We accidentally transposed some numbers last week, and showed Paula Brock with only 164 votes in Gray County. Although Paula lost her bid for district clerk, she wants her supporters to know that she had 614 votes throughout the county.

We apologize to Paula for the mistake.

The class of 1977 is planning its fifth year reunion for Saturday June 19 at Dale and Rose Steel's home. Rose is missing the addresses of two members of that class: Dave Jefferson and Donna Benningfield. If you know the addresses of these people, please let her know.

The lawyers and the courts of Texas are still pondering the various problems raised by the new Bingo law. One that affects the newspapers in the area, and which our readers should be aware of, is that information about lotteries or bingo is non-mailable. That means that unless the law changes, newspapers (which go through the mail) may not carry either news or advertising about bingo. We can't tell you when and where bingo games will be held, and we can't tell you who wins the prizes.

Selling chances on guns, lawnmowers, saddles, etc... comes under the same classification, I'm sure. We have given non-profit organizations publicity about that type of lottery for years. We usually avoid the issue, however, by saying the organization is "taking donations" on the item.

This is an area which the courts should clear up without delay. If charitable organizations are going to be allowed to sell chances on items or conduct bingo games, then newspapers should be able to tell the readers about it.

We'll keep you informed about any new developments.

The class of 1972 needs some more addresses of students who were once members of their class. If anyone knows the whereabouts of these people please notify Jan Coleman Roberts. Addresses are needed for Nancy Lowe, Jon Green, Joe Morris, Creta Cheatham, Clinton McPherson, Wilma Morris, Kathy Rowell, and Jill Page.

The class will meet June 19 at the Lions Club Building in McLean at noon.

Fire Department, Ambulance Service Split; Volunteers Needed

The McLean Volunteer Fire Department met in a special meeting Monday night at the fire station to request a separation of the fire department from the ambulance service, officials said. During the meeting fire chief Jim McDonald, who has been the ambulance association president since the organization was incorporated in 1972, submitted his resignation as president. McDonald, the constable of Precinct 4, said that he would remain as fire chief, and continue to make ambulance calls as a paramedic when he can, but that he wanted to be relieved of the duties of president of the organization.

The ambulance service is planning a meeting Tuesday night (May 18) at 7 p.m. at the McLean Fire Station to reorganize and to elect officers. Vice-president Loyd Bybee is serving as president of the group until the reorganization takes place.

In separating the two departments, officials of the ambulance service said Tuesday that the ambulance service will stay in the City building, and the equipment will stay as it is, but that the ambulance service will get a separate telephone system from the fire department. Those needing an ambulance will have a separate number to call.

One of the members of the ambulance service, paramedic Bill Thomas, said that other problems with the ambulance service had developed because there were so few people left in town who were qualified or would make ambulance runs. "When we make a simple ambulance transfer call, two of us may be gone for three to five hours. When there are only two people who can make ambulance calls, that means that we have to spend too much time away from our jobs," Thomas said.

The ambulance service hopes to attract enough new volunteers to put the ambulance runs on a rotating basis, so that no one is overburdened. "We also hope to raise the fee paid to the people on the run, so that they are not severely penalized when they have to miss work," Thomas said. Finances are not a problem for the non-profit organization at this time, Thomas said, but the ambulance service may have to buy a new ambulance next year, and that will cause a financial drain.

"Our problem on ambulance calls is not on wrecks. We usually have plenty who can make those runs. We need those who can transfer patients from home to the doctor's office, or from the nursing home to the doctor's office," Thomas said. Bybee and Thomas said that they hoped to have several volunteer women for the service, and sign up for the EMC classes. "Sometimes women can get away easier during the day than men can, and we need all the help we can get," the men said.

"If we have 20 people who will volunteer to make the runs, then the ambulance service can survive. If we don't get that many, then the City will have to contract for a paid ambulance service, and we all know what kind of problems other area towns have had with that," Thomas said. "Besides, a paid ambulance service would be exorbitantly expensive," he said.

The ECA class will meet Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday nights from 7 to 10 p.m. at the fire station

Gas Well Will Bring City Revenue

Some tests are complete on the City's gas well, according to Keith Hayhurst, vice-president of Lyrit Energy of Amarillo. The tests show a shut-in pressure of 306 pounds, with an absolute open flow test was to be completed Monday. He said that the company would probably be allowed to sell about 200,000 cubic feet per day from the well.

The oil company is conducting negotiations now to sell the gas. Hayhurst said that his company wanted to get the well "on the line" as soon as possible.

Allowing for certain variables, Hayhurst said, the well should bring the City of McLean about $20,000 in revenue each year. "Of course you know you can't count on that money until the checks are received," Hayhurst said. "There are still some things that could go wrong, but at this point it looks like the City will get some good revenue." Lyrit Energy is awaiting approval from Texas Railroad Commission and further negotiations with the City before beginning a proposed gas well in the City park.

