HOOVER'S HOME ECONOMY

89 YEARS, 89 MILLION.

KAHN LOSES TITTA RUFFO.

FOCH IS DEAD.

President Hoover, believing that economy should begin at home, will put the Presidential yacht Mayflower out of commission. The President will go his yachting in a rowboat when fishing. The country will save $300,000 a year, and 148 sailors that have wasted their time on the Maypower will be assigned to new naval vessels.

The Mayflower has been added to the cost of maintaining a President ever since the days of Theodore Roosevelt, and President Hoover's determination to discontinue a thoroughly undemocratic arrangement will be generally appreciated.

The people would not grudge a good President any comfort or luxury. But a $300,000 yacht tacked on a $75,000 salary seems fantastic.

George F. Baker dean of American bankers, ruler of the gigantic First National of New York, which is one of his minor possessions, has celebrated his eighty-ninth birthday.

For every year that he has lived, Mr. Baker has given at least a million dollars to education and other good purposes.

Everybody wishes him many more years to get and give.

Since the people do not yet know enough to develop their own resources and supply what they need, it is fortunate that they have such men as Baker, Rockefeller and others to show them how.

Otto H. Kahn, protector of grand opera, learns that his enemy is the talking moving picture. [That must surprise him as much as it surprised the seventy-foot dinosaurs when rats ate them.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have taken Titta Ruffo from Mr. Kahn's Metropolitan opera to sing for the movies and it was as simple "as taking candy from a child."

Mr. Ruffo sings ten times before a recording machine and is paid $350,000 or $35,000 for each short singing period.

Even the Metropolitan's diamond horseshoe cannot compete with that.

Marshall Foch is dead. Farewell to a great warrior, a true man. He has gone and taken his wages—a name that will live in history and the eternal gratitude of his countrymen.

In command of all the allied armies, he had 10,000,000 men under his command, by far the greatest army gathered together since men first began wholesale killing.

And his motto, that every man should adopt, was: "THE OFFENSIVE ALWAYS."

Allons, "Let us go," was the last word uttered by Marshall Foch. It is the first word of the French national hymn that he heard so often, the hymn to which the Revolutionary soldiers marched from the south of France into Paris. "Allons enfants de la patrie," etc.

The last words of great men, piously collected, have little value. The great men probably did not know what they were saying

DANCE AT NEW TOURIST CAMP

Next Friday night the new Tourist Camp built by C. C. West and son Palmer will be opened with the first dance. The camping quarters are already in use. This is one of the nicest and most up to date Tourist Camps in this section of the country. The owners have spent a great deal of money on this place and it is one of the greatest assets Eldorado has and citizens should certainly appreciate Mr. West's idea of constructing such a nice building. It is modernly equipped with electric lights, well ventilated rooms, shower baths, and many other up to date equipments.

The ground is gravelled entirely around the camp, lots of shed room for cars and is covered all over with the modern fireproof roofing.

Mehr licht, "more light," were the last words of Goethe.

