"All Texans for all Texas"

Constructive Movements

This feature of this paper is supplied readers regularly in the belief that they are interested in matters of a constructive kind going on throughout Texas and that they want to keep informed as to Texas progress. Every movement that helps any part of the State is helpful to every citizen of Texas; everything harmful to any part harms the entire citizenship. Even in a State as large as Texas, whether they will or not, the people must keep step in the march of progress. Failing to progress they must lose, for when progress stops it does not stand still but goes backward. Texas is looking forward not backward, with immense projects under way and still greater undertakings being planned.

Trinity Navigation

In times past some have been inclined to smile at mention of the possibility of navigating the Trinity river to Fort Worth. Advocates of the project have all along stuck tenaciously to the movement despite ridicule and criticism. To canalize the river will cost the Federal government from $30,000,000 to $50,000,000, but the saving in freight rates to Texas and southern Oklahoma will be approximately $20,000,000 a year, according to estimates of experts who have studied the matter closely. There should be no hesitation by the government in financing a movement that gives promise of a return to the people of from 40 to 60 per cent a year. If undertaken now the work would give large relief to the unemployment situation.

Guadalupe Canalization

Another government project of perhaps equal importance is the canalization of the Guadalupe river to Cuero.

A survey of this project is under way, and according to figures already secured there would be millions of tons of freight available for such a canal and the saving to the people of Central and South Texas would be as much proportionally as would be saved to North and East Texas by the Trinity canalization. The cost of these undertakings should not stand in the way of the work, when it can be shown that the country will profit so largely.

Quick Action Wanted

If it is possible to get the Interstate Commerce Commission to hurry up consideration of the proposal of the Texas-Pacific to build a 333 mile line north from Big Spring to Lubbock, Amarillo and other points in the Panhandle, the people along the proposed route are going to have it done, having appointed committees for that purpose. The estimated expenditure will be about $13,000,000 and the advantages to a large Texas territory can hardly be approximated. Employment would be given to thousands of laborers who need the work as badly as that section needs the railroad.

Big Bond Issues

During the fiscal years ending August 31, the Attorney General's Department approved $88,229,000 in bonds of all kinds, these being mostly county, district and municipal bonds, the money to be spent for civic improvements. This represents but a part of the public work that is being done in Texas, from which business of all kinds is profiting.

Eagle Pass Irrigation

The $7,000,000 irrigation project near Eagle Pass is going forward rapidly, the excavation work being rushed by the use of several huge machines. When the canals reservoirs and power plant are completed and a supply of water is stored, the drought problem will be settled for a large area near Eagle Pass.

Big Truck Returns

The Lower Rio Grande Valley, during the season just closed, shipped 28,113 car loads of fruits and vegetables, from which it is estimated that $22,000,000 was received. That is a big business for the three counties that comprise "The Valley."

Not Begging Help

At least four Texas counties reported as "drought-stricken" have asked to be taken off the list seeking outside relief. They are Potter, Hemphill, Gray and Jeff Davis. They say that their crops are in good condition, and that they are not in need of aid and are not asking it. A number of counties listed as "suffering" have joined the applicants for relief merely to get advantage of the one-third reduction in freight rates in feedstuffs and cattle offered to distressed sections, and as adjoining counties are securing the reductions, these are not to be blamed much for seeking the same rates, even though it is a bit hard to be classed as "drought sufferers."

Drought Relief

So far the only "drought relief" received in Texas has been the reduction in freight rates on feed and livestock and the assurance that the Federal intermediary credit bank at Houston will supply "eligible incorporated banks, credit corporations, livestock loan companies and other financial institutions" with money to be loaned on "sound business policies" at not exceeding 2 and 2-1/2 per cent above the discount rate of the intermediate credit bank, which is now 4 per cent. Under some conditions the Red Cross will undertake to supply distressed farmers with seed for planting crops.

