Blair Resigns As School Superintendent

Dr. Larry Blair resigned from his position as Schleicher County I.S.D. Superintendent and has accepted a position as superintendent of the Mansfield Independent School District. Mansfield is a 5-A School located in the Dallas area.

Blair lived in Eldorado as a child and graduated from Eldorado High School. He has served as superintendent since 1989. On Tuesday night, he stated that he was grateful for the opportunity that he and his family had to come back to Eldorado to live and work. He also said that his new position was a good promotion and he felt that it was a move that he needed to make.

Following Blair's resignation the Schleicher County I.S.D. board met to discuss qualifications that the board was looking for in a new superintendent. After a lengthy executive session on Tuesday night, the board opened the meeting to the public. A decision was made to meet on Monday, June 1, at 6 p.m. and to ask Middle School Principal Scott Barton to come to be interviewed for the position of superintendent.

Jones Runs For County Commissioner

On Tuesday May, 26, Barbara Behrens, Chairwoman of the Schleicher County Republican Party, submitted a letter to Helen Blakeway, Schleicher County Clerk. The letter stated that due to redistricting, Mrs. Behrens had been forced to declare J. Pat Ragsdale ineligible to be the Republican nominee for Schleicher County Commissioner, Precinct 3 and pursuant to the Texas Election Code, the Executive Committee of the Schleicher County Republican Party had voted to replace the name of J. Pat Ragsdale with the name of Jerry Jones as the Republican candidate.

Jones has accepted the action of the executive committee of the Republican Party and is seeking election in the November contest.

Thomas Giovannitti, County Attorney has stated that he believes that Mr. Jones is eligible to run for the position and that the action of the Republican Party was within legal boundaries.

The current Commissioner of Precinct 3 is Prissy Paxton.

Water Update

On April 15, 1992, The Texas Water Commission ruled that the Edwards Aquifer is an underground river, therefore subject to state regulation and control. This action, if allowed to stand, will work a severe hardship on Texas farmers that depend on the aquifer for irrigation water.

It will also reverse decades of Texas law that grants subsurface water rights to the surface landowner. This is a concept that has been endorsed by the courts and the legislature many times.

Texas Farm Bureau members have many concerns about this issue. First of all, it seems clear the Texas Water Commission has exceeded its authority. An appointed board has assumed authority that is reserved for the elected legislature or, at the very least, the courts.

Though Chairman John Hall says this action only applies to the Edwards Aquifer, the precedent established here, if allowed to stand, could be applied elsewhere. It amounts to erosion of private property rights. With water rights uncertain, farmers will have difficulty getting financing or making long range plans for their operations.

Some say this action was taken to prevent the federal government from stepping in to enforce the Endangered Species Act.

It is claimed that the aquifer is habitat for some endangered species. However, in court documents recently filed, the U.S. Justice department states that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service does not have the authority to regulate groundwater.

The Texas Farm Bureau proposed legislation in 1991 that would create a management plan for the aquifer. It involved the creation of underground water conservation districts. Such districts have worked very well in many parts of Texas. This plan would have the advantage of management by local people directly affected by any actions taken, and more familiar with the problems and potential solutions.

The Guadalupe Blanco River Authority, downstream from the aquifer, is one of the leading groups in opposition to agricultural interests, and is involved in the controversy because that entity sells water. Every additional acre foot of water that flows down the river amounts to additional income for that organization.

The Texas Farm Bureau and other parties are now involved in a lawsuit that will decide the future of the aquifer. The resolution of this issue will have profound affects of the future of Texas agriculture and other water dependent industries.

Forlano To Appear On Pat Atterbury Show

Albert J. Forlano, R.P.H., Ph.D., Director of Medical Seminars and Consultant Services will be the featured speaker on the Pat Atterbury Show on K1ST-TV Saturday, May 30, 1992 at 6:15 p.m.

