Summertime in McLean seems to be the traditional time for family reunions. If your family is having a get-together, be sure to get a list of everyone's names and where they are from and bring it to us. Our readers seem to enjoy knowing where different family members are, and we're always glad to have the story.

Like many other people, we have been trying to plan our vacation. We wanted to combine a visit to family members with our trip, but getting there is proving to be a problem. One of my brothers moved to Florida almost two years ago, and I have not seen him since. Since the two of us are very close, I have been determined for several months to figure out a way to get to Florida to see him and his family.

My problem is that I hate to fly. Now, as those of you who read my column know, my fear of flying is not just a small insignificant reticence to get on a plane. Even talking about flying is enough to send me to the nearest bathroom with nervous diarrhea, so I have been trying to think of an alternative way to get the several thousand miles to Ft. Lauderdale.

I can't take enough days away from the paper to have enough time to drive to Florida, plus the idea of being in a car that many hours is not appealing at all.

Last week, my brother jokingly suggested that I come by Amtrak.

I thought I had found the perfect solution. I love to ride on trains, my daughters had never been on a long train trip, and even if it took several days, I decided that the scenery would be beautiful and the experience of riding a train would be worth it.

Well, guess what? You can't even get there from here by train!

After checking with several travel agents, I found that there are two ways to get to Florida on Amtrak.

We could drive to Dallas (not too bad), take a train to San Antonio, change trains to New Orleans, get on a bus to Jacksonville, Fla., and then take Amtrak to Ft. Lauderdale. YUK! OR drive to Dodge City, Kansas, take a train to Chicago, change trains to Lima, change trains to Philadelphia, change trains to Baltimore, and then go to Ft. Lauderdale, with a couple of overnight stays in the train station, and three days on the road! Super YUK!

I am really disappointed because I was looking forward to that train ride. I'm surprised that Amtrak does not have more connecting lines than that in this part of the country, with our influx of people into the Sunbelt.

Surely there are other nuts like me who hate to fly. At any rate, we will not be able to go by train.

Invasion of the Stink Bugs!

McLEAN WAS INVADED Saturday by millions of these little green bugs. (Photo by Linda Haynes)

McLean Invaded By Green Stink Bugs!

The intersection of Interstate 40 and Main Street in McLean early Saturday morning looked like a scene from a horror movie called "The Invasion of the Stink Bugs!"

Merchants opening their stores early Saturday morning found the grass and weeds outside their stores literally crawling with the varmints.

The plague seemed to be confined to the immediate area near the spotlight at the intersection, as no bugs were seen more than a block in either direction.

Tentatively identified as the Southern Green Stink Bug by Gray County Extension agent Joe Van Zandt, the small round bugs were busily munching everything green in

Mushrooms Removed From Local Grocery Stores

Grocers in McLean have removed from their shelves several four ounce cans of mushroom stems and pieces which are suspected of containing botulism toxin. The small cans, sold under the Shurline label in the McLean area, have been the subject of nationwide recall by Oxford Royal Mushroom Products, Inc. of Kelson, Penn., the canner of the food. According to officials of the company five million cans under 30 different brand names have been distributed in this area.

The federal drug and food administration (FDA) has advised persons with four ounce cans of mushrooms at home to look on the lids for the letters DK on the top line, followed by numbers from 101 to 130, or followed by numbers from 101 to 118. On the bottom line would be the letter P or LP, followed by a 1 or a 2.

their path. Bank custodian Earl Riley came down town early and sprayed the recently completed American National Bank Memorial Park to prevent damage.

By the middle of the afternoon, the pests had disappeared. Van Zandt told The McLean News that he did not know where the bugs could have come from. "We generally don't have a whole lot of that kind of bug here," he said. He said the bugs could have hatched out near where they were found as the bug lays its eggs in clusters of at least 100 and sometimes several hundred. He said the bugs were plant feeders, and would eat cotton bolls, tomatoes, beans, or peas. Gardeners in the area should take precautions and spray their crops with a good general insecticide, he said, if they spot an infestation of the bug.

Kincannon Wins All-Rodeo Second

As the dust finally settled on the three-day, fourteen-event finals in Amarillo last week, one McLean competitor trotted off with high honors. Billy Kincannon, a 1981 graduate of McLean High School, turned up with a much coveted second place buckle for his all-rodeo average in the steer wrestling event. Kincannon took the award with times of 14.449, 5.805, and 19.997 during the June 4-6 finals of the Tri-State High School Rodeo Association.