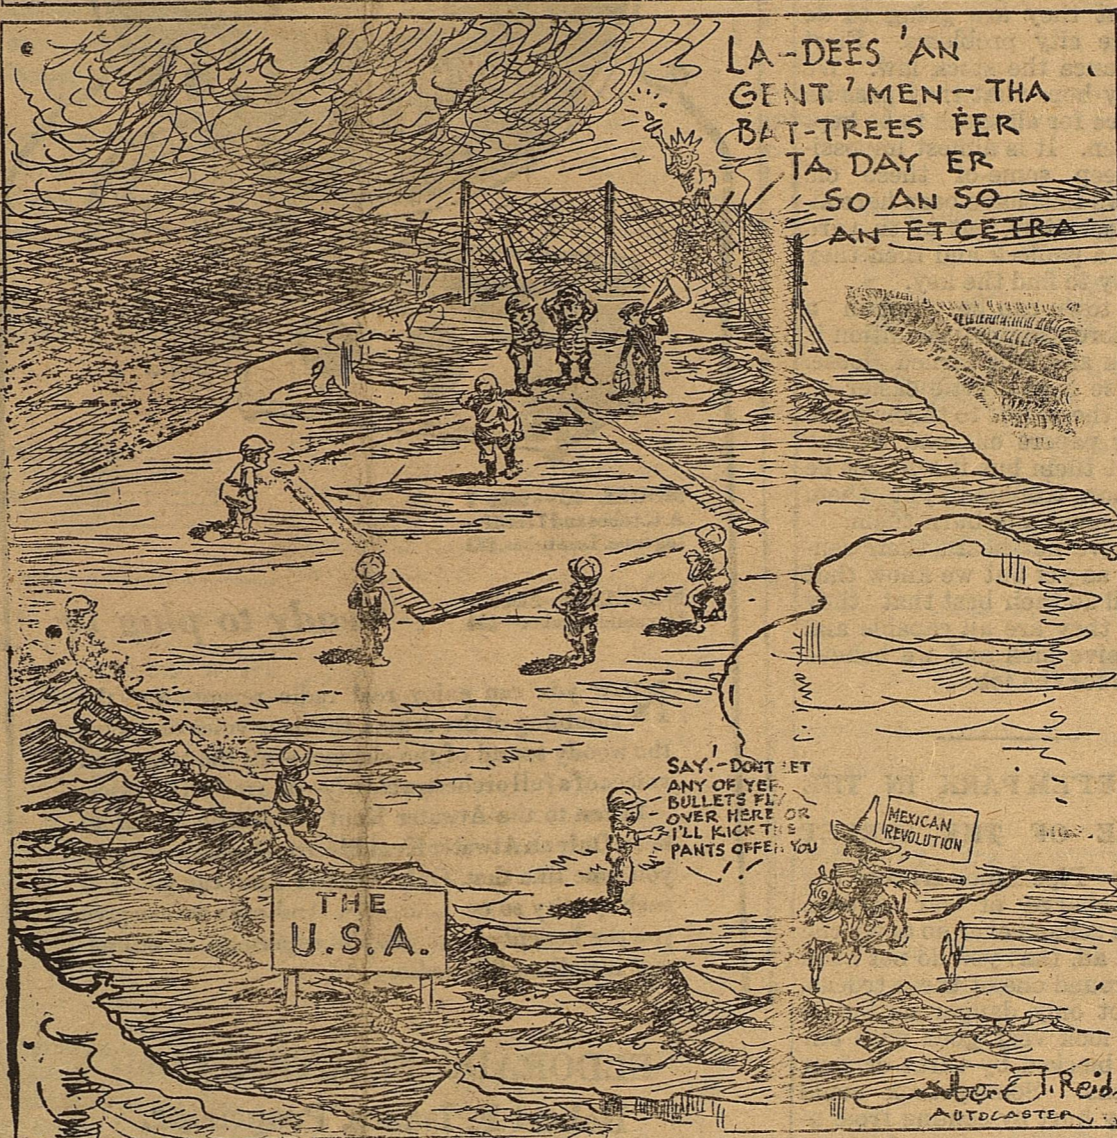

Frederick the Great's last words are supposed to be tete d'armee, "head of the army." He often spoke French in preference to German.

Pitt, whose genius kept Napoleon out of England said as he died, "My country, how I leave thee." He was worried about the future.

What a man does while he lives is more important than what he says when he dies.

WILD ANIMALS AGAIN

ROAM AMERICAN FORRESTS

With the Exception of the Grizzly Bear and the Caribou, Numbers of Animals Increase

Robert V. Stewart, chief forester of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, has declared that the American forests are again becoming a paradise for wild animals. With the exception of the grizzly bear and the caribou, all animals are increasing in number. Deer are increasing 5 per cent faster than hunters can kill them. More than 700,000, it is estimated, are roaming in the national forests. Means are being sought to keep the numbers of the herd within the feeding capacity of the forests.

Elk are also increasing faster than they are being killed off, with 75,000 elk grazing today in national forests. Antelope are increasing in their numbers at about 10 per cent annually. It is estimated 8,000 of them are on the national ranges. More than 8,000 moose are ex-histant despite the invasions of hunters. Beavers are thriving in the west, and nearly 200,000 of them are listed in the animal census.

