Give Vegetables Room To Grow
Whether you seed vegetables directly in the garden or indoors in containers, never be timid about thinning. One of the most serious problems in home vegetable gardens is that plants are frequently too crowded.

Plenty of seed should be planted to insure a good stand, but if good germination occurs, plants are often too crowded in the row for good growth.

Thin young seedlings at an early age to insure a good stand which will result in good yields of high quality vegetables at harvest time. Too many seedlings in the row can act just like seedlings and compete with each other for water, nutrients and sunlight.

Seedlings should be thinned before they are two inches tall and before their roots become intertwined. Be sure the soil is moist when thinning.

Rather than thin plants to be the recommended stand in one operation, we recommend thinning in two stages. During the first thinning operation, leave twice as many plants as actually needed. The second time around, thin to a final stand. This will allow for some losses due to insect diseases or related problems.

When thinning vegetable crops such as cucumbers, squash, melons and okra, pinch or cut off unwanted plants rather than pulling them up. Pulling may damage the roots of plants you wish to keep.

If stands are poor and uneven in other parts of the garden, transplant such crops as lettuce, beets, chard, cabbage, carrots, onions, peppers, tomatoes and eggplants to other areas. If thinnings are to be transplanted, gently pull up the plants to avoid severe root damage.

Many thinnings can be used for the dinner table. Young tender lettuce is a superior salad item, and baby carrots are a real gourmet treat.

Control Garden Weeds

Weeds are a problem in most home gardens and compete with vegetables for water, nutrients, and sunlight. They also may harbor many different insects and diseases.

So a good weed control program is a must.

Hand hoeing is still the best weed control method available for the average home gardener. It is inexpensive, quite selective, accurate, effective and, for some, even enjoyable. A great deal of emotional satisfaction can come from leaning on a hoe handle while viewing a clean, freshly hoed row where weeds stood only minutes before.

While hoeing, a fair amount of hand pulling is usually necessary close around the base of plants. Concentrate on weeding when weeds are small; otherwise young vegetable plants will be damaged as weeds are pulled out.

In addition to hand weeding, mulches and herbicides also help control weeds.

Mulching controls weeds by keeping light away from seedlings and providing a mechanical barrier to weed emergence. Weeds that do come through the mulch are easily spotted and pulled thru the soil. Good mulching materials include straw, leaves, hay sawdust, wood shavings, bark, paper and plastic sheeting. If plastic sheeting is used, only the black plastic is recommended since clear plastic allows light to enter and actually encourages weed growth.

Chemical weed control presently has limited value in the home garden. While herbicides work well in single crop situations, it is more difficult to use them where a wide assortment of vegetables are occupying a small space. If herbicides are used, application methods must be followed carefully and only correct amounts should be used.

Chemical weed control is rather complex and perhaps is still too sophisticated for the average home vegetable gardener to safely use. So, the hoe is still the best bet.

Trim And Braid Decorate Summer Clothing

Trims and braids are an important part of the '75 spring and summer look. There are several ways to help the homeowner achieve a professional look:

—Preshrink trim before applying. Handle trims loosely and without tension when stitching.

—Use thread that matches the trim.

—Mark the exact location for a professional look.

—Use trims compatible with fabric. Permanent press and synthetic trims are available, as well as cotton and rayon.

—Use a light thread tension if applying trim by machine.

—Polyester thread often gives better results since it doesn't shrink when laundered.

—Pin or baste trim in place, working with a full length of trim. This avoids cutting the piece too short.

If the pattern doesn't call for trim, homesewers can determine yardage necessary by measuring the pattern pieces at the exact location of the trim.

Add 1/2 yard or more to allow for joinings, curves or corners. It's better to have a few inches left over than to be a few inches short.

High Ceiling Make "Extra" Room Possible

High ceilings make an extra room possible for the family who cannot afford more costly remodeling. Addition of overhead galleries, balconies and lofts are some of the ways a family can use exceptionally high ceilings in both old and new houses for more space.