Feed Crop Helps

The least complaints of hard times are heard in those sections where sufficient feed crops have been planted and grown. The farmer with plenty of feed for stock, even though his cotton crop may be ever so short, finds himself "fixed" for temporary droughts likely to occur anywhere. Farmers should hedge against short feed crops by storing enough for at least a year. Fortunately fall rains in most parts of Texas are early enough to insure good winter pasturage either from native grasses or from sown grain fields.

Calf Draws Big Prize

According to the DeLeon Free Press a calf from DeLeon too young to be registered, drew $600 prizes at the Aurora, Ill., fair recently. It costs no more to feed prize winning animals than scrubs. The difference is in the breeding and the attention given them.

Truck Permits Canceled

Thirty truck permits were cancelled by the Railroad Commission recently because of failure to file insurance renewals. People who use the roads would be glad to have the permits cancelled of all trucks that persistently "hog" the center of the roads and force private cars to the road sides.

Civic Improvements

Point Isabel isn't much for size yet, but is going to be an important Texas port some day and will get ready for it by voting a $350,000 bond issue for construction of a sanitary disposal plant, city hall, jail, water works system, concrete reservoir, street improvements, sidewalks and parks—things without which small towns can't well grow into cities.

Making Tomatoes Pay

A Gonzales county farmer planted 16 acres of sandy land in tomatoes. The crop was grown and marketed in five months. He kept books and found that he had made $1,097 clear from the tomato crop, while carrying on other farming interests and operating a dairy at the same time.

Miss Blanch Newlin was in from her school Saturday and Sunday.

"You Can Make Your Own Average Electric Rate"

The statement that you can make your own average electric rate sounds ambiguous, doesn't it? But it isn't—it's perfectly simple.

The customer, through his acts—the amount of electricity he elects to use; the time and place at which he chooses to use it, and the duration of such use—governs the cost of service. It is only the law of Supply and Demand. The larger and the longer the demand, the cheaper the supply. Accordingly, the more service you elect to use, the less such service costs you.

For instance, under the new Home Comfort rate system, you are able to reduce your rate on entire electric consumption, after the first 45 kw (kilowatt-hours) per month, for a five room house, to 4c per kw—3c where service is also used for heating or cooking. This means that you can take advantage of the many labor, time and money-saving electrical appliances at but slight cost.

In the average five room home having complete electric service—lighting, cooking, heating and refrigeration—the new rate makes it possible to obtain service at an average net cost of less than 4c per kw, so it is not the top step which establishes the average net rate, but the manner in which you use the service available. Expressed in another way, the new rate reduces the average cost per kw for extra lighting more than 50%, provided you have also used service for other major household electric appliances. During the year 1929, the average rate for all domestic or household service sold by the West Texas Utilities Company was only 6.6c per kw, or 10.1c per day, per domestic customer.

Other household necessities, far more expensive, do not return half the comfort and enjoyment of complete electric service. The money you thoughtlessly spend daily for any one of the many luxuries of life amounts to more than the daily cost of electric service.

Investigate today the many new advantages, comforts and conveniences that can be brought to your home through the use of complete electric service. You will be surprised at its extreme economy. And remember—you can make your own average rate.

CLIMAX

...distressed over his younger half-brother's return to Europe from his military service. He had killed himself. The woman, Julie Farrow, was introduced to him by his friend, Bernard Pass and back. She tells him she has made a mistake, that she has made a mistake, that this Julie Farrow is not the one who ruined Rodney, but her cousin of the same name. Chitttenham is horrified. He calls at Julie's hotel and confesses that he had tried to win her love for purposes of revenge, believing her to be the other Julie.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY...

"I know it sounds a damnable insult, but you mustn't forget who I thought you were. A notorious woman—a woman who counted one man more or less as nothing. I wanted to make you care for me and then treat you as you had treated my brother. You told me you had never really cared for any man and so..."

He felt her sway beneath his hands. "You mean... it was all just a game?" she asked dazedly. Her eyes never left his flushed, agitated face. Chitttenham watched her, white-faced, tense.

