After riding a cog train up to the top of Pike's Peak, riding horses down to the bottom of Royal Gorge, driving hours on curving mountain roads, rafting through the rapids on the Colorado River, and racing at breakneck speeds down an alpine slide, eight-year-old Tanner Hess summed up my feelings exactly when he queried his mother, "Mom, isn't there anything in Colorado that isn't dangerous?"

I had a wonderful time as a sponsor on the Methodist youth's trip to Colorado last weekend, but I have had enough thrills to last at least a year.

The highlight of the trip had to be the trip down the Colorado River on big rubber rafts. We floated about eight miles down the river, through about four "small" rapids, and then had lunch, as our guides told us about the big rapids coming up on the next 12 miles. When we neared the big one, after lunch, the guides stopped the rafts and got out on shore to walk ahead and scout the rapids. That didn't give me just a whole lot of confidence about our safety, but when they came back, shaking their heads and muttering about how bad the rapids looked that day, I was really terrified.

However, we made it through without dumping anyone in our boat, and all in all, it was a thrilling, exciting ride. A photographer was standing on shore taking pictures of all the idiots who were shooting the rapids, and I hope to have a copy of that photo in the next few weeks. In fact, I would drive back to Colorado to get the picture if I had to. I want it for proof... and I also want it to remind myself never to do anything that dumb again.

Monday a reporter for a Dallas-based television station called to get some information about the old Route 66 through McLean. He said he would be in McLean later in the summer to shoot some film, because McLean is the last town on Interstate 40 which has not been by-passed.

He wanted some pictures of the old highway 66, and some information about the history.

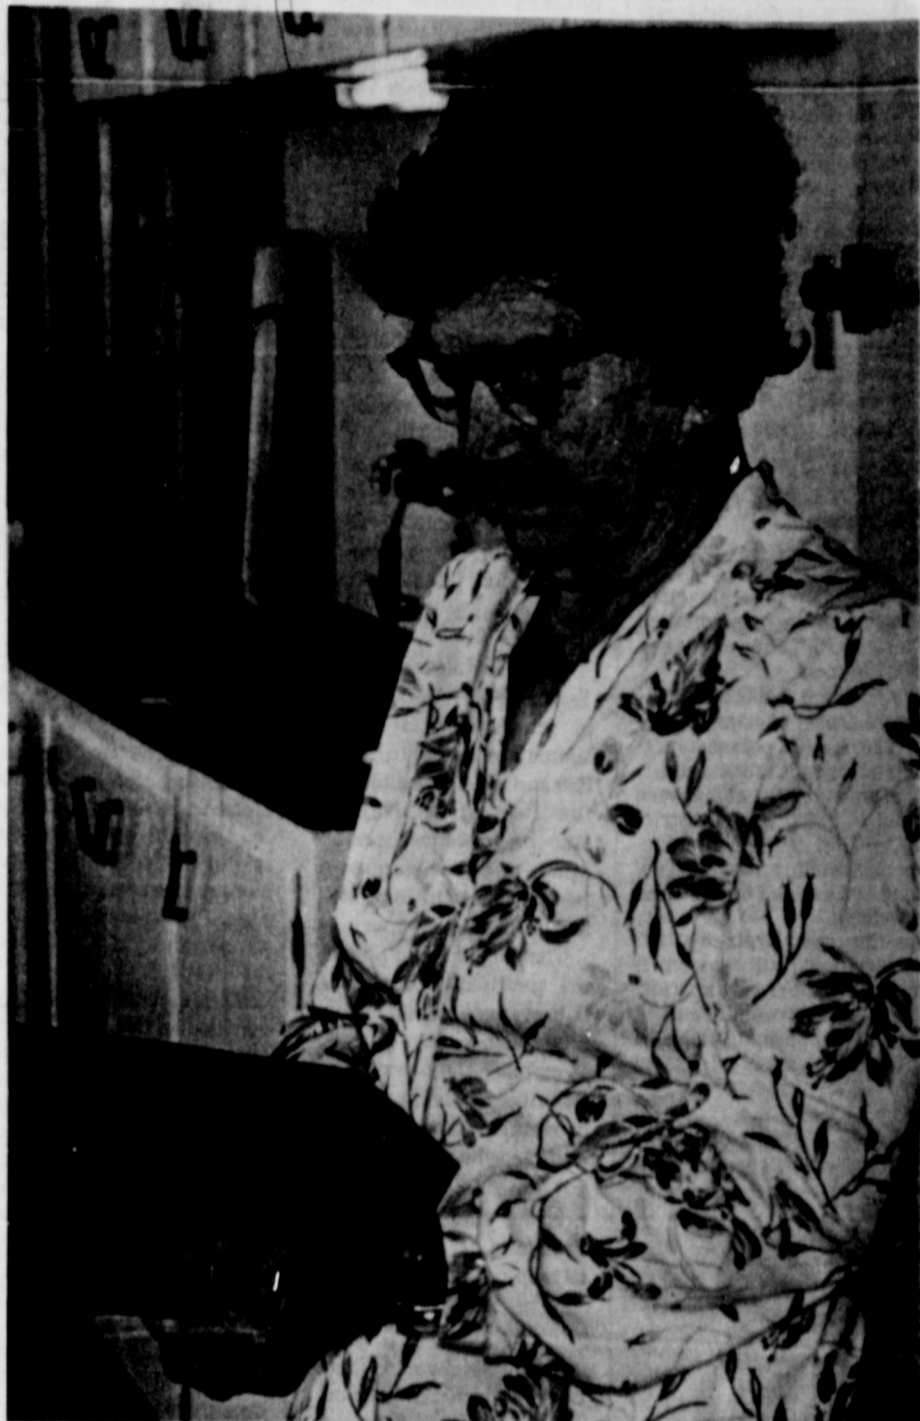

It seems to me that I remember hearing about an old Route 66 booster association that once sent delegations up and down

Birthday Celebration Will Honor Pioneer Gray County Residents

The Gray County 80th Birthday Celebration committee needs the names, addresses, phone numbers, and date of arrivals in Gray County of all residents who moved to the area before 1920. The pioneer residents will be the honorees of the county's 80th birthday party, set for Oct. 16 in Pampa.

