Life Among The Fishes

by Thomas Giovannitti

Well, Nicolas has just turned 13 and he has already created a monster. At such a young age he has turned his father, usually a rational man, into a "Sports Dad!"

Ugh!, I thought I would be immune from such a disease. I used to take great joy in teasing other "Sports dads" who found themselves driving all of West Texas chasing yellow school buses filled with their offspring. They would rant and rave about how their little child was much mistreated by obviously biased officials or worse yet the coach, failing to see his son's or daughter's great athletic gifts summarily removed them from play.

But wonder of wonders, Nicolas enters athletic competition at the seventh grade level and I lose all reason. Why didn't someone warn me? I am sure all those other "Sports Dads" are snickering under their breath as they watch me go crazy in front of them and several hundred strangers for the other town.

It amazes me how, without much provocation, I could find people from another town to be such rude, boisterous, and bad mannered people. And those zebras, the referees, who I always thought did such a good job of being fair and objective with other folks children could be so arbitrary and unfair with my son.

I might have avoided all this since I was able to do so with Mario. Mario may have known his father too well so he banned me from attending any athletic competition he was involved in. This spared us both, I think, much embarrassment.

Nicolas, although he also knows me pretty well, asked that I go to his games. Even after the yelling and carrying on he says he wants me to go to more of his games.

He wouldn't be setting me up, would he?

Fall Spraying Aids Fruit Trees

Preparation for next year's fruit crop can begin this fall by spraying trees for several fruit tree diseases.

Bacterial spot, bacterial canker, peach leaf curl and coryneum blight are diseases that can be slowed by spraying now.

Dr. John A. Lipe, Extension Service horticulturist at Fredericksburg, says that bacterial canker is the most serious of the targeted diseases. It is a common cause of tree dieback and death.

Canker also causes bleeding or gumming along the trunk and branches. In eight out of 10 cases, fruit tree gumming is caused by canker rather than borers, which are often mistakenly blamed for the problem.

Canker gumming is especially evident in the fall. It is caused by a systemic bacteria that plugs the tree's vascular system. The only thing that will help trees seriously infected with canker is good care: adequate water, fertilizer and weed control.

Bacterial spot and coryneum blight commonly damage leaves and sometimes the fruit of stone fruit trees in the spring and summer. Physical signs of these diseases are leaves with small holes; in severe cases, trees are defoliated.

Spraying now will not eliminate the disease but will reduce its incidence next spring and summer.

Another common disease is leaf curl, which causes extremely crinkled leaves in the spring. Leaf curl is caused by a fungus that quits once temperatures begin to get warmer.

The disease in worst following a cool, damp March, but spraying now is usually sufficient to prevent it from becoming bad enough to cause heavy defoliation next spring.

Spraying different mixtures of Kocide 101, Kocide 606 and Kocide DF can be used effectively to prevent these diseases.

Kocide 101 is the only formulation available in small enough quantities to be practical for garden use.

Kocide contains copper, which will cause leaf burn on healthy green foliage, so wait until the leaves are beginning to drop and are easily brushed from the tree.

It is best to apply this spray while most of the leaves are still attached, but the spray is worthwhile, even if most of the leaves have already dropped.

Besides spraying, sanitation is important in reducing the carryover of disease to next year's crop.

Mummified and rotting apples, dead wood on the ground or in the tree, plus ragged stubs of broken branches harbor disease spores. These items should be pruned out, gathered and burned or tilled into the soil.

Fall is not a good time to prune fruit trees or other deciduous plants. Pruning stress, especially when coupled with other stresses including drought, poor nutrition and disease, can make the tree more vulnerable to winter injury.

Lipe reported that soil moisture levels across much of the Hill Country are adequate to carry fruit trees and vines as they enter dormancy. The roots of deciduous trees, vines and shrubs are active throughout the fall and winter, and the soil should never be allowed to dry.

Engagement Announced

Melanie Embry and Ronald Mittel, Jr.

Mrs. Suzanne McLain and Mr. Pete Embry announce the engagement of their daughter, Melanie Rose Embry to Mr. Ronald Archie Mittel, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Mittel.

The will be united in marriage on February 16, 1991 at twelve o'clock noon at the First Baptist Church in Dallas.

Although not native to our state or this country, the Ringneck Pheasant of Asia has found an enjoyable home on the relatively gameless high plains of the Panhandle.

