National Day Of Prayer

by Hawley Wolfe

Today, Thursday, May 7, 1992, concerned clergy and individuals from throughout our community will meet from 12:20-12:40 p.m. at the Memorial Building. Millions of Americans in thousands of towns and cities will join us at precisely the same hour for a focused moment of intercession on the spiritual and moral needs of our country.

Please covenant to pray with us wherever you are if you cannot physically attend the meeting.

Rabies Shots Available At SCMC

Due to the high incidence of animal rabies in our area, The Family Medical Clinic of Schleicher County Medical Center in Eldorado will keep on hand rabies vaccine both for pre-exposure immunization of adults and children and for treatment after exposure.

Pre-exposure vaccination is recommended for animal care workers, veterinarians, children playing outdoors in area where rabies is a known threat, and certain laboratory workers. The danger is significant for persons exposed to sick animals, un-vaccinated pets, or wildlife. Skunks, foxes, raccoons, and bats are frequent vectors of rabies; however, livestock rabies also occurs. Farmers and ranchers contacting ill livestock are at risk and should consider the pre-exposure vaccine. It is a very effective 3 dose series.

Post-exposure treatment is also effective, but requires more injections and is considerably more expensive.

Children should be taught not to play with stray cats and dogs and never to approach wild animals. Pets should be routinely vaccinated.

Senior first and second place winners from the District level are eligible for state competition in June during State Roundup on the Texas A&M University campus.

Schleicher County, with 24 entries was honored with a special award based on a total number of contests entered. Schleicher County, with 54 participants, was also honored with a special award based on a total number of 4-H's entered. Medals given to the first place juniors and seniors of the various contests were donated by the Federal Land Bank Associations which serve counties in the District. Ribbons were donated by West Texas Utilities Company.

Rabies - An Epidemic

by Dr. William Edmiston

Rabies is currently epidemic in the wildlife population in Schleicher County and the surrounding area. Epidemic is medically defined as "attacking many animals at the same time, widely diffused and rapidly spreading." Many people have asked questions about how and why this is occurring now.

Rabies is a viral infection spread from animal to warm blooded animal by direct contact, primarily through bite wounds. This disease has been endemic in the skunk population for many years in this area. Endemic is medically defined as "a disease present at all times, but clinically recognizable in only a few". Skunks can be infected with Rabies for long periods and not show any sickness, and skunks and raccoons can shed virus in their saliva, infecting other animals, for 18 months before becoming sick enough to exhibit rabies signs such as bizarre behavior, loss of fear of humans or other animals, uncoordinated gait, or aggression.

Wildlife populations, especially small carnivores such as skunks, raccoons, foxes, ringtails, and bobcats have increased dramatically over the last several years. Tracks, sightings, road kills, and other signs bear this fact out. The abundant moisture of the last three years and mild winters have provided the food supply, and the low or nonexistent market for the furs of furbearers have greatly reduced the hunting of these animals to allow these animal populations to approach or exceed carrying capacity.

Several ranchers have related stories of removing 20 to 30 raccoons from stored cattle and sheep feed or pecan orchards over short periods last winter. Riding horseback or walking in pastures with dogs would usually produce several encounters with raccoons, ringtails, foxes, or skunks last winter. A Sunday afternoon drive would often show one or two animal roadkills per mile, and many nocturnal animals were seen wandering aimlessly during daylight hours.

High densities of animals competing for food and space, settling their difficulties with tooth and nail, have transmitted rabies from skunks to the larger, more mobile and naturally aggressive animals. A fox or raccoon is perhaps 20 times more effective as a vector (spreader) of rabies than a skunk. One result of this epidemic has been a recent large die-off of many wild animals (small carnivores) due to clinical signs of rabies. Now, instead of wildlife sightings, ranchers are smelling and seeing lots of carcasses of skunks, foxes, raccoons, and other small animals.

Wildlife rabies presents a danger to humans both by direct transmission and by transmission to unvaccinated domestic animals which in turn may transmit rabies to humans or other pets. Direct transmission occurs, but most people are wary towards wildlife, preferring to avoid contact, and report and take action in cases where transmission might occur.

However, transmission from pets and livestock is especially dangerous because most people will go to the aid of a "SICK" animal, or will allow a dog or cat approach closely without giving much notice, even to a strange animal, and will often attempt to pet them. Animals in the early stages of rabies may be aggressive and attack with little or no provocation. Dogs and cats can shed virus and transmit rabies 3 to 7 days before clinical signs are evident. Exposure to a possibly rabid pet may be ignored or dismissed, especially by children. Human exposure by pets or livestock tends to be severe (a cat bites and hangs on, or I had my hand in her mouth and didn't find anything, Doc), tend to affect many persons. 23 persons are currently undergoing Rabies Postexposure treatment from one litter of puppies in Iraan. One show steer in Mason several years ago exposed even more. Transmission from one dog or cat to another occurs much more readily than from wildlife to dog or cat.

