The First Presbyterian Church of Eldorado will install their new minister, Hawley Wolfe, this Sunday August 4 at 4:00 p.m. Rev. Wolfe is the sixteenth pastor of the church, founded back in 1903. Special music will include a father-daughter duet on cello and piano, by Walter Osadchuk, cellist for the Midland-Odessa Symphony Orchestra, and his daughter Elecia.

The installation service will take place in the church sanctuary, followed by light refreshments downstairs in the Fellowship Hall. Everyone in the community is warmly invited to attend.

The installation service itself is done in accordance with the "Book of Order" of the Presbyterian Church U.S.A., and is carried out by a seven-member commission of Tres Rios Presbytery, the governing body for Presbyterians in West Texas. Commissioners include: Rev. Flynn Long, chair, pastor of First Presbyterian Big Spring; Rev. Lewis Allen, pastor of Good Shepherd Presbyterian Sonora; Rev. Joe Turner, pastor of First Presbyterian Odessa; Elder Paul Page, First Presbyterian Eldorado; Elder Grace Osadchuk, Grace Presbyterian Midland; Elder Tom Koger, First Presbyterian Big Spring; and Elder Nelson Ervin, St. Mark's Presbyterian San Angelo.

Hawley Wolfe was ordained to the gospel ministry through laying on of hands by Chicago Presbytery in November 1981. The Austin native is serving his third pastorate here, having ministered previously in Deerfield Illinois and Midland Texas. His training includes a year of theological study in Westminster College, Cambridge, England, and a Master of Divinity degree at Princeton Seminary, Princeton, New Jersey.

A statement from the church says, "we at First Presbyterian rejoice in this happy event, and we hope that all our friends in the Eldorado community will rejoice, too. Please come and celebrate with us!"

Life Among The Fishes

by Thomas Giovannitti

Well, summer is coming to an end for my school children much sooner than it did last year. The State in its wisdom has mandated a few more school days and in an effort to finish school by May 25 my children will start school August 19. That is my understanding anyway.

As for me I have little complaint with the early start. My children have been helpful but I just cannot come up with enough work for them to keep them busy all day.

Our schools are air conditioned so the comfort level should be fairly tolerable. In fact, I wouldn't mind if they went to school a few more days than they are now required to go. I'm pretty sure that the teachers could find more information to give the kids.

I read where the schools in Oregon (I think?) will be open quite a few more days than in any other state. It seems they have completely revamped their educational system so that through junior high the children will attend regular classroom instruction and about the ninth grade they will test the students and only those doing very well academically will be allowed to finish high school. The others will be routed into trade schools.

I realize that some people might get a little upset if their child did not make it into high school since it would pretty much end their chances of going on to college. In fact, a few colleges might not like the system since it could very well reduce the number of eligible enrollees who could pay tuition. Because testing can sometimes be quite culturally biased, there is a genuine fear that such a system will reduce the ability of minority students to get accepted into the academic tract.

Any major overhaul of our schools would cause dislocation and probably some unfairness but then much of the rest of life is unfair anyway. If the reports are true that the United States is falling behind our economic competitors such as Japan and Germany then we might want to take a look at their educational systems. On the other hand we don't have the homogeneous populations or the strong cultural regimentation that even into the last century was true of both of these countries. We do need to do something and our schools can surely be a part of it but maybe, just maybe, their education needs to begin at home.

Dear Editor,

While visiting my mother, Jewel Bailey, recently I was so delighted and impressed to discover Eldorado has been beautified! Your town that I love so, has never looked prettier. I would like to thank "The Golden Girls" and all of the volunteers who participated in the planning, planting, and the maintenance of the project. Eldorado, "dressed in its Sunday best" will surely be an inspiration to all of West Texas. Thank you again for the surprise!

Dear Sir,
I'm very proud of the way people in Eldorado are working together to make Eldorado a more beautiful town. I lived there 32 years, so I have roots there.

Mr. Kenneth Richardson stopped by the office the other day. Told us a story that he wanted me to pass along.
Seems that there was this fella driving down the road. Saw an ice cooler fall out of the back of a truck. Went over to the cooler, opened it up and found a Big Toe packed in ice.
At first, he didn't know exactly what to do. Then he did the only rational thing. He called a TOE TRUCK.
Sometimes, when we are faced with new problems, we don't know exactly how to respond. But if we continue living, we will continue to see new things. We will continue to have new challenges.
Most of us will probably not find toes that previously belonged to someone else. We will, however find different situations in our lives. We will choose whether to call these situations problems, difficulties, obstacles or troubles. Someone has suggested that we call these challenges OPPORTUNITIES. New challenges can be opportunities for growth and opportunities for learning.
Of course, there will be some things that come along that will be painful. There are no easy answers when we lose a love. There are no easy outs when our lives seem to be shattered. But even in times like these, there can always be found a ray of hope, a glimmer of promise.
Once, Jack Benny said, "I don't deserve this award, but I have arthritis and I don't deserve that either." I guess, lots of us get much that we don't deserve. All we can do is hope for hope.

Till The Next Time...
MAY GOD BLESS!

OUR CONDOLENCES

A tragic accident Sunday evening claimed the lives of two local residents. Joe Fuentes, 23, and Fernando Cardenas, 14, lost their lives after a blowout, which caused the Fuentes vehicle to roll over and eject the two from the car.

Also in the accident was Lee Roy Fuentes, 13, nephew of the driver, who was not injured.

We would also like to remember Mary and Lester Dahlberg. Mary lost an aunt, Stella Schwartz, and Lester lost an aunt, Alice Dahlberg, this week. Our thoughts are with you!