Anyone who arrived in Gray County in 1920 or before should send the information to Thelma Bray, 1305 Hamilton, Pampa, Texas 79065 or contact the McLean News.

Highway Department Plans Continued Work

The Texas State Department of Highways and Public Transportation (SDHPT) is planning to continue developing State Highway 70 in Pampa from 21st Street northeast to Loop 171.

Since the Federal Highway Administration has approved the proposed highway project, the SDHPT will begin work on the next phase of engineering necessary to let a construction contract.

The existing two-lane highway will be replaced with a 68' wide curb and gutter street. The new facility will be built within the existing right of way, and it will provide four traffic lanes and a

Mrs. Bray said that entries are now being received for the Old Fiddler's contest which will be part of the celebration Oct. 16. The contest will be from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. in the M.K. Brown Auditorium in Pampa.

Four age categories are planned, with first, second, and third place prizes given in each category. Divisions are for 0 to 12 years old, 13 to 25 years old, 26 to 59 years old, and 60 years and up. Prize money will be $50 for first, $30 for second, and $20 for third. There is no entry fee.

Haynes, Hawley And Middleton Win McLean Lions Tournament

The team of Sam D. Haynes, Robert Hawley, and Neal Middleton won a sudden-death playoff to take first place in the McLean Lions Club golf tournament Sunday afternoon at the McLean golf course. The team tied, after 18 holes of the three-man low-ball golf scramble, with the team of Casper Smith, Mike Johnson, and Loyal Billingsley. The two teams shot five more holes of golf before Haynes' team parred hole five, while Smith's team shot a bogey.

Department Order--Head Quarters, Texas--Department of Nacogdoches Oct. 8, 1835

The time has arrived when the revolutions in the interior of Mexico have resulted in the creation of a dictator, and Texas is compelled to assume an attitude defensive of her rights, and the lives and property of her citizens.

Our oaths and pledges to the Constitution have been preserved inviolate. Our hopes of promised benefits have been deferred. Our Constitutions have been declared at an end, while all that is sacred is menaced by arbitrary power! The priesthood and the army are to mete out the measure of our wretchedness. War is our only alternative! War, in defence of our rights must be our motto!

Volunteers are invited to our standard. Liberal bounties of land will be given to all who will join our ranks with a good rifle and one hundred rounds of ammunition. The troops of the department will forthwith organize, under the direction of the Committee of Vigilance and Safety, into companies of fifty men each, who will elect their officers, and when organized, they will report to the headquarters of the army, unless special orders are given for their destination.

The morning of glory is dawning upon us. The work of liberty has begun. Our actions are to become a part of the history of mankind. Patriotic millions will sympathize in our struggles, while nations will admire our achievements. We must be united--subordinate to the laws and authorities which we avow, and freedom will not withhold the seal of her approbation. Rally round the standard of the Constitution, entrench your rights with manly resolutions, and defend them with heroic firmness. Let your valor proclaim to the world that liberty is your birthright. We cannot be conquered by all the arts of anarchy and despotism combined. In heaven and in valourous hearts we repose our confidence.

Our only ambition is the attainment of rational liberty--the freedom of religious opinion and just laws. To acquire these blessings, we solemnly pledge our persons, our property, and our lives.

Union and courage can achieve everything, while reason combined with intelligence, can regulate all things necessary to human happiness. Samuel Houston General-In-Chief of Department, Telegraph and Texas Register San Felipe de Austin Oct. 8, 1835

Should the insanity defense be abolished?

Austin American-Statesman

PRO:

By SEN. WALTER MENGDEN

The "not guilty by reason of insanity" verdict that John Hinckley received has been widely denounced as a severe miscarriage of justice. However, the fault does not rest with the jury, but with the law.

Under federal law, the jury was required to render the "not guilty" verdict if there was any reasonable doubt about the defendant's sanity. Since psychiatry is not an exact science — and it is rare to find any two psychiatrists who agree on the same diagnosis — it was easy for a parade of "expert" witnesses to confuse a jury of lay persons.

What happens now is that Hinckley will undergo a civil hearing to see if he should be committed to a mental institution. His family will probably not try to spring him until the heat dies down, but if they wanted to, he might be able to be freed right away. Utilizing the same psychiatric witnesses that testified in his criminal trial, it is possible that Hinckley could be found not to possess any mental illness severe enough to require involuntary commitment. Even if a criminal who successfully employs the insanity defense is sent to a mental institution, he or she is frequently released a short time later.

I believe that insanity should be abolished as an affirmative defense in criminal cases on both a state and federal level. Whether or not a defendant committed a crime has nothing to do with that person's mental condition. To say that a person is "not guilty" — that he or she did not commit the crime — because of "insanity" is in itself insane. Instead, evidence of mental illness of a defendant would be introduced at the punishment stage of a trial.