Rollover Causes No Injuries

A one-car roll-over May 8 caused no injury to the driver, 24-year-old Patrick F. Ahola of Albuquerque, N.M. The accident occurred 5:40 p.m., 1.4 miles west of McLean on the construction area of Interstate 40. The driver of the 1967 Ford van lost directional control causing the vehicle to flip on its side.

OPINIONS

VIEWS ARE WRITTEN BY LINDA HAYNES UNLESS OTHERWISE NOTED-IF YOU HAVE AN OPINION ON ANY CURRENT SUBJECT WE WELCOME YOUR SIGNED LETTERS.

Don't Be Rude!

The purpose of an editorial column is to allow the editor to express his opinion on a variety of subjects. But this week I am going to use this space to comment on petty gripe about the politeness of McLean people!

For the last several years, the music department of the McLean schools has spent many hours preparing musical programs at Christmas time and then again in the spring. The format for these programs usually calls for performance by the kindergarten through the fourth grade children first, followed by a few numbers of the fifth grade band, the junior high band, and the high school band.

At the last few performances, I have noticed a trend that in my opinion is both rude and insulting to the performers and their teachers.

As soon as the first portion of the program is over, the parents of those children involved gather up their little ones and head for home. Then when the fifth graders finish, the same thing takes place. When the junior high finished, another group leaves, so that the high school band usually plays to an empty house.

Are the parents leaving to get their children to bed on time? (The entire program was over at exactly 8:05 p.m., and I don't know any child who goes to bed earlier than that!) Or are they going home early to catch their favorite television show? That seems to me to be the most likely answer.

I'm sorry that most of us feel our time is so valuable that we can't devote an hour twice a year to show support for the music program of our school. If you have no children in school, perhaps you have an excuse for staying away from the various school functions, but if you come to hear your child, why can't you stay for the rest of the show?

The music may not be the same quality as what you could hear on television or on your stereo, but it will certainly be entertaining to see your neighborhood children and teenagers performing.

Besides, it's your tax dollar which supports these programs. You ought to make sure you're getting your money's worth.

Next year, let our high school band play to a full house for a change. You'll enjoy what you hear.

The dessert the average American orders most while eating out is apple pie according to some surveys of restaurant owners.

tried to remember the formless terror of the dream and what had caused the bad dream. I finally decided that it was a combination of too much caffeine from my sugar-free colas, five hours of "Inside the Third Reich" on television, and my usual dose of the 10 o'clock news.

Those three ingredients boil together and make a horrible conglomeration of worry and frightening fantasy!

The television special of "Inside the Third Reich", about Adolph Hitler's architect Albert Speer brought home again the horrors of that most horrible period in history, when goodness went to sleep and totally evil men ruled Germany, and almost ruled the world.

And then at 10 o'clock, we were treated to yet another grisly rehashing of the Jay Kelly Pinkerton murder trial and the murders of the two young mothers in Clovis last Saturday.

Both the historical subjects and the current murder investigations contain details that would make the most savage man shudder. The senseless, wholesale slaughter of the Jews, while good people did nothing, ranks as one of the most heinous crimes in history.

But the murders of those young women has to be judged as another great tragedy. As I thought about the length of Pinkerton's trial, and the suffering of the families of the victims, I felt the same impatience most Americans must feel with our slow, plodding justice. The murder Pinkerton is accused of happened two years ago, still justice has not been done in the case.

But then I remembered Nazi Germany, and Hitler's maniacs who totally stopped the processes of law and order, who made their own laws to suit their own situation.

As the morning sun finally began to turn the eastern sky pink outside my bedroom window, and the shadows of my nightmare receded to the dark corners of my room, I realized that there was a connection between the Nazi atrocities and the current murder trials.

In our impatience with the slow American justice for murderers, we would almost allow the law to be rushed, twisted just a little, hurried. But when that is allowed to happen, we are opening the door to the kind of licensed murder practiced by the government in 1940's Germany.

As much as we hate it, we must fully protect the rights of the scum who would murder innocent people. We must be absolutely certain that every man gets the full protection of the law. For when we allow one man to be railroaded (even if he is guilty), we become Nazis in our hearts...and Hitler will rise again.

opinion would have to be present before a deficit was created.

A second provision of the amendment is designed to solve the problem created by "bracket creep." Tax revenue could not grow faster than the national wealth -- minus inflation -- unless Congress specifically voted to increase taxes. The hidden tax increases that have hit us year after year no longer would be allowed.

These two provisions of the balanced budget amendment would mean that there would be more pressure on Congress to limit spending. The taxpayer would gain a louder voice than the special interest groups which are urging Congress to vote for these domestic spending programs which we simply cannot afford.

Woodrow Wilson once likened the creation of deficits in peacetime -- and the hidden economic costs of the practice -- to taxation without representation.