The interview will deal with an exciting relatively new area of medicine called "Preventive Medicine." Researchers like Dr. Forlano and others have made extensive epidemiological studies into populations and areas of the world that enjoy good health and longevity. There seems to be a common thread throughout these populations. Based on these observations, guidelines have been formulated for disease prevention as opposed to the necessity for treating an illness after it has occurred. One must realize that these modalities are not 100% effective and in cases where they are not effective, medical treatment are required.

The diseases that preventive medicine has been particularly successful with are heart attacks, strokes, high blood pressure, cancer, obstructive lung disease, pathology of diabetes, digestive diseases, Parkinson's disease, kidney disease, arthritis, memory loss, cataracts, skin diseases, and aging. While this appears to be quite a long list, most of these diseases are produced through a common pathway which can be effectively blocked with the right kind of agents. These recommendations are supported by the National Cancer Institute and the American Heart Association.

In addition, Dr. Forlano will address "A Woman's Touch" program at Shannon Hospital, 102 N. Magdalen in San Angelo on June 11 at 7:00 p.m. and discuss the role of Antioxidant substances in disease prevention.

Dr. Forlano is a nationally known speaker in the area of Preventive Medicine and is a member of the American Medical Association (Associate), American Chemical Society, and the American Pharmaceutical Association.

TOP OF THE DIVIDE

by Thomas Giovannitti

With all of the rain we have had maybe there will be none tomorrow night during the graduation. I really hope so because I don't want to bring my umbrella into a public place. The problem with my umbrella is that it has not fared well during the many weeks and months it spends idly in the closet or under the front seat of the car.

The handle came off months ago for no apparent reason and, although this does not render it unusable, it does make it a little hard to hold onto and very unattractive. (I guess I didn't buy it for looks anyway.)

The snap on the black band doesn't snap shut anymore. I think it got stepped on. This makes it a little hard to completely close, so the metal ribs get caught on the springs under the car seat. I think this is how I ended up with that bent rib that makes the open umbrella perpendicular to the center post. Besides destroying the symmetry, the rain water drips directly down on my coat.

Lastly, when I opened my umbrella last time there was something green and fuzzy growing along one of the folds. Although these recent rains have washed it off, I am not sure whether it might come back!

Health News

by Dr. Rico J. Forlano

Many people associate pain and numbness in the arms with a circulation problem, but most of the time it is the result of a pinching or irritation of a spinal nerve in the neck. The pinching or irritation of the spinal nerves is usually due to spinal misalignment, muscle tightness, or degenerative arthritis.

Degenerative arthritis causes the disc between the bones in the neck to wear away, thus putting more pressure on the nerves.

Your neck is not always the problem, when the shoulder or the elbow are not in proper alignment it could also cause pain in the arms and wrist. Carpal tunnel syndrome and poor circulation can also cause arm and wrist pain.

In a study done by Dr. J.K. Peterson, a medical doctor, he found that approximately a third of the patients with neck disorders had numbness or tingling in one or both arms. He also found that 90% of the patients with neck disorders got complete relief of symptoms from chiropractic manipulation.

If you suffer from your arm falling asleep, arm numbness, or pain you should contact a doctor who is trained to manipulate the spine, the problem may be corrected.

County Agents Report

It sounds contradictory, but Texas A&M animal scientists are investigating whether one of the world's fattest cattle breeds can keep some of its fat and still be part of a lean beef program.

Wagyu cattle, treasured in Japan for their highly marbled beef, appear to be genetically predisposed to deposit more fat especially the intramuscular fat that helps make beef juicy and flavorful. But they may also be better at converting what we have come to know as "bad" fats to "good" ones, according to Dr. Stephen Smith of Texas A&M and the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

Experiments at the McGregor station in 1991 showed crossbred American Wagyu have high ratios of monounsaturated fats to unsaturated fats. Monounsaturated fat are known as "good" fats with few health drawbacks except when consumed at very high levels, such as in an abnormally high-fat diet, Smith said.

