Vote next Tuesday

It's your voice, use it

By Jerry Raun

West Texas voters have the opportunity Tuesday to cast their ballots for 14 proposed constitutional amendments. General elections with no candidates on the slate generally attract very few voters. It is very difficult to become excited over many of the constitutional changes that have to be voted on.

Area residents will cast their votes "for" or "against" these important propositions at the following polling locations: SCHLEICHER COUNTY--Precinct 1 - Methodist Church; Precinct 2 - Presbyterian Church Education Bldg. (behind church); Precinct 3 - Memorial Building and Precinct 4 - School Administration Building. IRION COUNTY--Precinct 1 - Museum; Precinct 2 - Sherwood Courthouse; Precinct 3 - Barnhart Fire House and School Library; Precinct 4 - Community Center.

Polls will be open at 7:00 a.m. and will close at 7:00 p.m.

However, there are times when critical issues do appear on the ballot which deserve as much attention as a race for governor or president. This is one of those years, for there are two propositions at stake which could have a profound influence on the future of West Texas.

Proposition 1 and Proposition 2 both deal with the much discussed Texas water plan. Both, if passed, would authorize the state to issue bonds to finance various kinds of water development or conservation programs. These funding measures are critical to the water plan because if they fail to pass there will be no water plan except on paper.

Many state and local officials agree that the plan, as currently drawn, is not perfect. It has flaws and it will need revision. But, it is a beginning toward intelligent planning for the development, use and conservation of a dwindling resource - water.

Most governmental agencies and political and civic leaders in West Texas have fought long and hard for a water plan and most have openly endorsed the passage of Proposition 1 and 2 on Nov. 5.

Opposition of these propositions is most likely to come from coastal cities in East and South Texas. There is some genuine concern that the water plan does not adequately take into consideration the bays and estuaries along the coast. The productivity of these is dependent upon an influx of fresh water. East Texans fear that the water may be shut off upstream to their economic detriment.

Some of the most vocal opposition has come from state Sen. Carlos Truan of Corpus Christi. He has labeled the plan a "pork barrel heaven". The state Audubon Society is also mounting a campaign to defeat the amendments.

Voters in Texas have defeated all other attempts to develop a statewide water plan. Amendments were proposed in 1969 and in 1981. This year's proposal is a two-part attempt. Proposition 1 would authorize the state to issue $980 million in bonds for flood control, reservoirs, treatment plants and pipelines. It would also back the bonds with a $250 million state insurance fund to make sale of the bonds easier.

Amendment 2 provides authority for $200 million in bonds to finance low-interest loans to farmers who buy water-efficient irrigation systems.

Passage of these propositions does not mean $1.8 billion in additional taxes. Repayment of the bonds would be made by the community or agency developing the project. If the city of Houston borrowed $5 million for a waste treatment project repayment would be made by use fees in Houston. Bond money spent on the construction of Stacey Reservoir would be repaid entirely by users of the water stored there.

Loeffler's office to visit

JoAnne Powell, Office Manager for Congressman Tom Loeffler's San Angelo District Office has scheduled a visit to Eldorado. She will be at the Schleicher County Courthouse on Tuesday, November 5, between 2:00 and 4:00p.m. Anyone in Schleicher County who would like to receive any assistance with federally related

Irion County sets 4-H feed

The Irion County 4-H Awards Dinner will be held Monday, November 4th at 7:00p.m. in the Community Center in Mertzon.

The affair will be a barbeque dish supper with each family bringing a salad, vegetable and/or a dessert. All the meat, drinks, bread, plates and utensils will be provided.

Both counties show low failure rate

The long dreaded House Bill 72 bomb has finally dropped on the Texas public schools. In some parts of the state extra-curricular activities have been wiped out, at least for six weeks. Some football schedules have been cancelled and bands have been sent to the bleachers for lack of eligible students.

In comparison to a number of schools, particularly in major metropolitan areas, local schools have emerged from the "no pass - no play" fallout with only minor casualties.

