Pizza Hut Sponsors Book-It Program

by Harold Steele

Pizza Hut sponsored a program called "Book It," that rewards students who accomplish their reading goals from October through February. Those students meeting their monthly goals receive a free personal pan pizza. Students who meet their goals four out of the five months participate in a pizza party.

A total of 224 Eldorado Elementary students, 24 kindergartners, 40 1st graders, the entire 2nd and 3rd grade classes, and 36 4th graders, qualified for this program, and were fed pizza that was provided by the Sonora Pizza Hut.

On Friday, February 28th, Ms. Jannie Jungman, manager of the Sonora Pizza Hut, delivered 38 large pizzas for the students and 6 large Supreme pizzas for the faculty and staff.

Thank you, Pizza Hut!

March 8th-14th National Older Worker Week

President Bush has declared the week of March 8th-14th, "National Older Worker Week," in order to create a national awareness of this country's greatest resource - it's mature worker. It is a time to honor our mature citizens who contribute so much to our community, and a time to encourage businesses to provide job opportunities for these experienced men and women.

In conjunction with this, the Concho Valley Council of Governments/Area Agency on Aging's 55+ Experience...WORKS! program - a non-profit employment and training program for individuals aged 55 and over - would like to accomplish this same awareness at the local level. Area city councils have been requested to issue proclamations in their respective cities declaring this week, "Older Worker Week." Area businesses are invited to call or come by our office at 4860 Knickerbocker or call 944-9666 to learn more about the benefits of hiring maturity. Videos, pamphlets, and other materials will be provided to those employers interested in hiring the older worker.

The 55+ Experience...WORKS! program offers vocational skills training, GED preparation, job search assistance, and on-the-job training opportunities.

Willeke Selected For Internship Program

Dan Willeke, son of A.E. and Vita Willeke, has recently been selected to spend the 1992 fall semester in Washington D.C. as an intern in the office of Congressman Bill Sarpalius representing District 13. Dan was 1989 Salutatorian at Eldorado High School.

As an intern of the Agricultural and Resource Policy Internship Program, Dan will receive a $2000 scholarship. Unlike other internships, interns of the A&RP Internship Program have expertise in agricultural and resource policy. Because of this knowledge, the interns will have a greater role in assisting the congressional office with agricultural policies. More specifically, they will be involved in assisting the congressional office in the development of agricultural and resource development policies, and assisting in communicating, interpreting, and evaluating policy issues to constituents.

Dan is currently a Senior Agricultural Economics major at Texas A&M University. He is employed with the Agricultural Economics Department.

TOP OF THE DIVIDE

by Thomas Giovannitti

It appears to me that sometimes husbands and wives differ regarding how time works. I know that is true in my family, even if I am not so sure that it is true in other families.

For example, I usually wake the kids for school well before they need to get up. I also tell them "It is ten minutes to..." instead of the correct time. My dad used the same method. I do it because I figure if they think they might be late they'll move a little faster. My wife on the other hand, thinks this is not quite cricket.

The other thing I do is leave time to comb my hair, brush my teeth, and straighten my tie. For some reason, Maxine does not believe that these things take time. I'll be trying to get the family all ready and ask everyone if they are ready, and she'll announce that she is, but when I say lets get in the car she has to go brush her hair or teeth or some such thing. I ask her, "Didn't you say you were ready?" and she says, "I am ready, I just have to brush my hair." Folks, I thought ready meant everything was ready including your hair?

Eating breakfast takes time and she allows time for that, but hair brushing can be done at eight o'clock even though Annamarie is supposed to be in school at eight.

Of course some of this may be my own fault. Since I am constantly telling my family members that it is "ten of" when it is really "twenty of" they may have come to rely on the extra ten minutes to brush their hair.

TEXAS AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION SERVICE

County Agent's Report

Like corn kernels in a popper, Africanized honey bees will begin to spill out of winter hives as warm weather arrives.

Because Texas has had excessive rainfall and a temperate winter, a heavy increase in Africanized honey bee populations is expected, officials who monitor the bee said.

"We expect the amount of swarming activity to be a nightmare," said Elba Quintero of Harlingen, head of the South Texas AHB program for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service. "We've already had a positive (AHB) identification 15 miles southwest of Corpus Christi."