Black and brown bears, now number about 52,000, having increased 10 per cent annually. But outside of 2,500 in Alaska, only 300 grizzly bears are known to be in American forests. Only 35 caribou are listed in the records of the forest service.

IT WON'T BE LONG NOW

Not many more days until the bat swingers get into real action. The mighty Babe will begin to make the supposed "tough" pitchers stop and take notice. The would be base ball prophets can soon start prophesying as to the winner of the different leagues and then will come the Dixie Series, and the different of opinion and other differences and so on in the World Series. There was quite a few differences in the Series last year, both of them and in more ways than one.

We have no real heavy weight boxes and unless there is some imported soon we will have to turn entirely to baseball. And if they can't import better fighters than before they might as well stay at home.

It seems that they also have a way of making a fellow talk in the Senate too, or rather wish you had talked. Mr. Harry F. Sinclair refused to tell them just what they want to know and as the consequence was he will probably, if a new hearing is not permitted, visit the jail house for three months with a $500 fine attached. We imagine that he would gladly pay the fine instead of going to jail. If nothing interferes, Mr. Sinclair can easily and truthfully sing, "I'm In The Jailhouse Now".

A. J. Atkins seems to think that he will have to go away from Eldorado to get golfers that will interest him. He went down to the course last Sunday afternoon and defeated some of the best of Eldorado's nubile wielders.

It is easy for anyone to see what a real little city we have here at Eldorado. Even the strangers notice things and you can hear talk of the things that we have that really surprise the people not living here.

Cecil Johnson seemed to have nothing to do so he just shot a hole in his arm with a 22 target. We believe that we could think of a lot of things that would be more striking than that.

Hensel Matthews was a visitor in the city last Tuesday and reports a good rain.

B. F. Nolen was in from the ranch last Tuesday and looked as though he was setting on top of the world after the recent rains.

Mr. J. F. Isaacs has proven that he is pretty hard to beat in golf since he began wearing the regular golfing apparel. He certainly does look dressed up.

R. P. Hinyard was in Eldorado this week from the ranch on the Pecos River.

Floyd Young who has been attending McMurray College at Abilene was a visitor in Eldorado the latter part of last week and the first of this week.

We are anxious for the new city officers to get started and see what they are going to do with the city problems. First for instance the stock law. We sincerely hope that they pass an ordinance for all sock to be kept in the pen. It is almost impossible to keep some of these old time cows that have been here almost since time, out of the yard without a padlock and then they are likely to find the key.

The town can be kept in a much more sanitary condition if the cows are not turned loose. Of course it is a little easier on some of the people to throw some of their papers out and let the cows eat them but it will not be much more trouble to put them in the basket and burn them.

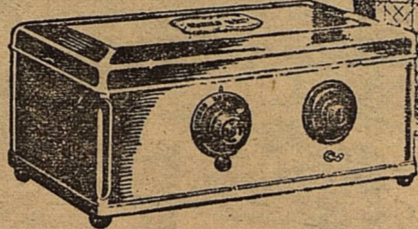

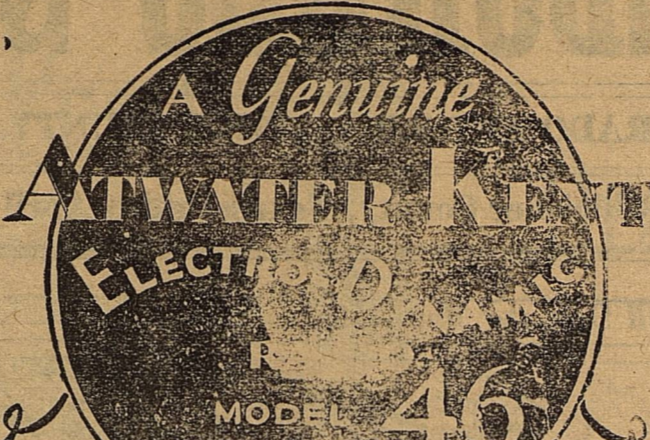

We have not heard their sentiments as yet but we know that they will do their best that they can for they are all capable and progressive men and we believe the men for the job.