Others participating from McLean were Dusty Sanders and Greg Gabel. Gabel, who

Board Approves Remodeling

Members of the McLean Independent School District Board of Trustees met for three hours Monday night and decided to let bids for extensive repairs to the school gymnasium, approved a new insurance policy for school facilities, heard results of the TABS tests, hired a teacher, and approved an amended budget.

Jim Doche, representing a firm of architects, presented the board with a list which they had requested, enumerating repairs for the gymnasium and giving estimated costs. "I believe this repair would be a wise use of taxpayers dollars," Doche said when he presented the plan to the board.

The board voted to publish a call for bids on the repair, with the bids to be opened at a special board meeting at 5 p.m. June 30. The list of repairs includes placing girders between existing girders, repairing existing sub-floor, removing existing floor and placing 3/4 inch plywood over sub-floor, installing parquet playing floor and installing adequate floor surface under the bleachers, installing vinyl floorings in restrooms, dressing rooms, concession stands, and vestibule, repairing dressing rooms, rest rooms, concession stand, and vestibule, and installing new lighting.

Jane Simpson, of the Jane Simpson Insurance Agency, discussed with the board the feasibility of changing insurance policies on the facilities of the school. The board voted to approve a Multi-Peril policy, which according to school business manager Shirley Johnson, has a higher value on the facilities and also has vandalism insurance.

Superintendent Jim Rutherford presented the results of the Texas Assessment of Basic Skills test which was administered to all McLean third, fifth, and ninth graders in February of this year. (See related story on this page)

The board voted to approve a five-year plan to fulfill obligations for school accreditation.

The board hired Bobbi Stalls to teach next year, and approved a salary of state schedule plus $500. The board has earlier in a special called session May 22 accepted the resignations of ag teacher Charles Roberts and school secretary Wanda Smith.

The board approved ordering a new 36 passenger school bus.

Attending the meeting were board members Jim Allison, Howard Gipson, Darryl Herndon, James Hefley, Lloyd Hunt, and J.C. McAnear; board member Iony Smitherman was absent.

Others attending were Superintendent Jim Rutherford, principals Ron Cummings and Dorman Thomas; business manager Shirley Johnson; Jane Simpson; and Jim Doche.

McLean Students Show Improvement

McLean students showed an overall improvement in math, reading, and writing, according to results of the Texas Assessment of Basic Skills released this week by Superintendent Jim Rutherford. The TABS test, mandated by Texas state law for all third, fifth, and ninth graders, was given last year throughout the state.

The McLean ninth grade, tested in 11 areas of math, showed 24 students had achieved mastery and 12 had not, giving 67 percent mastery. In reading, 28 students, or 78 percent of the class, were at mastery level. In writing, 32 out of the 36 or 89 percent were at mastery level. Those figures showed an increase in all three areas. The freshmen last year scored 55 percent mastery in math, 65 percent mastery in reading and 50 percent mastery in writing.

Rutherford emphasized that "mastery" simply means that the student has achieved minimum skills in various areas.

In the fifth grade, with 18 students tested, 14 showed mastery in math (or 78 percent); 94 percent or 17 showed mastery in reading; and 100 percent showed mastery in writing. These scores also show an increase over last year, with last year's fifth graders showing 78 percent mastery in math, 73 percent mastery in reading, and 100 percent mastery in writing.

This was the first year for testing third graders. Tested in 10 separate areas of math, 13 of the 22 tested (or 59 percent) showed mastery in math; 96 percent (23 out of 24) showed mastery in reading; and 81 percent (21 out of 26) showed mastery in writing.

Rutherford said that the tests were designed by the state to show each school what its areas of weakness were so that the school could emphasize those areas. He said that the tests are designed to show the minimum skills students in those grades should possess. The ninth grade test is called an exit level test. Rutherford said, because it measures the minimum amount that a youngster should know when he graduates from high school. By administering the test on the freshman level, schools can determine a student's weakness and have three years to correct that weakness before graduation.

The tests are composed of various phases of mathematics, reading, and writing.

Rutherford said that only the summary of the scores of the classes would be released to the public. He emphasized

On the bottom line would be the letter P or LP, followed by a 1 or a 2.

Should you find one of these cans of mushrooms, the can should be returned to the place of purchase, according to Puckett's manager Cliff Jones, and Wilson's manager Billie Kingston. The mushrooms should not be opened or eaten, they stressed.

The warnings came after tests by the FDA and the National Food Processors Association, showed that several cans contained the botulism toxin, a poison that can sometimes cause the fatal botulism disease.

