bicentennial era will be measured will be the numbers of individuals involved. Our thrust will be to enlist participants rather than provide for spectators."

BACKGROUND ON BUSINESS

WRITING HISTORY

Five score and seven years ago, the United States were no longer united, and President Lincoln, en route to a devastated battlefield, was striving to compose a message of hope and courage to his people. Some historians claim he made his point—the Gettysburg Address—with a Ticonderoga pencil!

Still around today, Ticonderoga pencils have not only written history, they've made it. They were the first pencils in the world to be mass produced, and they were first made by a man whose business was the creation of crucibles. The Dixon Crucible Company was founded in 1847 by Joseph Dixon to manufacture ceramic crucibles for melting metals. Graphite, a black mineral noted for its heat-resistance and lubricating qualities, is the prime component of such hot pots.

Dixon discovered another use for it: he got the lead out and poured his graphite into the production of pencils. His first major market was the men fighting the Civil War, who wanted an easily portable and inexpensive instrument to write home with—and perhaps about! In the next century or so, the Dixon Co. grew with the country, until today, it has plants across the continent, just one of which produces more than 500,000,000 pencils a day! Dixon does more than make pencils, however. They're among the sharpest in the industry for making ballpoint and felt-tip pens, erasers, pencil-sharpener, crayons, water colors, printing inks, finger paints, lubricants, crucibles, refractories, metal alloys and a wide range of other internationally marketed products for home and industry, many available through stationery and specialty stores from coast to coast.

To help picture its brushes with history, the Dixon Company has an extensive collection of original paintings of Americana, valued at more than $200,000. They even have one of their own early advertisements, painted by Norman Rockwell. These works of art are available for exhibitions by museums, civil organizations and other groups.

It all seems to add up to be the kind of business President Lincoln "wood" have been proud of.

BANKING IS EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS

Controlling Personal Finances — Inflation Makes it Difficult

If you've gotten the feeling recently that the family finances were running you — instead of the other way around — you're probably in very good company. Economic circumstances, often beyond individual control, have greatly increased the number of families in financial difficulty this spring.

But runaway family finances, including a suddenly too heavy debt load, can be brought under control. The American Bankers Association (ABA) recommends three steps in the process:

- A realistic assessment and acknowledgement of the problem.
- A hard look at the family budget and spending pattern.
- Person to person communication with creditors.

As with any problem, acknowledgement of its existence and a look at possible causes must be the first step. A big factor today is inflation. There are many indications that inflation is rising faster than individual earning power. For some Americans, real disposable income may actually be declining each month.

With less money to spend, and more of it going for such essentials as food and shelter, fewer dollars are available for other budget items, including repayment of previously extended loans. Under these conditions, loan delinquencies (instalments over 30 days late) normally begin to rise, and recent ABA statistics show that they have risen sharply during the past six months.

Another very real factor in financial difficulties can be (and in some parts of the country has been during this period) unemployment. Whatever the cause, the second step in regaining control is to carefully consider the family budget, assets and spending pattern.

If records of spending haven't been kept, now is the time to begin. A simple dime store ledger book, with vertical columns representing income and spending categories (food, clothing, rent, insurance, etc.), and horizontal lines representing pay periods, can show you at a glance your family's yearly spending pattern. Perhaps you'll find that some nonessential categories, such as travel and entertainment, could be temporarily cut back.

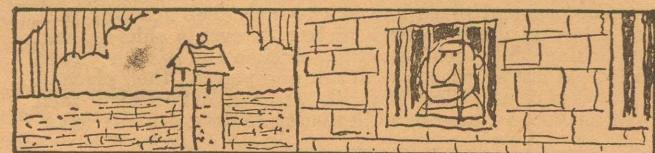

The ledger may show you what is already a bone-dry budget. In that case, the family assets must be considered. Do you have a vacation home that could be sold? Is your family auto perhaps bigger or more expensive than you really need? Could you make do with a less expensive apartment?

If the best use has been made of available assets, but financial difficulties remain, the final step is to talk frankly with your creditors. Consumers can be, and often are, helped over rough spots through deferred payment arrangements and/or extension of credit terms to bring down monthly payments.

The ABA points out that creditors much prefer to work out an arrangement equitable to all than to repossess a car or foreclose on a house. A frank explanation of the situation will often be enough to reassure the lender that you intend to uphold the loan contract and could result in a grace period as well as some sound financial counseling.

Harvest Home Vegetables On Time

Vegetables from home gardens taste better if they're harvested at the proper time. Wash vegetables after gathering and put them in the refrigerator if they're not to be cooked immediately. Under normal conditions, most vegetables will deteriorate in quality and nutritive value.