CAPITOL UPDATE

John Tower
U.S. SENATOR for TEXAS
142 RUSSELL OFFICE BUILDING
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20510

Balancing the federal budget has seemed to be the "impossible dream" for two decades. Throughout the '60s and '70s, federal spending ran wild. Congress created more and more new domestic spending programs, which grew bigger and bigger, year after year.

Federal deficits also grew, but much more quietly -- muted by the voices of special interest groups which drowned out those warning against the long-term consequences of building up our public debt. This growing public debt has helped to create the inflation which we now face.

Additionally, inflation created "bracket creep," a phenomenon which pushed more and more Americans into higher tax brackets as their salaries were increased to keep up with the cost of living. Thus, the federal government has been getting more revenue with the same tax rate, making it possible for Congress to spend more without voting to raise taxes.

The disastrous effects of these practices were not obvious immediately, but we are seeing their full impact now in high interest rates and recession.

Even though President Reagan, with the overwhelming support of the American public, has done much to begin reversing this course of fiscal irresponsibility, it is becoming more and more obvious that special interest groups continue their pressure to spend today, and worry about the consequences tomorrow.

It is very clear that our nation needs decisive action now to bring some discipline into the spending process. Therefore, I have joined in sponsoring the Balanced Budget-Tax Limitation Constitutional Amendment.

This amendment would mandate that a balanced budget be the norm for federal fiscal policy. Under this amendment, a deficit could only be created by a three-fifths vote in both houses of the Congress. This approach seems to me to be a very reasonable and responsible one -- it allows the government to be flexible enough to meet its critical responsibilities even in extraordinary circumstances which require a deficit. Yet, it no longer would be politically easy for the Congress to spend more money than is coming in from taxes because members would have to go on record for creating a deficit. The requirement for a three-fifths vote instead of a simple majority would mean that a solid consensus of American

Since ownership of gold became legal in the U.S. in 1975, estimates are that eight million people have invested in the yellow metal. More than half of it has been purchased in the form of gold coins!

Gold coins are unforgettable gifts. Mexican coins also make fine jewelry.

Senator Bill Sarpalius Reports

ANOTHER SPECIAL SESSION

AUSTIN -- The Legislature will meet again beginning May 24 to repeal the state property tax and provide funding for schools that formerly benefited from it.

The state property tax was used to finance state colleges and universities that were not members of the Permanent University Fund (PUF). These are all of our state colleges except the University of Texas and A & M. There are 17 of them, including West Texas State and Texas Tech.

The tax was reduced to practically nothing in 1979. Midwestern State University, which was a beneficiary of the old tax, filed a suit to force the state to collect the tax at its pre-1979 level. Midwestern claimed the Texas Constitution requires taxes to be abolished by constitutional amendment, not through statute. They also claimed the Legislature's reduction of the tax to practically nothing was the same as repeal.

Many legal experts feel Midwestern has a good case and is very likely to win the lawsuit. If this happens, the state would have to collect back taxes from every landowner in the state. These back taxes probably would total about $779.2 million.

If we pass a constitutional amendment to abolish the tax during the special session, and the voters approve it in November, then the state will not have to collect the tax.

Any proposed constitutional amendment we pass during the special session not only will have to abolish the tax, but also forgive back taxes. However, it will not authorize refunds. Also, we will have to find alternative financing for WT and the other 16 schools that are not in the PUF. This money will be used for college construction, and should be in the neighborhood of $100 million.

Resolutions to abolish the tax, appropriate the money, and forgive the back taxes already have been introduced by Speaker Clayton. However, we do not know for sure if the proposal to forgive the back taxes is constitutional.

The tax was written into the constitution about 100 years ago, and schools like WT have been relying on it ever since. Some supporters of these schools say they need a guaranteed source of revenue, not a one-time stopgap measure. This issue could cause a sticking point in the session.

Of course, the timing of the session may cause it to go smoothly and quickly. Many legislators undoubtedly will be preparing for the June 5 runoff, and will be in a hurry to get home and campaign.

Whatever the duration of the session and the issues involved, our concern will be for the schools in our district. We represent the Panhandle and the South Plains, and those areas will be number one this month in Austin.

We know many of you claim WT or Tech as your alma mater. We would like to hear your opinion of what we should do to make sure these schools have enough money to finance all the construction projects they need. Please write to Senator Bill Sarpalius, P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas 78711.

SHERRI GLASS

Sherry Glass Is Inducted Into Honor Society At WTSU

WTSU-Sherry Glass, a McLean junior nursing major at West Texas State University, has been inducted into Sigma Theta Tau national nursing honor society. Inductees must have completed one-half of their nursing courses, maintaining a 3.0 grade point average on a 4.0 scale before being considered for membership. The WTSU nursing major society was inducted into the Sigma Theta Tau national honor society of nursing in March 1980. Glass was nominated for Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities. She also is a member of the Scribes senior honor society. Glass serves as president of Alpha Chi national honor society and is treasurer of the junior nursing class. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Glass of McLean.