Jones told The McLean News that they found several cans of whole mushrooms not the suspected stems and pieces. "I had the proper code numbers, and had pulled those cans from distribution, too. 'We'd rather be safe than sorry,'" he said, "so we will just hold those cans until the FDA tells us what to do."

OPINIONS

Should Reunion Be Changed ?

The time may be right to do some changing regarding the Ex-Student Reunion in McLean. For the last several years, the meetings have been scheduled for every two years during the McLean 66 Roundup Rodeo. A few years ago the reunion was changed from a fall date at a football game, to the current summer date. This was done to accommodate ex-students who could more easily plan their vacations around the homecoming date.

But, in the opinion of many McLean residents who are ex-students, there needs to be another change now. The reunion needs to be changed from every two years, to every five years, many think. With the reunions so close together, most exes who live far away make little effort to come each time, and so they take a chance of missing those they want to see. Also the ex-students who are residents of McLean have born the burden of doing all the work, all the planning, and sometimes paying most of the bills for the reunions. Most of them would enjoy the reunions more if they were held every five years, instead of two.

Although I am not an ex-student, I am an ex-teacher at McLean High School, and as such I have helped with the reunion each time. I have heard many McLean residents talk about the approaching reunion with dread, and that's a shame.

The best solution to all these problems is to schedule the meetings further apart. Local exes will have more enthusiasm for the hard work involved, and our out-of-town friends will be more likely to come each time.

Any of you exes want to propose this idea at the business meeting in the park after the barbecue dinner? Then let the majority of the students decide.

Anyone of your brilliant people out there have a suggestion as to how I can get to Florida without crawling on those hated planes? If you do, call me soon, because my brother is going to call again anyway now, and I will have to give him some definite plans about how I am coming.

Oh, I forgot to tell you. The ironic thing about the quandary is that my brother James moved to Florida to take a new job...selling commuter airplanes!

Be sure you read the details of The McLean News Summer Recipe Contest!

This is our first time to try this contest, and we're very excited about our prizes. Even the recipes that don't win, will probably be published eventually in our "In The Kitchen" column.

We hope we have many, many entries, so go through your recipe box, and submit your favorite in each of the three categories. Check the rules listed with the entry blank, and send those recipes in today.

Pampa Doctor Approved As Board Certified Surgeon

The American Board of Surgeons last week announced approval of Dr. Alfredo Juan of Pampa as a Board Certified Surgeon, one of the highest professional standards in the medical profession.

Norman Knox, administrator at Highland General Hospital said Juan received notification of his certification almost one year to the date he joined the medical staff at HGH.

"For me, this has been a long-time personal goal,"

Juan said. "It is just a personal accomplishment."

The examinations conducted by the American Board of Surgeons do not come easily; with about a 50-50 success rate for the written qualifying exam; and a tough 75 percent failure rate for the oral certifying exams.

Juan becomes the second HGH Medical Staff Member certified by the American Board of Surgeons. Dr. Vijay Mohan received similar honors last year.

Professionally, it does not make a great deal of difference here, Juan said, since there are many well qualified physicians doing surgery here in Pampa. "It is just my personal achievement of a personal goal," he said.

In a much larger city, surgical privileges are sometimes only extended to surgeons who are board certified, but in smaller communities, such privileges are extended after the physician displays abilities in the particular field of specialty.

Originally from Manila, in the Philippines, Juan completed medical school at the University of Santo Tomas, and did his internship at Brooklyn Jewish Hospital in New York. He completed a five-year surgical residency program at the Catholic Medical Center in New York, where he served one year as the chief surgical resident.

He also completed post graduate medical studies at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York, and in Cook County Medical School in Chicago.

dedicated to deceased member of the auxiliary, will be on permanent display in the building.

Listed on the plaque were Bernice Nachosan, Ola Henderson, Audie Stewart, Linda

Ross, Viola Glass, Phyllis Edmiston, Laura Cupell, Freda Bailey, and Grace Windom.

The post and auxiliary met in joint session for the presentation and memorial service. Lavern Brooks presented the

Exes Will Have Busy Weekend Beginning June 19

According to plans formulated by the McLean Ex-Students Reunion Association, the biennial Ex-Students Reunion will be a time of visiting with old classmates, eating good barbecue, listening to exes and others play good music, viewing arts and crafts, and enjoying a special exes party.

Mary Dwyer, president of the Ex-Students Association, said that the only disappointing thing about the reunion was the number of letters that were returned because of old addresses. She urged all exes to register and be sure to give a current mailing address. "We have gotten so many pre-registrations that it's very exciting at this point," Mrs. Dwyer said, "but, we've wasted a lot of postage on ex-students who have moved and not told us their current address."