The small number of failures in Eldorado and Irion County attest to preparation, planning and community involvement. School officials in both districts are quick to praise faculty, students and parents for their work and dedication. Irion County Superintendent Paul Gothard commented, "We have a good system, excellent facilities and the cooperation of parents and students." In Eldorado, Superintendent Guy Whitaker said, "I can see a big change in the kids' attitude. They are studying more and working harder."

Neither of the schools suffered major losses in their extracurricular programs. In Irion County one member of the band and one junior high girls basketball player were declared ineligible. Eldorado lost six band members and one junior varsity football player.

Eldorado has an enrollment of 270 students in grades 7 through 12. Of these, 43 students failed at least one course, a failure rate of 16 percent. Irion County had only 10 failures of 170 total students. This is a failure rate of slightly less than 6 percent, surely one of the lowest in the state.

Of particular interest is the fact that students who are involved in extra-curricular activities have a much lower rate of failure than non-participants. Tom Henderson, Irion County High School Principal, said that about 150 of the school's 170 students are involved in at least one extra-curricular activity. Only two of these failed a course, or slightly more than 1 percent. Eight of 20 non-participants, 40 percent, failed at least one course. In Eldorado, the failure rate among participants was six out of 185 or just under 4 percent. About 44 percent of those who are not involved, 37 out of 85 had a failing grade.

Reports from across the state indicate that these are not an isolated incidents. Educators have maintained for years that students who are active in extra-curricular programs are usually better than those who are not.

Henderson and Gothard agree that one of the major factors contributing to the good showing at Irion County was action taken by the school board three years ago. "The board believed the kids needed to work harder so they raised the standards locally," Henderson said. He also praised his faculty. "The coaches encourage the players who are having difficulty and the teachers have done an excellent job of working with students," he said.

Whitaker commented that students in Eldorado have been monitored on a weekly basis for many years. "We have always checked grades every week and are continuing to check," he said. "If we can catch the problems early we can prevent a lot of kids from failing."

According to Whitaker the school began working with student's problems at the very beginning of the year. "We have a 15 minute "Eagle" period each day," he said, "Any student failing any subject is required to stay in the room during this time and study with the help of a teacher."

Club or class meetings are scheduled outside the school day to avoid conflict with academics. Point to a 56 percent failure in the Dallas Independent School District, Whitaker said, "I believe the smaller schools are doing a better job."

Officials at both schools agree

Runner Rev. to go 46 miles

Rev. John Stuke, pastor of the First United Methodist Church in Eldorado will be attempting to run 46 miles on November 23rd. The 46 mile "Catch the Spirit" Run will be run by Stuke beginning at the Methodist Church in San Angelo and will end at the Methodist Church in Eldorado.

The run was conceived as a fund raiser to enable the First United Methodist Wednesday Night Bible Study group to do something for the community. Their first project is to have Mary Wazeter come to Eldorado for a speaking engagement. Mary, at the age of 17, was one of the top runners in the country but who, in February 1982, jumped off a bridge to end her life. She was an "A" student on scholarship at one of the best universities in the country and had broken a national age-group record in road racing. Most did not suspect that she was depressed and had developed anorexia nervosa, the eating disorder caused by pressure and stress.

As she was falling from the bridge, she suddenly knew she didn't want to die and screamed to God. As she hit the ice she heard God's voice telling her she would not die. Just before she went unconscious she felt the presence of God as she saw what seemed like a light in the darkness of the night.

Mary's only running now is with Jesus Christ. She is paralyzed and is confined to her bed and wheel-chair. The story she has to tell touches every heart she speaks to. She could not handle life when she supposedly had everything but now it has all been taken away yet she has found a true joy and contentment with Christ.

J. Forrest Runge

A man and his land

Editor's Note

The following article is written in correlation with the 50th Anniversary of the S.C.S. Mr. Runge was instrumental in making the Eldorado-Divide S.C.S. what it is today, an invaluable service for area landowners.

For 23 years the names Eldorado Divide Soil Conservation District and J. Forrest Runge were almost synonymous. That is not to imply that others were not important contributors to conservation efforts in the Edwards Divide District. Many were deeply involved and such an undertaking cannot be a one-man operation. Runge was, however, a prime mover in establishing the need for conservation and in establishment of the district.