Nurses Give Money To McDonald House

WTSU—Members of the junior nursing class at West Texas State University have presented $700 to McDonald's for the construction of a Ronald McDonald House in Amarillo. McDonald's restaurants have announced that $1 million goal for Amarillo to finance the construction of a house for families of critically-ill children to stay has been reached in less time than any other Ronald McDonald House fund drive in the United States. Ron McVean, of Los Angeles, Calif., who owns and operates McDonald's chain restaurants in the Texas Panhandle area and eastern New Mexico, told members of the nursing class that residents of the Amarillo area raised the needed $1 million in less than 60 days. He said that another $500,000 will be needed next year to maintain operation of the facility. WTSU's junior nursing class includes 63 students. Other officers are vice president, Linda Metzger, daughter of Lavern R. Metzger of Clovis, N.M.; secretary, Margaret Kuehler, daughter of Robert Kuehler of Groom; treasurer, Sherry Glass, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Glass of McLean.

Loose Marbles

by Lisa Patman

I hope you will take time to stop whatever you are doing right now, stick your head out the nearest window, and listen to the quiet. The sounds you don't hear come to you compliments of your local independent school system. At this very moment the aforementioned educational facility is housing thousands of screams, groans, sighs, and giggles, because it is full of hundreds of restless children who are wiggling, stretching, yawning, staring out the window, and in general revving up for the blast into summer vacation.

There also is, in the same classrooms, an undercurrent of tension which, if harnessed, would produce enough energy to run New York City's lights for the next thirty years. The source of this tension is, of course, the teaching population, each of whom thinks he or she cannot make it through the last day.

Here in McLean we have less than 24 hours before this horde of barbarians is released from the nine-month imprisonment. We have less than 1440 minutes before the annual summer war of nerves. We have less than a full day of peace and quiet.

It is time now to arm ourselves for the onslaught. Board up your doors and windows. Stuff your ears with cotton. Practice saying "So what," to anyone who says "I'm bored." Better yet, hide in the basement and pretend you're a potato left over from winter storage. (You'll feel rotten in a few days anyway).

During the precious time I have left I plan to stand out in the front yard and stare at the empty swings, untrampled grass, and streets devoid of driving teenagers. I plan to smile broadly at the quiet—just before I sink into total insanity. God rest my soul.

RESISTANT PIGWEEDS?

Have pigweed (careless weed) in the Panhandle of Texas and Oklahoma developed resistance to postemergence applications of 2, 4-D and Atrazine? Dr. A.F. Wiese, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station Weed Researcher from Bushland, and Doc Tripp, Area Agronomist with Oklahoma Agricultural Extension Service at Guymon do not have research to prove it one way or another, but poor control in fields for several summers makes the past two specialists believe resistant pigweed is a good possibility.

This past summer several applicators ended up with poor control on several thousand acres. To make matter worse, retreating the fields did not kill the weeds. Poor control made farmers take a beating on yield. To top it off, the pesky weeds cost applicators because farmers were reluctant to pay for poor weed control jobs.

Wiese said there are several possible explanations for the phenomenon. Using one herbicide on the same field may have gradually killed out pigweed that are most sensitive to the herbicides and a population of tolerant weeds has developed.

According to the two specialists, there are many different kinds of species of pigweed, and no one knows if one species tolerates the herbicides better than others. "Over the years there has been a gradual change from redroot pigweed, which grows up to 30 inches to smooth pigweed and Palmer amaranth," Wiese said. These two pigweed species grow over six feet tall and will completely severely with the tallest sorghum hybrid. Wiese speculates that hard to kill pigweed may be natural crosses to hybrids between the two vigorous species.

Two other pigweed species that grow in the Southern Great Plains are tumble pigweed and prostrate pigweed. However, these two species are not likely to be the trouble makers according to the specialists. Tumble pigweed grows in a ball shape like Russian thistle, but seldom gets over three feet tall. Prostrate pigweed grows flat on the ground and from a distance is easily confused with puncturevine or goathead.

Because the problem has everyone baffled, Wiese has planned research to solve the dilemma. Last fall Jon Green, a young weed scientist working with Wiese gathered seed from several fields in the northern part of the Texas Panhandle where control was poor. He also gathered seed from redroot pigweed in a pasture at the Research Laboratory at Bushland that have never been sprayed. In the summer of 1982, plants from these seed will be treated with 2, 4-D, and atrazine to check for differences. In addition, seed of several species will be gathered and checked for tolerance to the two herbicides.

If resistant pigweed are isolated, then research will determine herbicide rates or herbicide combinations that will control the pests.

FERTILIZE PONDS TO BOOST FISH YIELD

An inorganic fertilizer, properly applied now, will more than double the pounds of fish a pond will produce in a year.

Fertilization is effective in ponds stocked with bass or catfish.