The Homecoming activities will begin June 19 at 2 p.m. with early registration and visiting at the Senior Citizens Building in McLean. Exes will go to the McLean High School for registration Saturday morning, and then go to the park for the barbecue dinner.

At 11 a.m. the visitors can listen, go, or participate in, a musical talent show. J.T. Trew is in charge of this musical, and he has invited musicians to play. Any ex who would like to play should come prepared and inform Mr. Trew of his presence.

Following the barbecue dinner, the exes will elect officers for the Ex-Students Association for the 1983 reunion. Class meetings are scheduled for the afternoon.

Ex-students will then attend either the McLean 66 Roundup Rodeo at 8 p.m. or a special ex-students dance at the McLean Country Club at 9 p.m.

Mrs. Dwyer said that this is an ex-student party, and that there will be no dress code enforced. All McLean and area residents are invited to bring their arts and crafts to the McLean Elementary Cafeteria for an art show in conjunction with the Homecoming Celebration. The craft show is scheduled for 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. June 20 but exhibitors are urged to have their materials at the cafeteria by 8 a.m. to set up displays, said Clara Hupp, member of the Swap-A-Hobby club, one of the sponsors of the group.

She said each person will be responsible for showing and caring for his or her work.

Hosting the arts and crafts show are the Swap-A-Hobby club and the Pioneer Study Club.

Leslie Skipper, Chuck Stewart Marry May 30 In McLean

Leslie Darlene Skipper and Charles Edward Stewart were united in marriage Saturday evening, May 30 at First Baptist Church in McLean. The Rev. Buell Wells officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Skipper. Stewart is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E.M. Stewart, also of McLean.

The bride wore a full-length gown of white silk organza, styled by Bijoy. Venice lace formed a wide scalloped Queen Anne neckline and covered most of the empire bodice, cascading over onto the skirt, which was full. The skirt also featured a deep ruffle on the front and half ruffles spaced up the skirt at intervals. A wide ruffle bordered the hem, extending to a chapel-length train.

To complement the gown, the bride chose a styled hat by Bridal Millinery. It featured a small brim which was turned up on the right side and was fastened by a silk rose and small flowers.

Maid of honor was Rozanna Eck. Bridal attendants were Missy Billingsley, Susie Billingsley and Donna McAnear. Best man was Eldon Mason. Groomsmen were Jay Dee Fish, Joe Mercer and Randy Stewart, brother of the Groom.

Candlelighters were Carla Skipper, sister of the bride, and Deborah Bernard, the bride's cousin, from Canyon.

CONTROL FAMILY INFLATION

Feel poorer in spite of earning the highest income of your life? You're not alone—inflation has cut most families' buying power.

And, while inflation has pushed incomes up to higher levels, those wage-hike dollars are taxed at a higher rate than pre-wage-hike dollars.

One solution to the problem is controlling family inflation by carefully managing family resources. Managing family resources takes three major steps: evaluate family level of living and make necessary changes, extend the family's material resources and increase resources.

Evaluate your levels of living—as a family. You may want to change your lifestyle by learning to live with fewer goods and services.

Most families have closets and attics full of items that are never used—or put away for that someday that never comes. Sell these items, give them away or discover new uses for them, lessening the desire to constantly purchase new items.

Some families are trying to simplify their lives by learning new ways of "making do"—to keep them from doing without. To simplify and live with fewer material goods does not necessarily mean lowering the quality of life—often less is more. For example, learn to use the things you already own instead of wanting to buy new things. Also, look to friends and family for entertainment by organizing round-robin dinner parties. In addition, conserve as much energy as possible to make a positive impact on your budget.

Extend, or expand, the family's material resources by increasing your consumer skills for maintaining, using, repairing, storing, conserving, and recycling. Learn simple repair skills from books and pamphlets to lessen your dependence on "experts." Make a habit of reading appliance instruction booklets to learn how you can extend the life of your appliances by caring for them properly.

Consider life expectancy of a product as well as the price before buying. When buying, learn to be a wise consumer, recognizing quality in goods and service. Shop sales too, and be sure items meet a real need rather than an imaginary one. Share a ride with friends or co-workers. Carpool to work, and go shopping with a neighbor.

Increase family resources by doing many tasks yourself—sewing or gardening, for example. Creative human production, such as the above skills, actually will increase your family's spending power by freeing money formerly spent for clothing or food. All family members can share in many of the skills, particularly sewing and gardening.