The team is examining whether genetically pure Japanese Wagyu have more activity from an enzyme called stearoyl-CoA desaturase, which converts saturated fats to monounsaturated fats.

"All animals have the enzyme," Smith said. "It's a question of whether we can get the activity high enough to change the fatty acid composition."

"Before we can even hope to do that, we have to determine how this enzyme is controlled and which tissues make monounsaturated fat."

Wagyu, selected over the centuries for their abilities as draft animals, have developed into a breed whose characteristics are difficult to make. The highest-graded Wagyu cuts are very expensive and usually given as gifts, often wrapped in wooden, velvet-lined boxes, Smith noted.

Raised primarily on feed and in geographically isolated areas of Japan, Wagyu have been allowed out of that country on only one

Laugh and Live

Republicans hate poor people.

--Giovannitti

Thomas, Thomas, Thomas. Once again you have made an inaccurate statement that you have claimed as truth. All Republicans do not hate poor people.

I once had a friend who knew a woman who was a Republican and she did not hate anyone. To claim that all Republicans hate poor people because some Republicans hate poor people is like saying that all Republicans watch Murphy Brown or all Republicans say "read my lips" before they lie to you. Inaccurate, off the cuff statements like yours cannot be tolerated in a society of free thinkers. Remember the words of Dan Quayle, "It is nice to be in the Pacific. As you know, ah, Hawaii is in the Pacific."

Remember those great words of Bill Clinton, "Yes, I may have smoked marijuana, but I did not inhale." Remember the hidden agenda of Lyndon Baines Johnson, "I think I will try to help some poor people so that when George Bush becomes President he will have someone to blame his troubles on."

Does it sound like I'm rambling, Thomas? Of course I'm rambling. A sane person cannot talk or write sanely about an insane situation. Our government has gone nuts. They claim to be working within a balanced budget while the are budgeting billions of dollars more than they are going to collect. Are our politicians deliberately lying to us? No!! They too, cannot talk sanely about insanity and appear to be sane. The only place that government seems to be working is on the local level and when too many local politicians gather at the public trough, then government will cease to work there as well.

Thomas, it is not true that Republicans (or Democrats for that matter) hate the poor. The problem lies much deeper than that. We are living in a time of mass confusion. People are so eager to have their own way that they overlook things like what is right, what is fair and what is good. We have no statesmen, only politicians. The major parties of this country do not hate us, Thomas. They just don't care that we exist.

Till The Next Time...

MAY GOD BLESS!

Senior Citizen Spring Fling Held

Getting about 100 senior citizens together could be a "hair-raising" experience, and for several couples at the first Spring Fling at Lake Brownwood recently, it was.

A few brave men's hair stood on end as their partners used shaving cream to whip up new hairdos ranging from beehives to a porcupine style in a "Hair Raising" Contest. It didn't matter who won. It was all part of the fun.

Each April, adults 55 and older participate in one of five consecutive Spring Fling events for four days at the Texas 4-H Center. They take part in "hands on" learning centers for arts and crafts, as well as educational seminars.

The event is so popular that it also occurs in the fall as Octoberfest. Each weekly program is limited to the first 165 persons to enroll.

Texas Agricultural Extension Service specialists and county agents and experts from other agencies provide special sessions covering such topics as pesticide safety in the home, IRAs and changes in social security, car safety, nutrition and exercise, recycling and photography. Participants can also fish, take boat rides and play in various games.

"We believe in promoting activities where 4-H young people can learn by doing," said Mike McKinney, Extension 4-H specialist and program director at the center, which is owned by the Texas 4-H Youth Foundation. "These adults are the same way. They still have to build their self confidence even at their age.

"When participants do something like an oil painting, they have a finished product that they can take with them."