He was elected chairman of the first board of the district and served in that position for 23 years, longer than any other board member. Runge and fellow board member Ernest Foster, who served 21 years until health forced his retirement, were pioneers in the fledgling conservation movement and guided the district through the struggling early years.

A love of the land and an abiding interest in wise management to increase production while preserving the resources were not new to Runge in 1941 when the district was formed. His concern did not arise overnight, but was formulated over years in ranching and from observation of his own, and others, mistakes.

Runge began ranching between Christoval and Eldorado in 1926 on inherited land which he later expanded. His ranch never became a major spread by West Texas standards, but he was a success - he survived.

He was more fortunate or better suited to ranching than was his father. The Runge family in Galveston, and Germany were in the banking business. Forrest's grandfather, Henry Runge had the first private bank in Texas at Indianola. The family originated in Germany and came to Texas via Baltimore.

Runge was born Sept. 25, 1892 in Galveston. The family firm had made a loan to a French family to buy a ranch near Menard. The effort must have been to much for the Frenchman because the family simply disappeared one day leaving food on the table. Runge's father moved his family to Menard and attempted to make a success of the investment. During a recent interview Mrs. Edith Runge described this venture as, "a city man trying to ranch. It was too much for him." The ranch life was indeed too much for Mr. Runge who suffered a nervous breakdown after a series of calamities including scabies which killed all the sheep and a disastrous drought.

The family returned to Galveston when Forrest was eight years old. The early experience with ranching, disastrous or not, must have awakened something basic in him because he was to spend as much time as possible returning to the Menard area for visits and summers. He attended Texas A&M and after graduation in 1914 joined the Army. After discharge he began working on ranches near Junction and Menard.

One of these was the Fred Hall ranch at Junction which was owned by an uncle of Edith Winslow who would later become his wife. Edith's mother was a Black from Fort McKavett. The Blacks had moved to Fort McKavett soon after the fort was abandoned and lived in the barracks for a while. The Blacks and Runge were good friends.

Edith's grandfather was another "city man who didn't know anything about ranching," she said. Mr. Black had one of the original seats on the New York Cotton Exchange which he gave up when he moved. Mrs. Runge said the family "waited until the back of the last Indian disappeared over the horizon before moving to Texas."

Mrs. Runge was born and raised on a ranch near Menard. Her father was determined that all of the children would have college education so, when the time came, he moved the family to Austin. It was there, in 1925, that she and Forrest were married.

After the wedding Runge worked for John Lee and on the Chambers Ranch near San Angelo before acquiring his own ranch.

Runge had developed an early

Area Band News

Two area bands will compete in the Regional Contests in Temple next Saturday.

The Eldorado Eagle Band and the Irion County Hornet Band both walked away with Firsts in the Marching Contest held in Brady last Saturday.

The Eagle Band will have to leave the McCamey game at half time in order to get back to Eldorado at 11:00 p.m. and then meet at the Band Hall at 5:00 a.m. to leave for Temple.

In other Band news, the Band-Aid Booster Club met at the Band Hall last Monday night to discuss future fund raisers for the band and to view the video of the "perfect" performance of the Eldorado Eagle Band at Brady. The band's trip to St. Louis in April was also discussed by the group.

Running Team planned

On Sunday, Nov. 3rd, at 4:00 at the parsonage, the Eldorado First United Methodist Church is putting together the "Catch the Spirit" Running Team for all those who are runners or wish to start running. The pastor, John Stukey, and his wife, Brenda have both coached the best cross-country seasons in the history of Drew University. They both run and have times that would qualify them for the Olympic Trials, and have numerous running credentials.

Other running veterans who will be helping other runners will be Lynn Meador, Ed Meador, Jim Hardy, Rick Sterling, and the most well-known running figure in Eldorado, Rita McWhorter.

They will get together each week to watch films and videos on running, talk about training and planning for races, get advice on how to begin running and have meals planned by nutrition expert Rita. It will also be a time to use our running for Christ by supporting particular worthy benefits.