Some families increase their resources by bartering or exchanging items, time, skills and energy with others. For example, you might till your neighbor's garden in exchange for homegrown vegetables or babysitting services. Or you can swap items seldom used or not needed with friends and neighbors—especially children's and maternity clothes. WATER-CALORIE FREE. CHEAP

Water is the quiet and unappreciated nutrient—and it's calorie free and cheap. People take water for granted, yet it is vital for life. We tend to be more concerned about calories, protein, fat and vitamins and minerals in our diets, but without water, life would not exist.

Of course, most people know that, but it's important to say it from time to time to remind ourselves that knowing is one thing, acting on the knowledge is another. Many people do not drink enough water. Adults and children require six to eight cups (eight ounces each) of water each day.

Water is needed by each cell of the body. It transports nutrients to the cells and waste products from them. It lubricates joints, and during preparation, water cools the body. Drinking water isn't the only way to meet water—many foods provide much of the water needed each day. Soups, stews, fruit juices, milk, coffee and watermelon supply much of the daily water requirements. Remember, too, that more water than usual is needed during heavy perspiration in a hot, dry climate and during illness that includes fever or diarrhea.

With the high level of interest in the economy today, value is placed on things—self-worth, people do not have the initiative to meet and solve economic crisis that affect the entire society's standard of living.

Attaining self-worth is indeed similar to business and or financial success—all are directly related to goal setting, decision making and achievement goals.

Some components of self-worth, like business include: Sense of identity Sense of integrity Sense of direction, and Significant purpose.

As a bonus of continued successes in the process of building self-worth, these additional elements are created: adventure, stimulation, challenge, self-respect, concern for others, and feeling of personal security and freedom from the numerous fears many people suffer.

Self-worth of family members, especially the primary adults in the family, affects the success of the entire family—and that of its individual members. How people look at family success, sometimes termed "an abundant life," is highly variable, of course, but self-worth feeling play the major role.

Obviously, self-worth plays a dominant role in a family's success regarding unity, enjoyment as a family group, and levels of self-satisfying lifestyles that each member eventually reaches, but self-worth also plays a key role in the family's economic success.

In looking at family economics, it's interesting to observe the cycle of economic well being for different stages of family life today. The per-capita-income peak for most families occurs when the family head is age 55-65, a time when most children have left home.

of an occupation is viewed by a person as having prestige and value, the more likely he will identify it as an activity of self and put more effort into the job.

A dollar-value can be placed on heads-of-households, contributions to the market place that dual-career families make, and the value of women in the labor force. On the other hand, no dollar value can be attached to self-worth. Without self-confidence and feelings of worthiness, though, people cannot become a contributing element to a society that is trying to fight inflation and improve the quality of living for all individuals and families.

Dog Disease On Increase In Texas

AUSTIN--Spring's rise in temperatures has brought with it an increase in the incidence of canine parvovirus, according to the findings of limited survey by the Texas Veterinary Medical Association.

"The survey shows an apparent correlation between warmer weather and the number of dogs infected," said Dr. Ben Johnston, TVMA president.

"Much of the increased incidence is possibly due to the increased movement of dogs during the warmer weather. Close contact between animals is the likely factor in the spread of infection. Cleanup and sanitation are crucially important, since the disease appears to spread principally through contact with contaminated feces."

"Vaccination is still the best protection," Johnston stressed, and this year, unlike last year, there should be an ample supply of vaccine."

He also said, "Runs, cages, food bowls and other equipment should be thoroughly disinfected with a diluted chlorine bleach. One part bleach in 30 parts water is effective, even though the disease is extremely resistant to heat and many disinfectants."

Another possibility being studied is one of a cynical recurrence of the disease. Agreeing with Dr. Johnston about the correlation with temperature, Dr. Konrad Eugster of the Texas Veterinary Medical Diagnostic Laboratory added, "Over the past two years, a cycling of the disease over a three-to-four month span has been noted in certain localities. We're watching that, too."

Post Office Pushes Change

Postmaster Frank Simpson says the Postal Service is now launching a new effort to get change of address kits into circulation. A direct mail campaign is asking commercial organizations such as truck rental firms, moving companies and real estate firms and others who deal with people on the move, to help distribute the Postal Service's handy Change of Address kit.

The kit contains convenient cards for notifying the postmaster, publishers, businesses, doctors, state and local agencies and utilities. The kit also includes a checklist of groups and individuals to be contacted prior to a move.

The direct mailing campaign to commercial organizations includes a two-part reply card which firms can use to order supplies of the kits from their local post office.