Adding a gallery, loft or balcony instead of another full storey uses only a small portion of overhead space.

That way the family can retain the home's spacious feeling and achieve a really unique architectural feature, while, perhaps, easing the septic "crunch."

Few new homes today are built with galleries or lofts, because architects tend to think it more thrifty and sensible to build a full second storey. However, when homes with two-storey rooms are remodeled, sometimes a gallery or loft can solve an architectural problem or create new space.

When the rooms of town houses are made into apartments, for example, very tall rooms often are given a sleeping gallery or a dining & kitchen gallery. And roomy Victorian houses with high ceilings can be remodeled easily to include such features.

A feeling of "spaciousness, flow and elegant detachment" is achieved with a gallery or loft, because it provides space set off from the rest of a room.

Concerning functions of a gallery, loft or balcony, each structure is suitable for use as a study, playroom, dining or sleeping room, library or storage area.

This new space also adds to the overall square footage of a house, while it gives the family more room.

"Conservation Cropping System"

"The need for good productive soil to enable farmers to farm soundly and prosperously, will be as important in 1975 as in past years. Poor crops come from poor land and good crops come from good land. One way farmers can maintain good productive soil is to follow the conservation cropping system needed for their land," states Lloyd B. Johnson of the S. C. S.

Soils can be kept in a high productive condition if they are continuously managed properly. Soils that received good management while in grassland are usually in their best condition when first put in cultivation. The application and maintenance of the needed cropping system, along with other needed soil and water conservation practices, on each acre of cropland, will maintain soils in their best productive condition.

The rotation of crops whereby low residue producing crops are not planted on the same land for too many successive years, does not constitute a conservation cropping system. Crops must be grown in combination with needed cultural and management measures to carry out a conservation cropping system. Cropping systems must include the use of rotations that contain high residue and soil improving crops, as well as sequences in which the desired benefits are achieved with the use such crops.

The purpose of a conservation cropping system must be fourfold: (1) meet the needs of the soil for improvement and maintenance of good physical condition; (2) protect the soil during critical periods when erosion usually occurs; (3) aid in the control of weeds, insects and diseases, and (4) fulfill the needs and desires of the farmer for economic return.

Farmers in the Eldorado-Divide Soil and Water Conservation District have the choice of maintaining and improving soil fertility and conditions of their land. Making the right choice and carrying it out does more than keep the soil in the right condition. Crop yields are increased when soil fertility is improved and soils are kept in good physical condition. When farmers make this important choice they are in a sense choosing between farming good land or poor land. Few, if any, farmers would choose deteriorated soil rather than soil high in fertility.

Water, one of the most important elements needed for plant growth, is held on the land and conserved for crop use by a good conservation cropping system. However, just as important is the water that goes into the underground water supply as a result of being held on the land by conservation practices applied and maintained. Therefore, people living in cities are benefitted more than one way by soil and water conservation.

Farmers and ranchers are the first to benefit from soil, water and plant conservation practices applied on their land. However, all the people of America are benefitted by conservation practices applied and maintained. Conservation practices help keep the streams and lakes from being filled with topsoil from agricultural land. Lakes and streams filled with soil can become polluted to the point they are unfit for fish, wildlife recreational purposes and other uses. The supply of good water for human consumption and other use, is effected by how agricultural land is managed. The abundant supply of good wholesome food in America didn't just happen; it was brought about by good farming and ranching methods, including good soil, water and plant conservation practices.

Soil fertility and condition either improves or becomes depleted as the land is used. The latter is always the case if needed management practices are not planned and applied. By applying and maintaining all the needed soil, water and plant conservation practices, the land can be kept in its maximum potential productive condition.

Farmers, ranchers and other land users can receive assistance from the Soil Conservation Service in planning and applying the needed conservation practices on their land. Cost share in applying enduring type conservation practices is available in this District from the Great Plains Conservation Program administered by the S. C. S. Also, cost share assistance is available from the Schleicher County A. S. C. S.