Under the proposal that I introduced in the 1981 legislative session, if a defendant was found guilty, a judge or jury, whichever is assessing the sentence, would then determine if the person was mentally ill and required psychiatric treatment in confinement or, if probation is granted, as an out-patient. A criminal sentenced to psychiatric treatment, either at a treatment center within a prison or at a mental hospital, would be credited with time toward his or her sentence. However, a criminal in a mental hospital who recovered from the illness before the expiration of their sentence would be transferred back to prison to serve the remainder of the sentence.

It is clear that the present system is absolutely intolerable. The proper place for considering the possibility of mental illness of a defendant is in the punishment phase of a trial when the judge or jury can look at all mitigating circumstances. If a criminal is in need of treatment for mental problems, he or she should receive it as part of their sentence.

Sen. Mengden, a Republican from Harris County, has introduced bills in the Legislature to abolish the insanity defense.

By GEORGE E. DIX

Insanity as a defense to crime serves an important function. Proposed "revisions" of the area would accomplish little and sacrifice much.

Conviction of a serious crime reflects society's judgment that the accused has behaved not only dangerously but also in a morally reprehensible manner. Moral responsibility, as we think of it, exists only if the decision to act is the result of a relatively free choice to engage in conduct known to be contrary to society's demands. Under existing insanity law, a defendant is entitled to acquittal only if the existence of serious psychological abnormality at the time of the conduct shows the absence of these prerequisites to morally reprehensible behavior. By acquitting such defendants, we preserve criminal liability for those who are both "bad" and dangerous. Further, we reaffirm and reinforce the responsibility of the vast majority of actual or potential offenders for their conduct.

Society is, of course, entitled to protection against persons who act dangerously but in a fashion inconsistent with moral reprehensibility. This can be accomplished by procedures for committing a person acquitted on insanity grounds. There is simply no basis for believing that conviction and criminal sentencing provides more protection for society than insanity acquittal and subsequent commitment.

Some are disturbed at the conflicting psychiatric testimony generated by insanity cases. Yet battles among experts in other areas of litigation seldom stimulate demands that we abandon litigation in those areas. It is unfortunately true that psychiatrists are often of little help in addressing ultimate insanity questions. But this is because these ultimate questions are not ones of scientific fact but rather of moral or ethical judgment. No one is better equipped than 12 jurors to decide whether a defendant was so affected by serious psychological abnormality that he should not be regarded as having acted in a manner that justifies personal condemnation.

Little would be accomplished by making evidence of insanity relevant only to sentencing. There would still be dispute concerning whether the defendant acted in such a manner as makes him "deserving of" imprisonment.

Insanity cases are so infrequent that they constitute an almost insignificant aspect of criminal justice administration. In 1980, only 16 persons were committed to Texas mental hospitals following acquittal by reason of insanity. (Only eight were committed in 1981.) But in 1980, Texas district courts disposed of nearly 80,000 cases. It is not unreasonable to conclude that insanity acquittals accounted for no more than .02 percent of the cases processed, or about 1 in 5,000.

Given the numerous important problems that undoubtedly exist in the criminal justice system, it would be most unfortunate for attention and effort to be sidetracked into this area. It would be even more unfortunate to abandon a basic principle of criminal law in the course of such misplaced efforts.

Reports

JOB MARKET REALISM

AUSTIN — One of the agencies under review by the Sunset Commission right now is the Advisory Council for Technical-Vocational Education in Texas. The Council, known as ACTIVE, is an advisory body to the State Board of Vocational Education on technical/vocational education. ACTIVE also advises the Board on policy formation, coordination and implementation, and also advises on legislative matters that deal with technical/vocational education. ACTIVE serves an important role in planning for the future needs of technical/vocational education. Planning for the future needs of this type of education is vital because businesses are demanding more training in technical fields than ever before.

For example, 55 percent of technical/vocational schools responding to a recent survey reported having to turn away students. This was caused by enrollment's outgrowing the schools' facilities. Particularly popular were office/computer and health occupation programs.

In our district, one of the most well-known technical/vocational education centers is Texas State Technical Institute, or TSTI. TSTI is an example of the high standards and the success rates of modern vocational education.

For example, in these times of high unemployment, TSTI averages three job offers for every student enrolled. Before graduation, 85 to 90 percent of TSTI students have a job. There are 75 different programs at TSTI, from high technology fields like nuclear and laser technology to more traditional jobs like meat packing. Training programs range from three months to two years.

Last fall there were 911 students enrolled at Amarillo TSTI. Statewide, TSTI had 7,475. This probably will approach 16,000 by 1995, which is only 13 years away.

The administration of this many students requires good counsel and proper planning. We believe ACTIVE has done a good job, but it is our task as members of the Sunset Commission to find even better ways for ACTIVE to accomplish its goals.

We hope you will help us in that task. We know many of you have had experience in technical/vocational education, either as students or teachers. We hope you will share that experience and your ideas with us. Please write Senator Bill Sarpalius, P. O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas 78711.

Watching Washington

The United States needs a strong intelligence gathering capability to ensure its security and the security of its allies.

Information provided by our intelligence officers can help us anticipate international crises. Then we can work to prevent the crises or to cope with them in the best way possible.

The world we live in is increasingly hostile. Our adversaries are contemptuous of international law, human rights and national sovereignty.

Whether dealing with the Soviet Union's KGB or splinter terrorist groups, our intelligence officers enter a mean, tough business when they go under cover in foreign countries.

The anonymity under which they must work means that their efforts often go without recognition. While their failures are frequently criticized, their successes are generally unknown.

As a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee, I can assure you that our agents serve at great risk to perform vital tasks. They deserve our support.