"We know that peak moving dates fall between June and August, and as we approach this season, it is important for anyone planning to move to use one of the kits. All they have to do is ask for one, either from one of the participating service companies or at the post office," Postmaster Simpson says.

"We are all aware of the need to economize and seek more efficient ways to use our resources," Frank Simpson says.

Gray County Gardening

By Joe VanZandt

Elm trees, particularly Siberian elms, can be severely damaged by elm leaf beetles unless control measures are taken.

Adult elm beetles begin mating and laying eggs in spring. An adult beetle is 1/4 in. long and yellowish to olive green with a dark stripe along the outer edge of each wing cover.

Eggs of the beetle are yellowish-orange and spindle-shaped and are laid in groups of 5 to 25 on the underside of leaves. In a few days, eggs hatch into small, black, hairy larvae (worms) which skeletonize the tree's leaves.

After two to three weeks of feeding, larvae migrate to cracks on the trunk and lower limbs to pupate (change from larvae to adult forms). They emerge as adults 7 to 14 days later. Due to their short life cycle, elm leaf beetles produce several generations annually in Texas.

To protect elm trees, spray the foliage with carbaryl (Sevin) when the eggs begin hatching. Proper timing of treatment is essential for effective control. Another method of control is to use a soil systemic insecticide, D-Syston-2% granules at the rate of 15 to 20 ounces per inch of tree diameter. Probably only one treatment with the systemic would give season long control.

Of course, when using any type of pesticides, always follow label directions closely.

BOXELDER BUGS IN HOME LANDSCAPES

Boxelder bugs can be a yearlong problem to homeowners. In spring and summer they feed mainly on different seed-bearing shade trees, and later in the year they can become a nuisance in the home.

While they rarely do serious damage to host trees such as Boxelder and Western Soapberry (sometimes mistakenly called Chinaberry) the pests plant sap from tender twigs, leaf stems, flowers and seeds, sometimes causing distorted leaves. Also, their presence in large numbers on trees, lawns, patios and sides of houses can be a disgusting sight of homeowners.

Adult boxelder bugs are about 1/2 in. long and have a dull black body with red markings on the "shoulders" and in an inverted "V" pattern" across the wings. The bugs pass through several immature stages before becoming adults stage, going from a nearly solid, scarlet red color to mostly blackish with red markings.

On trees, lawns and exterior of homes, sprays of carbaryl (Sevin), diazinon or chlorpyrifos (Dursban) can be effective when applied thoroughly according to label recommendations. This is especially true in the spring when populations are low and consist mostly of immature types. Later in the season when bug numbers are high, repeat applications (7-10 day intervals) will be necessary for satisfactory control.

When host trees drop their leaves in the fall, boxelder bugs will gather and seek protected areas for overwintering. Often they will huddle in clumps on the sides of homes, in eaves and in wall voids. They also use fences, stone walls and crevices in tree bark for overwintering sites. The bugs often enter attics and overwinter in rafters, storage boxes or other items.

Effective caulking and screening of homes can keep boxelder bugs from becoming an indoor problem. However, insecticide sprays already mentioned can be used to treat under eaves or in attics where bugs are entering or gathering. Carbaryl dust can also be used effectively in attic areas or wall voids. In addition, total release aerosol products which contain dichlorvos (DDVP) can be used to control boxelder bugs in attics.

As with any insecticide products, be sure to read and follow all label directions.

ESTATE PLANNING PROGRAMS

A specially designed estate planning program for farmers and ranchers has been developed by Extension Economists in Management. It will cover many items such as: Passing on an operating business to your heirs; Lowering your estate tax burden; and becoming familiar with estate planning tools.

These and other important topics will be discussed at each of three different meetings. One is scheduled for Lubbock on June 18 & 19, another in Wichita Falls on July 22 & 23 and the third in Amarillo on August 27 & 28. Program details are available in the County Extension Office. The registration fee is $50.00 per person.

STORED GRAIN INSECTS

Wheat harvest is not far off and it is time to prepare grain storage facilities for this year's harvest. The management of the grain prior to and while in storage will determine to a large degree the amount of damage that insects cause.

A good facility should exclude all outside moisture, be easily accessible for inspection and fumigation of the grain. Bins in which grain can be aerated are helpful in cooling and drying grain.

No matter how well the storage facilities are constructed, they cannot protect the grain unless they are clean. Before they are used, bins should be thoroughly cleaned of all waste material and sprayed with a residual spray. Old grain, trash or other debris furnish excellent living quarters for insects.