WHY LET 'EM PARK IN THE MIDDLE OF THE STREET

These Pipe Line trucks are taking charge of our streets. You can seldom ever go down the street at all, that you do not have to go around one of these trucks. It is not only dangerous but it doesn't look very good with our streets blocked by three or four big trucks. Some person could be easily hurt by coming from around one of these and not seeing a car that is coming down the street and might be seriously or fatally injured. There should be an easy way to prevent this. It is bad enough for the middle of the street to be used for a few minutes only as parking space, much less for several hours. Why not have them move off the streets?

Brady is to entertain the News paper men of West Texas April 20, we have always had a liking for Brady and must find some way of getting over there the 20th.

THE TOWN DOCTOR

SAYS

If ever there was a time when it behooved small cities and towns to prepare for a big opportunity it is right now.

Big men, big industry and big town people are looking to the smaller cities as they have never looked before.

You may call it trend of the times if you like, but whatever you call it, it is one big grand opportunity for those who are wise enough to see it and to do something to get ready for it. Leading publications everywhere are printing special articles on it and it is more and more a subject of conversation wherever big men get together publicly or in private conference.

In a recent issue of The American Magazine, Henry Ford said, "Is it efficient for business to pay high land prices and high taxes in congested cities where its workers must pay exorbitant rents? By moving out business could get lower land prices, lower taxes and lower rents—and far better living conditions for its people."

A bulletin recently issued by the American Highway Educational center, for surely they must be making some product or another which the world at large uses. "It is often said, and with some degree of truth, the bulletin admits, that the drift of population from farm to city remains unchecked, but the facts are that this drift is stopping short of the larger cities and has begun to build up the towns and villages that lie so close to and form such an integral part of the country."

The lesson to be learned is that highway transportation is a going business and still greater returns will come from further improvements. It will not be economy to let down in highway extension programs because our state systems are so well under way. There are the main arteries, which, if widened—and they will be—hold even greater possibilities as trade channels.

GET READY—you never know when a scout for a big business will be among you. He may be in your town now. He will not come among you with blare of trumpets; his report will not be based on your individual likability, or good fellowship of the few shining lights, but on your town as it is—not as you believe it to be, if you have ever thought about it at all.

Big men are not interested in Hickville or Hickvilleites. They believe as they have a right to believe, that the automobile and good roads, radio, telephone and free mail delivery should have, by now, taken the Hick out of Hickville. If it hasn't, if such things have not awakened in the minds of towns the possibilities in the new order of thing, then some other town is where they must investigate.

Stand back and look at the picture of your community. And you ready for things? Copyright, 1929, A. D. Stone. Reproduction prohibited in whole or in part.

BANK PRESENTS CLASS REGISTERS

For three years the First National Bank has presented the members of the graduating class and the high school faculty with attractive class registers.

Those given this year are exceptionally beautiful in brown covers with gold lettering. The names of the individual is in gold at the bottom of the front cover. Inside are found pages attractively arranged for autographs of classmates and teachers, athletic events of the year, and Senior activities.

The Senior class and faculty members wish to take this opportunity of thanking each person connected with the First National Bank for these very appropriate registers which in future years will bring back to us pleasant memories of happy hours with dear classmates and teachers.

I watched the clouds go by,
 Leaving the Heavens blue on high;
 The sun came out with a flood of light,
 Then the clouds went sailing by,
 They closed from view, that Heaven of blue
 An da gloomy darkness settled down.
 The sun thrust out his funny face,
 Then the clouds went laughing by;
 The heavy fog rose and floated away
 To join the clouds across the sky.

TENNIS DOUBLE SHOW IMPROVEMENT

Last Friday Christoval came here for tennis matches in doubles and singles. Glenn Ratliff playing singles made a good showing, but lost to H. E. Chapple 6-4, 6-3. The Chapple boy is staidier, and has had more experience.

In the doubles the boys did better, winning the second set 6-1, but losing the other two 7-5, and 6-4.

Monday afternoon we returned the mathsce, losing singles again 6-4, 6-2, but winning the doubles 4-6, 6-2, 6-3. The boys are working hard and improving at a nice rate. We are expecting them to show up well in the District Meet next Friday.