The very least they should be able to expect is to have the risks of their work under cover reduced as much as possible. One obvious way is to lessen the likelihood of their names being published.

For the past several years, a group of anti-intelligence zealots has been systematically publishing the names of undercover U.S. intelligence agents.

After his name was made public, the station chief for the Central Intelligence Agency in Athens, Greece, was assassinated while returning home with his wife from a Christmas party.

Another CIA agent in Jamaica, identified by the same group, returned home to find his 12-year-old daughter's bedroom shot up. Fortunately, no one was hurt.

I find the actions of these anti-intelligence zealots to be reprehensible.

Not only do they place the lives of brave people in jeopardy, but their actions raise questions among our friends and foes about our ability to function effectively in intelligence operations.

For more than six years, I have been working to pass legislation that would put a stop to the unauthorized publication of the names of our undercover agents in foreign countries. I was the first Member of Congress to propose such action.

Therefore, I was pleased at the recent Senate vote, 81-4, to approve the Intelligence Identities Protection Act.

This act provides for a 10-year prison sentence and a fine of up to $50,000 for government employees who expose the identities of undercover agents in foreign countries. Other persons who show a "pattern of activities" which would "impair or impede" U.S. intelligence operations could be imprisoned for up to four years and fined $15,000.

The legislation isn't perfect. It's got some flaws. And quite a few changes were made in the bill I first introduced.

But it offers sorely needed protection to our intelligence agents serving abroad, and that will significantly enhance our national security.

TEEX teaches nuclear firefighters special techniques

COLLEGE STATION — Because fires in nuclear power plants can range from simple trashbasket blazes to electrical infernos that threaten vital radiation safety systems, fire brigades at such facilities need special training.

The Texas Engineering Extension Service, part of the Texas A&M University System, offers the kind of classroom and hands-on experience needed in one of the few programs nationwide, says the instruction coordinator.

A week of classes focuses on basic control and prevention skills, said David Cox of the TEEX Fire Protection Training Division.

In addition, nuclear plant emergency teams receive special emphasis on radiation detection, fighting fires in the presence of radioactive contamination and setting up control areas for firemen leaving the scene, said Cox.

The Russian wheat crop was a flop,
And ours will go over the top;
Seems our farmers would gain,
And relieve fiscal strain;
If Reagan's embargo would stop!

CAPITOL UPDATE

John Tower
U.S. SENATOR for TEXAS
142 RUSSELL OFFICE BUILDING
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20510

The 1980s for farmers in Texas have meant high interest rates, rising costs and falling prices. These factors have combined to push many farmers to the brink of insolvency.

And this spring, nature has dealt another serious blow to our farmers, particularly those in West Texas. The damage caused by recent hail storms is almost incomprehensible. Preliminary estimates indicate that 75 percent of the 4.2 million acres planted in cotton was damaged. That means the loss of about a million bales of cotton. Figures still are being compiled on other crop losses, but it is clear that wheat production has been affected substantially, and the corn crop also suffered significant damage.

The impact of this loss of food and fiber will be felt throughout the economy of the region. But the real tragedy is the plight of the individual farmers, who face imminent bankruptcy if assistance cannot be provided.

I spent enough time as a boy chopping cotton on my grandfather's farm to understand the heartbreak of seeing a crop destroyed by a whim of nature. I know that farming is more than a business. It is a way of life deeply cherished by those who cultivate the land and feed and clothe the rest of us.

In any year, crop damage of this severity would be a serious blow to farmers. But this year could be far worse because of the economic factors which have left many farmers facing this natural disaster with their credit resources exhausted.

For this reason, I have asked Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block to use every resource available to him to help Texas farmers survive this crisis.

It is clear that implementation of the crop insurance program enacted as part of 1981 farm legislation is insufficient as yet to alleviate the economic pressure.

I have asked the Secretary to consider invoking a special provision of the 1981 legislation which provides for direct disaster payments to producers. A high-level disaster task force sent by Secretary Block is compiling the necessary information and local officials are marshalling supporting data to forward to the department. And Secretary Block has promised me that he will give this situation his careful personal attention. I will continue to press vigorously for a prompt and favorable ruling.

In a larger sense, however, I hope that this disaster will help focus attention on the broader problems that face farmers throughout the nation.

We need to remind officials throughout the Administration, and in Congress, of the absolute necessity of maintaining a viable agricultural economy. The solutions to the many problems plaguing farmers will not be easy. Some solutions will come naturally as we improve the overall economy.

However, we must examine and deal with the problems unique to agriculture. It is my hope and expectation that we will be able to refine our domestic farm policies and expand export markets. If we can accomplish these two major goals, the innovation and hard work of our farmers will carry them through these trying times.

Loose Marbles

by Lisa Patman

Maybe the rest of you don't feel the same way, but I've always disliked getting a year older. Each time my birthday rolls around I think of all the things I meant to do that I hadn't got around to yet. This birthday was no exception. Last year I decided that I would do something really exciting this year, something that I had never dared do before, something that would astound and amaze those who knew me, maybe even something that would change the course of my life.

It was with this attitude that I embarked on the last day of my thirty-fifth year on this planet. As it happened, I was the leader of a band of nuts known as the McLean Methodist Youth, and I had these 20 people -teenagers, pre-teens, and befuddled adults- in tow in Colorado. I had forced them onto mules for a ride down the Royal Gorge, ordered them onto a tram for a ride into a blizzard atop Pikes Peak, and now was cajoling them down the rapids of the Colorado River for a white water rafting trip.