Our best line of defense against rabies is a vaccinated pet population. Dogs and cats are required by State Law to be vaccinated by 4 months of age and annually thereafter against rabies. 1992 rabies tags are Red and Heart shaped, 1991 tags are Green and Bell shaped. If your pet doesn't have one like this, get one. Horses, cattle, sheep, and goats may also be vaccinated annually.

Persons likely to be exposed to rabies such as trappers, hunters, and ranchers can take pre-exposure vaccination to become protected. Schleicher County Medical Center is currently offering the three injection series for $90.00 total cost. The post exposure series can cost up to $1000.00 depending on body weight.

If persons or pets are involved in a situation where exposure to rabies may have occurred, prompt action is in order. Wildlife should be killed, without damaging the head if possible, kept cool and presented to a Veterinarian or animal control person so the head may be submitted to the State Dept. of Health to test for rabies. Persons exposed should wash vigorously with soap and hot water and consult a physician about treatment. Exposed pets or livestock should be euthanized in severe exposure, but vaccinated animals may be re-vaccinated and observed for 45 days. Unvaccinated animals may be quarantined for at least 90 days and vaccinated three times during the quarantine if the owner is willing to bear the expense and liability. Vaccinations are like seatbelts - easy to forget or ignore, but better than the consequences.

Nature has taken her course to reduce the overpopulation of animals by reducing their numbers, with a disease which is a danger to humans. Lets all do our part to keep this danger away from ourselves and our neighbors. Vaccinate your pets and valuable livestock, avoid and/or report any suspicious situation, take vaccinations yourself if at risk, and the epidemic will pass. But please remember that rabies will continue to be endemic in wildlife.

Editor's Journal

TOP OF THE DIVIDE

by Thomas Giovannitti

I wanted to wait a week before I wrote about the incident of the acquittal of those police officers charged with battery and use of excessive force upon Rodney King. As an attorney, I do not often make comments upon a jury's verdict. In this case I realize that, just as most people, I have seen only part of the video and surely did not hear all of the evidence presented at the trial of those officers. I just can't figure out what evidence there could have been?

The thing that gets me is that the video I did see, and you all have seen, shows Mr. Rodney King already handcuffed and held by a chain. While he was controlled by this chain held by one officer as he was being beaten by other officers. How could this not have been at least excessive force? How was it they were able to control him enough to get the cuffs on but still thought it necessary to continue to pummel him with their clubs?

In every, state police officers are allowed to use whatever force is necessary and reasonable to subdue a belligerent suspect but they cannot use excessive force. Even to the eye of a non professional, that force being used on King is clearly excessive. In fact, it appears that they are committing "battery" because they already have Mr. King in custody. What was the reason given at the trial that would allow that jury to feel that the officers were justified?

We don't know what the real motivation of those officers was, but we can surmise. One of the jurors mentioned that Mr. King should have done what the officers had asked him to do. The video does not show the officers asking any questions. And if we fail to answer the questions of Los Angeles police officers are we now subject to being beaten?

TEXAS AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION SERVICE

County Agents Report

A good way to observe National Drinking water week in May is to have rural water wells tested. The week is observed May 3-9.

Private well users should have their water checked at least every two or three years, said Dr. John Sweeten of College station, engineer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Many city and county health departments, private laboratories, and a laboratory at Texas A&M University will test water for the public, sweeten said. Different laboratories may conduct different tests, so confirm that information Before sending a sample, he said.

Generally, most wells only need a bacteriological analysis, said Tom Phillips, district program manager of drinking water supplies for the Texas Water Commission. Fees usually are only $6 to $10.

If there has been a recent accident with pesticides or fertilizers near a well, however, a mineral test also should be run, he said. Gasoline spills or leakage of industrial solvents require testing for volatile organic compounds, he said.

Private wells also need to be checked periodically around the Water Well Drillers Board in Austin. The drillers' board is responsible for licensing drillers, regulating abandoned wells, enforcing distance requirements between septic tanks and water wells, and consumer complaints against licensed drillers.

Anything that falls into that hole, whether inside or outside the casing, can go straight into the water supply, Wiley said. This can include septic tank effluent or pesticides or herbicide runoff from fields or yards.

"We've also fished a lot of snakes and rats from wells," he said.

Additionally, abandoned wells are against the law. According to water well standards put into place in 1983, landowners who discover an abandoned well on their land are required to plug or cap that well. The well standards board can levy an administrative penalty of up to $2,500 or send the case to the Attorney General's office which can assess civil penalties from $200 to $1,000 per day.