Pick sweet corn when kernels are fully formed but tender and milky. Once it matures, the sugar in the kernels rapidly turns to starch and the sweetness is lost.

Pick snap or string beans when the pods snap readily.

Gather lima beans while still green and the end of the pod is spongy.

Harvest beets when small to medium size, about 1 to 1½ inches in diameter.

Pick broccoli before its flowers show color.

Cabbage heads should be firm and heavy for their size, with no signs of splitting.

Carrots have most of their sugar when they are fully matured but are better to eat when small, firm and well colored.

Moderate-sized cucumbers are good. Yellowing shows age.

Pick loose-leaf lettuce as soon as leaves are large enough to use. Harvest head lettuce as soon as it has headed. Lettuce becomes bitter after seed stems appear.

Peas lose their sweetness and flavor early, so pick them when pods are fairly well filled and bright green.

Peppers (sweet) are best when mature and firm and with a good green or red color.

Use radishes while they are firm, before a light squeeze shows them to be spongy or pithy. Quality is poor once the seed stalk appears.

Summer squash should be harvested when it is about six inches long. If more than eight inches long, quality is usually poor.

With winter or baking type squash, the rinds should be hard enough so they cannot be dug into readily with one's finger nail.

Tomatoes are better tasting when they are fully reddened on the vine.

Dig turnips when moderately large, firm and heavy, about 2½ inches in diameter.

Pick cantaloupes when fully ripened or near ripe. Fruit should be yellowish and slip from the vine easily.

Watermelons are fully ripe when the portion touching the soil is cream colored, the tendril opposite the fruit is dried-up, fruit sound hollow when thumped, and they separate rather easily from the vine.

Cattle Grub Control

Insecticide treatments for cattle grubs should soon be applied. The cattle grub is the immature stage of the heel fly which has been actively laying eggs on cattle for several months. Soon after egg hatch, the developing grubs migrate through the animal's body and cause considerable irritation and general loss of body condition. During the fall and winter months the grubs produce the familiar warbles on the backlines of infested cattle. Yearling age animals and bulls seem to be particularly susceptible to grub infestations. Area entomologist Dr. Mike McWhorter indicates that effective cattle grub control can come from a variety of treatments. Feed and mineral additives, sprays, dips, backline pour-on and "spot" treatments of systemic insecticides are available alternatives for cattlemen.

Information on various insecticides, their application and other helpful hints can be obtained at your Schleicher county Extension agent's office.

Horn Fly Control

Horn fly control on cattle is an important management consideration during the summer months. The horn fly closely resembles the common house fly but is only about half as large. In addition, the horn fly is one of our most persistent and annoying external parasites of cattle. According to area entomologist, Dr. Mike McWhorter, recent research has indicated that cattle protected from horn fly infestations have outgained infested animals by 17 to 25%. These data indicate that horn fly control gives positive economic benefits.

Cattle self-treatment devices have recently gained in popularity. Several fabric dust bag and cable-type back rubbers are available to cattle and producers. Constant availability to cattle and ease of chemical application make the self-treatment technique well suited to many cattle management systems.

The herdsman should install self-treatment devices in areas frequently visited by cattle, such as water, feed or mineral sources. There may also be a short period of adjustment by the animals before they begin to fully utilize automatic or animal self-treatment equipment.

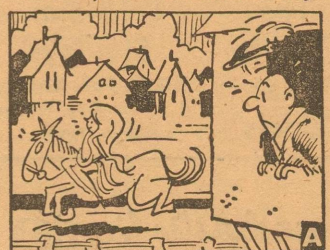

Spray or dust application of several insecticides are also effective in controlling horn flies.

The Charm Of Great Britain

Don't miss vacationing in a country where the people speak your own language—in their own particular fashion, of course. In short, don't miss Great Britain!

Certainly there's Coventry, a beautiful and historic town, popularly remembered as the place where that streaker of streakers, Lady Godiva, made her famous ride. Don't miss York, with its famous and picturesque cathedral, a town in which ghost hunts are still carried on. Any tourist who travels to London by air will arrive at Heathrow airport, located a moderate twenty miles outside the city. Spend as much time as you can in London, that marvelous city.

Throughout your pilgrimage, you can stay at Trust Houses Forte Post Houses—moderately priced motor hotels that offer rooms decorated with a local flair, restaurants that specialize in local cuisine, good services, and free accommodations for children under sixteen. Post Houses are located on and near roadways in England and Ireland—and the accommodations, like the people, speak an American's language.

There are theaters, castles, cathedrals, and forests to frolic through in Great Britain, not to mention local dishes to try out. What a great way to spend a holiday!