And while I never before had done any of these things, somehow it wasn't enough to satisfy that old "do something spectacular before you hit 36" urge. Never mind that I was perched precariously on the edge of a rubber raft, fighting off angry rocks with a tiny paddle. Never mind that I was still saddle sore from bouncing along on a mule. Forget the fact that I was still suffering from frostbite. Just take into account the fact that I don't have a brain in my head and you'll understand what followed.

There I was, taking a break from the rafting, when I noticed that several people were jumping off a cliff into the river. Aha, I thought to myself, here's something I've never done before, and it has everything I could want; it's daring, exciting, astounding, and amazing. I think I'll give it a go. With this brilliant idea, I crawled up the cliff, took my position on an outcropping, closed my eyes, stepped off the cliff, and did the most spectacular belly-buster anyone had ever seen. About 30 minutes later, after my husband had pulled me, unconscious, bruised and bleeding, from the river, after I had regained the ability to do little things like breathe, speak, and move parts of my body, I realized that the previous jumpers had been young, in shape, and above all, experienced. I was, unfortunately, none of the above. I was old, flabby, and dumb. And for some reason it had not occurred to me that if one jumps off a height equivalent to a three-story building, one should not expect to survive the fall.

However, as you can see, I lived to tell the tale, although my body is a curious shade of purple, my front teeth are a bit wobbly, and my ribs are not where they are supposed to be. And I definitely fulfilled all those things I had resolved the year before. In fact, it was quite an enlightening experience. And next year I plan to do something else new and untried -- like draining spaghetti through the holes in my head.

The Turbush children hurt in the crash are recuperating in the hospital and are in satisfactory condition. Mrs. Turbush was Mrs. Boucher's cousin and Mr. Tommy Turbush is Mrs. Sharp's nephew.

Wicker furniture has had its fashion ins and outs over the history of home furnishings. People were especially wild about wicker during the Victorian times when they put it in every room in the house.

People are doing the same thing today and probably for the same reasons: wicker is natural, handmade, and comfortable. Wicker is new, at the same time, old. It's rustic, yet exotic. Wicker is homey—simply, practically, naturally, comfortably homey, and that appeals to almost everyone.

Keeping It Clean An important part of keeping that "forever-new" look in your wicker furniture is keeping it clean. Go over it thoroughly with a soft brush and warm soapy water.

Wicker made of either fiber (twisted paper) or sea grass should never be hosed off because water will weaken the weave as well as the individual fibers. To clean this type of wicker furniture, use a damp cloth only. Very diluted domestic bleach will whiten soiled reed and willow pieces that have been left in their natural state, but this procedure should be used with great caution and only if scrubbing with warm soapy water does not do the job.

Wicker furnishings, kept clean and in good condition, will continue to give any decor the international flavor and feeling of comfort they have graced the world with for centuries. The seats on reproduction wicker chairs are never cane seats with wooden frames, but rather flimsy, circular-woven reed seats. Reproductions are also much lighter than old wicker pieces because the framework is made of bamboo rather than wood. Another clue is the poor Quality of reeds used in reproductions - they are fibrous and usually very brittle. The next thing to consider is the condition of the piece. Almost any damage to the wickerwork itself can be restored. Examine the framework carefully. Many older pieces have been left outdoors for years and the framework has warped or, in some cases, been rotten by the elements. Most structural damage can easily be repaired, but any weak joints that are hidden under the wickerwork usually entail removal of wicker around the joint, repairing the joint, and then restoring the wickerwork to its original condition. This long process usually requires a professional repairman and can be quite costly.

The boys had forgotten about the car being tied to the well, and Gilbert Wingo started to drive off when the men saw him and called him to stop. Secret Corners of the World

National Geographic Society

This extremely unusual book, created by the National Geographic Society, should appeal to everyone who is interested in little-known but fascinating places not found on the usual travel lanes of our world.

Over one hundred seventy color photographs grace the pages of this volume, and they will bring you face to face with people and places you may never have known existed, and will take you as far from our world as you could possibly be.

Travel with Tor Eigelund to Spain's Alpujarra to share the exuberant fiestas and earthy life of remote mountain communities, become acquainted with the mountains, swamps, salt flats, and desert that circle northern Afghanistan, travel back in time with Leslie Allen, who sails the dark channels of Tierra del Fuego, climb icy pinnacles in Columbia and the snow-draped peaks in equatorial Africa, or visit Polynesian isles with Victor Englebert, and you will be astounded by cultures and civilizations found in places most people do not know exist.

Many people have received their first glimpses of far-away places in the National Geographic magazine, and this fine book will carry all who read it just a bit further in their understanding of the nooks, crannies, and people not generally seen or understood by most of us.

"Secret Corners of the World" is now available at Lovett Memorial Library.

SHAMROCK, TEXAS

Gray County Gardening

We had a lot of participation at the Sick Plant Clinic recently. A lot of the problems centered around Mimosa trees with Fusarium Wilt, tomatoes with Septoria Leaf Spot Fungus and Cottonwood tree leaves with leaf miners.

On the subject of the fusarium wilt, it is bad news for mimosa tree owners.

The symptoms include leaf wilting, drying and shriveling, although they may remain green or yellowish for some time. Later the leaves fall and the branch dies. Sometimes only one side of a tree may be affected the first year, but trees usually wilt and die within a year of onset of symptoms.

Suckers may sprout from the main trunk, but there is usually no recovery. Brown discoloration can be found in the sapwood of trunks and branches even before leaves wilt. Discolored areas of cut stems may appear as complete rings.

