Housewives Feel Affect Of General Maritime Strike; Fear Spread

SAN FRANCISCO, (AP)—Housewives felt the Pacific coast's maritime strike Friday as an increasing number of labor unions joined the movement toward a general strike in the San Francisco bay area.

San Francisco strategy committee called a meeting of all unions Friday at which a general strike was expected to be demanded.

San Francisco closed in a semi-silence upon San Francisco Friday and rapidly was paralyzing the city and surrounding area.

Teammasters, slaughter house workers, wholesale cleaners and dyers, and boiler makers and ironworkers left their jobs today, joining in a sympathetic strike with maritime workers who have blockaded shipping with their strike since May 9.

Fifteen thousand of the city's estimated union membership of 45,000 already is on strike.

President Roosevelt's mediation board, in session all day, continued its efforts to settle the maritime strike.

Mayor Angelo Rossi held an executive conference with heads of city departments. The Retail Automobile Dealers association considered closing salesrooms until the period of stress is over.

The city fast was becoming imminent in a warlike atmosphere, enhanced by the presence of state militia guarding the waterfront.

Patrolmen were instructed to prevent groups congregating on the streets.

Mayor McCracken of Oakland issued a dramatic appeal to the citizenry to keep the peace.

Riot guns were distributed to all

Those here who keep official check on international affairs are predicting still more bloodshed in Germany.

Don't misunderstand. Our diplomats figure Hitler to be more firmly in the saddle than ever since he "purged" political opponents with the aid of firing squads.

What American statesmen foresee is a large scale German re-education of our own 1932 bonus army riots.

The diplomatic mail pouch forecasts that Chancellor Hitler will be a busy little man these next few months riding herd on a 1,700,000 brown shirted Storm Troopers he will arbitrarily discard.

These youngsters grew up too late to smell the World War's powder. Hitler molded several hundred thousand into a heterogeneous force upon which he rode into power. Then he discovered he had to feed them and take in a million more. Strutting about on a meager government dole they developed into a Frankenstein that nearly destroyed "The Leader."

When Hitler poured some well-directed lead into the Master Minds of the Storm Troops and gave the rank and file a holiday from the federal payroll he sowed dragon's teeth. Can he keep the men unarmed?

The Storm Troop big shots are all dead. Out of 2,500,000 men, however, it won't take long for sub-leaders to rise up and carry on.

This is Hitler's worry at the moment. Young and irresponsible men will be roaming all Germany minus the brown shirts that once gave them prestige and the monetary pittance that kept them in lager and pretzels.

Wise heads here say it won't be long before the chancellor's picked Schutzstaffel troops are quelling riots throughout the Reich.

Shot—The recent appeal of Rudolph Hess for peaceful understanding with France was regarded by our state department as more illuminating than a 300-watt lamp. There was desperation in the combined plea and warning of Hitler's chief deputy.

But it wasn't the possibility of an Anglo-French alliance that the Nazis feared primarily. At the moment, England would rather deal kindly with Berlin than Paris and the Germans know it. It is to England's interest—as always—that Germany survive economically and

by Katherine Howard Taylor

SYNOPSIS: After the death of her gay but futile parents, Marsha Moore has gone to live with her Aunt Gertrude. Aunt Gertrude's sister distrusts life and Marsha has led the girl into a life of hard gaiety, broken only by the clatter of an admirer after another falls by the wayside. But Bob Powers, on vacation from his Mexican job, is different. Suddenly Marsha decides she does not want to hurt Bob.

Chapter Six MAN FROM MEXICO

She could see her mother playing with them, while she teased some man by turning upon him the softest eyes. Marsha had come by her habit straight enough, she knew; it was odd that they sometimes troubled her.

She dined, for the most part in silence, with her aunt, Miss Moore broke it once to say, "And what do you do tonight?" Her question was asked in a manner that implied deceit would be useless; in a manner that had, to be just to Marsha, been used long before Marsha had considered the weaving of the tangled web.

Chapter Six
MAN FROM MEXICO
An hour later Marsha made ready to dress for dinner; Jean ran her bath. Marsha said, "Thank you, Jean—" to receive no answer beyond a short sniff. Once again she had felt that life might be much more bearable if there were only a servant in Miss Gertrude's menage who would answer pleasantly.

"Can you see them as my ancestors?" asked Marsha.

