Despite babysitting a granddaughter, taking three long-distance telephone calls from three different children, and other various and sundry interruptions, I managed to watch most of the production of Shakespeare's Hamlet which aired on PBS last week. For an old English teacher, the three-hour program was sheer delight.

As I listened to the familiar speeches, and reveled in the beautiful language, I was struck again at how Shakespeare has permeated our everyday conversation so thoroughly, that we quote him without ever knowing that's where the phrase comes from.

In Hamlet alone, were these phrases that you have heard: "Ah, sweet Prince!", "To be, or not to be", "To sleep, perchance to dream", "There's something rotten in Denmark", "Neither a lender nor a borrower be", "To thine own self be true."

In fact, aside from the Bible, Shakespeare remains the most quoted of all writers of the English language. Whether you studied Shakespeare or not in school, you probably quote him every day without being conscious of it. Here's a few common phrases which came from the Bard: "It's Greek to me!", "Opportunity knocks but once", "Fight till the last gasp", "the worm will turn", "now is the winter of our discontent", "Off, with his head!", "A horse, a horse! My kingdom for a horse!", "I'll not budge an inch", "kiss me, Kate", "And thereby hangs a tale", "star-crossed lovers", "We're burning daylight", "What's in a name?", "a rose by any other name would smell as sweet."

There are so many familiar phrases from Shakespeare that one small column cannot list them all. Just remember when you say any one of the above phrases, that you are quoting from the greatest writer in the history of the English language!

Did you ever give a party, and nobody came? That's almost what happened in the Democratic run-off election Saturday. Across the state, about 7 percent of the registered voters bothered to cast a vote. McLean and Gray County held true to the state turnout, with only 63 voters from McLean and Alanreed coming to the polls.

After looking at the list of those who voted, however, I discovered something interesting about the polls in

Money Problems

Although I am opposed to dumping all our problems into the curriculum of the over-burdened school system, I know of one more course of study that should be added to every high school program...family economics. Youngsters graduate from high school and college without having the slightest idea how to manage money, balance a checkbook, reconcile a bank statement, or plan for spending.

Because of this lapse of training of the young, more marriages are ruined because of quarrels about money than for any other reason. Sociologists have also proved that frustrations from money problems increase child abuse and wife beating.

If the inability to handle money causes so many problems, why have we done so little to educate ourselves? Perhaps the answer to that is that ignorance regarding money is so pervasive in the American culture that the stupidity extends right up through the federal government. If we dumb taxpayers watch Uncle Sam spend money that he does not have, then we automatically think that we should be able to do the same thing. The dream of a balanced federal budget has slipped away from administration for many years, and will certainly elude this one too.

But more important for many of us, is that dream of a balanced family budget has become the impossible dream. Although inflation is coming under control, interest rates (and finance charges on consumer credit) are still out of sight, and most families have obligated themselves to all kinds of long standing debts.

Perhaps we need to go back to something Jimmy Carter said in the last blighted days of his Presidency. He warned that Americans have always expected more in each succeeding generation and that perhaps the time had come for us to lower our expectations. Carter's pronouncement was greeted with such anguished cries that one might suspect he had made a treasonous statement. But the peanut farmer from Georgia probably touched the problem correctly.

Perhaps our financial woes do stem from expecting too much. Perhaps it is time that we faced the economic facts of life, and lower our expectations and begin preaching lowered expectation to our children. If we can preach the financial doctrine of maintaining the status quo, paying as you go, and saving money, we might begin to work our way out of this financial dilemma.

Now that I have enlightened you about how to handle your finances, you'll have to excuse me. I have to go to the bank to borrow money to try to cover my latest overdraft.....

DISTAFF

McLean. I have no idea if the same age pattern holds true across the state, but if it does, politicians had better take notice and begin directing their campaigns toward a certain age group. You see in McLean, only three people in their twenties bothered to vote (and those were all female!) and only five voters were in their thirties, and only six were in their forties.