In the 17th century, it was believed that even looking at a sapphire made the eyes so strong that no harm could touch them.

In Greece and Rome, it was believed that unless basil plants were cursed when sown, they would not grow.

GETTING UNSTUCK
Almost all drivers have some kind of experience with "getting stuck"—whether it's caused by trouble in the ignition switch, battery, carburetor—or any of a dozen simple problems that mean the car won't start, or when it does, doesn't perform properly. Having a little basic knowledge about the car and how it works can be very helpful in diagnosing the most common problems quickly and accurately enough to get back on the road.

"How Not To Get Stuck When You Get Stuck" is what it comes down to, and Gulf Oil has a booklet entitled just that. It offers drivers simple and practical advice about how to get the car running well and keep it that way; a description of some minor do-it-yourself adjustments and repairs and a chapter on what average costs are for repairs and replacement of parts and some ways to avoid over-paying. State Spends $641,000 In Schleicher County

JIM NUGENT

State Representative Jim Nugent's office released figures last week which showed that state agencies spent $641,000 in Schleicher County in 1973. This figure represents the expenditures of 18 different state agencies, and demonstrates a significant return of tax dollars to the taxpayers of Schleicher county.

Roughly one third of the total expenditures ($195,000) was made by the Department of Public Welfare, while slightly less was spent by the Highway Department ($187,000) and by the Texas Education Agency ($145,000). The remaining expenditures ($309,000) were made by the other 15 state agencies.

These statistics were compiled by the Governor's Office and the Legislative Budget Board.

For real teamwork in energy saving, use the oven to cook several dishes together. Plan to roast a chicken right along with the vegetable portion of the menu.

Fresh vegetables that should be featured more often are eggplant, zucchini and green peppers. Add the regulars—tomatoes and onions, and you have a great gourmet treat called Rataouille.

There's no need to open the oven door for basting either chicken or Rataouille since these foods are prepared in self-basting oven cooking bags. Combine ingredients for the Rataouille ahead of time in the Brown-In-Bag. Store safely in the refrigerator until mealtime. The bagged food can go straight into the preheated oven.

OVEN BAG ROAST CHICKEN
2 to 4 lb. broiler-fryer

Preheat oven to 350°F. Shake flour in small size (10" x 16") Brown-In-Bag and place bag in two-inch deep roasting pan. Place celery strips in bottom of bag (prevents chicken skin from sticking while cooking). Rinse chicken and pat dry; brush with melted butter, season with salt and pepper, then place in bag on top of celery. Close bag with twist tie; make six half-inch slits in top. Cook 1 hour or until tender. Makes: 4-6 servings.

"Hop" McMillan Given Plaque

C. L. "Hop" McMillan was selected as the outstanding resident conservation rancher of the Eldorado-Divide Soil and Water Conservation District for 1974, according to Voy Lee Butts, chairman of the district's board of directors.

Voy Lee said that this is the 25th such award given jointly by the Eldorado Lions Club and the Eldorado-Divide Soil and Water Conservation District, since the district program started 33 years.

Conservation ranching has been a way of life for more than 25 years for C. L. "Hop" McMillan. He has been cooperating with the Eldorado-Divide District since 1948. Technicians with the Soil Conservation Service field office in Eldorado helped "Hop" in 1948 to develop his conservation plan of operations on 1,920 acres in Schleicher county. This being the home ranch operated by Hop and his brother. In 1951 Hop leased and continues to operate 2,576 acres of rangeland from Mrs. J. F. Harkey in Schleicher county. In 1954, assistance was requested from the San Angelo field office to help develop a conservation plan on 1,100 acres of rangeland northeast of Christoval. In 1958, Hop and his father-in-law, C. D. Atkins, developed a plan on 4,020 acres of rangeland west of Christoval. A plan was made in 1962 on 83 acres, of which 32 acres is under irrigation, north of Christoval along the east side of the South Concho River.

About six years ago during a thunderstorm, lightning set fire to the Harkey Ranch. About three sections burned off. The entire ranch was rested during the next three growing seasons to permit recovery of the vegetation. Additional rests in conjunction with light grazing use has occurred during the past three years. It has taken six years of careful management to restore the rangeland to about equal conditions prior to the fire. He was more concerned about restoring the damage on this leased land than he would have been had he owned the land—good evidence of his conservation interest.