Methoxychlor and malathion can be used to treat storage bins. Only material that has a label stating that it can be used for bin treatment should be purchased. Storage bins should be cleaned and treated four to six weeks before grain is placed in them.

The Condition of the grain when it is placed in storage influences insect infestations.

Harvesting grain too wet provides an environment for insects and causes an added cost because the grain must be dried to 12% moisture or less before being put into the bin. Grain containing more moisture attracts insects, promotes mold growth and may induce heating.

Cracked grain attracts insects and aids in their development. Wheat should be harvested as dry as possible with the combine adjusted properly to eliminate weed seeds and keep cracking of kernels at a minimum.

Malathion (premium grade) the only approved readily grain protectant, can be applied as a spray or dust to limit insect development in farm stored grain. Mix sprays and use according to label directions. Sprays can be applied with hand sprayers, compressed air sprayers operated from motor-driven pumps.

It can also be applied by letting it drip into the grain at a control rate as it enters the auger.

After small grain has been put into the bin, apply a surface treatment to prevent insects from entering the grain or feeding on the surface. Premium grade malathion can also be used as a surface treatment. Bacillus thuringiensis can be used to control the Indian meal moth, which has shown some resistance to malathion, but this treatment will not control weevils or other beetles. The surface treatment should be repeated if insect activity is detected or if the surface is disturbed.

To keep small grain in good condition it should be inspected monthly during cooler months and twice each month during the summer and early fall. A grain probe is needed to inspect for insects. A temperature sensor cable installed in the bin or a thermometer on the end of a stick is needed to keep track of the temperature of the grain.

The temperature of the grain is a good indicator of grain condition. Moisture in stored grain is shifted from one location within the grain to another as a result of temperature differences. Concentrations of moisture favor insect and mold development and results in rapid deterioration and heating of the grain.

When adult rice weevils, granary weevils, maize weevils, lesser grain borers or Angoumois grain moths are found, the bin should be fumigated. The immature stages of these insects feed within the kernels and are difficult to detect. Fumigation is also needed if the number of externally developing insects exceeds five in a one-quart sample of grain.

Fumigants are highly toxic and hazardous, restricted use pesticides, which should be applied only by individuals trained in their use.

Control of the temperature of the grain in the bin can be used to aid in management of stored grain pests. Insects become inactive and are unable to feed at low temperatures. Small grain can be cooled in storage facilities with a forced air distribution system by forcing outside air which is at least 10 degrees F.

cooler than the grain through the grain. Once cooling of grain is started it should be continued until entire grain mass has been cooled. A moisture layer will form if the grain is partially cooled. Aeration equipment should not be operated during prolonged periods of high humidity.

"The Complete Book of Home Remodeling" by Robert Scharff covers very adequately all parts of home remodeling from plumbing, wiring, ceilings and walls, floors and stairs, exterior work, painting and wallcoverings, to remodeling your kitchen or bathroom or even making the most of your basement.

"Simply Fix It" is put out by Good Housekeeping and is complete in its effort to show you how to fix almost anything that might go wrong in your house. Simple and explicit illustrations also grace the pages of this book to make it even more valuable to the layman repairman.

"The Backyard Building Book" by James E. Churchill contains easy-to-read instructions for building anything from dog and cat houses, guest houses, window greenhouses, saunas, outdoor furniture, pony sheds and windmills, or even a forest ranger tower playhouse for children.

"The Complete Book of Home Plumbing" by Peter Jones gives invaluable assistance to Neophyte plumbers who would like to be able to help themselves when minor or even major plumbing disasters occur. It is amply illustrated and gives simple step-by-step instructions on almost any plumbing job you might confront.

These four books are capable of giving you the assistance to help you do many of the things you need or want to do around your place, and are now available at Lovett Memorial Library.

Sunday, the members of the Church of Christ were here to conduct Church services for our residents.

Monday, Charlene Barker, Loree Barker, and Betty Lopez were here to play Bingo with the residents. We had thirteen residents playing, and everyone had a great time.

Wednesday, our residents were disappointed because no one was here to conduct Bible Study. Lois Myers happened to be out here visiting, and she saved the day by leading the residents in a Singalong.

Wednesday evening, our residents enjoyed a very special treat. The Methodist Men's quartet was here to sing for them. We plan to have this group out again very soon.

Friday, Martha Parker was here as usual with her excellent movies.