The running team is open to all of Eldorado. It is not just Methodist. Also some of our greatest runners are persons like Gomez from Mexico, and Saleh from Djibouti, Africa. Running has swept the country and is now about to sweep Eldorado. For more info call the church at 853-2721.

Tacky Party held

By Glenda Harris

Monday, October 28th, Beta Sigma Phi held a very "informal" meeting with 18 members and one guest present. In fact, it was so informal it was down-right "Tacky". This was the annual Tacky Party and Scavenger Hunt. Although the lists were not very long, a 1975 graduation ring can be an obstacle. This reporter would personally like to thank Don Richters for loaning our group his ring - we may not have had ours there first, but we most definitely had the fanciest. Thanks, Don.

A secret ballot was taken for the most tacky (we certainly wouldn't tell anyone to their face how tacky they are). Even her Merle Norman make-up didn't help our "winner". The new Miss Tacky is our very own Mary Leigh Dunagan.

Following the voting came our bunko party. After many roll-overs we finally had our winners. Bunko winner was Kathy Mihecoby, high game winner was Brenda Norris, 2nd high winner was Barbara Jackson and the Booby winner was Mary Leigh Dunagan. Mary Leigh sure was on a streak - a losing streak!!

The hostesses for these events were Brenda Norris, Betty Hanusch, Frieda Hanusch, Glenda Harris, Mary Leigh Dunagan, Stacey Hayes, and Carolyn Mayo. Fun was had by all.

Everyone was then reminded of our booths for the Halloween Carnival and to be sure to be there to work your shift and help the TAFE group make this a success.

Eagles pluck Hawks

The 1985 version of the Eldorado Eagles definitely have one claim to fame when they are placed in a grudge match situation. They notoriously come out on top and as they did against Sonora. They lined up last Friday night in Eldorado against Wall, an old rivalry, and proceeded to take names to the tune of 20-0. Scores were tallied by Mike Moore, Jay O'Harrow and Troy Daniels, and the extra point effort was effective one time. Jay O'Harrow, the Eagles kamikaze kid, carried the ball 23 times for a 175 yards helping bring the total of the yards gained by the Eagles to 284 as opposed to the Hawks 87. The Eagles brought the ball to the Hawks 51 times and Wall carried it 25 times. The Eagles had an 80 percent completion ratio in their passes compared to Wall's 45.5. First down column indicates that Wall received one first down compared to 18 for the Eagles. In other words, the Green Machine dominated their neighbor to the North and the game was flawless in relationship to fumbles. The Eagles received 6 penalties for 51 yards and the Hawks 2 for 20.

This week the Eagles travel to McCamey to meet the 17th rank team in Class 2A ball state-wide. McCamey is setting on a 7-1 no district win-loss ratio and have a strong defense and are a powerful running team. They are the district pick and the work is cut out for the Eagles this week with the loss of Steve Saldivar to a practice injury and who is not anticipated to play in this game. Hopefully he will be back in shape for the Greenwood game.

the opposite side of the field from where the pass is thrown. A defender may make contact with a potential receiver at the line of scrimmage or downfield if he is defending himself against an attempted block. The defender may not hold or push the potential receiver from the side or back. If the foul occurs before the ball is thrown on a legal pass play a first down will be awarded in addition to the yardage penalty. If the foul occurs after the pass is thrown it carries only a yardage penalty. This distinction confuses everyone at times.

The remaining infractions which include automatic first downs are: (1) striking, kicking, kneeing, elbowing, etc.; (2) meeting with knee, striking with open hand, etc.; (3) tackling out of bounds; (4) deliberate face mask by the defense; (5) butting or ramming with helmet; (6) spearing; (7) running into an opponent out of play; (8) top of helmet striking; (9) roughing the passer; and (10) roughing the holder or kicker.

Several of these involve use of the helmet and can be either defensive or offensive fouls. Deliberate use of the helmet to punish an opponent is "spearing" and is usually called when the opponent is on the ground. But whatever definition is used, spearing, striking with, etc., use of the helmet is illegal. Coaches used to teach tackling techniques which involved going helmet first into the body of an opponent. This is no longer legal and, if taught, violates the ethics of coaching.