That AHB find comes about two months earlier than expected. The first AHB swarm last year was not found until April. Honey bees tend to swarm, or leave a hive en masse to find a new nesting site, mostly in the spring.

More than 450 AHB swarms have been detected in Texas since the first migrating swarm from Mexico was discovered near Hidalgo in October 1990, according to APHIS documents.

Paul Jackson, Texas Apiary Inspection Service chief, expects the increase in swarm numbers to begin in late March.

"After the weather breaks into warmer temperatures, it usually is about three weeks later that we begin to see a lot of swarming," Jackson said.

With warmer weather, honey bees begin to rear brood which needs about three weeks to hatch, Jackson explained.

"Colonies begin to get crowded as the bees bring in a lot of pollen and nectar and new bees hatch out," Jackson said. "That's what starts the swarming."

Scientists at the USDA-Agricultural Research Service in Weslaco also believe south Texas is in for "a real boomer this spring."

"We are preparing for March to be wild in terms of collecting swarms," said Dr. Anita Collins, lead scientist. "If we get a hard freeze that kills the blooms, then it would delay the swarming for a while."

In the ARS research bee yard near the Rio Grande River, Collins said, recent samples showed that about 2 percent of the 122 colonies contain some level of AHB genes. She explained that regular honey bee queens marked in those colonies last spring have been replaced by daughters who had mated with some AHBs.

"what this means is that beekeepers need to be looking closely at their colonies and right now," Collins advised.

More of the swarms detected this season probably will be AHB, said Dr. John Thomas, Texas Agricultural Extension Service entomologist, and that is normal as the insect infests a region.

"That probably will be the case for about three years, because it'll take that long for the insect to reach its carrying capacity for the region," Thomas said. Carrying capacity refers to the nesting sites, food and water necessary to support the existing population.

Although a heavy swarming season apparently is on the way, Jackson said, people can take some precautions in adapting to life with the AHB.

"We aren't going to stop the swarming," Jackson said. "But people can keep their eyes and ears open and report swarms to local officials."

Jackson said people can call exterminators to remove swarms, but a key is to not delay.

"If a swarm enters the walls of a building, for example, don't let them stay for two or three weeks before reporting it," he said. "By that time, the colony will have brood, and they always are more defensive with brood."

The AHB has been found in 18 counties in South Texas and may reach San Antonio and approach Houston this year.

IT'S BETTER TO TRY AND FAIL, THAN NOT TO TRY AT ALL.

John Albert Smith, 1894-1992

Through the years, I've noticed the pride that Grandparents always seem to have for their Grandchildren. Well, I know that no Grandparent was ever more proud of their Grand child as this Grandchild was of his Granddaddy.

John Albert Smith died last week. He was 97 years old. For the greater part of those 97 years he smoked cigars. Then, when somebody told him that smoking could kill him, he started chewing tobacco. He chewed tobacco until the last week of his life. He didn't chew last week, because he was bed-ridden, and everyone knows that if you chew while you are flat on your back you might swallow some and get sick.

My second cousin, Chad is 13 years old. The night before Granddaddy's funeral, Chad was worried. He thought that now that Granddaddy had died, he needed to have a plug with him. Chad is a very smart young man.

The casket was closed when the family got to the funeral home. Even if someone had wanted for Granddaddy to have a plug of tobacco for his trip, it would have just been too late.

I was a pall-bearer. Pall-bearers had to be there thirty minutes before the family.

I was there when the casket was closed.

Chad, my boy, if they allow chewing in heaven, Granddaddy will find his plug in his inside coat pocket. When he finds it, I bet that he will look down and smile and wink at you.

Till The Next Time...

MAY GOD BLESS!

New Recycle-Content Bag

The production of more than 75,000 plastic bags made with recycled material and custom-designed for the Texas State Aquarium has been underwritten by Occidental Chemical Corporation.

The bags, to be made available with any purchase in the Aquarium gift shop, are made with Cyclathon high density polyethylene (HDPE), a post-consumer recycled material provided by OxyChem. They display a colorful rendering of an octopus on one side with a list of the different ways the bags can be used to help protect and preserve the environment on the reverse side.

