To determine why the cotton fabrics wear out, the U. S. Bureau of Home Economics has made a laboratory test of 400 sheets discarded by a big Wash-

The result of the tests have been submitted to manufacturers of sheetting, who are trying to find ways to make sheets which will wear longer in the parts where these gave out.

Not a matter of great national importance, perhaps, but an illustration of the way in which scientific research by the Government aids manufacturers and incidentally helps to provide the public with better goods.

THE VALUE OF SOUND DESIGN

New Ford engine gives outstanding acceleration, speed and power without sacrificing reliability or economy

THE good performance of the Ford car, so apparent on every highway, is due largely to the sound mechanical design of the engine.

It has outstanding acceleration, speed and power, yet that is only part of its value to you. Greater still is the fact that it brings you all these features without sacrificing either reliability or economy.

That is the reason the Ford car has given such satisfactory service to millions of motorists all over the world and has been chosen by so many large companies that keep accurate cost figures. In every detail of construction it has been carefully planned and made for the work it has to do.

The design of the compression chamber is an important factor in the efficiency of the Ford engine. It is built to allow free passage of gases through the valves and to thoroughly mix the fuel by producing turbulence within the cylinders during compression. The spark thus flashes quickly through the whole fuel charge, resulting in quieter and more effective engine performance. Other factors are the direct gravity gasoline feed, the specially designed carburetor, the new hot-spot manifold, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves of larger diameter, statically and dynamically balanced crankshaft and flywheel, the simplicity of the electrical, cooling, lubrication, and fuel systems and accuracy in manufacturing.

CONTROL OF COLDS AND ROUP By W. C. Homeyer, Director Poultry Service Department, Universal Mills Fort Worth, Texas

in poutrly every year. Not only thru venting this disease as we are in an plying remedies after it is there, we could save a lot of money, time and Sanitation, ventilation, correct feeding and management are four very im portant factors in the control of colds in all poultry. When any one of them is neglected, you can look for trouble. Birds should never roost in a draught, especially in cold and wet weather. At the same time, plenty of fresh air is absolutely necessary. Noth ing will start a cold quicker than foul air. Study your poultry houses at night A burning match, tissue paper or a light feather will help locate draughts Remember, however, locating thte darught will not cure colds; stopping it is the thing that counts.

Sanitation cannot be stressed enough in controlling all poultry diseases. Even a cold germ can thrive better in a filthy place. Careful cleaning and disinfection of houses, yards, water fountains and feed hoppers pays real dividends. Disease germs will not stay in a clean place.

Summer colds often are nothing more than nutritional roup. Feeding a well balanced ration with plenty of good tender greens is all that is necessary to prevent this sort of cold. In fact, proper feeding means stronger and healthier birds, which enables them to resist colds as well as many other diseases.

At the first sign of colds, give the birds a dose of Epsom Salts, using from three-fourth to one pound per hundred mature birds. Use some good disinfectant in the drinking water to prevent the rapid spread of the disease There are anumber of good commercial preparations on the market for this purpose. Spraying the birds after they have gone to roost with a fine mist of a solution, especially prepared locally, use a mixture of one-half gallon water one-half gallon coal oil and four tablespoonsful turpentine. In fact, anything that helps to open the nostrils of the birds may be used. No remedy, however, will be effective unless the cause can be checked.