Participants help carry out the 1992 theme, "Down On The Farm," by wearing farm clothes and taking part in seed-spitting contests, pig calling and cracking peanuts with their toes. The entire 4-H center staff pitches in - from decorating to planning appropriate meals.

"The theme allows older adults to have fun and act like kids," McKinney said. "I call them recycled teenagers. They're all so energetic and about 50 percent of them have been here three or four times."

Shirley Riebe of Weatherford has been to the center five times in three years. This year she brought her sister-in-law, Kathryn Riebe with her. Both agree that the cost is particularly attractive while the benefits - lodging, food and programs - are excellent.

"We enjoy just letting our hair down and forgetting all our troubles," Shirley said. "It's like a mini vacation and we enjoy the fun of the staff."

"We've participated in just about everything so far," Kathryn said. "We've done things like make necklaces while our husbands painted pictures."

"When participants come they know that they're welcomed to participate in as many of the learning centers as they like or spend most of their time doing one activity, whether it's doing bead work or fishing in the catfish pond," said Lynn Copeland, director of the Texas 4-H Center. "That's fine. We don't try to force feed any of the curriculum on the participants, and it's been very well received."

"Part of beauty of seeing these older Texans is that they are still very much interested in learning new skills and making things with their hands that are not for a shelf in their home, but can be given to a son, a daughter, a neighbor or perhaps an older brother or sister who can't come," he said.

The success of the program has been due largely to the all-volunteer instruction staff, Copeland said. Instructors teach everything from leather crafts to chair caning to various kinds of table and card games, he said.

Annie Leatherwood, a volunteer and retired art teacher from Stephenville, attended her first Spring Fling in 1984 after her husband died.

"I went down to the senior citizen center and the director handed me a flyer and said, you might want to do this," Leatherwood said with a chuckle. "I said, 'I don't want to go sleep on bunk beds and cuddle old gabbies.'"

But she did not have to sleep on bulk beds. On her first trip, Leatherwood ended up helping an arts and crafts instructor. Eventually, she started teaching her own classes, including fabric painting and dancing this year.

"Some of these people never get out of their houses until they come here," she said. "They come, let their guards down, take classes and realize they can do some things they've never done before, and they keep coming back. I think that's the biggest compliment."

Copeland said he knows of at least one other organization that has set up a program following the center's pattern and added, "We welcome other conference centers to join in to provide their resources for the benefit of older Texans."

Spring Fling started in 1981 to provide older adults with the same kinds of enriching experiences as 4-H young people receive through programs, resources and facilities of the Texas 4-H Center, Copeland said.

"The event is a unique mix of enjoyable learning and fellowship with people from all over the state, offered at a very reasonable price," he said.

The cost runs between $95 and $120 for all meals and snacks, lodging and printed material. There are some minor additional costs for arts and crafts materials, Copeland said. For many participants, one of the greatest benefits of the program is friendship.

"I was in San Antonio and I heard someone say, 'Well, look who's here,'" Leatherwood said. "There were six people I had met at Spring Fling. I walked into a restaurant in Marshall and saw some of our people. For me, one of the best parts has been making new friends."

Spring Fling has an even more special meaning to Gene Broughton of Brownwood, who met his wife, Carolyn Page of Cisco, here. The two were in a wind chime class together. They married last December.

According to Broughton, "Matches can be made here."

Karate Demonstration

by Shelly Phillips

On Monday, May 25th, Choi's Tae Kwon Do Academy of San Angelo put on a Karate demonstration for the Elementary school children. Tae Kwon Do instructor Mike Seickoch brought some of his students including Debbie Davis, a blackbelt and director of the D.A.R.E. program for the San Angelo police department.

Three local students participated in the demonstration. They were Ty Martinez, Bobby Phillips and Tommy Johnson. Between the "oo's" and "aaw's," several boards were broken. For a grand finale, Mr. Seickoch smashed three cinder blocks with one blow of his fist.