"We are very pleased to assist the Texas State Aquarium in this effort to promote recycling awareness in the Corpus Christi community," J. Roger Hirl, president and chief executive officer of OxyChem, said. "As one of the nation's largest producers of plastic resins for consumer packaging, OxyChem is well aware of its responsibility to be part of the solid waste solution, and we believe that recycling is one of the most positive and practical answers. It is one that requires the active participation of industry, government and the public."

Last year, OxyChem announced plans to build a major plastics recycling center in the Dallas area. When completed in early 1993, the plant will have the capacity to process up to 40 million pounds of the most common household plastic containers.

This donation from OxyChem symbolizes the company's commitment to the Aquarium, the Corpus Christi community and the preservation of the state of Texas," said John Hendricks, Texas State Aquarium executive director.

The Aquarium will celebrate "It's in the Bag" day on Saturday, March 7 beginning with a news conference at 10 a.m. KMXR radio will broadcast live from the gift shop from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Officials from OxyChem and the Aquarium will provide listeners with important environmental facts and tips. Mayor Mary Rhodes and representatives from Solid Waste Services will also be on hand to discuss the city's new curbside recycling program. All visitors will receive a complimentary Cyclathon bag.

Occidental chemical, headquartered in Dallas, Texas, comprises the chemical operations of Occidental Petroleum Corporation and is a major worldwide producer of electrochemicals, proprietary agricultural products, petrochemicals and plastics and resins. The company is the largest U.S. producer of polyvinyl chloride (PVC) and the number two producer of high density polyethylene (HDPE).

In Texas, OxyChem produces plastics at Pasadena, Matagorda, Orange and Victoria; electrochemicals at LaParte, Deer Park and Ingleside; silicates in Dallas and petrochemicals at Chocolate Bayou, Corpus Christi, Bayport and Beaumont. It employs about 3,500 people in the state.

Health News

by Dr. Rico J. Forlano

Psoriasis is a common skin disorder caused by excessive cell replication, in the areas affected by psoriasis, the cells reproduce 1,000 times greater than normal cells. Psoriasis looks like silvery scales on red bumps, and usually effects knees, elbows and the scalp.

Psoriasis has been linked to genetics, incomplete protein digestion, bowel toxemia, impaired liver function, alcohol consumption, excessive consumption of animal fat, a low fiber diet, and stress.

If you have psoriasis there are several things you can do to help make the psoriasis go away.

You can decrease your animal fat intake, increase your consumption of fruit and vegetables, cut out alcohol completely, limit the consumption of foods with sugar and cholesterol, increase consumption of cold water fish (tuna, salmon, mackerel), and one hour of warm sunlight a day. Dietary supplements that can help include fish oils, vitamin A, vitamin E, selenium, and zinc.

Psoriasis usually lasts for a long time and does not respond to medical treatment very well, but there have been results with the above dietary suggestions. If these suggestions do not give you relief, contact your doctor.

The first non-Native American known to have seen what are now the states of Arizona and New Mexico was a Black explorer named Estevanico.

"The Day My Mother Lost The Game"

by Mike Callison

I do not know when I first realized my mother was smart. I had been informed by various aunts and uncles that she had graduated from high school early after several years of accelerated courses. My grandmother had proudly informed me that she was a fixture on the dean's list throughout college and was in the top percentage of her class at graduation. These were noble achievements indeed, but my ten year old mind was too full of baseball, fishing and the truly important things of life to consider scholarly achievements. However, I had my own rigid, scientifically proven standards, which reinforced my belief that my mother was a truly intelligent woman. For one thing, my mother always knew when I was feigning illness and when I was truly ailing. The finest

Shakespearean actor in all his practiced eloquence could not have convinced my mother of an illness not truly felt. Once, I went to the trouble of holding a lit match under a thermometer just to emphasize what a sudden high fever I had acquired. My mother examined the instrument I had brought her, which showed a temperature of 116° F, and informed me that since I was now dead anyway, school should not bring me any additional discomfort. Most of the other proofs of my mother's refined thinking skills came to my attention in the successes she enjoyed in her teaching career. Supervisors, principals, parents and fellow teachers came to her often for advice on everything from grammar to class discipline. Whether it was keeping little Johnny from swinging off the light fixtures when he hadn't received his correct medication, or placing an i before e, mother always seemed to have the answer. The troubled souls that entered her room for advice left with a feeling of reassurance, as well as a sense of compassion. Of course by then I had already concluded that my mother knew most everything, but I allowed each individual to formulate their own opinion, since I knew they would eventually agree with me.