Dark rings are also present in the roots. Infection is through the roots. The fungus can be carried over in seed from diseased trees.

Our advice is not to spend any money on trying to save a sick mimosa tree. It will die anyway - use the money to buy you a good replacement tree if it is in a valuable location.

On the subject of the Septoria leaf spot on tomatoes - infection usually occurs on the lower leaves near the ground, after plants begin to set fruit. At first, small, water-soaked spots are observed, which under ideal conditions will become numerous. Large areas of the leaves may be affected, but the individual spots can be recognized. The water-soaked spots become roughly circular, with dark margins surrounding a light-gray center with time, black specks which are spore producing bodies, can be seen in the center of the spots. If the spots are numerous, the lower leaves will turn yellow, die and progressively drop from the plant, until only a few leaves remain on the top of the plant.

The fungus is most active when temperatures range from 60 degrees to 80 degrees F., and humidity conditions are high. The disease is usually not serious during periods of hot, dry weather. The fungus can overwinter on crop residues from previous crops, decaying vegetation and some tomato related wild hosts. Crop rotation plowing under crop residues, and clean cultivation will reduce the amount of inoculum in tomato fields. Repeated applications of such fungicides as: captan, dyrene, maneb, or zineb can assist in controlling the disease.

For the leaf miners on the cottonwood trees, you can essentially forget them. They have only one generation per year and after they get between the two leaf surfaces an insecticidal application will not control them.

Reduce Landscape, Garden Watering

You can reduce the use of water in your home garden and landscape by following these eight tips.

1. Mulch to conserve water. A mulch is anything which covers the ground around plants and between rows. Mulching conserves moisture in the soil by reducing the rate of evaporation. Mulch also greatly reduces the presence of weeds, which compete with your plants for precious water and nutrients.

Many organic materials may be used as mulches, such as grass clippings (let the grass dry a bit before applying to the garden), wheat, straw, partially decomposed leaves or compost.

Plastic mulch also works well, is easy to use and prevents surface evaporation. Plastic mulch, when applied in the spring, keeps soil warmer and gives summer crops like tomatoes and peppers a faster start.

Try to put on the mulches when the soil is moist, even if you're not ready to plant. You can easily push back organic mulch at planting time, or cut slits or holes in plastic mulch. Ground mulched when dry is apt to stay dry if rain is sparse.

2. Grow cool-weather crops. In many areas, rainfall is heaviest in spring and fall. Ground water evaporates more slowly in cool weather, too, so take full advantage of spring and fall growing seasons for crops that like cool conditions: beets, broccoli, cabbage, cauliflower, collars, kale, kohlrabi, lettuce, mustard greens, onions, peas, spinach, Swiss chard and turnips. Plant these crops early in spring so they finish production before hot summer. For fall crops, sow in summer as recommended on seed packets, but keep the seed bed constantly moist for good germination.

3. Plant summer crops early. Transplant your indoor-started tomatoes, peppers and eggplants -- and direct-sow beans, cucumbers and squash -- a little earlier than usual to encourage bearing before sizzling temperatures arrive. If unusually late spring frost threatens, cover the young plants at night with hot caps, inverted plastic milk jugs or other protective devices. Remove covers in the morning.

4. Use shade to advantage. Moisture evaporates more slowly in shaded soil than in sun. Leafy vegetables such as cabbage, lettuce, spinach and Swiss chard do well in partial (not complete) shade -- that is, areas which receive full sun for only part of the day. Basil, mint, parsley and tarragon are a few herbs which thrive in partial shade. But fruiting vegetables such as tomatoes, peppers and vine crops need full sun for satisfactory production.

5. Space plants closely. Space plants and rows so maturing plants just overlap. This will shade the ground to reduce moisture loss and weed competition. If you use a mechanical cultivator, you may need to switch to hand cultivation in narrower rows.

6. Harvest young. Pick your vegetables when they are at their prime -- don't let them overrip. Picking reduces moisture requirements of plants and encourages continued production.

7. Weed regularly. Weeds compete with vegetables and flowers for every drop of water -- and often the stronger, deep-rooted weeds win the competition! Remove weeds as soon as they show themselves in your garden. Some weeds, like purslane, lamb's quarter and chickweed, may be eaten if picked young.

8. Water deeply, not often. Water in the evening or early morning. Use special soil-soaking hoses which allow water to drip slowly into the ground, and place hoses close to plants. Or set your garden hose, nozzle removed, directly on the ground to irrigate one part of your garden at a time. Let water run slowly for as long as necessary to soak deeply into the soil. A deep soaking is needed only every 7 to 10 days unless your plants show signs of wilting from insufficient moisture. Remember that oscillating-type lawn sprinklers, if used, throw water where you may need it and allow much more evaporation than other watering methods. Also, never use a sprinkler with Pampa water on gardens, flowers and shrubs. The salt content of the water can cause leaf margin burn, especially when sprinkled on during the daytime.

McLean Briefs

Mr. and Mrs. Carey Don Smith, Donnie and Stacie returned Monday night from a 10-day vacation in the Los Angeles, Calif. area. The McLean family visited former McLean resident Kenny Willingham and his family. The Smiths also visited Disney Land, Knott's Berry Farm, the Farmer's Market, Universal Studios, and went deep-sea fishing.

Last July 7, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Kinard were in Memphis when they decided to stop in the local drugstore for a cup of coffee. As they were leaving a Memphis gentleman stopped them and identified himself as Lester Campbell, a former editor of The McLean News. After visiting with the Kinards he asked them to tell all his old McLean acquaintances "Hello."