Ty, Bobby and Tommy were also awarded medals for a year of academic excellence. The students are expected to excel in all aspects of life.

Choi's Tae Kwon do will have classes at the Memorial Building on Monday's and Wednesday's from 6:30-8:00. For more information please call 853-3437.

County Agent's Report

occasion. Four bulls were sold to an American breeder in 1976, and all American stock are descended from them.

Smith traveled to Japan in November to collect purebred Black Wagyu blood samples. DNA from the samples will be used in the enzyme experiments.

Because all animals have the enzyme, Smith said, his team's work could have implications for producers of other meats, including poultry and pork.

While Smith looks at the genetic end of things, a member of his team is leading efforts to and the best ways to produce and manage beef similar to that from Japanese Wagyu.

Dr. David Lunt, superintendent of the McGregor experiment station, said such beef may be produced in part by a growing herd of crossbred American Wagyu cattle, as well as by Angus.

One of his recent experiments showed that crossbred American Wagyu could produce beef reaching the highest Japanese grading levels.

His team found that Angus, an American breed disposed to high marbling, did not grade out as highly as American Wagyu. Still, it reached marbling levels that would make it ideal for a middle level of the Japanese market, he said.

Both the American Wagyu and Angus were raised under conditions as nearly identical as possible to those in Japan.

Lunt, Smith and others are having to determine if genetics, environment or a combination of both make Wagyu marble so well, as well as the potential for making other breeds more Wagyu-like.

Lunt said U.S. markets do not offer as much promise for highly marbled beef carcasses. Except for steaks - in demand in restaurants and specialty markets - roasts and other cuts are too fat for American consumers and have such beef are in Japan, he said. Japanese cuts are done in strips or chunks for their traditional dishes, limited market use, he said.

Producing beef economically for the high-end American market is an objective, but the best market for he said, and the entire carcass can be utilized.

He also said a well-educated Japanese populace will eat more and more lean beef for health reasons and because it's easier on the pocketbook than highly marbled beef. That means other U.S. beef probably has an even bigger market than the highly marbled product, he said.

"There's a lot of potential to sell USDA choice beef over there," Lunt said.

Recent market liberalization means it's now possible for Americans to ship all the beef they'd like - if it meets Japanese consumer tastes, Lunt said.

Producing that beef is another matter, Lunt said, but he feels good about the long-term outlook for American producers wanting to sell in Japan.

He said he won't even hazard a guess as to the potential market size for highly marbled beef, but said other countries could catch up to U.S. efforts quickly.

"Development of this market niche is very, very much in its infancy. There are fewer than 10,000 head of Wagyu cross cattle in the United States now," Lunt said. "When we started working in this area four or five years ago, there were fewer than 200 head."

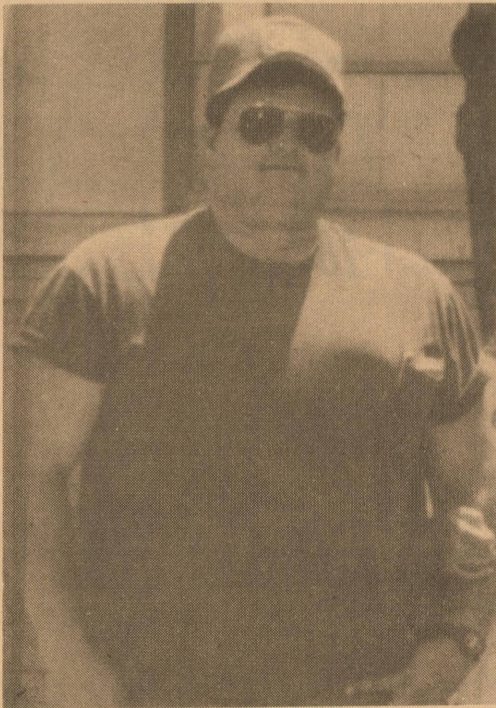

"What's interesting is the rate of growth of Wagyu herds occurring in New Zealand and Australia," he said, noting that in New Zealand alone, some 2,000 head of Wagyu are expected to be born as part of that country's first Wagyu calf crop.