The vast majority casting ballots in McLean were 50 and above, with the seventy-year-olds casting more votes than any other age group.

Also more women than men voted.

If I were a politician running for office, those statistics would make me sit up and take notice! If I wanted to be elected to office, I would certainly emphasize, in my campaign, things like social security, medicare, senior citizens centers, and other issues that affect older voters. Obviously the younger voter doesn't care who gets elected. If that trend holds true, politicians will certainly begin ignoring the "youth" issues.

Why do you suppose the older American values his responsibility to vote more than the younger American? Is it because most of those in their seventies, have lived through (and perhaps fought in) two world wars and countless other challenges to freedom in this century? Is it because the septuagenarians are more patriotic? Or is it that they just have more time to get to the polls?

Whatever the answer, those who are less than 50 had better start getting their peers to vote, or all the government will be keyed to senior citizens!

Senator Lloyd Bentsen Watching Washington

"When a road is once built, it is a strange thing how it collects traffic, how every year as it goes on, more and more people are found to walk thereon, and others are raised up to repair and perpetuate it, and keep it alive."

These words by Robert Louis Stevenson have particular significance for Texans since road travel is so much a part of our lives.

In our broad and wide-ranging state, we are especially aware of our fine highway system and acutely attuned to its state of repair.

Texans admittedly tend to be proud when a new stretch of highway is completed, and a bit impatient when tardy repairs make for a rough ride.

When I first went on the Senate Transportation Subcommittee in 1971, Texans really weren't getting their fair share of federal highway funds for construction and repair of our interstate highways.

I learned that in 1970, Texans had paid out a dollar in federal gasoline taxes for every 60 cents we got back in highway funds. That ratio had to change, in my opinion, and by 1975 we had gotten it up to 68 cents and to 88 cents in 1980.

Comparison figures aren't in yet for 1981, but I am satisfied we made more progress. Last November, the Senate passed a highway bill that made some major changes in the way the federal highway program is funded.

Even though overall spending on federal highways was cut back last year in our efforts to reduce government spending, Texas' share increased. Texas is receiving 5.8 percent of all the federal highway funds distributed this fiscal year, up by more than a half percent over 1981. This moves us from the third largest recipient among the states to the second largest—behind only California.

Last year's bill was approved for only one year, so this spring the subcommittee has been reworking the highway bill to get it approved for four-year funding. As ranking Democrat on the Subcommittee for Transportation, I am pleased that the full Environment and Public Works Committee has approved our highway bill and that Texas has fared well again.

For example, the formula for funding the bridge program has been changed. The program will be funded on the national average cost for building one square foot of bridge. The national average is $57, but the average cost in Texas is $35. That means we will be able to build more bridge for the amount of funding we receive than most other states.

Texas also should maintain its position as second largest recipient of federal highway funds, at a figure slightly larger than last year.

As co-sponsor of this highway bill, I will be working to see it approved by the Senate as quickly as possible and without any changes that would lessen Texas' share of funding.

Our highways are a vital part of our lives, and as much money as Texans pay to support the federal highway program we deserve a fair share back.

SPENDING MORE AND MORE

AUSTIN -- It wasn't enough for some members of the Legislature who call themselves "conservatives" that we had to go to Austin for a pointless special session. It wasn't enough for them that the special session cost about $300,000. It wasn't enough to spend hundreds of millions on college construction and prisons.

Some people had to spend that money in the most inefficient way possible.

A good example of this was the opposition to our bill to set up work-release centers for non-violent felons. Under our plan, a small class of offenders would be sentenced to a work-release program under the direction of the county sheriff. They would spend all their free time in jail and work during the daytime. They would pay you, the taxpayer, room and board for the jail. They would pay you, the victim, what their crimes cost you. For example, if a criminal stole your car and wrecked it, he would buy you a new car. The criminals also would have to support their families.

There was only one thing wrong with this program. Except for a few duty-minded sheriffs like Travis McPherson of Deaf Smith County and T. L. Baker of Potter County, few sheriffs would want to go to the trouble of setting up the program.