Suddenly he found himself beside her, holding her unresponsive hand, pleading with her.

"Forgive me. For God's sake, say you forgive me. I shall never forgive myself. I'd give ten years of my life to wipe out the ghastly mistake. But it wasn't altogether my fault, Lombard."

She turned her head and looked at him.

"Can you blame Mr. Lombard because you wished to behave like a cad to a woman who had never done you any harm?"

Chitttenham flushed crimson.

"She sent my brother to his death. I had a right to make her pay."

"Your brother was as much of a coward as you are. The very stillness of her voice was like a knife-cut. 'Brave gentlemen both of you! The one to die and leave the stigma of his death upon a woman who never wanted him and had often told him so and the other to break a woman's whole life in order to satisfy his petty pride and the thing I suppose he calls his honour...'"

"Julie!" Chitttenham said passionately.

And then somehow, without either of them being conscious of having moved, she was in his arms, sobbing, her face buried in his shoulder, her arms about his neck.

"Oh, say you love me... say you really love me—" she pleaded wildly. "Oh do you really love me after all?" Chitttenham answered between clenched teeth:

"I do, God help me."

It was the truth; a truth of which he had never dreamed.

He turned her face up to him and kissed her lips.

"I love you—whatever happens, always remember that I love you—" he said hoarsely.

She freed herself from his arms, happy, she said, half sobbing still, wiped her eyes, and pushed back her hair.

"I hope nothing else is going to do. I think I've had enough for one day. I'm not used to crying. It doesn't suit me..."

He caught her hand, holding her fast.

"Wait... Julie there's something else; something..."

He drew her into his arms again, holding her fast for yet another moment, then he gently released her.

"I love you with all my heart and soul—" he said hoarsely. "But you will hate me when you know all the truth—hate me more than I can ever hate myself, Julie... My dear, I— Julie, I'm not free to marry you, Julie... I—"

Then Julie said—at least her lips said it, for no sound seemed to pass them: "You mean... you're married already?"

"Yes."

Suddenly she began to laugh; helpless hysterical laughter which she tried in vain to check or control.

"Julie..." Chitttenham said. But she went on laughing.

It was so funny, so intensely funny that she of all people, who had never cared immoderately for any one, and who had always dreaded caring, should so suddenly have been plunged into this tragedy.

Two days ago she and Chitttenham had never met, and now a whole lifetime of events bound them together. They had quarreled, loved, quarreled again, then kissed and been happy, and now the end had come.

Suddenly she spoke; she felt as if she were choking.

"Please go away."

"Not like this. I can't go like this. Julie, there must be some way out. I'll do anything... anything..."

She laughed with white lips.

"What can you do? I suppose you'll say that you are unhappily married, and ask me to be sorry for you? Perhaps you will even offer to divorce her?"

"She would be as glad for her freedom as I should," Chitttenham said curtly.

Julie laughed in his face.

"Julie..." He caught hold of her so roughly that she cried out. "Do you think you're going to be the only one to suffer?" he asked savagely. "Do you think it doesn't rebound on me too? Do you think I wanted to care for you, or for any woman? I set a trap for you and I've been caught in it myself."

She flung back her head and looked at him with blazing eyes.

"I wish I could kill you. I wish I could kill you," she panted desperately and was gone.

Giles Chitttenham's mother leaned back in her chair and applied an absurd lace handkerchief to her eyes.

Giles frowned and moved restlessly over to the window.

He had all a man's dislike for a scene, and for the past three days he had been treated to one every time he was in his mother's presence.

He found himself remembering the barely-furnished room at the hotel on the heights of St. Bernard—the isolated top-of the world room in which he had held Julie in his arms.

He had been forced to leave Switzerland without seeing her again, although he had made several attempts.

He had wired Sadie the name of the hotel at which he intended to stay, and he day following his arrival a letter came from her.