NATURE POET

(Lorene Shoemaker)

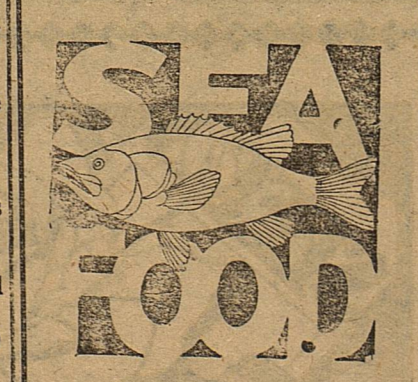

William Cullen Bryant, one of America's greatest nature poets, spent most of his early childhood in the woods. From the time he was able to write poetry, almost all of the poems have a distinct love of nature in them that cannot be mistaken.

Bryant's religion was manifested in nature. Nothing pleased him more than to be out in the woods where the hand of man had not touched and everything was "lovely, lonely, and still". Here he could pray best and think best. In most of his poems he got his inspiration from nature, connected with God.

When he was tired and weary he liked to wander to a river or woods and dream and think and meditate. He liked to be near nature always, to view the handiwork of God. In his poem entitled "June", Bryant expresses a desire to be buried in the month of June that the sod above may be covered with flowers and grasses and the trees near by filled with singing birds.

A report has been circulated of late that Lyonelle Ballew paid the High School a visit last week. After having seen Lyonelle in the play at the school house last week end we feel sure that there is a great future for the young fellow. We hope that he gets to see the Carisbad Cavern this summer, but don't you wait on that Lyonelle. You come just any time you like, because we are glad to have you with us.

WHENCE SPRINGS COOPERATION.

What are the motives behind the much used word "cooperation" in the life and progress of a community, it may be said that there are several reasons why citizens engage in cooperative efforts to gain common ends and accomplish common purposes. Cooperation springs both from selfishness and unselfishness. Even selfishness of the right sort is itself laudable. Many people put their shoulders to the wheel for the sheer joy making things go. Others, desiring to help their own business or boost their social aspirations, jump in with their coats off and sleeves rolled up to do the job that is to be done. Still others have a financial reason which, if legitimate detracts nothing or little from the credit gained. For results count, after all, and the general public looks only to results.

This business of cooperation to build a town or city is the greatest factor of all. So long as the people with personal motives make them known, and so long as the personal ends sought for and obtained do not interfere with the general results, we can see no reason for withholding support in common endeavors. In the final analysis we are all somewhat selfish. There is some reason behind every act for the good of the community. Every piece of development helps somebody or some group of people if it helps in any degree. Every bit of public work costs somebody or some groupe of people money, time and personal effort. We could no more weed out and separate the personal rewards of community work from those it affects than we could afford to stop development because somebody profited by it to the sacrifice of others. For cooperation means helping the other fellow, and in turn helping ourselves.

Where would Eldorado be if it were not for the cooperation of its people? To the extent that we work together we prosper. But cooperation works negatively as well as affirmatively. It may be used as affectively to hold up ill-advised projects as to forward worthy movements.

CHAPTER 1.

What's the Use?

Grandmother Page refused to budge. I turned her over again, but there was no sign of life. I squirted gasoline into her cylinders, but she didn't seem to care.

As you may have surmised, Grandmother Page is a relation of mine only by adoption and purchase. She originally was created and assembled by the Page motor Company of Detroit, but that was so long ago that her years fully entitled her to the title of "Grandmother."

She has had a hard life, too. For four years she has been going nearly everywhere that I go, and for a long time before that she was the traveling companion of a suburban real-estate man who could sell gold bricks to placer miners. I suspect that he taught her some of her deceitful tricks.

It must have been from him that she got her love of the country. She revels in green fields and running brooks and sandbanks and mud-holes. Whenever she finds one she always wants to stay there all day. The farther it is from the city the better she likes it.

Personally I am fonder of the city, and when she decides to remain all night on some road fourteen or fifteen miles from anywhere I have sometimes walked home rather than share the sylvan solitudes with her.

Under my breath I murmured "Durn you, Grandmother, and it hthe emine a indictive tap with a monkey wrench.

"Maybe there is no gasoline in the magneto," suggested Maryella, who had watched from the front seat.

