"It's good news. Mrs. Sweeney?

Twins, did y' say?" says Mrs. Sweeney, "Sure now, and what do y' know about that!"

It's easy to see that Mrs. Sweeney is a busy woman. Probably that's why she expects so much of her telephone: The latest news of her nieces and nephews, for example. Calls that are both fast and clear. And, once a month, a telephone bill that she expects to be reasonable.

The job of the men and women who work for this company is to give Mrs. Sweeney the sort of telephone service she expects.

This means much more than just operating switchboards, or keeping lines in repair. It means getting ready-sometimes far ahead—to meet problems as they come up. It means doing the daily job a little better all the time.