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Stevens visited daughter JoAnn Sherrod of Dallas, and son Jim of Eulas and Jim's new son, Austen Monroe. Evelyn Blaylock and Opal Hugg accompanied them and Opal visited with her son Gerald.

Chadd Mason, who will be a junior at Fayetteville High School next fall, has been invited to represent the United States on the Junior International Tennis Team this summer. The team, which will consist of 20 players chosen from state, regional and national rankings, will play the best juniors in the world and be eligible for world junior rankings.

The circuit will include at least five tournaments and between 25 and 30 matches touring Germany, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, England, France and Switzerland where the players will stay with European juniors' families. Mason is the 15-year-old son of Drs. Richard and Bettye Back.

TIPS ON TRIPS

It's that time again, and with the dollar increasing in value, more vacationers and businessmen will be traveling abroad. To help prepare for your trip, here are seven tips from experts in foreign currency exchange and other travel services.

- When changing dollars or traveler's checks abroad, do not exchange them at hotels, restaurants and shops. They usually give lower exchange rates. Banks are better, or you can...
- Plan ahead -- convert your currency prior to your trip. One way is to purchase foreign currency by mail. You can do this by contacting Deak-Perera, currency specialists, 29 Broadway, New York, NY 10006, Dept. RW-20.
- Be prepared -- for at least the first two days of your trip, with enough local currency to cover basic expenses. For security, keep additional funds in foreign or U.S. dollar denominated traveler's checks.

Shop around for traveler's checks. Some outlets offer a wider variety of foreign currency and checks than others. And with some traveler's checks there's no fee.

- Keep the serial numbers of your traveler's checks in a separate location from the checks.
- Airport facilities can exchange currency but the lines are longer or the office may be closed.
- In an emergency, Western Union can telex funds to foreign banks for your personal and business needs.
- Do your homework before your trip," says Leslie Deak, executive vice president of Deak-Perera. "Read up on the area or visit the local tourist board where possible. Learn about the currency and customs

A&M officials say wildlife management careers opening up

COLLEGE STATION — New careers in wildlife management are opening up for those who like the great outdoors and are interested in preserving what many believe is an important part of the American way of life.

Officials at Texas A&M University, which offers a degree in wildlife and fisheries sciences and boasts one of the leading programs in the country, say there is a growing demand for wildlife experts to manage recreational hunting and fishing resorts.

"As part of managing an increasing number of these resorts, our graduates are called on to keep detailed records of wild game in an area," said Dr. Tom Linton, director of a new scholarship program to attract more students to the field. "They are responsible for counting animal populations and assuring that the hunting areas are safe."

"Hunting as a recreational sport is gaining a lot of interest from weekend vacationers, which is opening doors for students who would like to work in the wildlife industry," he said.

Freaky Texas weather detailed in new book

COLLEGE STATION — A century of Texas weather-watching proves that if you wait long enough, you'll see everything -- a 15-inch snowfall in Beaumont, a 38-inch drenching of Thrall, and a day in the Panhandle when the high temperature was two degrees below zero.

Such freaks of weather have been brought together for the first time by researchers with the State Climatologist's Office at Texas A&M University who distilled 100 years of state meteorology records into a new publication now available to the public.

John Griffiths, Texas official State Climatologist and professor of meteorology, and former graduate student Greg Ainsworth assembled information for the $7.95 booklet -- "One Hundred Years of Texas Weather" -- last year. Many people are probably not aware of all the weather extremes since the 1880s now compiled in one document with tables and maps, Griffiths says.

NEWS OF HEALTH

NEW DRUG HELPS ANGINA PATIENTS

Over two million Americans suffer from chest pain that doctors term angina pectoris. Some experience this pain after physical exercise. Doctors call this angina-at-rest. Most often associated with atherosclerotic heart disease, angina is brought on whenever the heart is not getting enough oxygen to meet its needs.

If you think you have angina pectoris or if you have unexplained chest pain, you should see your physician. A doctor is the only one who can diagnose the illness and prescribe for it.

Of interest to patients with angina is news of a drug that has recently received approval from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. Its generic name is verapamil HCl, the prototype of a new class of drugs in the United States called calcium antagonists. These drugs represent a significant breakthrough in cardiovascular therapy.

Verapamil HCl, marketed here under the name Calan™ by Searle Pharmaceuticals Inc., has been used in more than 100 countries during the past two decades. It has accumulated more than 3.8 million patient-years of experience.

The new heart drug Calan™ allows patients with angina to lead a more normal life.

Information about your changing telephone service from Gary Stevens, Community Relations Manager.

Industry changes will affect us all

This is a time of significant change for Southwestern Bell and for the entire telecommunications industry. Decisions are being made as to how we are organized; in how we price and market our services; and in the policies that govern our industry.

These changes will touch everyone -- customers, shareholders and our employees. They involve new concepts in home and business communications, and new ways of obtaining and using telecommunications products and services.

Keeping Pace with Change and Its Impact on You

As the company restructures itself and adapts to these changes, you will want to know their impact on you and your telephone service. That's part of my job: keeping you informed about our plans. My duties also include recommending areas for service improvements, monitoring service problems and serving as the company's representative to the community.

Naturally, you'll continue to call the Business Office with questions about your bill or our Repair Bureau to get your telephone line fixed. But I'll try to keep you posted about changes that might affect your service.

While I've had the opportunity to visit with some of you about these telephone issues, it's impossible for me to speak personally to everyone. That's why I will be using this column to communicate with you. My address is listed at the end of the column. Please feel free to drop me a note anytime. I'll be glad to hear from you.