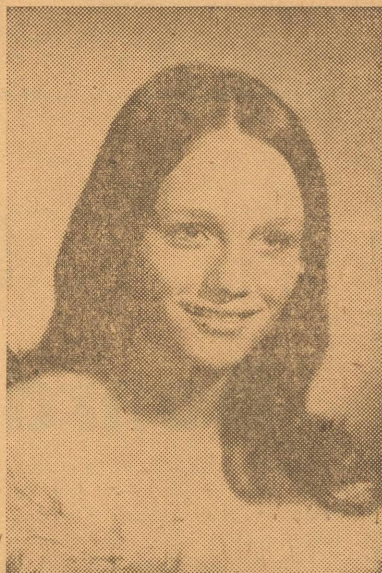

Years ago Hop got the idea of cleaning up the internal parasite problem with sheep. He decided the best approach was to raise all replacement cattle and sheep. Bucks and bulls are the only animals added to the breeding herds that have not been produced by Hop's livestock. Those bucks and bulls are carefully selected from disease-free herds as well as for conformation and broad lines. At the present time there are some five year-old eyes in the flock that have never been drenched for stomach worms.

Calves are marketed when they are weaned. Calves will bring about the same amount of money per head at this time, as they would three months later. He thinks this system permits the mother cow to perform better and feed back more uniformly in addition to reducing grazing requirements of rangeland.

Hop has served three terms on the county school board, a long time member of the Baptist church, for about 16 years a trustee and secretary for the Tom Green County Fresh Water Supply District No. 2. At present he is assisting with the organization of a local fire fighting unit.

Many of Hop's associates are stronger conservationists through his convictions and influence. They desire some of the satisfaction and rewards realized by Hop McMillan's conservation ranching operations.

Texas of Century Ago Revealed By Book

Texas a century ago was "a commonwealth of unlimited resources and with unrivaled climate, inhabited by a brave, impulsive, usually courteous people . . . who comprise all grades of society, from the polished scholar and man of means to the rough, unkempt, semi-barbaric herder of cattle who is content with bitter coffee and coarse pork for his sustenance . . ."

This evaluation of the Lone Star State of 100 years ago was made by a brilliant New York journalist, Edward King, who traveled into every section of Texas on assignment from Scribner's Magazine. His mission was to assess the effects of the Reconstruction Period on the state. Accompanying him was a major American artist, J. Wells Champney.

Now Cordovan Press of Houston has bound King's dispatches and 51 of Champny's exciting, evocative sketches into a handsome book entitled Texas: 1874.

Texas, warts and all, fired King's imagination, and while he observed the vast, raw land and its people with a true reporter's eye, he wrote with such unrestrained lyricism that a reader seems to be traveling with him, by stagecoach, on horseback, by train and by water.

Some towns King loved. Some he saw as growing centers of commerce. Some he detested as "collections of vile hovels."

Galveston, for example, was a combination fairy land and burgeoning seaport. Houston was a great railroad hub, a city of promise. San Antonio was the "Pearl of the Southwest," an enchanting community which reminded him of cities he had visited on European travels.

Enroute to East Texas, King and Champney were horrified near Huntsville at seeing a "convict train"—a long line of chained prisoners, black and white, laboring from dawn to dusk to clear a railroad right-of-way. On a visit to the state penitentiary he spied Santanta, the Kiowa chief imprisoned for murder. He promptly interviewed the chief on the spot.

East Texas, wrote King, was a country of "great possibilities" where "morning comes sharply, sending a thrill of joy through all nature."

Of West Texas he wrote: "This wonderful expanse of plain, which melts away so delicately into the bright blue of the cloudless sky, has inspiration in it." The people were vigorous and alert—"and the very horses gallop briskly, tossing their heads and distending their nostrils . . ."

Dallas, "grows like an enchanted castle in a fairy tale."

Waco was a "handsome, solidly-built town, possessing many manufacturing establishments . . . surrounded by great fields of cotton, corn and cane . . ."

King was disappointed that Austin had only 8,000 inhabitants; as the seat of government and blessed with bountiful natural resources, he saw no reason why the population should not have been doubled. The tobacco-chomping legislators intrigued him, but their politics he held in scant regard. King thought the Reconstruction Period had been a boon for Texas, and the legislators' desire for a new Constitution seemed to him to be an exercise in substituting good laws for bad.

The two journalists arrived in Denison only four months after the town was founded. King admired the citizens' energy and independence, but he derided the "coarse cookery, bad beds and villainous liquor-drinking" all over North Texas.

Just as they recorded the faces of the people and the land, they wrote detailed descriptions of how Texans talked in varied accents, how they worked and how they played.

But above all they saw at first hand how a rapidly-spreading railway system was giving Texas the security, the industrial expansion and the wide new settlement it needed to emerge from a wilderness and become a land of promise.

Texas: 1874 goes on sale this week at major book stores in the state, according to Robert S. Gray, Cordovan publisher.