The increased fish production results from more phytoplankton (tiny green plants). The phytoplankton's increase provides more food for small fish and insects. In turn, they are eaten by larger fish, resulting in bigger fish for fishermen.

Any fertilization formulation high in nitrogen and phosphorus, such as 16-20-0 will work. We recommend 100 pounds per surface acre of water. Broadcast the fertilizer in water less than six feet deep. Do not broad-

Methodist Annual Conference Begins June 3 In Amarillo

AMARILLO—The 73rd session of the Northwest Texas Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church will convene at Polk Street United Methodist Church in Amarillo Thursday, June 3, and continue through Saturday, June 5.

Several major items of business are on the agenda of the three-day meeting, including a recommendation for the re-structuring of the Conference Office.

The recommendation, which comes from a Study Committee formed during the last Annual Conference meeting, calls for the administrative and programming responsibilities of the Conference Office to be brought together under the staffs of two Conference councils.

Under the recommendation, which would abolish the Conference's Administrative Council and Council on Professional Ministries, the programming responsibilities of the Conference Office would be assigned to the staff of the Conference Council on Ministries. The administrative and financial responsibilities would be assigned to the staff of the Council on Finance and Administration.

Another proposal to be discussed at the meeting calls for the formation of a long-range study committee to make plans for improvements and renovation at the Conference's two campgrounds at Ceta Canyon and Camp Butman.

Bishop Louis W. Schweninger will preside over the three-day meeting. Dr. Ira Williams is the host district superintendent. Dr. Clifford Trotter is the host pastor. And Dr. D. L. Dykes of Louisiana is the conference preacher.

What Every Well-Informed Person Should Know About Drug Addiction

David P. Ausubel, M.D. Misinformation which has run rampant for years concerning the use, danger or safety connected with drug use has probably done damage which is almost irreversible as far as public knowledge of this sinister subject is concerned.

Dr. Ausubel in this new publication makes an honest and fact-filled attempt to clear up much of the confusion that surrounds the drug scene, while taking into account new research and changing social pattern of drug use. Although the book does concentrate on opiate addiction, it also includes material on other widely abused drugs such as marijuana, cocaine, LSD, and barbituates.

Research into this controversial subject has brought Dr. Ausubel to the conclusion that personality weaknesses point many people toward drug addiction, and that in drugs they find a relief from feelings of inadequacy, and produce immediate feelings of superiority or security.

The subject of availability of drugs is also treated, and he shows proof that drugs can be severely curtailed by strict and harsh punishment to suppliers as well as users. He points up the immense success of the methods employed by China in the curtailment of opium use. He advocates more severe punishments for non-addicted drug pushers and more and better rehabilitation for users of not-so-dangerous drugs such as marijuana.

Dr. Ausubel leaves the reader with an appreciation of the complexity of the drug problem, without creating confusion, and underlines its seriousness without presenting a feeling of hysteria. For these and other reasons, no one who wishes to be well-informed about drug addiction can afford to neglect this book. It is now available at Lovett Memorial Library.

Time To Exam Kid's Eyes

COLLEGE STATION—Youngsters off to school for the first time should have their eyes examined before entering, suggests Dr. Mary Ann Shirer, a health education specialist. Summertime is a good time to take care of this, she says.

Shirer is on the home economics staff, Texas Agriculture Extension Service the Texas A&M University System.

Unfortunately, the specialist points out, far too many parents wait to see if the school uncovers any sight problems before taking children to have an eye exam.

"Many kids can have poor vision in both eyes but that's all they know, and they think that's the way everybody sees," she says. Prime candidates for eye exams are children between ages four to six, Shirer notes.

Warning signs of vision problems parents can watch for are constant squinting, especially to see things in the distance, and holding everything very close to the eyes, the specialist says.

My sincere thanks to those voting for and supporting me in my recent election. I also appreciate the clean race run by my opponent Mr. Doyce Middlebrook. Rep. Foster Whaley Nominee 84th Legislative District pd. pol. ad. paid by Foster Whaley Rt. 1, Box 70 Pampa, Texas 79065

DISSOLVES GALLSTONES

Almost a million new cases of gallstone disease (chilelithiasis) occur in the United States each year. Gallstones block some portion of the gallbladder or its passages. Attacks are often heralded by pain that is excruciating and that occurs without warning. Pain medicines are of temporary value but, for most people, surgery has been the only long-term solution.

Recently, however, there has been much interest in an investigational drug called chenodeoxycholic acid or, more simply, CDA. The results of a two-year study indicated that CDA may be of value in certain individuals who have gallstones. Namely, thin women having small stones and high blood cholesterol levels. In these individuals, CDA may actually dissolve the materials that make up the gallstones. There is evidence that CDA helps correct the chemical imbalance that leads to stone formation...too much cholesterol or not enough bile acids to keep the cholesterol in solution.

During the two-year study, only about 14% of patients receiving CDA experienced complete dissolution of their stones. Although the figure is small, the drug may still play an important future role in the care of some individuals who have gallstones. More studies are needed to determine the potential value of this investigational drug before it can be made available through physicians to the general public.