For that reason, we put a bonus in the law. For every day a prisoner spent on the work-release program, the state would pay his county 75 percent of what it would have cost to keep that prisoner in prison.

The program had an appropriation of $250,000. Simple arithmetic tells us the program would have saved the state $62,500 the first year. This does not include savings to the taxpayers in the form of reduced welfare payments, or payments to victims.

Some people didn't seem to think $62,500 of your tax money was worth the bother. One Senator in particular, John Leedom of Dallas, worked extra hard to cost you money. Leedom calls himself a conservative. In the Panhandle and the South Plains, we say conservatives try to save tax money, not spend all of it if they can. The definition of conservative seems to change a little when you get inside Dallas County.

In the same session, Senator Leedom tried to add $3 million to the prison bill, even though the money wasn't even requested by the Texas Department of Corrections.

During the next session of the Legislature, when it will take more than the lack of time in a five-day session to kill good legislation, we will be back with bills to protect the victim's rights and cut down on the welfare rolls. There will be a few so-called "conservatives" trying to stop us, but we know we will have the support of the people and the sheriffs of this state. With that kind of help, we will be hard to stop.

We want to know how you feel about saving tax money. Should we try to save money, or should we just keep spending more and more? Please write to Senator Bill Sarpalius, P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas 78711.

Traveling in Mexico certainly is an enlightening experience. During a recent trip there, I learned, for example, that the language barrier can be overcome. I had been worried about that particular problem, especially since my Spanish is limited to words like enchilada, burrito, and Acapulco. And while this is adequate for the nearest Take-A-Taco Drive Inn, it hardly suffices among the natives of our southern neighbor. I was fortunate, however, to meet a nice Mexican lady who taught me that it's more important to know body language than to have a degree in linguistics.

Here's how it went:
Senora Gonzales: "Si, we have many tortillas, how many do you desire?"
Me (holding up 12 fingers—a tricky feat): "This many."
Senora Gonzales: "Okay, twelve. You also want something for your skin which the sun has kissed too many times, si?"
Me (wincing painfully): "Si."
Senora Gonzales: "And for the ugly green color that you are on the face, perhaps a little Pepto Bismol?"
Me (gagging openly): "That would be mucho goodo."
Senora Gonzales: "And for your snickering family, perhaps a rap in the mouth would be nice, si?"
Me (perking up a bit): "Mucho si!"
Senora Gonzales: "Okay, little chickie, that will be four hundred pesos. And for you, just because I like you, I throw in a free Spanish dictionary with which you will pummel your spouse, okay?"
Me (without hesitation): "Si, si, si! Muchas gracias!"

Isn't it amazing? Body language is universal—at least among females.
See?
Si!

Age is no test for a good cook. Some great cooks are in their seventies, and some are just babies! HEMORRHOID MEDICINES

There are a number of prescription and non-prescription medicines available to ease the discomfort of hemorrhoids. Depending on actual ingredients of each, they are designed to relieve pain, burning, itching, swelling and inflammation.

Local anesthetics such as benzocaine reduce nerve transmissions from hemorrhoidal tissue and, hence, may relieve burning, itching and pain.

Astringents such as zinc oxide protect underlying tissues and supposedly lessen the secretion of mucus and other materials. They help relieve irritation and inflammation.

Protectants such as white petrolatum and mineral oil promote healing and help prevent irritation that might otherwise be produced when hemorrhoids are exposed to fecal materials and air.

In addition to the above medicines which are found in ointments to be applied directly to hemorrhoids, there are other products which prevent aggravation of existing hemorrhoids. The stool softeners and laxatives are effective in this regard. Increasing the amount of fiber in the diet may be effective and often eliminates the need for laxatives.