She did not even sign her name, and Chitttenham burnt the letter as soon as he had read it.

A thousand times since he left Switzerland he had thought of asking Sadie to divorce him. Chitttenham knew her well enough to guess that if she thought he wished to get rid of her she would never allow him to do so.

All these thoughts were passing through his mind as his mother went on wailing and complaining.

Giles turned round.

"I thought you were too miserable to wish to go anywhere," he said harshly. "I'm hanged if I know what the devil you do want—"

Then as she burst into tears he repented, and smiled faintly.

"I daresay you will be shocked," she said almost coquettishly. "But I should love to go out to dinner and then to a dance somewhere."

"Very well, we'll go out to dinner and a dance," he agreed. "Where would you like to go? The Savoy..."

"Oh, no!..." She was looking quite eager. "To a night club. I've never been to a night club, Giles, and that is a real one that is open all night, and where you eat eggs and bacon at three o'clock in the morning. It would be quite all right with you, wouldn't it?"

"It would be quite all right anyway," he answered amusedly. "These places are only what you choose to make them. Very well, what time do we start?"

"What time is it now?"

"Seven o'clock."

"Call for me at nine."

So he arrived in the dull, highly expensive street where his mother lived.

punctually at nine o'clock.

The door opened behind him, and his mother came in.

"I haven't kept you waiting, have I?" she asked gaily.

Giles turned round, then he rose slowly to his feet. He felt as if he was in the presence of a perfect stranger.

"It's... well, it's amazing!" he said at last. "You don't look a day more than thirty-five!"

"You dear thing!" She stood on tip-toe and kissed him gratefully. "So you won't mind dancing with your old mother to-night, Giles?"

"And where are we going?" Mrs. Ardon asked, as they drove away.

"I'm told the Faun is the place to go to," Giles said. "If you didn't like it we can go on somewhere else." But Mrs. Ardon adored it, and told him so every few minutes during the evening with varied extravagance.

Presently she saw some people she knew.

"Darling! you simply must be introduced! They're such sweet people. Doris Gardener is the girl—no, the one in the black frock and the scarlet shoes. She's twenty-two and she's just got divorced from her husband."

Giles looked at the girl with the scarlet shoes.

"Do you dance, Mr. Chitttenham?" Doris asked.

"Yes, May I have the pleasure?"

They went away together through the pillared partition to the room where the jazz band played. A sudden scream rose shrilly above the noise followed by a burst of hysterical laughter and the clatter of a falling glass.

"What on earth—" Chitttenham began.

Doris Gardener laughed.

"It's only Julie Farrow. I don't know what's happened to her lately. She was quite drunk here the other night. I wonder they didn't turn her out."

"Julie Farrow!" Chitttenham's voice was calm and indifferent, but he felt as if some one had tugged at his heart.

"Yes, do you know her? She used to be rather a friend of mine, but one has to draw the line somewhere. Just lately she seems to have taken leave of her senses."

Chitttenham's eyes were straining across the room in the direction from which the noise had arisen, but there was too much of a crowd for him to distinguish any one face.

"You mean the famous Julie Farrow I suppose," he submitted jaucially.

Doris glanced across the room.

"There she is—" she said. "In the green frock. No—over the other side, sitting on the arm of the chair laughing... That's what it all a cocktail laugh. Come along, I'm sure Essen and your mother are bored to tears with one another by this time."

But Chitttenham did not move. He was looking at the girl in the green frock—a green frock of which there seemed to be so very little with which to cover her white neck and arms. Her lips were painted a vivid red, and she was laughing noisily—immoderately—laughter which died away suddenly as she met his gaze across the room, and it was his Julie—the woman who had said she loved him, and with whom he had spent that never to be forgotten night on the top of the world.

Doris Gardener tugged at Giles Chitttenham's arm.

"Come along! If Julie sees me she'll want to join our party and I'm not anxious to have her. Oh, damn—I knew it would happen—"

She shrugged her shoulders resignedly as Julie suddenly detached herself from the noisy group she was with and threaded her way across the room.