Fire Department Provides McLean's Weather Alert System

Tornadoes have begun their annual march through the Texas Panhandle with the Amarillo weather service issuing a warning to take cover in Potter and Randall counties Sunday night. McLean residents should be aware that the members of the Volunteer Fire Department are on duty during bad weather to watch the clouds and sound the alarm if a storm approaches McLean.

According to fireman Clifford McDonald, McLean fire department officers are in charge of the watches, with various firemen assigned for each month. The firemen on duty drive to the golf course hill to watch, and another group drive either south of town or north of town depending on the track of the storm. The men are in constant radio communication with the fire station, where firemen are in communication with weather observers throughout the Panhandle. McDonald said that Amarillo weather service calls McLean direct if they suspect a storm in our area.

If a storm approaches McLean or a threatening situation develops, firemen sound one, long, continuous blast on the fire whistle to alert residents to the danger. If the situation worsens, or a tornado is actually spotted, a second whistle (with a wavering, up and down sound) is sounded.

This whistle means to take immediate cover.

Tornadoes are a threat in Texas from March through June each year, with the National Weather Service reporting 178 in 1981.

According to the weather service, the three factors which create tornadoes are warm air masses from the Gulf of Mexico, warm very dry air from the West, and the jet stream. Most tornadoes occur between 3 p.m. and 7 p.m., and most travel from the southwest to the northeast. The greater the differences in temperature and moisture content between two adjacent air masses, the greater the energy content and the violence of the ensuing thunderstorm and possible tornado, the weather service says.

Meteorologists define three types of tornadoes: a "weak" tornado with winds of up to 110 miles per hour-62 percent of all tornadoes are in this category; a "strong" tornado with winds from 110 to 200 mph-36 percent of all tornadoes are in this category; and "violent" tornadoes with winds of 200 to 300 miles per hour. Although only two percent of all tornadoes are in the violent category, this type of storm causes 70 percent of all tornado deaths.

Residents should be aware that the National Weather Service will issue a "WATCH" if condition appropriate for a tornado, and will issue a "WARNING" if a tornado has been sighted. A "WARNING" means that residents should seek immediate cover.

The following rules are suggested for tornado safety:

1. If possible, go to a tornado cellar, a cave, or an underground excavation which should have an air outlet.
2. If in open country, move at right angles to the tornado's path. If there is no basement, take cover under heavy furniture against inside walls. Doors and windows on the sites of the house away from the

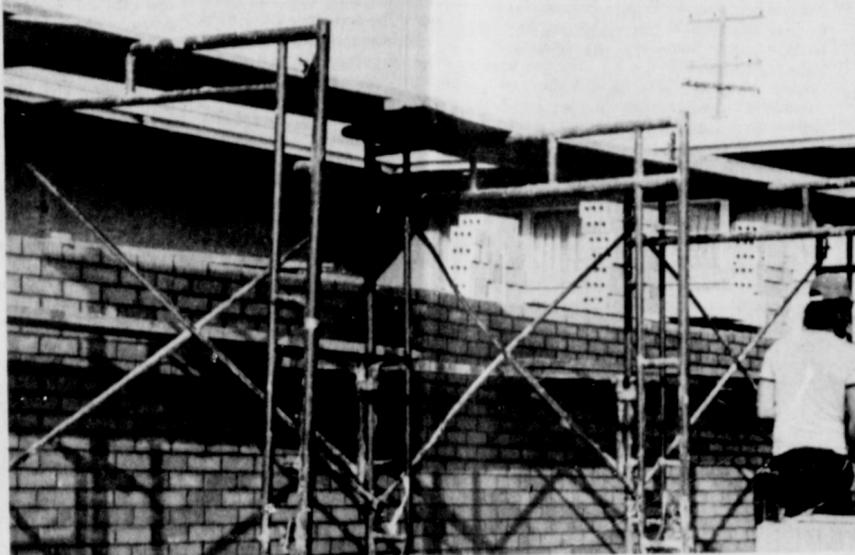

such as a ditch or ravine.
3. If in a house, stay away from windows! Go to the corner of the basement toward the direction the tornado is coming. If there is no basement, take cover under heavy furniture against inside walls. Doors and windows on the sites of the house away from the tornado may be opened to help reduce damage to the building. Standing against the inside wall or on a lower floor of an office building offers some protection.

4. If in a school, stay inside, away from windows, near an inside wall on lower floors. AVOID AUDITORIUMS AND GYMNASIUMS.

5. Keep calm. People have been killed by running out into streets and by turning back into the path of a tornado. Even though a warning is issued, chances of a tornado striking one's home are very slight.

6. Keep tuned to your radio or television station for latest tornado advisory information. Do not call the Weather Bureau, or the local fire station, except to report a tornado, as your request may tie up telephone lines needed to receive special reports.