"This book is a completely human document," Gray said, "and we thought Texans of today would enjoy a first-hand account of the state and its people of a century ago. It is not the work of researchers digging into the past, but a day-by-day description of Texas life written on the spot."

The book was designed so as to retain much of the look of the original work, Gray said. "We enlarged the type slightly to make it more readable, and some of Champney's incomparable drawings were enlarged to bring out more details."

Texas: 1874 sells for $3.50 in book stores, and may be purchased by mail for $3.90 direct from Cordovan Press, 5314 Bingle Road, Houston, Texas 77018.

Austin, Tex.—Some of the Constitutional Convention's hottest debates is yet to come.

Explosive potential of the general provision article already has been demonstrated in preliminary rounds, and the right-to-work section should produce the biggest bang of all.

Organized labor, headed by State AFL-CIO President Harry Hubbard, stands four-square against writing right-to-work provisions into the new constitution.

A new statewide citizens committee with formidable political and financial muscle has been formed to lobby for placing right-to-work on the ballot as a separate issue from the overall constitutional revision.

The Texas right-to-work law, dating back to 1947, prohibits union contracts which would require union membership as a condition to getting and keeping a job.

Baylor University President Dr. Abner McCall is chairman of the Texas Right-To-Work Committee which opened offices near the state capitol recently. Houston school teacher Mrs. Margaret Wisdom is the co-chairman.

Other big-name Texans, including a scattering of industrial leaders, Republicans, conservative Democrats and Gov. Dolph Briscoe's campaign manager, Austin attorney Joe Kilgore, are on the committee roster.

Cotton Threatened

Drought which destroyed High Plains dryland wheat is now threatening this year's cotton crop, Agriculture Commissioner John C. White fears.

White said High Plains cotton production could be cut almost in half because of dry weather.

The High Plains last year produced an estimated 2.9 million bales of cotton. More than 2.7 million acres of cotton were planted in the area, and 1.1 million were dryland acres. Irrigation costs are running $35-$60 an acre and irrigation fuel which cost 10 cents a gallon last year now costs 27-29 cents.

The Governor's Energy Advisory Council has received a $489,000 National Science Foundation grant to continue its long and medium range energy resource studies in Texas.

The Governor signed an executive order creating a State Manpower Services Council to coordinate manpower policies, plans and services throughout the state.

Texas Water Rights Commission adopted a policy statement identifying requirements for change orders to bond project plans of water districts.

Since the State Democratic Convention falls on Rosh Hashana (September 17), Governor Briscoe recommended delegates of the Jewish faith who are absent on the religious holiday be allowed to assign their votes to certified delegates or alternates.

Use of Dieldrin in commercial fertilizers will not be registered in Texas after August 31, on recommendation of Pesticide Advisory Committee.

A Texas legislative group began research on a project designed to strengthen laws regulating public utility service.

Ten applications for permits to sell $6.1 million in securities were filed last week with the State Securities Board.

MANAGING YOUR MONEY

FACTS TO HELP YOU

Invest For The Long Term

All of us would like to make a killing in the stock market. But the record shows that most investors in individual stocks will lose trying.

If you want to have more money in the future than you have today, there are relatively low-risk alternatives to traditional methods of saving at fixed interest rates. One alternative is through accumulation of capital.

Investing successfully in stocks is becoming increasingly difficult. Collecting and analyzing all the available information about a company and its securities is an overwhelming task for most part-time investors. When you invest in a mutual fund, along with many other investors who have common objectives, you obtain the talents and resources of professional money managers.

"A mutual fund is about the only investment vehicle, open to the ordinary investor, that provides built-in research and proven, full-time money management expertise," says George Putnam, Chairman of the Putnam Mutual Funds of Boston.

Mutual fund companies, and the investment community as a whole, agree that investing in mutual funds should be a long-range commitment, and that it should never be entered into as a speculation.

While past results are no indication of future performance, the record shows that the average mutual fund, over all 19 ten-year periods since World War II, had an annual compound growth rate of slightly more than 10 percent, assuming reinvestment of dividends and capital gains.

AWAY FROM IT ALL

Would you like to be able to go to a retreat like this when you are worried—a place where you could be alone with your thoughts—a place where you could untangle your problems?

If you would, then you are like most people. Everyone needs a retreat, at moments. And everyone has one! It isn't a mountain cabin or a seaside cottage—but it is a place far better suited to prayer and contemplation, a place to sort out old errors and make new resolutions. It is your church.

Let your church be your sanctuary. Go to it when you are troubled. You will find within its walls your moment of peace, and you will walk out into the street again far better able to make the most of your life.