The rule was changed primarily to protect the tackler. Too many neck and head injuries were resulting from this technique. The human neck is simply not designed to absorb that kind of shock and a relatively light blow can jam or fracture vertebrae.

Since all of these personal fouls are acts which have a likelihood of causing injury, or are blatantly unsportsman like acts, the automatic first down was added to make the penalty stiffer.

"Piling on" is not listed above but it is covered under running into an opponent out of play. When "piling on" is called players and coaches often protest that the whistle had not yet blown. That is totally immaterial to the infraction. As soon as the ball carrier hits the ground the ball is dead by rule. It is not the whistle which kills the ball. Any delayed contact with the runner after he is downed is a potential foul. The same is true of a runner out of bounds. As soon as he crosses the sideline the ball is dead, whistle or no whistle.

Speaking of whistles, blowing one at the wrong time is the error most officials dread the most. As soon as a whistle is blown the ball is dead and if the whistle was inadvertent, blown at the wrong time, the officials have an embarrassing problem.

Inadvertent whistles are most frequently blown when the ball is loose following a fumble, backward pass, illegal forward pass or blocked kick. In this case the ball will belong to the team who last has possession but there are options as to where.

If a Team A player behind the line of scrimmage is running with the ball, or if he fumbles, and an inadvertent whistle blows, the down should be repalyed. If these events occur after the runner has advanced beyond the line of scrimmage Team A has the option of replaying the down or taking the ball at the spot where the whistle was blown.

If an inadvertent whistle sounds after a change of possession (interception, punt return, etc.) the ball will be put in play at the point where the whistle was blown, or if loose at the time, where it was last in possession.

The Zebra's View

by G.C. Raun

The question last week was: "What penalties include an "automatic" first down?"

There are a baker's dozen of these most of which are personal fouls that could involve injury to either the offended or offending player. Three of them involve defensive pass interference or other infractions on a passing play. Defensive pass interference will be a first down whether it is a spot foul or a 15-yard penalty.

Illegal use of hands or holding by the defense on a legal pass play will be penalized 5 or 10 yards and a first down awarded, under certain conditions. These fouls usually occur on love for horses and had spent much of his younger years around and working with them and served in the cavalry. He believed that every rancher should raise horses. It was this belief that later hammered home a lesson in land management. "One of the main mistakes we made at first was raising too many horses," Mrs. Runge said. "It was hard for him to get out of the horse business, but they were very hard on grass," she recalled.

Forrest's interest in the soil conservation program developed after seeing the effects of drought. He also came to recognize the results of overstocking first hand. "It was our first big blunder," Mrs. Runge said. "Prices got so high after the war. It was the first time we had any money."

Runge stocked his ranch with cattle, sheep and goats. He thought it a bad idea to raise only one crop believing in diversification to make money from one crop if prices were down on others.

Mrs. Runge recalled people asking how they made it through the depression when so many failed. "We were very frugal and didn't spend money if we didn't have it," she said. "We never lived on borrowed money and ate lots of beans and chickens. We raised ducks and turkeys and ate goats. We seldom ever killed beef."

"Screwworms were our biggest problem," she commented. Runge tried just about every conceivable approach including various kinds of "hospitals" for wormy animals. Nothing really worked until the sterile screwworm program became effective.

Bitterweed was only a minor problem on the ranch, "because we always had grass," Mrs. Runge said. Predation was never a problem, "there were no coyotes and no wolves."

Runge was very interested in brush control because he viewed brush infestation as a major problem. With the help of the SCS programs he tackled the problem and was successful in reclaiming most of the ranch's infested area.

Much of his activities as a director of the district were in the area of education. He was particularly interested in teaching conservation to young people. He wanted to try to help them learn to control brush before it got out of hand. Runge felt that by the time men were grown they had become convinced nothing could be done.