In The Kitchen

by Linda Haynes

Since I began writing this column, I seem to spend a lot of time looking for good recipes and asking cooks for their recipes. Last weekend when I had a house full of company for supper Saturday night, I tried a new dish that was delicious, even though I'm sure that it must have a 1,000 calories per teaspoon. However, you might try it for a good company dish. The second recipe is a simple glaze that I use on ham. My step-daughter Jenny suggested I share this with you, because it makes any ham (even less expensive cuts) taste delicious.

CHILI, CHEESE AND RICE
1 cup cooked rice
2 cups sour cream
1 cup grated cheddar cheese
1 small, flat can of chopped jalapenos
1/2 cup grated parmesan cheese

Prepare either regular rice or minute rice. Toss with sour cream. Place half of rice in a flat, buttered casserole dish. Spread peppers over rice, cover with grated cheese. Cover cheese with rest of rice. Cover rice with layer of parmesan cheese. Put in 350 oven for 30 minutes or microwave for about 10 minutes.

HAM GLAZE
Wash bone-in type of ham with stiff brush. Cook, uncovered, for about 10 minutes per pound, in 300 degree oven. Remove from oven, and remove rind. Score ham.

Prepare glaze with one small can of frozen orange juice, slightly thawed. Mix with one can full of brown sugar. Make a thick paste. Smear over ham. Place ham back in pan, cover tightly and cook until done (160 degrees on meat thermometer.) The sweetness of the sugar, and the tartness of the orange juice takes the salty taste out of ham.

When it's all said and done, there is more said than done.

A good look is the best of friends, the same today and forever.

SICK PINE TREES

The time for spraying pine trees affected with Needle Cast is fast approaching. We have a new chemical to suggest using this year because of the difficulty many homeowners have experienced in bringing Needle Cast under control the last two years.

A lot of real nice pine trees have become infected with Needle Cast during the last two years. The symptoms for Needle Cast are that infected needles turn brown or red and drop. The outer portion of the needle becomes infected first and appears dead. Sometimes we see several trees affected and then maybe some more in the general area of town or along a street are completely free of the disease. I relate some of this to the general care of trees such as good, deep watering of trees during dry periods. I believe that you should give trees good, deep soakings of water every two to four weeks depending on wind, temperature, humidity, and rainfall. By a good-deep soaking, I consider this to be letting a water hose run slowly around each tree for several hours, such as all day or all night. This will help put water down into the tree's root zone. Generally, lawn waterings will not get water down deep to the general root zone of our trees.

A good fungicide spray program is needed on trees that are affected with needle cast. Chemicals that we have recommended in the past include: Kocide, Zineb and Maneb. Another chemical we are adding to our recommended list is benomyl, which is sold under trade names of Benlate, Green Light Systemic Fungicide and possibly

The best thing I know between France and England is--the sea.
Douglas Jerrold
Nothing astonished men so much as common senses and plain dealings.
Emerson
Against stupidity the very gods themselves contend in vain.
Schiller

others. This is a systemic fungicide which should give better results than the other recommended fungicides; however, it is more expensive. The mixing for benomyl is two tablespoons per two gallons of water or one pound per hundred gallons.

A two to three year spray program may be needed to bring the disease under control in severely affected trees. Yearly spray programs consist of three applications each spring at ten day intervals, starting when the new candles have emerged. These spring treatments protect the newly emerged leaves from infection in the spring. Two additional sprayings are needed, ten days apart in September. The fall sprayings protect the tree from infection during the fall and winter.

This program of five yearly sprayings is repeated the second year, and if needed, the third year.

Many of these affected pines are good, large trees and add value and beauty to our home landscapes.

Homeowners with pine trees are encouraged to inspect your trees and get busy with a fungicide control program if you suspect needle cast infections. Do not delay the start of your spray program.

Information contained in this newsletter is for educational purposes. Reference to any commercial products or trade names is made with the understanding that no discrimination is intended and no endorsement by the Texas Agricultural Service is implied.

ENERGY-CONSCIOUS LAWN CARE

Energy-conscious homeowners can take steps to reduce the energy demands of lawn care without lowering lawn standards.

While lawns offer many aesthetic and recreational benefits, these may be offset by energy requirements of lawn care.

Mowing, watering, fertilizing, controlling pests and disposing of leaf clippings are all energy-consuming requirements of lawn care.

During spring and summer months, watering the lawn and collecting and disposing of grass clippings place a heavy burden on cities for these services. Grass clippings account for more than 30 percent of total trash collections in some cities during spring and early summer.

Several law maintenance practices are offered to help homeowners reduce these energy demands.

Reducing fertilizer applications to maintenance levels--2 to 3 pounds of actual nitrogen per 1,000 square feet of lawn per year--will go a long way toward reducing energy demands. (That's 10 pounds of a fertilizer containing 20 percent nitrogen.) Applying only maintenance levels of nitrogen to lawns can reduce mowing requirements, water use, insect and disease problems, and grass clippings.