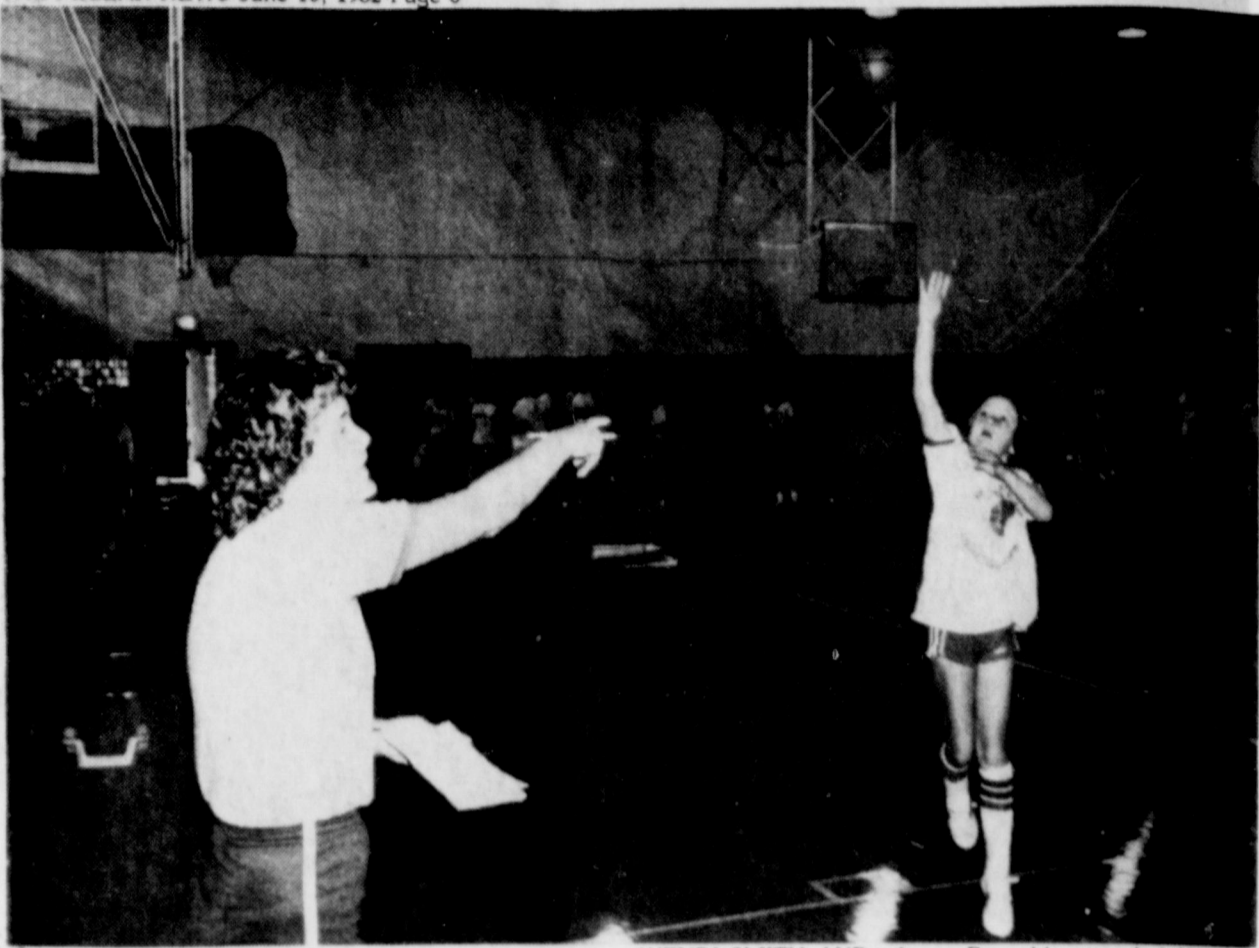

Self-care of hemorrhoids is not always wise, however. Most authorities agree that a physician should be contacted when there is bleeding, protrusion, or seepage associated with hemorrhoids.

JOE VANZANDT

PRESSURE CANNER TESTING

The season for fruits and vegetables is just around the corner. Be ready to conserve your surplus fruits and vegetables at the peak of quality.