- A dishwasher will usually hold a whole day's dishes. It takes as much hot water and energy to wash 1 dish as it does a full load. Stack your dishes out of sight in your dishwasher and wait until you have a full load to turn it on.
- Use only detergents manufactured specifically for dishwashers. A wetting agent helps prevent water spots on glasses and silverware.
- Clean the filter screen often. A clogged filter can reduce the efficiency of your dishwasher.

NEWS OF ENERGY
ALUMINUM SAVES

Here's some good news for car owners. Cars made lighter with aluminum could provide each owner with a $250 "energy rebate" in gasoline costs over the lifetime of the car.
C. Norman Cochran, chairman of the Aluminum Association Task Force on Automotive Energy Savings, says that this would save the United States four to six billion gallons of gas each year. He added that aluminum currently used lightens U.S. cars enough to save 1.6 to 2.5 billion gallons of gas annually.
Reaching the $250 savings figure would require a big but quite possible, jump in aluminum usage from an average of about 84 pounds per car in 1975 to 160 to 200 pounds by 1980.
Every pound of aluminum used in place of heavier materials saves two to three gallons of gas during the lifetime of the car. Two hundred pounds of aluminum would save more than 400 gallons—worth $250 or more at current prices.
Since today's cars use 39 percent of the U.S. annual petroleum supply and account for 13 percent of total energy consumption in the U.S., it is apparent that if we are to come to grips with our energy dilemma, we are going to have to make more efficient use of gasoline in our automobiles. And this is where the extensive use of aluminum comes into play.

Greek and Roman mythologies claim that the movements of giants imprisoned by Jupiter under high mountains caused earthquakes.

The Romans called the ring finger the "medical finger" because they thought a nerve ran directly from it to the heart. With this belief at hand, they used the fourth finger to stir medicines.

The Question: When To Dryclean

If the label on your favorite pair of slacks indicates "machine washable," remember it's probably "drycleanable" as well. All washable fabrics may be drycleaned unless the label tells you otherwise.

Actually, fine cotton garments and household items look better and last longer when drycleaned. Drycleaning helps clothing retain its original appearance. For example, adding sizing to cottons improves the crisp feel of the material. Drycleaners can apply water repellent and stain resistant finishes to garments.

Other common fabrics which lend themselves to drycleaning are linens, silk, wool, specialty hair fibers, rayons, acetates, nylon, acrylics, modacrylic, knitted or woven polyester, metallic some spandex — nearly every type of material you can name.

Any fabric not marked drycleanable (certainly drapes and upholsteries) should be cleaned first by a professional or with the help of a knowledgeable coin-operated store manager.

While laundering your favorite knit garments may get out most of the dirt, drycleaning not only cleans but prolongs the life of your clothing. Your drycleaner controls the amount and time of cleaning action—minimizing the wear on the fabric in getting it clean.

Consider the value you place on each article—from the standpoints of original cost, fit and styling. Your garments are going to be around longer when cleaned by a quality-conscious drycleaner.

What are some of the services provided by professional and coin-operated drycleaners?

- Pre-spotting—treatment of badly soiled or stained areas with special solutions before the clothing goes into the drycleaning machine.

- Sorting—garments are normally sorted and cleaned according to color and type of fabric.

- Post-spotting—a hand process of removing spots and stains which may still remain after cleaning.

- Machine or hand finishing—a process of removing wrinkles, reviving fabric texture and restoring original shape using special equipment.

- Repairs—minor or major.
- Inspection—assuring each article is properly cleaned, spotted and finished.

Coin-operated drycleaners may offer a variety of such services or operate as a wholly self-service business. (Many garments today require a minimum of finishing). Professional drycleaners, of course, provide complete service.

Prices charged by drycleaners are figured on such factors as weight, type of fabric, special ornamentation (beads, lining, lace) and length . . . factors which affect the amount of time required to do a good cleaning job. Coin-operated drycleaners base their costs primarily on weight.