Excessive fertilization is the single most important factor contributing to high energy demands for lawn care.

Another lawn care practice to reduce energy demands is returning or composting grass clippings. Using a mulching mower can be beneficial if grass clippings are not composted.

Also, adopting proper watering practices to reduce water can save energy.

New homeowners are advised to select and plant adapted, low-maintenance turfgrasses to reduce energy demands. Buffalo-grass is adapted to our area. This grass has low maintenance requirements, yet provides a satisfactory turf cover for lawns.

In some situations a ground cover such as English ivy can reduce maintenance requirements effectively without sacrificing the benefits of a plant cover. In heavily shaded areas and on steep slopes, use a ground cover in place of grasses.

It is possible to enjoy the luxury of an attractive lawn and landscape without excessive energy requirements.

HOMEMAKER NEWS

Every year more children die from accidents than from birth defects or disease. Just last weekend in the Pampa area, seven children came in contact with poisonous substances. Fortunately, all were treated in time and suffered no serious injury or death.

Children are the prime victims of accidents for many reasons. However, two factors--individual behavior and a hazardous environment--are responsible for most accidents. During the first and second year of life, poisoning is one of the most common accidents.

POISON-PROOF YOUR HOME

Every year thousands of children are poisoned by hazardous household substances. Medicines, furniture polish, lighter fluid, turpentine. There are only a few of the numerous potentially dangerous products commonly found in the home. Here are a few suggestions to help you to poison-proof your home:

1. One key to poison prevention in the home is keeping all medicines are other hazardous products locked up when not in use. Hazardous household products include All medication, ammonia, antiseptics, aspirin, astringents, bleaches, boric acid, camphorated oil, car polish, cleaning agents, cologne, cough syrup, cuticle remover, depilatories, drain cleaners, dyes, epoxy glue, floor
2. Don't depend on close supervision. It's impossible to watch a child every minute and children can move very quickly.
3. Always read the warning labels on hazardous products. These labels will tell you the seriousness of danger and list all hazardous ingredients. If a child is accidentally poisoned, the first thing a doctor needs to know is the identity of the poison. The label will also tell you what immediate first aid you can give.
4. Keep all hazardous products in their original containers. Never store them in cups, soda bottles, or other containers that would normally contain food and drink.
5. Avoid taking medicines in a child's presence. Children imitate adults, particularly their parents.
6. Call any medicine by its proper name. Never suggest that medicine is "candy."
7. Promptly dispose of prescription drugs by flushing them down the toilet once the illness for which they were prescribed is over.
8. Do not store any other and rug cleaners, furniture waxes and polishes, gasoline, insect spray, kerosene, liniment, laxatives, lye, nail polish and remover, paint, paint thinner, perfume, rat poison, rubbing alcohol, shaving cream and lotion, shoe polishes, suntan cream and lotions, turpentine, and varnishes.

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission estimates that 10,000 children are treated in hospital emergency rooms every year after being poisoned by insecticides, pesticides or similar products. These accidents can be prevented.

TIPS FOR ENERGY SAVERS

Store all pesticides and insecticides out of the reach of children. Always read a product's warning label. Remember that a less toxic product may do the job as well as a highly toxic product. Do not spread pesticides or insecticides in areas where children or pets could touch or eat them.

Clean or replace air conditioner filters at least once a month. When the filter is dirty, the fan has to run longer to move the same amount of air, and this takes more electricity.

Another energy-saving tip: Use Classified for your buying and selling needs. Classified is efficient and economical; you can shop for your needs from the comfort of your easy chair!

Southwestern Public Service Company power lines meet the highest safety and service standards. When wind, weather, tree growth or other factors affect these lines, SPS crews correct the problem quickly. If you see a downed power line or other equipment that might cause an injury or service interruption, call your local SPS office. Your call could help prevent an accident or service outage.

Raymond Dement, Line Supervisor, Roswell.

Typically, heating and cooling account for more than 60% of your home's energy consumption. Selecting the correct size of air conditioning unit can help reduce this consumption. You also can conserve energy by placing outside air conditioning units away from shrubbery or other obstructions which could block the flow of outside air to the unit. When using an air conditioner, keep blinds or draperies closed against direct sunlight and keep all outside doors closed. Conservation efforts like these can help you "keep your cool" this summer.

Al Rettig, Senior Consumer Services Representative, Lubbock.

We at SPS applaud those customers who reduce their monthly electric bills by using electricity more efficiently. One such customer, Amarillo College, recently voted to remove 94 lighting fixtures from a classroom building. This action allowed the school to meet engineering standards for lighting levels, and is expected to save the college about $5,628 a year in electricity costs.

John Marshall, Manager of Revenues, Amarillo.

Knowing what electricity is worth is worth knowing. For answers to your questions, call or write your SPS manager.