It was with this frame of reference that I accompanied my mother for a short but memorable visit to a veteran's hospital while visiting at my grandmother's one summer. I was not a completely cooperative partner for my mother that afternoon as we entered the hospital wing which provided a residence for retired servicemen.

The cool, dimly lit halls of the quiet hospital seemed somber and foreboding compared to the warm sunshine, and beckoning calls of my own generation outside. My attempts to escape the mission had been tried and failed however, so I resolved myself to a dreary afternoon with the hope of better things to come once our venture was completed. At the time I did not really know what our purpose was. I only knew it somehow involved helping men, whose lives for the most part were dismal, to

AVOID POWER LINE CONTACTS!

FLYING RIGHT - Kites

Don't let a pleasant outdoor activity like kite flying result in an electrocution injury. Avoid contact with high voltage power lines by choosing the right time and the right place to fly a kite.

LOOK UP FOR SAFETY!

1. Closely supervise children when they are flying kites.
2. Avoid flying kites in wet, stormy weather. A wet kite string is a good conductor of electricity and may cause electrocution if it touches a power line. Metal lines should never be used near power lines.
3. Kites should be flown only in open areas, never near power lines.
4. If a kite falls into a power line, abandon it. Attempting to remove it is dangerous.
5. Don't use metalized kites. This type of kite has been banned by the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

Denyes-Pfluger Wed

Rachel Michelle Pfluger

Rachel Michelle Denyes and Raymond Howard Pfluger were united in Holy Matrimony February 15, 1992, at First Baptist Church, Eldorado, Texas. Dr. Chris Graham, pastor, officiated at the double ring ceremony, assisted by Rev. Joseph Pfluger, uncle of the groom.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Roderic Holfolter of Woodruff, South Carolina. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lee Pfluger of Eldorado, Texas. Grandmothers of the bride are Mrs. Elsie Holfolter of Chestertown, New York, and Mrs. Dorothy Denyes of Rochester Hills, Michigan. Grandmothers of the groom are Mrs. Fate Parker and Mrs. Vernon Pfluger, both of San Angelo, Texas.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose an exquisite gown of white satin. The formal gown featured a Queen Anne neckline with a princess bodice. Insets of Venice and schiffle lace, encrusted with seed pearls and sequins, lavishly embellished the bodice and extensions over the hips. The long lace sleeves were also adorned with pearl and sequin insets. The hem of the skirt and chapel length train were enhanced by lace insets, covered with seed pearls and sequins. The signature heart-shaped back featured a bow at the waistline.

necklace, set in gold, which is an heirloom belonging to her grandmother. The bride carried a fragrant bouquet fashioned of white gardenias and stephanotis, red and pink mini carnations and azalea blossoms, accented with leather leaf greenery.

Mrs. Casey Holfolter, mother of the bride, served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Jennifer Irwin and Ashley Irwin of Waco, Texas, cousins of the groom. Holly Mankin of Eldorado was junior bridesmaid.

The matron of honor wore a two-piece dress of pink chiffon with a floral brocade bodice, accented with seed pearls. The bridesmaids wore tea length dresses of pink satin and lace, with bow accents on the sleeves and back waistline. They carried bouquets of white gardenias and stephanotis, red and pink mini carnations and azalea blossoms, accented with leather leaf greenery.

Charles Pfluger, father of the groom, served as best man. Groomsmen were Daniel Pfluger of Fort Hood, Texas, brother of the groom, and Jason Cansler of San Angelo, Texas. Junior groomsmen were James Irwin of Waco, Texas, cousin of the groom. Groomsmen served as ushers.