Runge was a strong supporter of Texas A&M and particularly of the Sonora Experiment Station from its beginning. He maintained a life-long friendship with the staff. He was a firm believer in the scientific approach to ranching and stock improvement.

"We had really scroungy goats," Mrs. Runge said. When prices began to get high Runge became very interested in improving his herd. He obtained breeding stock from the Sonora station and used them to good advantage. "We got a lot of good out of it," Mrs. Runge recalled with a big smile.

Runge was a rancher but he recognized the value of soil and water conservation to the farmers in Schleicher County. During a hearing on the petition to establish the Eldorado Divide Soil Conservation District, Jan. 23, 1941, Runge said, "I would like to express my ideas of the need of a Soil Conservation District in Schleicher and adjoining counties. We have a big dry land lake area which is one of our biggest problems. Also, we are badly infested with bitterweed, and I think these two problems alone, if there were no other needs, would justify setting up a district."

and not just individual needs."

For the first two decades most of the actual work of the district was focused on the farming operations. Terracing and contour plowing were the primary goals. Even though the early years were hampered by the war, lack of technical personnel, and a severe drought, progress was made.

Education and public information were continually stressed by the board and their concern is reflected in reading the annual reports. Convincing doubters is never an easy accomplishment and farmers and ranchers are a typically independent breed. The success demonstrated by successful believers is hard to overlook.

The work of the Edwards Divide Soil and Water Conservation District and of Runge and many other men of vision has produced those successes. Doubters are now an endangered species.

Forrest Runge died September 24, 1964 just two months after fellow founding director, B.E. Moore. He is survived by his wife who continues his ideals and by four children: Anita Runge Moore, of Pueblo, Colorado; May Runge Kisko, of San Angelo; Richard Sealy Runge, of Menard; and James Forrest Runge, Jr., of McKinney.

He is also survived by his belief in the Edwards Divide District.

Otis Deal named delegate

Otis Deal, Eldorado, Texas, has been elected as a delegate to the 102nd Annual Meeting of the American Angus Association, November 17 - 19 in Louisville, Kentucky, reports Richard Spader, executive vice president of the American Angus Association.

Otis, a member of the American Angus Association, is one of some 300 Angus breeders who have been elected by fellow members of their state association to serve as a representative at the Annual meeting. At this time, the state delegates will participate in the business meeting and vote for a proposed change in the Association by-laws, and elect a new president, vice president and five directors to the American Angus Association board.

The Annual Meeting is held in conjunction with the Annual Convention and Banquet, and the 1986 National Angus Show during the North American International Livestock Exposition.

The American Angus Association has more than 30,000 active members and is the largest beef breed organization in the United States.

Bronte falls to Purple Pride

The Irion County Hornets had an expensive win last week against the Bronte Longhorns in their 34-22 victory. Their Junior quarterback, Jeff Meyers and starting safety is out for the season with a torn cartilage. He is anticipated to be able to assist the Hornets in basketball season as well as in track, but for the remainder of the football season it is no play for Jeff. Allen Brest, the Hornet's pass receiver will pulled into the quarterback slot for the upcoming game against Water Valley, John de le Rosa, a Hornet end, received a sprained ankle in the Bronte game and naturally is Meyers backup in defense. De le Rosa is questionable against Water Valley. Paul Montez, stated head Coach Sid McCown, is not back to 100 percent performance yet from his accident and could easily fill the slot for either de le Rosa or Meyers. In other words, Irion County's hold card, it's depth, is being dwindled away.

In Coach McCown's own words, "The game against Bronte was an almost instant replay of the Santa Anna game the week before." Early in the first quarter the Longhorns put 14 points on the board, but then Irion County retaliated with a fifty-two yard run at the hands of Jason Honea. With the extra point being approved, the Hornets returned again with 41 seconds left on the first quarter clock. Honea once again dashed over for five yards, but at approximately the same time as the offensive began to get in gear for Irion County the defense came alive. A little before the mid-way into the second quarter Irion County bounced again on the board when Meyers completed a pass to Honea and 40 more yards plus the TD were added to the Hornet's stats. Bronte came back on the next series with a 62-yard pass followed by an extra points run and the defensive battle began again. With 27 seconds remaining in the second, quarterback Jeff Meyers plowed his way for fifteen yards and another TD setting the score at 22-26. In the early portions of the fourth Honea again came across with a 10-yard run and a TD. The extra point effort was successful and the final score was 34-22.