Children can fall into abandoned wells, and the hole is a direct conduit to ground water for surface runoff, he said.

"We want the well plugged. That's our main concern."

The authority for enforcement of safe drinking water supplies has recently been given to the state water commission. State rules are required to be as rigid as the federal Safe Drinking Water Act.

The water commission tests public water supplies for radio chemical (radioactive) compounds; standard minerals and metal, such as sodium, calcium, carbonates, some sulphates, iron, and manganese; and for volatile organic compounds, such as components of gasoline and industrial solvents, he said.

WATER FACTS
National Drinking Water Week
May 3-9

*Two-thirds of the water used in an average home is used in the bathroom.

*Typically 4 to 6 gallons of Water is used for every toilet flush.

*A 10-minute shower uses about 55 gallons of water.

*A leaking faucet can waste up to 100 gallons of water a day.

*The average person spends less than 1 percent of his or her total personal expenditure dollars for water, waste water, and water disposal services.

*There are about 60,000 community water suppliers in America.

*In 1989, Americans dumped 365 millions gallons of motor oil, or the equivalent of 27 Exxon Valdez spills. And oil is recyclable.

*If every household in America had a faucet that dripped once a second, we would waste 928 million gallons of water a day or enough to fill 7.5 billion 8-ounce glasses.

*Residents of the United States have the luxury to drink, bathe, and use water almost any time they wish. As a matter of fact, the United States uses more water per person than any other country.

*Eighty-five percent of the U.S. population is served by public water suppliers. The remaining 15 percent rely on 13 million private wells, cisterns and springs for their drinking water. These sources are not regulated in all areas for safety and quality and it is up to the individual owners to test and treat their water supply.

*The average family turns on the tap to use water between 70 and 100 times daily.

*It takes 36,000 gallons of water to produce one automobile - that's enough water for the average family of four to bathe, brush their teeth, and wash clothes for more than nine months.

Laugh

The government is us; we are the government, you and I.

Theodore Roosevelt

Last week, I heard a man say that it was unpatriotic to want change in government. He said that even though we may not like it, America is still "the greatest government in the world." He implied that anyone who questioned that premise was not a good American. POPPY-CK!! BULL!! BALDERDASH!!! RUBBISH!!! America is not a government!!! America is a people! America is a dream. The government is intended to work for those people to help fulfill that dream.

This man's comments reminded me of times when people questioned Richard Nixon while other people yelled AMERICA--LOVE IT OR LEAVE IT. It reminded me of times when people were labeled "communistic" because they opposed the unfair actions of the government.

Any time government officials fail to remember that they are called to serve and not be served, then those officials need to be ousted.

The people of America are in turmoil. Our people are in pain. We are suffering. But, the cause of our suffering is not the fault of the government. We are to blame. Our apathy and worldly concern have kept us from "minding the store." The rascals only did what we allowed them to do.

Our government officials have been concerned more with election and re-election than they have been with justice and fairness. That is because they have been a reflection of us. We have been more concerned with getting what we want than we have been in doing what was right.

There is scandal after scandal coming from Capitol Hill about monetary indiscretions. This is just another reflection of we, the people. Money has become more important than people. Money is more important than our children. Money is more important than truth.

This past week, we saw the terrible effects of racism and the ineffectiveness of government to solve the problem. That is because government is a reflection of us and we haven't taken the pain and suffering of others as seriously as we have our own appetites.

America is not lost. America is alive, even if she is not well. If she ever dies, it will not be by the hand of those who want to change her government. She will be murdered by those who betray her ideals.

Till The Next Time...

MAY GOD BLESS!

Wool & Mohair Payments Issued

Price support payments for 1991 wool and mohair marketings totaled about $2,948,772, according to Ronnie Mittel, County Executive Director of the Schleicher County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. The payments went to 190 sheep producers and 73 goat producers in the county.

Mittel said the 1991 support price for shorn wool was $1.88 per pound, and the national average market price for shorn wool was $.55 per pound - $1.33 less than the support price. A 241.8 percent payment rate was used to bring the average price received by all producers up to the support price. "This rate was supplied to the net proceeds received by each producer for shorn wool marketed during the marketing year," he explained.

For mohair, the 1991 average market price was $1.28 and the support price was $4.448, making the payment rate 247.5 percent.

"Payments were not made on that portion of a producer's sales proceeds which exceeded $2.20 per pound for wool and $5.12 per pound for mohair," Mittel said.

To maintain normal pulled wool marketing practices, ASCS supported unshorn lambs at a level comparable to the shorn wool support rate. Therefore, producers received $5.32 per hundredweight in price support payments for unshorn lambs that were sold or slaughtered during the 1991 marketing year.