The right equipment in good working condition is important to insure good quality, safe, and nutritious foods.

A pressure canner is used to process all non-acid foods in order to prevent possible spoilage and/or botulism. To insure accurate temperature in the pressure canner, the Extension Service recommends that pressure canner gauges be tested each year.

McLean and area residents may have their pressure canner gauges tested free of charge at the Lovett Memorial Library on Wednesday, June 16, from 2 to 4 p.m. Residents may bring their canner lids to the library during that time or may bring them before hand and leave them. Canner lids that are left at the library prior to Wednesday afternoon should be labeled with a name. Donna Brauchi, County Extension Agent, will do the testing.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic level, race, color, sex, religion or national origin.

PSEUDORABIES THREATENS SWINE

Swine producers in Gray County should keep their guard up to prevent pseudorabies from infecting their herds.

The virus disease has been a major problem in the Midwest but a recent case in Texas has resulted in a number of herds being quarantined.

Pseudorabies is caused by a herpes virus which affects the respirator, reproductive and nervous systems of animals. The virus has the ability to remain alive in recovered animals, and these apparently normal animals are then a source of infection for susceptible animals.

Symptoms of pseudorabies in swine are variable. Baby pigs may die suddenly without showing any symptoms or they may live several days and show signs such as vomiting, diarrhea, listlessness, weakness and loss of appetite as well as incoordination, violent

CARD OF THANKS
We wish to express our appreciation to each one especially Lamb Funeral Home for their kindness shown during this time of the loss of our loved one. We are grateful for the numerous flowers, food and many calls.
Sincerely,
The Families of J.B. Luster Debbie and Kim Malberg and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Whatley Sr.

So many things have happened-both good and bad-since my last "thank you" has appeared, that I want to write another. It's been another month in the hospitals-both Elk City and

Oklahoma City-and more surgery-but I am home again and fee; I may be privileged to stay awhile. In the meanwhile, "get-well cards and cards from the museum acknowledging more donations in honor of my birthday encourage me to make another year of it. May God bless each and every one of you and may I gain some strength to do something nice for you is my prayer. Sincere thanks to all. Vera F. Back

There are no words to say how my children, grandchildren and I appreciate all the kind and thoughtful things that were done at this sad time, the words of comfort, the prayers, the food and other help, Creed and Wanda Lamb, Glen Curry, and Bill Thomas, the ones that sang, Carl Baker, Brother Smith and Jim. I ask your prayers as I go on alone. Thanks. The P.M. Gibsons Family

We wish to express our gratitude for all the kindness and expressions of sympathy shown in the loss of our loved one. Mr. and Mrs. Bill Holmes and Family

HOMEMAKER NEWS

It's time to celebrate June as Dairy Month and what better way than with one of the increasingly popular dairy products-yogurt. Yogurt was first discovered in the Middle East during Biblical times, when it was found that milk left in a warm place thickened and developed a tart flavor.

Today there are more than 20 flavors to be purchased from among three basic types: (1) flavored, without fruit; (2) flavored, with fruit sundae-style, with fruit at the bottom of the container; (3) flavored with fruit blended-style (Swiss, French, etc.), with fruit blended throughout. Frozen yogurt products are also on the market.

Yogurt is usually made from a mixture of fresh, partially skimmed milk, and non-fat dry milk. The final product may also contain sugar, flavorings, colorings, and fruit. It is possible to make yogurt at home using commercial yogurt as a starter.

NUTRITIVE VALUE
Because yogurt is a concentrated form of milk, it fits into the milk group and is a good source of protein, riboflavin and calcium.

Yogurt equals milk in its nutritive value, cup for cup, and can count towards the amount of milk recommended daily. Special therapeutic claims that have been made for yogurt, however, have no scientific evidences to back them up.

Dieters should be aware that the calorie content of yogurt will vary among the different flavors and brands. Many of the sweeteners and the fruit preserves which are added to yogurt can add significantly to the caloric content, but not the nutrients. In general, plain yogurt runs about 180 calories per cup. Fruited or flavored versions may contain over 300 calories per cup.