County Agent's Report

TEXAS AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION SERVICE

Before you leave for an extended vacation, a housing specialist says there are a number of things you can do to secure your home and save energy.

Dr. Susan Quiring with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service recommends following these tips before going on vacation:

- *Unplug small electrical appliances, computers, televisions, and microwaves. Pulling the plug prevents fires and short-circuits that can result from electrical surges during lightning storms.

- *Turn off the electric hot water heater to save energy and electricity. Most gas water heaters have a "vacation" setting, so you don't have to turn them off. This saves having to relight the pilot.

- *If possible, use timers on lamps so that lights come on periodically. Manual timers are inexpensive; electronic ones cost a little more.

- *Raise the thermostat on air conditioner units to about 85 degrees. This keeps the refrigerator and freezer from overworking, keeps plants from dying, yet also saves energy.

- *Take food items that may spoil out of the refrigerator; clean it out and defrost if necessary.

- *Leave names and phone numbers of trusted repair firms -- plumbing, electrical and others -- with the person who will be checking your home and watering the plants.

- *Set off bug bombs, if needed, before you leave.

- *Check exterior security lights. If you have motion detectors, pass your hand in front of lights or walk by them to make sure the switch is on.

- *Put your mail on hold and pay all bills that may be due before you return home. Utility companies normally have you estimate an amount on the high side and credit the difference to the following month's bill. When paying bills this way, be sure to write the month on your check that the payment is for.

- *Cancel your newspaper during the days you will be gone or have a neighbor pick it up. However, make sure that the neighbor does not stack papers at the back door or inside the house piled up with the mail in plain view through a window.

- *Make sure that your yard is maintained -- have someone cut the grass regularly, and if you have a swimming pool, arrange care for equipment and other necessary maintenance.

- *Arrange to have pets boarded at a kennel or make arrangements for someone to care for them.

- *Hide valuables such as guns and jewelry or place with someone else if possible.

- *Inventory your personal belongings such as jewelry, china, art work, television and video and stereo equipment in advance in case of theft. This includes writing down brands, serial and model numbers, and taking pictures.

- *Allow enough time to secure all windows, sliding glass doors and other doors.

- *It's also a good idea to leave information on where you can be reached with neighbors and police, and let them know the dates you will be gone," Quiring said. "And don't broadcast to everyone that you will be going on vacation. Tell them about it after you return."

Headaches

This article, by Dr. Rico Forlano is being continued from last week's issue of The Eldorado Success.

injury, you should have a doctor examine it even if you don't feel bad because internal head injuries don't always cause pain. A medical or chiropractic physician should be consulted in these cases.

Depression headaches can be seen in any age or sex and are usually worse upon arising. The headache is accompanied by depression and counseling and antidepressant drugs may help the problem.

Sinus headaches are caused by chronic sinusitis when there is a history of sinus attacks. They are experienced as a persistent frontal and facial pain. Antihistamines, decongestants, and chiropractic treatment can provide relief.

Eye strain headaches can cause pain in the forehead. They can be triggered by uncorrected astigmatism, faulty vision, close work in poor light, or using a computer terminal for long periods of time without rest. If you get new bifocals and headaches start and don't go away, your optometrist should check them to be certain that they are divided at the right level. If the headache is not corrected by a new optical prescription, then a medical or chiropractic physician should be consulted.

Caffeine headaches usually occur in the morning when getting up or whenever the customary coffee is skipped. Caffeine consumption should be eliminated, but it should be done gradually so that withdrawal symptoms can be avoided.

Monosodium glutamate (MSG) headaches provoke throbbing in the temples and forehead and cause pressure and tightness in the face. MSG is a food enhancer used particularly in Chinese food (soy sauce) and many packaged food products. If headaches occur after eating, food labels should be reviewed for the presence of MSG. People who experience MSG headaches should eliminate MSG-containing foods from their diet.

Carbon monoxide headaches cause throbbing pain, dizziness, weakness and nausea. If there is exposure to carbon monoxide in the home, a whole family may develop headache. This may be due to a defective gas furnace. Leaky exhaust-pipes in cars may also be responsible.

Temporomandibular joint (TMJ) syndrome headaches are characterized by pain in the jaw brought on by chewing and malalignment of the jaw. There is tenderness over the joint just in front of the ear and a click in the TMJ produced by movement can be heard. Gum chewing should be eliminated. Dental or chiropractic treatments can be useful in providing relief.

You should call a doctor if your headache wakens you at night, is accompanied by a stiff neck, is caused by a blow to your head, and is worse than usual and does not get better. You should also call your doctor if you have slurred speech, blurred vision, numbness, memory loss, loss of balance, or trouble talking.

Health News

by Dr. Rica J. Forlano

Women are concerned about their husbands having heart attacks, but they are not usually concerned about themselves having one. Many women think their greatest health risk is breast cancer, but it may be heart disease. One in nine women 45 - 64 has heart disease - one in three over 65 have heart disease. After menopause, almost as many women have heart attacks as men, and it is the number one killer of women over 40. Four of the controllable factors that cause heart disease are drinking, smoking, diet, and stress. The reason there is an increase in heart disease in women now is because women have joined the work force in mass numbers. Since more women work they get stress from their jobs, eat fast food rather than healthy food, and they tend to smoke and drink more often.

Women are less likely to have heart disease before menopause, but afterward their risk increases drastically. To control your risk of heart disease, you should begin getting proper exercise and eating healthy foods when you are young. If you are interested in preventing early onset of heart disease, you should contact your chiropractic or medical doctor for more detailed information.