Doris glanced at Chitttenham. "Do you know Mr. Chitttenham, Julie?" She made the introduction with obvious reluctance.

Julie had returned Chitttenham's for a bow with a careless nod.

"How are you? I've heard of you," she said casually. "Rodney Ardon's half brother, aren't you? Delighted to meet you."

Chitttenham's face hardened beneath its pallor. He felt as if, he were in the presence of a stranger who yet looked at him with well-beloved eyes.

"I think we have met before," he said with cool deliberation.

Julie raised her brows.

"Have we? Oh, surely not. I'm so good at remembering faces. Perhaps you're mistaking me for my cousin—the other Julie!" She laughed insolently. "That does happen sometimes I assure you," he said, turning to Doris. "Julie probably wouldn't be flattered if she knew, but all the same it happens occasionally. You may not believe me, Mr. Chitttenham, if you know my cousin that is—but a man once kissed me in the most impassioned manner thinking I was the other Julie! So very awkward, especially as he was a man whom I very much dislike."

"A disappointment to the man also perhaps," Chitttenham said bitterly, but she only laughed.

Felt Bad After Eating

"Before I started taking Black-Draught, three years ago, my health was very bad," writes Mrs. C. C. Carson, 945 Concord St., Beaumont, Texas. "I suffered constantly from constipation. I had headache when I got up in the morning, and I felt dull and sluggish. I hardly ate a meal that my food agreed with me. Frequently I would have gas on my stomach, and felt awful."

"I read about Black-Draught, and I thought it might help me. After I had taken it a little while, I felt much better. It relieves constipation. I keep it on hand so when I need a laxative I will have it. In the three years I have been taking it, I have never found anything as good for constipation."

Storms Like That Which Wiped Out Santo Domingo Occur Every Autumn
By Caleb Johnson

Four thousand known dead, with the back country still to hear from, an entire city destroyed, farm crops ruined and the entire population of a nation plunged from moderate prosperity into want—that is the record of the 1930 hurricane which swept over the Caribbean Sea on September 1 and struck the eastern end of the island on which are located the Republic of Haiti and the Dominican Republic.

The city of Santo Domingo, capital of the Dominican Republic, received the full force of the hurricane, which blew at a rate estimated at 160 miles an hour. The property damage in this city of 40,000 people is estimated at more than $50,000,000. Not one person in four escaped without physical injury, and complete enumeration of the dead is expected to show that in the city alone one out of every eight inhabitants perished.

The hurricane hazard is one which every inhabitant of the island which fringe the Caribbean Sea is exposed to every September, and which often menaces those living on the mainland along the coast of the Gulf of Mexico. Like the typhoons which ravage the China Sea and the tornadoes or "eyelones" which have done so much damage in our own Mississippi Valley, the high winds of the West Indies are unpreventable, though modern methods of weather reporting, especially by radio from ships at sea, usually give ample warning of their approach.

The most serious damage done by any hurricane of which there is a record was in 1900, thirty years ago this month, when the city of Galveston, Texas, stood directly in the path of a wind which rolled the Gulf of Mexico before it in a great tidal wave which drowned thousands who had escaped the direct fury of the storm. More than 6,000 persons perished in the Galveston disaster and, contrary to the general rule of such storms, this hurricane swung northward and eastward, crossing the Great Lakes and Newfoundland and across Iceland, doing great damage all along its path.

Like all of the other hurricanes, the Galveston storm started somewhere in the Atlantic Ocean, between the African coast and the Windward Islands. The origin of these storms is not definitely known, but they are supposed to be caused by the equatorial heat causing a column of heated air to rise so rapidly as to start a vertical circulation. When the heated air encounters cold air at a great height, condensation of water vapor begins, the falling water starts a downward circulation over a wide area and the whole body of air affected begins to revolve in a "counter-clockwise" rotation. The center of the disturbance travels westward at a comparatively slow rate, not more than 10 or 15 miles an hour, but the outer circumference of air revolves around this center at a speed up to 150 to 200 miles each side of the center there is a storm in which no ship can live.