STORAGE AND HANDLING

Yogurt may be stored 10 or more days after purchased if it is handled properly. It should be kept refrigerated. If it has separated, as it normally does, simply stir the liquid back into the soiled portion. Unopened cartons with tight-fitting lid may be stored upside down to prevent air from entering the carton. Once it has been opened, store it right side up.

TIPS FOR COOKING WITH

YOGURT
Yogurt's custard-like texture or body will be broken down by any vigorous beating, so treat it gently. Spare the heat in cooking with yogurt. Low temperatures and short cooling times are best or yogurt may separate. This does not hurt the flavor. Yogurt can be stabilized by blending in a small amount of flour or cornstarch.
In baked products, use 1/2 teaspoon baking soda for each cup of yogurt used. Yogurt fills in for buttermilk in biscuits and pancakes when thinned with a little water.
In making gelatin salads, one cup of plain or fruit flavored yogurt may substitute for 1 cup of cold water. The change in taste, texture and color is interesting. Yogurt may be substituted for sour cream in most recipes, especially when calories are being counted and cooking isn't required. The finished yogurt product will be different, less rich and more tart.
Try yogurt for a nutritious taste treat!

The 100 Greatest Baseball Players of All Time
By Lawrence Ritter and Don Honig

The criteria by which baseball players down through the years have been judged, has of necessity changed due to the differences in stadiums, the field, increased travel and many other factors which give rise to tremendous arguments about who the greatest 100 players of all time might be.

Sports writers Lawrence Ritter and Don Honig present in this publication their choices, which of course may not co-incide with yours, and present reasons why they have made the selections they have. They give a resounding "yes" to the question whether a player with three or five years in the majors might be considered above a person of much longer playing time already selected to the Hall-Of-Fame.

Short biographies of each player are presented with anecdotes and stories of the greatest moments of his career, and many fascinating photographs are included showing the players at various milestones in their "baseball" history.

Read the exploits of such immortals as "Ty" Cobb, Babe Ruth, Christy Mathewson, Lou Gehrig, "Smoky" Joe Wood, "Chick" Hafey, "Lefty" Grove, Jimmy Foxx, Grover Cleveland Alexander, Bill Terry, Walter Johnson, Harry Heilmann, "Shoeless" Joe Jackson, "Gabby" Hartnett, Rogers Hornsby, and "Home Run"

Baker, and also more contemporary players such as Ted Williams, Juan Marchal, Stan Musial, Ernie Banks, "Whitey" Ford, Sandy Koufax, Lou Brock, Jackie Robinson, Joe DiMaggio, Steve Carlton, Bob Gibson, Brooks Robinson, Frank Robinson, Mickey Mantle, Carl Yastrzemski, Robin Roberts, Rod Carew, Dizzy Dean, Joe Morgan, Mike Schmidt, Tom Seaver, Bob Feller, Yogi Berra, Jim Palmer, Roy Campanella, and Roberto Clemente.

You of course may add or subtract names at your discretion, but it seems to this writer the selections made here are essentially favorable for presenting the 100 best of all time, and the book certainly has no one listed who was not or is not truly great.

"The 100 Greatest Players of All Time" is now available at Lovett Memorial Library.

McDonald Completes School

Gray County constable for McLean Jim McDonald recently completed an eight-week basic certification school for peace officers. The school, sponsored by Amarillo College, covered everything from traffic law through civil law. McDonald said. After attending 340 hours of training, he is now certified as a licensed peace officer for the state of Texas.

Out of the 16 graduating members of his class, McDonald ranked sixth.

Fire Precautions When Away From Home

If you are staying at a hotel and suspect that there may be a fire, check with the front desk by phone, then try your doorknob. If the knob isn't hot, check the hall; if there is only a little amount of smoke, head for the stairwell. Don't use the elevator.

Otherwise, stay in your room and stuff wet towels around the doors to keep out the smoke. If necessary, break a window to get fresh air.