I mabe no reply. When some one begins offering me suggestions after I have tried every known trick on a stalled motor I find that the only way to preserve my reputation as a gentleman is to keep absolutely silent.

Even Maryella, whom I have been trying for two years to persuade to become Mrs. Tom Billbeck, can draw fire from me on such a dynamic occasion.

"We've got to get home, Tom," she freettd. "Thres a rehearsal of 'Pygmalion and Galatea' tonight, and if we're away they can't do a thing."

No, reader, we are not actors. I am positive of that. Our stage work receives mention only in the society column. We perform for charity before people who have to like us because we represent such worthy causes.

When ever the social Settlement sends up a thousand dollars' worth of time enticing five hundred people to part with fifty cents each to hear us forget our lines.

When Belgium needs bread or the Fifi Islanders run out of pants, pants, who comes to the rescue regardless of consequences? The Sheridan Dramatic Club!

And now we were doing "Pygmalion and Galatea," for Old Soldiers Home, which needed some new window-shades or an electric piano, I've forgotten which. "Besides" continued Maryella, shivering slightly, "it's getting colder, and I think I felt a drop of rain a minute ago."

"That being the case," I observed sarcastically, "we'll start."

"Let's," she encouraged. Grandmother Page and I repeated our justly celebrated repertoire of tricks, from adjusting the spark-coil to putting gasoline in our eye while lying prone under the tank. Each separate adjustment was preceded and with the starting-crank.

"Jim Cooper has a self-starter on his car," Maryella observed sympathetically while I was trying to catch my breath.

"Then why," I inquired in icy exasperation that I regretted instantly, "why don't you marry Jim Cooper, if you're so crazy about a self-starter?" "Oh!" exclaimed Maryella, inarticulate with rage at my remark. "You have no right to insult me like that!"

"I didn't mean to insult you, dear. . . I forgot Grandmother Page for the moment in my anxiety to square myself for my tactical blunder.

It was the wrong move. My very humility made her think that she really had been offended in some way, so she dabbed at her pretty eyes to see if she could scare up a tear. Shee could not. That made her more angry.

"I know one thing," she stated clambering out of the seat. "I'll never ride in your old car again as long as I live."

She strated down the road. "I'll walk home first!"

Why are girls of twenty so adorable—and why are men a few years older such fools about them? The answer to that question may explain also why I followed her through the dusk that was part twilight and part gathering rain-storm.

"Listen, Maryella," I called after her. "Be reasonable."

No response.

"You can't walk all the way home. It's ten miles."

"I'd probably have to walk any way," she observed dispassionately, "so I might as well get ionally intended for a mind. Whatever people seem to be doing he does without questioning there is any sense in it. He plays golf because so many other seem to enjoy it, not from any love of the game. He is one of Maryella's admirers for the same reason.

Maybe I am prejudiced, but I can't believe that he really appreciates her adorableness.

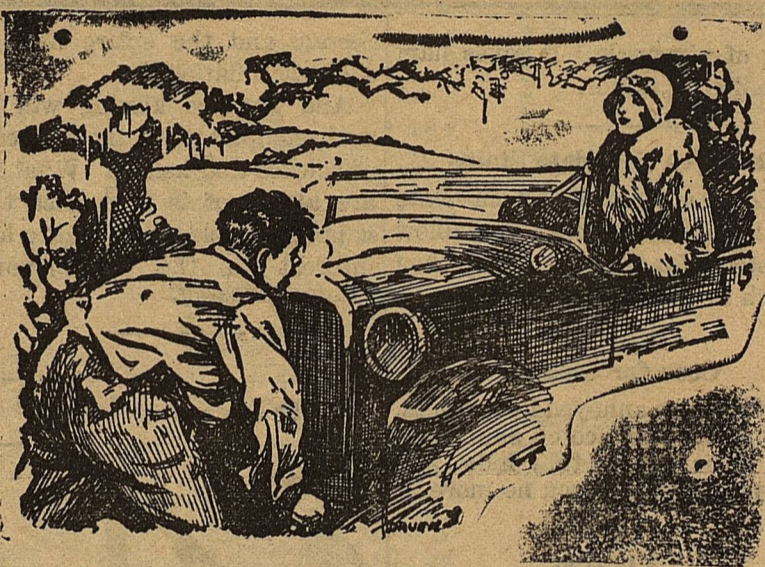

Maryella, is flattered by his attentions, not knowing what a small tribute it is. The fact that he asks her opinion on every move he makes, from changing brands of toothpaste to buying a summer home, caters to her love of power.