"Bob," Marsha answered, "but you should have said who, or is it whom? I always get mixed on those. We're packing the trunk with 'beautiful memories'; he goes back to his bridges in two or three months—"

"I am indeed glad to hear it!" Miss Moore commented.

"Better," Marsha agreed. "The affair, by then, will have about run its course. You do dislike my trapping methods, don't you, Aunt?"

Miss Gertrude made no reply and Marsha smiled a trifle wearily at the heavy quiet that ensued; she understood its quality so well! Such unbroken stretches had once seemed almost unbearable.

Marsha remembered, with a riac of hot indignation, the injustices that had been done her, as a child, through them; of how she had struggled to please her aunt, to make talk that would please her aunt.

FACE TRIAL ON MORALS CHARGE

In a packed Los Angeles courtroom, Gloria Marsh (left), film extra, and Dave Allen (right), head of a movie casting bureau, went to trial charged with an offense to public morals. The magnet for the crowd was the expectation there would be a disclosure of secrets of Hollywood's legion of chorus girls. (Associated Press Photos) had felt only her hunger for affection; the fact that she, who was starved for it, had found it, and she was at the point when she had come to the feeling that she had not "stand it any more"—living with her aunt.

Alice, another maid who had been for years with Miss Moore, left the room, slyly with the salad plates; Jean Marsha, who had grown a protective shell since that day when she knew she would die unless "some one liked her a little," said triply, "No sweet—" once it had been more than dull; it had been a rack. Well, that was over! She knew her way around and she was so hard that no one could hurt her.

"I am going to a committee meeting," said Miss Gertrude; "we are to discuss plans for the Community House—"

It was amazing how arid and loveless those could be, who "served humanity." Marsha reflected. She wondered, drinking her coffee, how it would be to spend an evening at home with some man. She might try it with Bob. Doubtless Jean and Alice would keep watch, ears glued to key holes, and so be ready to report. But they would get much from Bob!

When he appeared at nine, Marsha, herself, opened the door to him.

For a moment he hesitated; then quickly he stepped within the hall. "This is about the pleasantest thing that ever happened to me," he said.

"Your flowers are lovely, Bob—" "Not lovely enough," he faltered in answer.

"I so appreciate your sending me the same sorts that you sent your mother." And she did; she felt her eyes smart to turn quickly from him. "It was all wrong," she added, "but I liked it. Aunt's out. Do you think you could stand an evening of domestic turn?"

"Rather!" he answered eagerly. He laid his hat and gloves on a table; slipped from his coat to follow her into the small, prim drawing room that was depressed by stern portraits of very God-fearing folk; gentleness of repressed instincts and an unyielding sense of the proper.

"Can you see them as my ancestors?" Marsha asked, after a short glance around the walls. She laughed; he smiled. "Your ancestors," he stated, "were gods and goddesses but unusually kind ones. I think you are descended from Niobe who bragged that her children were the most beautiful in the world. One child must have escaped death. The others, you know were killed because they were so beautiful—"

"It works that way sometimes, but let's not brood on it—" she said. "Sit down, Bob—"

She had dropped to a small old sofa; he looked longingly at the space that was by her. Again she laughed. "You may," she said gently.

Bob spends a difficult evening Sunday.

Midland To Receive Scout Broadcast At 6 P. M. Friday

MIDLAND—Regular two-day radio communication between Midland scouts, in camp near Merton and their parents is expected to begin at 6 p. m. Friday afternoon. A delay in broadcasts was caused by finding of G. B. Brock, army radio operator, that direct current is used to light the Spring Creek camp, rather than alternating. He located a converter at Big Spring and is leaving for the camp Friday morning to make final installation.

Film Booking System Changed

HOLLYWOOD (UP)—One of the most revolutionary steps taken in motion pictures since the coming of sound film was completed Wednesday when distributing companies of the 10 major studios voluntarily broke up their system of "block booking" for films. The step, which probably will cost in excess of $10,000,000 annually, was designed to aid the small theater owner in surviving boycotts and threats of censorship of films he might show.

Presbyterians Of Colorado Dedicate Window To Coleman

COLORADO—Memory of Dr. P. C. Coleman will be presented in concrete form for the members of the Presbyterian church, which he served for forty-nine years, by the large stained-glass window which was dedicated to him at Sunday morning services. Money for the window was donated by officers of the church and a few other members. The dedicated sum was used in addition to insurance money to replace the large window destroyed by the recent fire.