The couple exchanged vows before an alter decorated with a brass heart-shaped arch which was covered with English ivy and flanked by a pair of large pedestaled bouquets, consisting of iris, larkspur, delphinium, gerber daisies, candytuft, snapdragons, and heather in the bride's chosen colors of red, white, and pink. The unity candle table, which was centered beneath the arch, was covered with a white floor-length cloth of Battenburg lace. Balustrade decorations of red, white, and pink silk flowers with baby's breath, nestled in English ivy, were accented with red and pink candles. Pink tapers in crystal candleholders, accented with red tulle, white bows, English ivy, and pink silk flowers were situated at each end of the balustrades. Brass pew markers with white candles and glass globes were decorated with red tulle, white bows, English ivy, and pink silk flowers, and lined both sides of the aisle.

Vocal selections were presented by Mrs. Sherry Belk of Eldorado, accompanied by Mr. Terry Mikeska of San Angelo. Mrs. Belk sang "Wind Beneath My Wings" as the couple's mothers lit the individual candles for the unity candle. Rev. Joseph Pfluger read I Corinthians 13, which was followed by "The Lord's Prayer" sung by Mrs. Belk. Following their vows, Mrs. Belk sang "We've Only Just Begun" as the couple lit the unity candle.

The reception, catered by The Bluebonnet, was held in the church fellowship hall. Attending the guest register was Mrs. Jan Fuessel. The guest register table was covered with an antique cut-lace bridge cloth and held a bud vase with red, white, and pink roses accented with baby's breath.

The bride's table was covered with a floor length white organdy cloth, accented at the corners with white and silver was covered with white icing, delicate string-work, and a cascade of red and pink roses. The cake was elevated on columns surrounded by English ivy and red and pink flowers, with a fountain centered beneath the cake.

The groom's table was covered with a white satin-striped cloth. The chocolate groom's cake, by Mrs. Heald, was iced with chocolate and featured the gold Navy anchor on a white background. Coffee was served from the groom's paternal grandmother's silver service.

The buffet table was covered with a red satin-striped cloth, adorned by a white carousel that was accented with two pink bows and surrounded by the attendants' bouquets. Finger sandwiches, crudities with dip, nuts, and mints were served.

The gift table was covered with a red satin-striped cloth, and decorated with an antique wicker basket with a pink bow and assorted red and white silk flowers accented with English ivy. A wall of white lattice was covered with red balloons in the shape of a heart and was used as a background for photographs.

Hostesses for the reception were Mrs. Robbie Heald, Mrs. Mary Nolen, Mrs. Annthnette Mankin, and Mrs. Kathy Mankin, all of Eldorado; Mrs. Brenda Irwin of Waco, and Ms. Kaye Pfluger of San Angelo, aunts of the groom. Junior hostess was Courtney Mankin of

Adult Onset Diabetes Attacking Hispanics

Adult onset diabetes is attacking Hispanics at an earlier age and more often than other ethnic groups.

Adult onset diabetes typically strikes people who are in their 30's, 40's or 50's," said Dr. Carlos Vallbona, chairman of community medicine at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston. "But, among Hispanics the disorder appears more frequently among people starting in their 30's."

Vallbona suggests that Hispanics past age 35 be tested for diabetes, since complications and even deaths caused by the disease can be prevented through early detection.

Diabetes occurs in adult Hispanics at a rate two to three times greater than that of whites. Overall, thirteen percent of adult Hispanics are estimated to have diabetes, many of them undiagnosed.

"There are several risk factors associated with diabetes," Vallbona said. "Simply being Hispanic, particularly Mexican-American, appears to be an important risk factor."

Studies conducted in South Texas, where the Mexican-American population draws much of its genetic make-up from native American genes, show rates for diabetes to be even greater than in other Hispanic groups.

We do not know exactly what the genetic link is that makes Mexican-Americans more susceptible than other Hispanics to diabetes. But, Hispanics who know their family heritage includes native American ancestry, should consider themselves at increased risk for diabetes," Vallbona said.

In addition to testing for the disease, Vallbona recommends exercise and a healthy diet for young Hispanics as a preventive measure."

"Obesity is another risk factor associated with diabetes. Regular exercise and a low-calorie, low-fat diet can help lower the risk for diabetes by controlling weight," Vallbona said.

Even those who have tested negatively for diabetes should learn the symptoms of diabetes should they appear later in life. They include an insatiable thirst, voracious appetite, frequent urination, unexplained weight loss, feelings of weakness, mood swings and a prickly feeling in the ball of the feet and toes.