"Are you sure you've got gasoline in the tank?"

Jim Cooper continued his ruthless assault on the remaining shreds of my temper.

"The trouble is in the spark," I volunteered briefly, looking around for a weapon in case he should ask another question.

"Oh! Can I give you a lift from old man? Of course, there isn't an extra seat, but you could sit on the gasoline-tank at the rear.

Maryella Watching the Struggle from the Front Seat of Grandmother Page

started before dark."

That remark about walking home anyway was the crowning insult to me and Grandmother Page. It hurt the more because it was probably true. I turned back angrily. She trudged on....

Down the road came a purring motor. I had hardly expected a car to pass that way. I had purposely chosen a back-country road for my drivee with Maryella that day. This machine was coming from town.

I looked at a turn of he road around which it would presently appear. Maybe it was a friend of mine.

The car rounded the turn. I swore under my breath.

It was the racing runabout belonging to Jim Cooper. No situation that I could imagine would please him more and me less than that in which we were placed.

He pulled up alongside of Maryella, who had proceeded about two or three blocks before he arrived. After a short parley she got in beside him. I gnashed my teeth, but thanked Heaven that I would soon be alone to express my opinion on automobiles, human beings and things in general.

No such luck. [The car was coming on toward me. It pulled up alongside of Grandmother Page.

Maryella looked off across the fields on the other side of the road, but the driver got down from his seat and inspected Grandmother Page.

What's the matter? Won't the engine run?

Jim Cooper is the kind of man who would ask a question like that. His sense of humor is very low, just above that of an anthropoid ape. When bromidioms were being passed around he took one of eaer.

I'll admit that he is rather a goodlooking chap. His hair just escapes being too blond and he has a wisp of a mustache such as you see on the men in the clothing advertisements.

Nature did all she could for the outside, but let him go without filling in the place which was or-

I think it will hold you."

He surveyed me doubtfully. A slight snicker from the lady in the car spurred me to a quick refusal.

"No, thank. I'll have my car going in a few minutes."

"Oh! Miss Waite told me it wouldn't go at all."

"Did she?" I murmured politely. I didn't know that she was interested."

"Maybe we had better wait," he suggested, "until you get started, and follow you into town.

Then if anything goes wrong we can pick you up along the road."

"Please don't," I urged, with just a shade of feeling showing in my voice.

"Just as you say, old top. I'd like awfully well to help you if I could.."

He got back into his car and insulted us once more with the but efficient purr of his electric start. Then waving at me airily, he turned about and disappeared in a cloud of dust toward the city.

I sat by the roadside and told myself that I was probably one of the seven worst "fussers" in the United States and the Dominion of Canada. I had played my game like a fifteenJeweleu boob. The first rule for making a girl eat out of your hand is never to let her know when you get mad. The second is not to be sorry if you do. I had a blow-out in both rules.

While I sat there it began to drizzle, but I thought too little of myself to care to move, so I didn't. Instead I recollected with delightful pain how eminently desirable Maryella was.

Slim and slender and cool-looking, she was obviously the handiwork of a beauty loving god who wanted to show what he could do. But she had eyes, dark ones, that came from no heavenly workshop. In them there was a bit of temper, of daring and an invitation to come along that was irresistible.

If a man must lose his head over a woman, Maryella's type offers the utmost justification. If you had any curiosity and a wee bit of nerve, you made up your mind that you would have to find out whether to believe her eyes or the rest of her face.

Up to that afternoon I had been doing pretty well, too. Not having money in bales, I had started against Cooper with a considerable handicap. He worked short hours in his fathers office, which would eventually be his; while I plugged away for a salary—a good one, but nothing that would make the mint work overtime to keep up with me.

There is no use concealing what my job is. A good many people know already from having seen my name signed at th bottom of a column of alleged humor which I conduct daily for a syndicate of newspapers. Any one who has read my stuff knows that I work hard for my money, especially when I write verse.