I can't guarantee that I will have all the answers or instant solutions. But, I can promise that I will listen and help you in whatever way I can.

Most importantly, I will keep you posted on changes -- local and national -- that affect your telephone service.

Company Files Application for Increase in Rates

Unless you've been out of the state the past few weeks, I'm sure you know by now we've filed with the Texas Public Utility Commission an application to increase rates. We are well aware this is not the way to win a popularity contest. It's unfortunate, but it's necessary.

The $471.5 million we are seeking is more money than I can imagine, but so is the $1.5 billion we've budgeted this year to expand and improve service in Texas. Incidentally, this is the fifth straight year we have committed more than $1 billion in the state.

Almost a third of the total we've asked for is the result of rules the Federal Communications Commission recently adopted, requiring faster recovery of expenses for depreciation and other capital costs. The FCC's action was taken because competitive and technological developments have resulted in shorter service life for telephone equipment. It's a simple, but costly, fact.

Remember, if you have something to talk about, don't hesitate to drop me a line. Here's my address:

Wheat Harvest

Once the rains let-up wheat harvest has progressed rapidly. Our wheat crop has had a lot of problems such as weather with its hail, tornadoes; too dry, then too wet, too many weeds. However, probably the worst problem is the price.

Game Bird Conference

In response to the increased interest in game bird production, the Texas Agricultural Extension and the Department of Poultry Science at Texas A&M University, have developed the Texas Game Bird Conference.

This all-day conference is scheduled for Saturday, July 17, in the Kieberg Center, on the campus of Texas A&M University in College Station, Texas. The program will get underway promptly at 9 a.m.

Highly qualified personnel from the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station will speak on such timely topics as selecting breeders for better performance, maintenance and repair of small incubators and the effect of incubation procedures on young birds.

Other topics to be covered include release techniques, feeding for eggs, feathers and meat, and reproduction problems.

Game bird health is a major problem for all producers at one time or another. Dr. Tom E-leazer, DVM, a nationally known avian pathologist from Clemson University, Elgin, South Carolina, will be speaking on this important subject.

Perhaps the highlight of the day will be the two workshop sessions. Two successful operators will head up the workshop on "commercial game bird production." Jack Campbell, Duck Creek Game Farm, Spur; and Frank Thompson, C&F Game Bird Farm, Tyler, and they are coming to share their thoughts with the group.

Leading the "ornamental game bird workshop" will be Dave McKelvey, Game Farm Consultant, Wetmore, Texas. McKelvey was curator of birds at the Brackenridge Zoo in San Antonio, featured on several national television shows and hosted his own radio show.

Horace Gore, project leader, Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, will take a look at "The Law and the Game Bird Breeder."

There will be a $15 individual registration fee at the door. A spouse may accompany the participant for an additional $5. These fees include the cost of the conference, lunch, and two coffee breaks. There will also be a $1 charge for the printed proceedings.

For further information and a copy of the complete program, contact the Gray County Extension Office or call Anita at 713/845-4318, she will be glad to help you.

Home Fire Safety

Most fires happen when everyone is asleep.

So, every home needs at least one smoke detector close to where the family sleeps to awaken everyone in case of fire.

Once awake, most persons have a good chance to escape since inhaled smoke and gases cause many fire-related deaths and injuries.

Each year, more than 6,000 deaths and nearly 30,000 injuries happen as a result of home fires. These fires start from many sources, like gasoline, flammable fabrics in clothes, cigarettes and space heaters. But, if you follow these tips, you can minimize the possibility of a fire loss in your home.

1. Store gasoline outside the house and well away from ignition sources.
2. Store gasoline only in containers designed specifically for this purpose.
3. Never use gasoline for cleaning clothing, machine parts or anything else.
4. Use charcoal starter for lighting outdoor grills. Never throw any flammable liquid, like gasoline, on burning or smoldering fires.
5. Follow washing instructions for flame-resistant clothing to preserve its protective quality.

6. Teach everyone in the household to "drop and roll" on the floor or ground in case clothing catches fire.

7. Don't wear loose robes or other loose clothing when cooking.

8. Keep upholstered furniture away from wood stoves, ranges, space heaters and fireplaces.

9. Caution smokers against placing ashtrays on upholstered furniture or smoking when drowsy, drinking alcohol or taking medication.

10. Make sure every gas or fuel-burning space heater is properly vented.

11. Check electric space heaters for a shut-off switch that activates if the heater tips over and be sure heaters have protective grills around heating elements.

12. Be sure extension cords used with space heaters match the heater's electrical requirements.

13. Never use a portable electric heater in a bathroom or near a sink.

14. Locate at least one smoke detector near sleeping rooms.

Test the smoke detector at least once a month to see if it's working.

Ranchers Roundup Unique Opportunity

Gray County ranchers have an opportunity to attend the International Ranchers Roundup, one of the most comprehensive educational programs developed for the ranching industry.

The Ranchers Roundup will be held in Del Rio August 10-12. Tours of innovative Southwest Texas and Mexican ranches are scheduled for August 9 and August 13, respectively.

Over 100 noted ranching experts, key policy makers and industry leaders from 12 states and three countries will share their expertise with an expected crowd of 1,000 participants.

A general theme, "Effective Ranch Management," carries throughout the weeklong event that includes a daylong general session featuring industry leaders and policy makers, plus two days of concurrent sessions in beef cattle, brush management, sheep and angora goats, meat goat production, wildlife, and this year's special topic, "Women in Ranching." All six concurrent sessions will be going simultaneously so producers may attend desired talks in any of the sessions.