Experienced sea-captains navigating hurricane-infested waters in the hurricane season try to run for the calmer center of the disturbance as soon as the falling barometer gives them warning of the approaching storm. As the storm always revolves in the same direction, it is easy to tell where the center lies.

Some years ago I voyaged into Caribbean waters on a ship whose captain had sailed those seas for forty years. The month was August, and I was impressed by the captain's solicitude over the barometer readings. "Too soon for hurricanes" I suggested.

"Not too soon to watch for them," he replied. "They usually occur in September, but they have been known in August, if the early Summer has been hot, and sometimes they occur in October."

Then he taught me the rhyming doggerel which sailors, who like to put everything into verse, have made up about the hurricane season:

June—too soon.
July—be shy.
August—you must
September—remember.
October—all over"

Twice in the past four years parts of the United States have been swept by West Indian hurricanes. The great hurricane of 1926, which struck the city of Miami, Florida, swept across the Florida peninsula and over the Gulf of Mexico to Pensacola. I was in Miami a few days after the event and saw the devastation which had been wrought there and in the surrounding country. The modern build-

Construction to be Started on New W. O. W. Chapel and Bird Sanctuary
Carillon of 25 Chimes in Beautiful Tower of $150,000 Building on Woodmen Hospital Grounds at San Antonio, Texas

This is the architect's drawing of the $150,000 Woodmen of the World Chapel and Bird Sanctuary to be built at San Antonio, Tex., on the W. O. W. Memorial Hospital grounds.

Construction will be started immediately on the $150,000 Woodmen of the World Chapel and Bird Sanctuary on the grounds of the Woodmen of the World Memorial Hospital at San Antonio, Texas, President W. A. Fraser announced today. The chapel will be built along similar lines to the Bok Tower and Bird Sanctuary located in Florida. As part of the chapel there will be a tower which will have a carillon of twenty-five chimes.

"This will be a universal church," said President Fraser. "Regardless whether a person be a Protestant, Jew or Catholic, he or she can hold services in this church," said President Fraser. The membership of the Woodmen of the World is made up of people of all religions and nationalities and the church must be universal in order to serve our membership."

The chapel will be located on a 250 acre tract within a short distance from the Woodmen of the World hospital. Patients will be encouraged to go to chapel and worship God according to their own religions.

"The chapel and tower will be a unique architectural design," said Mr. Fraser. The outside will be of Indiana limestone. Dark oak with large ceiling beams will be used in the interior. The main stained-glass window of the church will be a production of Tiffany of New York.

The chapel will also have a patio with a beautiful fountain, and a bird house, according to Mr. Fraser.

In Mr. Fraser's opinion, this chapel and carillon tower will be one of the most beautiful ever designed. "It will not be large, spanning only two hundred, but the beauty will be there." He said that it will be one of the show places of Texas.

A special landscaping is now being carried on and in the bird sanctuary will be various types of birds collected from various parts of the world.

Mr. Fraser said that the chapel and the bird sanctuary will be a memorial to the departed membership of the Woodmen of the World.

THEY DARED AND WON

The only feat in aviation which compares with Col. Lindbergh's solo flight from New York to Paris is the return of the French airmen, Dieudonne Coste and his flying mate, Maurice Bellonte, who flew from Paris to New York. It is not detracting from their glory to point out that there were two of them, to relieve one another at the controls, while Lindbergh flew alone. Their feat was more hazardous, since the storm danger was greater and the wind was not in their favor.

Everyone who admires courage will endorse President Hoover's words in greeting the French flyers at the White House. Their achievement, he said, "demonstrates again the high courage of mankind. It gives heart to all of us in whatever tasks engage us for it proves that there are no limits to the courage of man and there are no limits to what that courage can accomplish."