Besides my syndicate work I do all the big stories for the Daily Mail which is the principal morning paper of our city. It is pleasant, because I do not have to be in the office correspondent, but I declined. Just because Irvin S. Cobb got back with all his arms and legs attached is no sign that they wouldn't be able to hit the next fat man that went over.

When I was thoroughly wet through so that it didn't make any difference what I did, I decided that I might as well start for home. It would be more comfortable to die of pneumonia in my own bed. So I got up and sloshed over to the car to get my coat which I had laid aside when the contest between me and Grandmother began.

Just by way of a passing expression of my feelings I gave teh crank a turn.

"Bang."

The engine started.

I stood in the rain a full minute longer relieving my mind before I mounted to my seat and steered Grandmother Page back over the sloppy roads to the city.

What was the use now?

NO! NO! NO!

Once when I was a sentimental youth, my soul was inexpressibly shocked when I heard of an inhuman fiend who had put out the eyes of a helpless little bird, in order to ascertain whether its song would be made sweeter thereby. And the brute puffed with pride over his heartless experiment!

A greedy theatrical manager conspired to break the heart of a beautiful girl who sang in his troupe in order to develop a patron which her cheery youth lacked. She walked into the trap—the heart was broken. The pathetic note came, and stayed. The human hog filed his coffers with the proceeds, satisfied with himself. The songs were more tender, more appealing to the emotions—brought a better price.

Bunyan wrote his immortal "Pilgrims Progress", second only to the Bible in popularity, while he was confined within a dismal half-lighted dungeon.

Our best collection—ten volumes or short stories came to me while the author was an inmate of one of our state penitentiaries.

Does it require privation, duress, suffering, to bring out the very best within the human soul? There are those that seem to think so—but its not the truth. Solitary confinement may find surcease in active mental occupation; but the human mind works best in an atmosphere of absolute freedom and content.

One of the most brilliant writers, I know of, who is blessing people everywhere with his superb talent today, has never, to my knowledge, known misfortune. He is wealthy, his mental poise perfect, his standing enviable. He is at his best in every particular, and could not be improved by any prison, or by the loss of any of his five senses. A way with the heatenish superstition that bitter duress sweetens the singing in God's kingdom.

As a variation for pictures or mirrors a very attractive bit of decoration for the bare wall space may be furnished by a wall cone used to hold flowers or trailing ivy.

In a Spanish or Italian room, the wrought iron sconce is effective; likewise the colorful pottery sconce typical of the period. In 18th Century rooms the wall pocket of painted tin or quaint old porcelain is most appropriate, while for modernistic rooms there are many delightful new designs in opaque or colored glass, metal or pottery.

These wall decorations are especially appropriate for the season which is just at hand.

KISSING

Opinions on kissing differ. First the health experts warned us all against it as a promulgator of colds and more serious illness.

Now science tells us that kissing is an exercise that makes for health by speeding up sluggish hearts and increasing the circulation of the blood and recently a group of chorus girls took part in a scientific kissing test which showed that the stimulus of kissing created a real response from a health standpoint.

We are waiting for the doctors to begin prescribing kisses, and for men and women to walk about with special doctor's certificates entitling them to spoon in public for the sake of health.

Men who haven't done so for years will begin kissing their wives with great ardor—what difference that will make in matrimony and the entire field of domestic relations!

And perhaps kissing will be made compulsory in the interests of science and health. What we are afraid of is that once this happens people will begin to lose interest in the time-honored game of kissing.

FELT BAD AFTER EATING

"FOUR YEARS ago, I suffered with heartburn and bilious indigestion. Whatever I ate disagreed with me. Gas on my stomach made me very uncomfortable. My tongue was coated and my color was bad. I needed a good laxative, and so my mother-in-law gave me some Black-Draught and told me to take it. I found it helped me very much, so I bought it for myself. Seems it was the very thing I needed. It is a fine family remedy, and I use it when I need something for constipation.

"I also give Black-Draught to my children whenever they need something for colds or upset stomachs. Our whole family takes Black-Draught."—Mrs. G. C. Leary, 103 North Alston Ave., Durham, N. C.