Texas wildlife officials saw the pheasant as a potential game animal in an area not widely known for its abundance of game. So the officials began stocking efforts in the late 1920's. By increasing the stockings over the next 25 years, Texas was allowed to reap from the transplant during the 1960's. Since that time pheasant hunting in Texas has enjoyed a significant following.

Pheasants require three basic components to survive on any given range. Like most animals food, water, and sufficient cover will sustain these birds throughout the season. These birds prefer an ecotonal area for their livelihood. Ten acres of cover surrounding a 50 acre field is more effective than a 10 acre block of cover in the same field.

with Jimmy Fontenot

A pheasant needs sufficient cover for nesting, loafing, and escape cover for protection against the elements and predators. The most critical times for cover are nesting (March-July) and winter months (January-February).

The pheasant enjoys inhabiting cultivated areas. These birds primarily consume seeds such as corn, grain sorghums, and small grains. Weeds and insects contribute a small portion to their diet.

Strips of unharvested crops left on the land throughout the winter months provides an excellent source of food and cover for the pheasant population.

There are definite color characteristics which differentiate the male from female. Both male and female chicks are drab colored at birth.

The male (rooster) pheasant is brilliantly colored with a opalescent emerald head, scarlet-red check waddles and neck-band of bright white and dazzling gold and metallic copper chest.

Huntible populations of pheasant are confined to approximately 18 counties across the tip of the Texas Panhandle. It is estimated that 65-75% of the birds hatched during any year will not live until next hunting season.

Due to the polygamous mating behavior of the males, this allows for 90% of the male population to be harvested each season as a surplus to breeding needs and their removal will have no direct effect on the annual increase. One male to every 15 females is normal.

Habitat improvement and population increases may represent two views of many people. For some, the opportunity to see habitat improvement and abundant wildlife is rewarding. Others may benefit from the enjoyment of recreational hunting as well as income generated by paying sportsmen.

The pheasant asks for three simple pleasures: food, water, and cover. In return these Asian birds will return countless hours of beauty and unsurpassed challenges to the advanced wingshooters.

If you have never experienced the thunderous sound of a rooster pheasant explode under your feet, then you have missed a sportsman's thrill.

Until next time...enjoy our outdoors!

PUBLIC NOTICE

On July 19, 1990, GTE Southwest Incorporated ("GTE-SW") filed revisions to the company's tariff pertaining to the features and associated equipment for providing emergency number services (9-1-1).

In this filing, GTE-SW proposes to modify its existing 9-1-1 tariff and to add more than 200 new service offerings. The new items of service and equipment in this application have been added to meet the company's increasing 9-1-1 customer demands and to allow GTE-SW to compete more effectively in the 9-1-1 equipment market.

The product line in the new offerings consists of a mini-computer and specialized console package for larger communities, as well as a personal computer with Automatic Number Identification (ANI) display for smaller communities. (ANI displays a caller's telephone number on the emergency dispatcher's computer screen.) In addition, the product line will include ANI and Automatic Location Information (ALI) display units compatible with, and similar to, those offered by Southwestern Bell Telephone Company and other local exchange carriers in Texas. (The ALI feature displays a caller's address on the computer screen.) The rate charged existing 9-1-1 customers may be revised at the expiration of their contracts with GTE-SW if the proposed tariff is approved.

This filing has been assigned Docket No 9667. The hearing on the merits is scheduled for February 25, 1991, at the offices of the Public Utility Commission of Texas. The deadline to intervene in this docket is December 31, 1990.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information, should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas, 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221, teletypewriter for the deaf.

Seasonal safety suggestions

Here are a few tips for keeping the holiday season a safe one:

- Keep your tree outdoors or in a cold garage until you want to trim it. Before bringing it inside, saw off an inch or two diagonally above the original cut, for better water absorption.
- Locate the tree away from heat sources, and water it frequently, to keep it from drying out.
- Check all strings of lights for any damage to wiring or sockets and don't leave any sockets empty.
- Use only electrical equipment that has the Underwriter's Laboratory seal of approval.
- Keep cords out of traffic areas, and don't overload any circuit.
- Use only spotlights or floodlights to illuminate a metallic tree.
- Keep any open flame, cigar, cigarette, or pipe away from the tree.
- Use only fire-proof decorations, and use a ladder to reach the top ones.
- If you have small children, keep them away from these plants that might cause severe stomach problems if eaten: poinsettia, mistletoe, holly, Jerusalem cherry, and amaryllis.