Nationally, ASCS disbursed about $180 million in wool and mohair payments - $130 million for shorn and pulled wool, and $50 million for mohair.

Jewel Bailey, delegate for the Eldorado Women's Club, attended the 95th Annual Convention of the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs in Dallas on Monday, April 27th through Friday, May 1st.

The International President of the General Federation, Phyllis Dudenhofer, was the honored guest. Her speech "Among my Souvenirs" praised the spirit of volunteerism in club work. She counted the friendships made through the federation among her most valued souvenirs.

Also attending was Janey Orr Reed, Public Relations/Communications Chairman of the General Federation, of Kenosha, WI. She offered suggestions on successful public speaking.

The installation of officers was held on Friday night. Mary Margaret Robinson of Dallas was installed as the Texas President of the Federation of Women's Clubs.

"There was lots of entertainment, but the most outstanding program was presented by a high school choral group from Eulis. We also toured the Dallas Fine Arts Center, which featured an Egyptian display," stated Ms. Bailey.

Jewel Bailey was born and raised in Eldorado. She graduated from Eldorado High School and went to college, where she married. She moved back to Eldorado 17 years ago. She has two children, Joe Bailey of Dallas and Martha Henderson of San Angelo. She also has three grandchildren, John L. Henderson of Ozona, Virginia Howell of El Paso, and Kevin Bailey of Houston, and six great-grandchildren, Stuart, Ross, Andrew and Will Howell, and Jenna and Julia Henderson.

The Eldorado Women's Club

is one of the oldest organizations in Schleicher County. It was started in 1921. Many of the club members mothers were members. Ms. Bailey has been a member of this club, and of the Ozona Women's Club, for 17 years. She has been a member of the Federation of Women's Clubs for more than 60 years.

The Women's Club practices community involvement and volunteer work. They have done many projects for city improvement. The club has 26 members; the current president is Charlene Edmiston.

New members interested in volunteer service are always welcome. The Eldorado Club meets on the second Tuesday of the month at 2:30 in the Memorial Building, nine months out of the year.

The Eldorado Women's Club Year Book won 1st place in the state of Texas, competing against submissions from all of the Women's Clubs in the state. In the District Convention, held in De Leon on March 21st, the club won 10 awards for reports on programs and projects. The women also won 2nd place with their yearbook.

Scholarships Available

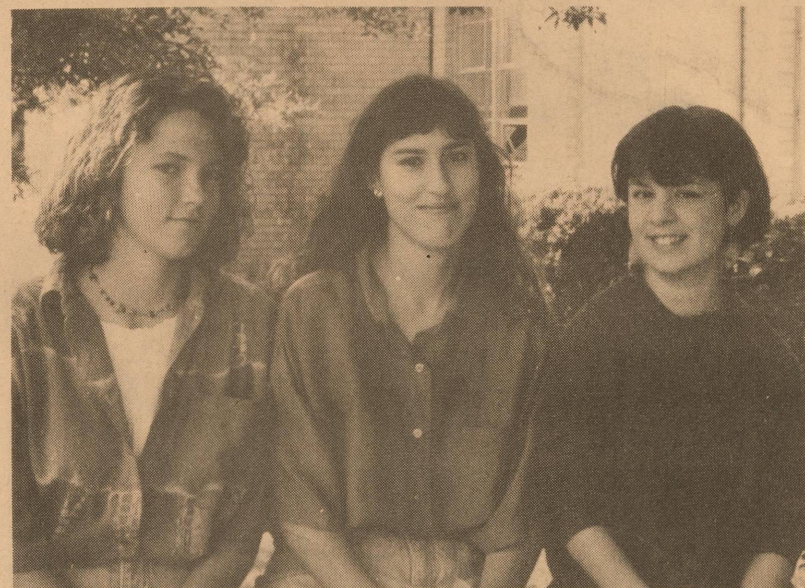

Over 100,000 collegiate athletic scholarships are available each year to male and female high school and junior college student athletes. Contrary to popular belief, students don't have to be all state to qualify. Much of this money goes unused.

A new publication with forms, sample letters and tables of factual information is available for student athletes. It takes them step by step through the important process of getting an athletic scholarship and includes college and conference listings.

For information on how to get a collegiate athletic scholarship, send a #10 self addressed, stamped envelope to the National Sports Foundation, 611A Willow Drive, P.O. Box 94Q, Oakhurst, NJ 07755.

The residents enjoyed the evening out with the public. Sorority girls went out of their way to make it as convenient as possible for us to attend. We also had 2 male participants in the contest who did well. Most of all, the proceeds went for a good cause. Thanks for including us!