No limits to what courage can accomplish! Is there not inspiration in that for faint-hearted age as well as for daring youth? It is true—we must believe it in the light of what courage has accomplished in the past. Courage backed by skill and reinforced by judgment, can conquer the world. I has never failed to conquer when I buttressed. As we grow older we lose some of the courage of youth. We flatter ourselves that we have gained by judgment, but have we? Did not Lindbergh, did Coste and Bellonte, judge their chances more accurately than the oldsters did who did not dare their flights? And as for skill, if that is not acquired in youth it will never be gained.

One reason the world does not progress faster is that too much control of its affairs is vested in those who have not grown their courage. "Safety first" may pile up dollars but it does

MOTTOES

UNDER the glass top of the desk an interesting New Yorker I saw a bit of white paper with these words: "The dog barks, but the caravan passes on."

Taken in connection with the man's character and career, the sentence is revealing.

He has been barked at plenty, but he has proceeded. He has done his work, built a great enterprise, created employment for thousands of people. The barking long since became faint and very far behind.

The First National Bank of New York is presided over by a white whiskered gentleman of more than eighty, named George F. Baker. When his name gets into the newspapers it is usually because some stock in which he is known to hold a large and permanent interest has advanced a hundred points in a week and added several million dollars to his fortune.

A friend of mine visited the bank on business, and came back with this sentence:

"The vision to see them; the courage to buy them; the patience to hold them."

Whether it came from Mr. Baker or not, it is his philosophy, and the secret of his fortune.

In Boston there is another old man, perhaps the most unselfish human being I have ever known. His whole life has been devoted to service to the city's poor, and the look in his eyes is a benediction. I asked him once whether he is worried about the future. "You give away all you earn," I said. "What will you live on when you are too old to work?"

For answer he pulled a slip of paper out of his pocketbook, and passed it over to me.

"Trust in the Lord and do good. So shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed."

That, he said, is a promissory note from the Owner of the Universe. On and to and over the property on which same may be located, for any and all purposes necessary for the maintenance and operation of the same, or in the removal of the same therefrom.

Section 6: Proper sizes and methods of construction shall conform to the following sizes which will render their ordinance effective. Pit must be at least 4 feet deep, 21-2 feet wide, sloping to a width of 2 feet at the bottom, with a length of at least 31-2 feet.

Section 7: All sanitary privies in said City of Eldorado, Texas, and area of police jurisdiction thereof, shall be kept in a clean condition at all times, and lids closed at all times when not in use, and so used that all excreta deposited therein will fall in the pit provided. Such pit shall be used only for the purpose of a privy and no wash water, garbage, or other refuse matter other than human excreta shall be deposited therein.

Section 8: In case the pit should cave at any time, it must be repaired promptly by the City of Eldorado, Texas. All repairs necessary to make the pit fly-proof shall be made when ever needed, by the City of Eldorado, Texas.

Section 9: All privies existing or maintained in the City of Eldorado, Texas, or area of police jurisdiction thereof, after the date on which this ordinance takes effect, which do not conform to the requirements shall be that promise he has lived for seventy years, and he has confidence that it will continue to be good.

Each of these three men has continued in the world a long time, and paid a price for experience. Each is quite different from the others. Yet, from their three mottoes one might evolve something in the way of a philosophy.

"If you are going to do anything you must expect criticism. But it's better to be a doer than critic. The doer moves; the critic stands still and passes by."

"You must believe in something—in yourself, in the country, in God. You must have courage to back that belief with your money and your life, and patience to wait for fulfillment."

This is old stuff, you say. And I answer that everything important is old stuff. Love is old stuff. Building a home is old stuff. Becoming a father is old stuff.

But all old things become thrillingly new as each man discovers them for himself.