Diabetes is caused by improper levels of glucose (the body's main fuel) in the blood. When glucose levels are too high over a long period of time, the result can be blindness, heart and kidney failure, high blood pressure and painful inflammation of nerves.

NEWS OF OLDER AMERICANS

Sleep's Role In Driving Performance

Public health experts are raising awareness of a factor that may influence an older person's performance behind the wheel: sleep deprivation.

Among all age groups, sleep—or the lack of it—may play a key role in 200,000 to 400,000 traffic accidents each year. According to current estimates, more than 20 percent of all drivers have fallen asleep at the wheel at least once.

"Older drivers generally alter their driving practices in response to deficits in vision and physical fitness," said Andrew A. Monjan, Ph.D., M.P.H., deputy associate director for neuroscience and neuropsychology of aging at the National Institute on Aging (NIA). "Many older people are not controlled by work-day schedules. They drive when conditions are the safest, that is, during daylight hours and when traffic is light."

While older people drive less than the younger population, mile for mile, drivers over age 65 are involved in more accidents and fatalities than any other age group except those ages 16 to 24, according to the Automobile Association of America Foundation.

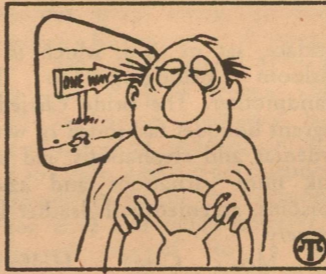

More than half the older drivers surveyed in a recent Gallup Poll said they get sleepy during the day at least three or four times a week. For 55 percent, this usually occurs between noon and four p.m.

A recent report from the National Institutes of Health estimates that more than half of the 30 million Americans now over the age of 65 experience some sleep disruption.

If you are experiencing repeated sleep disturbances or drowsiness during the day, talk to your doctor.

The NIA and National Commission on Sleep Disorders Research suggest these tips to reduce tiredness while driving:

•Midday drowsiness is a normal part of the sleep-wake cycle. Try to arrange short and long driving trips to accommodate your body's biological clock.

•Driving long distances can produce sleepiness. Stop along the way for regular breaks—and try to share the driving. Avoid eating big meals before driving.

•If you experience fatigue, yawning or loss of concentration while you are driving or if your eyes begin to burn, don't fight it; pull off the road immediately and rest.

•Keep the temperature inside the car cool. Wear sunglasses to reduce glare and keep the windshield clean—inside and out.

•Medications may affect driving ability. Some have side effects—such as drowsiness, confusion or loss of concentration. Alcohol also has side effects that can impair driving ability. No driver should get behind the wheel after drinking. All drivers should be aware of the medications they take, the possible side effects, and the potential interaction with other drugs and alcohol.

The "Sleep and the Older Driver" survey was funded by an educational grant from The Upjohn Company and is part of Upjohn's continuing commitment to enhance understanding about the importance of sleep. For more information on getting a good night's sleep, write to: Don't Take Sleep Problems Lying Down," P.O. Box 307, Coventry, CT 06238 or to NIA, Information Center, P.O. Box 8057, Gaithersburg, MD 20898-8057.

"The Day My Mother Lost The Game"

recapture some of the hope which a distant war and the accompanying tragedies had somehow stolen away.

I do not know when I first realized I was being stared at. The eyes which now focused on me were attached to a face which seemed etched with every hard line that life could draw on it. The unshaven beard and ill-fitting clothes bespoke a man who had seen the harshest side of life and deemed it as hardly worth continued viewing. My mother moved quickly toward the man and with unfeigned warmth began an earnest conversation. I remained at a slight distance from them both and prayed that if he did attack I would have the courage to rescue mom before escaping in all due haste. My misgivings about his demeanor dissipated quickly as I watched him enveloped in the loving spirit before him.