What Every 18-Year-Old Needs To Know About Texas Law

Did you know that in Texas... "Hazing," "mooning," and chain letters are all illegal

"You can be arrested for disorderly conduct" for swearing in public

"You can end up with a criminal record for writing a hot check in any amount

"You are an adult at age 17 if you commit a crime

What Every 18-Year-Old Needs to Know about Texas Law, a new paperback book from the University of Texas Press, is a clearly organized, concise guide to Texas laws that are of particular interest to young adults and their parents.

Author L. Jean Wallace, an assistant regional attorney for the Texas Department of Human Services in Abilene, served as students' attorney at Texas Tech University from 1979 to 1990. Her experience with students' legal questions inspired this easy-to-use guide that is illustrated with humorous, true stories. She focuses on many of the state's laws that are of utmost concern to young adults, including laws governing the use and ownership of cars, criminal law (including hazing, pranks, DWI), landlord-tenant disputes, sexual harassment, and consumer credit laws.

What Every 18-Year-Old Needs to Know about Texas Law is an invaluable guide to help young adults avoid costly and frightening encounters with the legal system.

Africanized Honey Bees

A swarm of Africanized honey bees has been found for the first time in San Antonio, the nation's tenth largest city.

Officials with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's bee research laboratory in Beltsville, Md., confirmed the find Tuesday (April 28).

As a result, Bexar County has been added to the quarantine restricting commercial movement of honey bees in 25 South Texas counties.

"The intent of the quarantine is to prevent the man-assisted spread of Africanized honey bees," said Paul Jackson, chief of the Texas Apiary Inspection Service, a unit of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

The swarm was found and destroyed on the city's south side on Wednesday, April 22, by an employee of the San Antonio Metropolitan Health District.

The bees were about 18 feet up in a tree at a residence in the 71M block of Hobson Street, about one-half mile northeast of Interstate Highway 37 and Military Drive. There was no stinging incident involved, and the bees were destroyed with a spray of soapy water.

Following routine procedures, a sample of the bees was mailed to the bee identification laboratory at Texas A&M University. It was received on Monday, found to be Africanized in preliminary analysis, and sent by overnight mail to USDA's Agricultural Research Service laboratory in Beltsville.

The San Antonio find indicates that the leading edge of the insect's migration into the United States from Mexico has progressed 275 miles from when the first swarm was detected near Brownsville in October 1990.

Last week, six other counties south and west of San Antonio were added to a quarantine restricting the movement of commercial bee operations.

Added to the quarantine were Kinney, Frio, McMullen, Atascosa, Medina and Uvalde counties. The quarantine allows beekeepers to move bee hives within but not out of the zone.

Africanized honey bees look just like regular domestic honey bees, but they are more defensive in protecting their hives.

The apiary inspection service, the regulatory agency for the Texas bee laws, imposes quarantines based on the Texas Africanized Honey Bee Management Plan.

Eight counties across the southern tip of Texas - roughly a 100-mile radius from the U.S.-Mexico border - were quarantined after the first Africanized bee swarm migrating into the United States was detected near Hidalgo on Oct. 15, 1990.

Since then, counties have been added as the bee continues to migrate northward. The other counties under quarantine are: Maverick, Zavala, Dimmit, Webb, Brooks, Cameton, Hidalgo, Jim Hogg, Kenedy, Starr, Willacy, Zapata, Nueces, Jim Wells, Iceberg, Duval, Val Verde and La Salle.

What To Do

Africanized Honey Bee (AHB) news stories have brought about many myths that may have misinformed the public.