Irion County racked up 16 first downs compared to Bronte's fifteen. The Hornets rushed 40 times for a total of 280 yards. The Longhorns tried 42 times and earned 168. The passing effort of Bronte surpassed that of the Hornets with a total of 129 yards through air effort, as with the Hornets racking up 64. Irion County coughed the ball three times losing it once. Bronte lost possession five times with one turnover to the opposition. Penalties earned by each team was identical with 6 calls and 45 yards. In a word, Bronte gave the Hornets one of their best challenges to date this year in one of the toughest ball games played. The Hornets did not receive the luck of the call on several occasions and sustained more injuries from this game than any other to date this year.

Jason Honea carried the ball fifteen times and gained 131 yards for the Hornets plus three touchdowns. He had an average of 8.7 in the rushing column for the game bringing his total for the year to a 4.4. Steve Combs carried the ball 14 times and earned 91 yards for Irion

County in the Bronte battle bringing his yearly average to 6.5 yards per attempt.

The Hornet coach McCown stated that he anticipated the Water Valley Wildcats will use a ground attack against the Hornets with their top running back Terry Gauwain and that the Water Valley team will be definitely trying to attempt to stop Irion County's march for the title in that there is no rivalry between the school. The Wildcats come into the game with 3-5 win loss ratio and they normally play a strong first half game, and with the recently acquired injured of the Hornets, the Wildcats will definitely be trying to take advantage of the slightly wounded Hornets.

Jason Honea plows his way through the Bronte defense.

Burleson to play

Wednesday approval was received for Jason Burleson to play varsity ball with the Hornets. Burleson, a new transfer into Irion County school system, comes from Hamlin with an already spectacular athletic career behind him. He is a past National Decathlon champion standing 6'6" and weighting 220 pounds, and a utility player in football. He letters in two other sporting events! They are basketball and track. He is a 15 year old Sophomore and will be eligible to play in the Sterling City game.

Sandinistas show true colors

By Tom Loeffler,
Congressman 21st Dist.

If anyone in America every questioned the true direction of the Marxist regime in Micaragua, those doubts should have vanished last week when the ruling junta announced the immediate suspension of the few remaining civil liberties in Micaragua.

Daniel Ortega, president of Nicaragua's dictatorship, told Nicaraguans that the suspension of their civil rights was forced by the United States' attempts to undermine the Marxist revolution and "bring (Nicaragua to its knees.)"

Translated from Communist propaganda into plain English, Ortega's statement means that his regime is growing more and more unpopular, and the Sandinistas hope to stifle this growing dissent by clamping down even more tightly on the few freedoms left to this captive nation. It's the same method to which all dictators resort to try and maintain their power, and it shows how desperate the Sandinistas have become. They don't even trust their own people with the basic rights of freedom of speech, freedom of assembly, and the freedom of privacy, all of which were suspended last week. Mail may now be legally opened and inspected at any time, telephone lines may be tapped, and citizens may be held in prison without formal charges as long as the government wishes.

The Catholic Church has been one of the most outspoken defenders of freedom in Nicaragua. The Sandinistas last week moved to silence the Church by shutting down its newspaper, which has criticized the Sandinista regime, and by requiring that all future church broadcasts and publications be submitted to the government for censorship before they are made public.

Ortega and the Sandinistas can't blame the freedom fighters or the United States for the sorry state of Nicaragua under Marxism. Last week's desperate action only underscores more strongly why the freedom fighters in Nicaragua are battling their government.

A Nicaraguan told reporters last week, "They have taken away all our rights except to live and to die...For me, freedom does not exist in Nicaragua."

We cannot allow the hopes of this man and other freedom-loving Nicaraguans to be extinguished under the heel of the Sandinista regime, because when their liberties are trampled upon, our own freedom is also endangered.