Rose Season At Peak Bloom At Rosedown

Old fashioned roses in rainbow hues are a mass of bloom in the gardens of Rosedown Plantation in St. Francisville, Louisiana. These historic roses, many of them members of ancient rose families dating from antiquity, represent one of the most interesting old rose collections in America.

Rarest of the old roses at Rosedown is the R. Roxburghii, which is found in only a few collections in this country. At Rosedown, the plantations of this old rose were propagated from original plants found on the grounds when the late Catherine Fondren Underwood began the famous restoration in 1956. The Burr Rose, as it is popularly known, was one of the favorite plants of Martha Turnbull, who began the development of the 17th century French landscape gardens in 1835.

Climbing roses now full-blown at Rosedown include Glorie de Dijon, Sombreuil, Felleberg, Devonensis, and Coline Forestier.

Texas Wax Roses, fused with plantations of Pyracantha in full bloom, form a circle around the reservoir behind Miss Nina's wing on the plantation grounds, an informal area which is popular with visitors. The reservoir was the first construction project at Rosedown and is useful in garden work and as a safeguard against fire.

Roses at Rosedown range from tiny five and six-petaled varieties to the many-petaled and quartered roses, as big as cabbages. All exude haunting, refreshing fragrance throughout the gardens.

Modern roses have a place at Rosedown too. The Tropicana plantations are reserved for arrangements in Rosedown House. On display in the gardens are the popular Betty Prior, Louis Philippe and Archduke Charles and European.

Rosarians find many of their favorite varieties at Rosedown, including Souvenir de la Malmaison, Queen of Denmark, Summer Snow, and the Miniatures Riolti and Perla de al Canada.

In late May, masses of blue hydrangeas and hundreds of gardenia shrubs will create a unique summer garden show.

Rosedown, a museum of the Old South, is a restored ante-bellum home and magnificent formal garden on the Great River Road. The century-old trees and shrubs make Rosedown one of the most unique horticultural collections in America. The mansion and grounds were opened to the public in 1964.

A documentary film on Rosedown restoration is available for club use. For information write Rosedown Plantation and Gardens, Drawer M, St. Francisville, Louisiana 70775.

START TODAY

"Today is the first day of the rest of your life."
Truer words have never been spoken!

Life is something different for each person. Sad to say, some people hide, afraid to come out into the daylight. Others take refuge in safe, dull activities which protect them from both punishment and real human experiences. There are many mechanisms with which people live out their days, enduring the boredom, tensing themselves to absorb the pain.

But life should be an adventure for you today.

Life should be exciting for you—today.

Life should be purposeful for you—today.

Ralph Waldo Emerson once wrote: "The life of man is the true romance, which, when it is valiantly conducted, will yield the imagination a higher joy than any fiction."

Preparation for rich living cannot start too soon. Now is the time.

Now is the time to reappraise yourself—who you are, where you are going. Now is the time to see what you can do to improve your life. It is in today's world that you must live; it is in today's world that you must learn to lead a good life. Forget about tomorrow; think about today.

Creative living today means a creative day today. Then another good day. And another good day. One day at a time. You add up a succession of creative days—and you have a creative life.

If you would like to gain fresh psychological insights for understanding yourself better, send for a free pamphlet based on radio's "The Lutheran Hour," called "Today's The Day." Write to Room 220, International Lutheran Laymen's League, 2185 Hampton Ave., St. Louis, Missouri 63139.

Trimming Appliance Energy Use

The federal government recently suggested that major appliance manufacturers increase the overall efficiency of their products by about 20 per cent.

That might make one assume that appliances are the primary cause of residential energy consumption.

The fact is, they run third in metered residential energy use, behind furnaces and other home heating devices, and water heating.

Also suggested was federal legislation to require increases in efficiency if a voluntary program among major manufacturers could not be established in six months. This might cause one to assume that appliance makers have been lax in improving the efficiency of their products since the energy squeeze began to tighten in the fall of 1973.