HISTORY THREE

Under the supervision of Mr. Holt the American History class is making rapid progress. The study of England and the first colonies is made more interesting by outside reports and "pop quizzes." As each chapter is finished a completion test is given. These tests are in a series of twenty Current events are to be supplied by means of the "Literary Digest" this year. This year's class is to continue to add to the excellent Museum built up by past history classes. This Museum is of the best and contains some very interesting and valuable old relics.

SPANISH ONE CLASS

The Spanish students seem to like the subject very well, and it being new and are hereby declared a nuisance, dangerous to the public health and the City of Eldorado, Texas, shall proceed to abate such nuisance in accordance with the law, or in accordance with the ordinances of said City of Eldorado, Texas.

Section 10: The local Health or Sanitary Officer of the City of Eldorado, Texas, or his duly authorized assistants shall personally inspect all privies in the City of Eldorado, Texas, and area of police jurisdiction thereof. The Health Officer or duly authorized assistant is hereby empowered to enter all premises in the discharge of his duty at any reasonable hour during daylight.

Section 11: No person shall deface, destroy, or unlawfully remove the seal of the City of Eldorado, Texas, from any privy, or privy building which has been officially sealed for non-payment of rental.

Section 12: Any person, firm, or corporation who violates or refuses, or fails to comply with any of the provisions of this ordinance in the City of Eldorado, Texas, and area of police jurisdiction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $100.00.

Section 13: All ordinances or parts of ordinances in conflict with this ordinance are hereby repealed.

and different makes it very interesting. Some seem to think it easy and are not studying very much but most likely they will begin before long. All the pupils like the new Spanish teacher Miss Meyer very much. It seems that same have the opinion that the Sophomore class is hard to control but in the Spanish one class there is very little misbehavior. The class is progressing very rapidly and have learned a number of sentences and words in Spanish, but the trouble enters when they try to speak it. There is a large class this year of about thirty four pupils partly due to the failures last year and there are a number of new pupils besides the Sophomore class. They feel certain that they will know a good deal of Spanish by the end of the year.

BOZO'S BOOKLET OR THE DIARY OF A FRESHMAN
 Sept. 8, 1930

Well, I went to school today because it was the first day of school and I heard that ever body was supposed to be there. Some boys told me bad tales about what they did to the fish so I have been on the lookout all day.

When I got up-stares, a guy that said he was a senur, er something, told me that if I didn't have a permit to come up there I'd have to go back and get one from the man out there in front who rang the bell. Of course I didn't have one so I went back and asked the feller for one and he told me he had played out of permits but that beings it was me, he'd let me go on if I'd go around to the back and go up. Well I did and after climbin' through a winder a bunch of kids was there and everyone of them was laughin' fit to kill and when I asks them what's they laughin' about they just laughed harder, so I went on thinkin' how goofy some people are and mighty glad that I'm in the eighth grade which is a part of high school.

I went over on the east side of the big room where lots of boys and girls was and set down. A teacher came in and pointed to a bunch of squares with writin in them and asked was ther any conflicts here, so I not knowing what that was turned around and asked a guy behind me and when he said it meant fights I started to pull out but just then the teacher said pass so I broke in a run and started down the stairs, but a feller yelled at me and told me to come back so I decided that there was nothin dangerous about it so went back up and follered the rest. All these began to part and I didn't know which ones to foller, but I decided to foller the big ones because I figgered they ought to know where they was going better than them little ones. Well when I got in there the teacher asked me where I was from and I said I was from the country about ten miles out. Well, I thought them big bozos had more sence than they showed then, cause they busted out and laughed at somethin' again. The teacher told me to go to the room strait across from there so I did, and from then on the rest of the day I follered the little folks and I believe they got more sence than them big folks cause I didn't have to go back a single time the rest of the day and they didn't cut loose and laugh all of a sudden either.

Another teacher showed me where to set in the big room but when I got up and came back I couldn't find it to save my life and had to ask a teacher where it was.

Gee I sure was glad when they said we could go home cause I sure was hungry, and believe m I'm gonna take a biskit in each pocket to school tomorrow.