I marveled at the quiet laughter now coming from a man whose soul seemed so cold and remote moments before. I relaxed and watched the activities around me when suddenly the appearance of a game board and some checkers caught my eye. At last, something to make the boredom of the afternoon pass more quickly. In the past weeks I had played every member of my family in the course of our quiet evenings spent at Grandma's. I had managed to use every resource available, including occasional distractions, to secure a formidable record of winning. Nevertheless, whenever I became too overbearing or proud to tolerate, I would quickly suffer a string of quick defeats at the hands of my mother. She would then relax her guard in direct proportion to my need for reassurance and allow me the dignity of a few victories before retiring. Now I moved forward in eager anticipation of the swift and certain victory to come. I informed my grizzled opponent that my mother was a college graduate and one of the top teachers in her school. His head remained slightly bowed as he told the history of his life. He had quit school in the sixth grade and gone to work in the coal mines. His family needed the money because his father, nearly dead from black lung disease, could no longer work. He had remained there until the war to end all wars had begun. He had fought throughout Europe before finally conquering the unbeatable German Army. Now, he was here in his golden years, waiting, it seemed to me, for a merciful end to a life of tragic suffering. Pity notwithstanding, I still eagerly waited for the small group of spectators now gathered around us, to witness my mother's genius firsthand. The game began and the first few moves on either side went without comment or reaction. Slowly, as the game progressed, the audience began to offer encouragement and suggestions. The veteran's old comrades had gathered to cheer their fellow patriot to victory. As the moves of the game became more strategically important, the old man became increasingly perplexed. Then, at the very moment when he seemed to lose all hope, my mother made an incredibly poor move. Up to that point I had known the veteran had no chance at winning. I had been smiling at the audience around me and preparing myself for the congratulations due the relatives of the victor. I had even wiped my hands several times so I could shake hands with anyone so inclined. I tried not to be too obvious about my confidence of victory, but my smug smile must surely have given me away. Now I tried to catch my mother's eye before she removed her hand and made the move official. Too late! The veteran's companions, who had grown quiet as the approaching defeat grew certain, now came to life once more. They eagerly pointed to the possible openings. The veteran had, himself, come to life once more. His resignation now turned to a determined resolve. Mean-while, my mother continued playing as if she was only remotely in touch with reality. I slumped back in my chair, hoping no one would notice my previous bravado. Perhaps, if anyone asked, I could explain that fumes from the ammonia used to clean the hospital had affected my mother's thinking patterns. Mercifully, the game ended at last and the victor accepted the handshakes of his fellows, beaming with a pride that seemed recalled from a time long ago. My mother smiled and thanked the man for the game. She told him she was happy to play someone who understood maneuvers so well. A warm handshake and a few parting words later we began our journey to the enlightened world outside. I began to ask several times, how she could play so badly in front of so many people. Each time the words caught in a small lump in my throat and remained inside me. At last I regained enough composure to voice my despair at her poor showing, but the words were never uttered. I turned and looked at the distant figure of an old veteran, who must I thought, still be smiling, just like me, he had needed a victory. Just like me, he had wanted that assurance of self-worth and value. He had beaten a college graduate I had heard him say to his fellow servicemen as we walked away. It had not been said with boastful vanity but rather a restored dignity. I grasped my mother's hand and squeezed it tightly. My sense of defeat gave way to a tremendous sense of pride. My mother had lost the game, and with her usual, remarkable genius, won the heart of an old man and her own young son.

Lion's Roar

Our club heard a very informative program this Wednesday about Diabetes. Several children explained to us the procedures they had to do each day to insure that they could control the disease. They also witnessed to us their experiences at the Lions Club Diabetes camp.

The Diabetes camp is held on the same camp grounds as the better known crippled children's camp. The members were impressed by the courage and excitement of these children. Many members were enthusiastic about the local clubs support for the camp, knowing that children from our own town also benefit.

This Saturday the Lions club will be operating the concession stand at the Plateau relays. The funds generated by this go toward the academic awards banquet and other Lions charities such as the Diabetes camp.

It's there all around you — in the form of sun-heated air.

And there's no better way to be partners with nature than to harness that energy with a quiet, clean, energy-efficient electric heat pump.

Since natural sun-heated air is abundant even on coldest winter days, by simply moving or "pumping" that heat into or out of your home, you enjoy maximum comfort year round at a minimum cost.

Recycling . . . naturally rewarding.

Easy, naturally!

Call WTU today for more information on our special finance plan which allows you to pay for your new electric heat pump and its installation on your monthly electric bill!