Actually, appliance companies individually, and through the Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers, are striving conscientiously to contribute to the President's energy-saving goals.

In some areas, improvements far greater than 20 per cent already have been made in the past two years.

For instance, the General Electric Company has improved the efficiency of its no-frost refrigerators significantly during that period. The addition of a power saver switch on all its no-frost models, and other improvements and redesigns, have helped reduce energy consumption up to 28 per cent over the models produced two years earlier.

Many Hotpoint and GE dishwashers offer a power-saver option that permits the homeowner to select natural, no-energy drying when clean dishes are not needed in a hurry. Selection of natural drying can save up to 40 per cent of the power consumed by the dishwasher during a normal cycle.

One of the significant responses that manufacturers have made toward the drive for conservation of energy is their development of a wide selection of high-efficiency room air conditioners. Larger cooling coils and special fan motors incorporated into these units allow them to produce more cooling per watt of electricity than standard units.

General Electric's high-efficiency room air conditioners save an average of 26 per cent in energy consumption over the company's regular units.

And power-saver switches, added to 15 intermediate and larger-capacity GE models this year, make it possible for consumers to save as much as another 12 per cent in operating costs.

Also available on many GE room air conditioners is a "Save Energy Range" indicator on the thermostat control to remind consumers that they can save approximately 5 per cent of the energy used for each degree of cooling given up.

Crowding Out

Goliath is pushing all the little Davids out of America's capital market. You and I will be poorer because of it.

The capital market is the pool of savings from which our economy obtains the funds needed to increase productive capacity, create new jobs, and raise our standard of living.

Feeding the pool are the individuals and institutions—banks, savings and loan associations, insurance companies, etc.—who have money to lend or invest.

Drawing from the pool are businesses whose earnings alone will not cover the cost of replacing worn-out equipment or building a new plant, and consumers who want to buy a new house or automobile.

Both private businesses and consumers have to compete with federal, state and local governments for the limited funds available in the capital market, because whenever government runs a deficit, it has to borrow money to make it up.

The capital market is the portion of our economy most responsive to the law of supply and demand. When there is a lot of money to lend, and borrowing by government, business and consumers is low, interest rates will also be low.

But when we are in a situation such as we are in today, when total public and private debt is estimated at $2.5 trillion, interest rates threaten to go sky-high.

Most of the pressure on the capital market comes from the federal government. During the next fiscal year, the federal government, in order to cover its mounting deficits, is expected to borrow 68 per cent of all the funds that will be available to lend.

If this happens, interest rates could go through the ceiling. Some economists estimate they could go to over 20 per cent. This would be a "price of money" too high for many businesses and most consumers to pay. Production, employment and consumer spending likely would drop, thus deepening the recession.

The government could avert this calamity by "monetizing the debt," that is, by printing more dollars so that there would be more dollars to lend. But this cure could be worse than the disease. It would set off a roaring inflation that would make what we have experienced in the past seem mild by comparison.

There are only two solutions to this problem. Neither is quick or easy. We have to reduce the federal government's pressure on the money market by cutting government spending. And we have to increase the money supply in the capital market by providing incentives for people to save. Any other course leads to economic catastrophe.

Love and Security

You don't need to know much about polar bears to get the message here. This cub hasn't a worry in the world. But one day he'll grow up to know all the frustrations of life in captivity.

Motherhood is security... but only for awhile. And the human mother is no more able to perpetuate the bond of total protection than is her wild counterpart.

Some parents today have abdicated their responsibility to guide their children. They have broken the family bonds too soon. Their children pay for this negligence: They age—but they don't mature.

Whims are fickle... and momentary. The Church strives to replace such elusive goals with something more substantial, something more stable. The inner values of character and faith remain as vital today as ever.

In our turbulent society, tranquility can only be found inside a person. Such stability and serenity could be your greatest gift to your child.