Friday night, we welcomed back the Jay Wallis Country and Western band from Lefors. Residents, staff, and visitors always enjoy this group so much. I'd like to thank Isabel Cousins, Fern Boyd, and Charlene Barker for furnishing cakes and punch, and taking charge in the absence of the Activity Director. Loose Marbles

by Lisa Patman

Aren't these high temperatures terrific! Think of all the work you would have had to do if it hadn't been too hot. That's one of the things I love about weather: no matter what the temperature, it is too. You can get out of doing almost anything with a too.

Take summer, for an example. Usually it's too hot, but there are those occasional days when the thermometer dips a bit. At these delightful times it is obviously too humid. And if you're into agriculture you know that when it rains it's too wet, and when it doesn't it's usually too dry. And should a couple of perfect days happen to pounce on you unexpectedly, if you're one of the farmers I know, by then you're too broke. Isn't life grand!

For the past few days I have been avoiding doing any carpentry work on a little workshop that has been growing slowly in the back yard. For about a week I managed to get away with too wet. One day was too windy, another too dusty, and then came all this too hot. In fact the only time I had to work on the building was that day I called the weather too mundane. Which just goes to prove that you can get caught at the "too" game if you're not prepared and haven't studied the dictionary the night before.

Wintertime, of course, is too cold, too snowy, too blustery, too icy, too slushy, too muddy, too close to Christmas, too soon after New Years, and too slick.

Ah, I hear what you're saying. Hey Dummy, you ask, what about spring and summer? Simple. Too pretty.

Senator Bill Sarpalius

Reports

AUSTIN - The 67th session of the Texas Legislature, my first, is over, but another session is soon to start. The next session is a "special" session. It is unscheduled, and convened for the purpose of finishing business undone in the regular session.

During a special session, the Legislature may only consider matters that the Governor tells us to consider. High on the Governor's list this time are Congressional redistricting, a new bill to license physicians, the water trust fund and college construction funding.

We have asked the Governor to include gasohol in the special session. Now he needs to hear from you. Write to Governor William P. Clements, Jr., Capitol Station, Austin, Texas 78711.

Each of these subjects is important to all of us. Congressional redistricting, for example, will determine what kind of representation we get for the next ten years. The law that licenses doctors expires

September 1, so we certainly need to pass a new one. All of us in this part of the state know how important a plan to supply water needs for the future is. Water is life, not only for the farmers and ranchers in our district but for cities as well. We have problems of shortages of water, and flood and drainage problems. We need to address all of these in the next special session, and it really is good that we have time to do so, free of the political pressures that the regular session brings.

Special sessions are nothing new. Ten years ago, which was when the last redistricting process took place, the Legislature also went through a special session.

The success we enjoyed this session would have been impossible without the help of the fine people of the 31st Senatorial District. But we hope you don't quit now. We still need to hear from you. Please write to Senator Bill Sarpalius, P. O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas 78711.

Good News Department

The good news now that President Reagan has ended crude oil price controls altogether, as well as counterproductive allocation controls on the marketing of gasoline, is that the stage is set for an improvement in the U.S. energy situation.

In 1980, the mere decision to phase out controls on oil and gas prices sent drilling companies into action. Last year, drillers completed more than 64,000 wells. This was 26 percent more wells than 1979's total of about 51,000 wells, and was the largest year-to-year gain in domestic drilling history.

In the process, a long-standing record of 58,000 wells, dating from 1956, was eclipsed. This year, industry observers at Chevron, one of the nation's leading oil companies, are expecting another record. They point out that the 1981 forecast of the industry's most comprehensive trade publication, the Oil & Gas Journal, is for an additional nine percent increase in completions, which would mean more than 70,000 wells drilled.

Now that crude oil price controls have ended, more oil wells are being drilled and domestic oil production has improved.

The Journal made this forecast before President Reagan speeded decontrol of domestic crude prices.

In view of the increased drilling, U.S. oil production improved during 1980, although production lead times are such that the full results are yet to be seen.

In fact, domestic crude production during 1980 posted a gain of more than one percent over 1979. While the gain was mainly the result of the greater Alaskan North Slope production, the decline in oil output in the lower 48 states fell to about one-third the decline rate that prevailed during the 1970's.

For this year, forecasters are expecting a small oil production downturn because Alaskan North Slope production has now reached a plateau. Significantly, however, the decline in the lower 48 states is expected to be the smallest in years. Last year's record drilling has disproved, among other myths, the contention by opponents of an unfettered domestic oil industry that decontrol would only result in oil companies bidding up the cost of limited oilfield supplies and equipment, with no appreciable gains in wells drilled. Instead, rig and equipment suppliers significantly expanded their manufacturing capacities as price incentives improved.