Some general things to remember are:

- 1) the AHB looks like our regular European bee
- 2) honey bees respond to perceived threats to their colony, which includes, their home, stored food and young bees
- 3) AHB's are very defensive of perceived threats
- 4) honey bees fly about 15 mph; an athletic person can out run them
- 5) allergic, young and old persons are of most concern
- 6) unlike wasps, when stung by a honey bee, the stinger stays in the skin and must be removed
- 7) beekeepers are our first line of defense against AHB's

There are 3 situations in which you may encounter bees:

1) SINGLE BEE or small group of bees foraging for food or water. These bees are not interested in you; they are only concerned with food and water. If you leave them alone, they will leave you alone. Bees do not like sudden movement, so a swat may be a perceived threat to a bee.

2) A SWARM is a group of bees which are resting on a branch waiting for scout bees to locate their new nesting sight. The swarm rests calmly for about a few hours to a couple of days, sometimes longer, then move on to the new nesting sight where they will colonize. Swarms have no comb, stored food or young bees to protect; therefore, they are rarely defensive in this state. Beekeepers or emergency personnel may capture or control swarms rather easily and submit samples for identification.

3) An ESTABLISHED COLONY holds the greatest threat to humans and is easily recognized by presence of wax comb and bees which have been in the location for Honey bees as beneficial insects. Pollination of Agricultural crops brings better quality and quantity of food to our table. About 1/3 of the food we eat is improved by honey bee pollination.

If bees attack, you should:

- * Run through heavy brush and out of their territory
- * Seek shelter in a car or building
- * Pull a sweater or coat up over face
- * Cover with a blanket or help a panic-stricken companion do so, then exit the area

If stung:

- * seek safety by running first
- * remove stingers by scraping at skin surface with sharp object or fingernail
- * multiple sting victims should seek medical attention
- * persons known to be allergic to bee stings should consult their physician regarding bee sting kits with epinephrine.

AHB RESPONSE

If you have bees, contact the people who know bees, beekeepers or pest control operators in the yellow pages.

Other contacts include: Vector Control at San Antonio Metro Health District, Fire Department, Police Departments, etc.

In addition, they wrote and performed updated versions of fairy tales and a program for Nursery rhymes, call "Rhyme Time."

The Emperor's New Clothes was the end of the year finale for all they had learned about staging, costuming, and acting. A good time was had by all!

Fund-Raising Workshop

Today, more than ever, nonprofit organizations are turning to foundations and corporations for support of special projects. But, the secret to success is in the asking. Each year monies earmarked for grants both by corporations and private donors go undistributed, due partly to a lack of expertise in proposal writing, according to Dr. Don Umlah of Phoenix, Arizona.

This summer, nonprofit groups again will have an opportunity to learn how to fund projects successfully. The Texas Historical Commission has announced the dates for its 1992 Texas Fund-Raising Workshops to be held in six locations across the state. Cosponsored by Preservation Texas, the popular two-day seminars are now in their 14th year of teaching representatives of nonprofit groups, including heritage organizations, the fundamentals of foundation and corporate proposal writing.

Umlah, together with Anice Read, director of the THC's Texas Main Street Program, will lead the workshops. Each of the workshops will cover all aspects of fund-raising, including where to find funding, how to approach foundations, and how to write convincing proposals. The first day of each workshop is spent on lecture and discussion. On the second day, each participant will write a grant proposal. Under the guidance of the instructors, many grant applications have been funded.

"The Texas Fund-Raising Workshops are a valuable opportunity for nonprofit groups to take advantage of the many grant opportunities available to them in Texas," said Read.

The workshops are scheduled for Mission, July 13-14; Cleburne, July 15-16; Plainview, July 17-18; Beaumont, July 20-21; Bay City, July 22-23; and Austin, July 24-25. Registration is open to representatives of nonprofit groups for a fee of $95, which covers all materials needed to complete the course. Participants are encouraged to register early, as class size is limited. Checks should be made out to Preservation Texas and sent to P.O. Box 12832, Austin, TX 78711.
