FISH AND SEAFOOD

The former custom of including a fish course in a dinner has largely died out in the United States, except on very formal occasions. It is still common practice in Europe. Meat is not as plentiful there, and it is more expensive. As a result, Europeans enjoy a dietary delicacy that many Americans miss. The approach of the Lenten season should help to emphasize the importance of fish at all seasons.

Years ago, peoples who lived closest to the sea or to fresh waters naturally had the best chance of appreciating fish. Before the days of refrigeration, quick-freezing and rapid transport, delicate foods like fish and milk were difficult to ship. This gave rise to the mistaken belief that fish and milk should not be eaten at the same meal, because spoilage of one or the other could cause illness. Now, due to modern packaging and processing techniques, fish and milk can be shipped safely, so that fear can be eliminated.

Fish With Milk

Indeed, one of the best ways to eat fish and seafood is with milk, cream or half-and-half. Every gourmet appreciates a good oyster stew, clam chowder, New England style, thick smooth lobster bisque, fish chowders, or creamed tuna on toast. Sour cream tartare sauce with fish fried in crumbs soaked in buttermilk is a special treat. And who can resist herring marinated in sour cream?

Nutritional values of fish emphasize the most important of all nutrients, protein. Fish proteins are almost equivalent alternates for those of meat, poultry, game, eggs, milk and cheese. Fish can be a main course as well as a preliminary. Fish "muscle" is never tough, maybe because swimming is easy in buoyant waters — for a fish. This makes cooking easy and quick.

Fish can be boiled, pan or deep-fried, baked, pickled, dried, smoked or packed in water or oil. It can be used in casseroles such as tuna and rice, with or without cheese. Deep-fried fish balls or sticks make good breakfast dishes; breaded fillets make excellent sandwiches with tomato and raw onion slices on a bun. Salmon, tuna, and various seafoods are excellent in salads.

Important For Iodine

Deep-sea fish and seafoods should be used often for their contribution of iodine, the chemical element essential for thyroid function and the prevention of simple goiter. Fish and seafoods also contain vitamins and minerals. The seafoods furnish nutritive values comparable to those supplied by fish. Shrimps, crabs, lobsters, clams, mussels and scallops all make fine cocktails as well as main dishes. Shrimps and crabs are particularly good in salads.

Caviar or other fish roe is a tasty delicacy, served with fine-chopped onions and hard-cooked eggs, or made into a canape with slices of cucumber marinated in French dressing and served on thin rounds of toast.

The Bureau of Commercial Fisheries, Department of the Interior, Washington, D.C., publishes useful and interesting fish recipes from the 19th Century entitled "Letters from The Captain's Wife".

15 Accidents On Rural Highways In Gray County

The Texas Highway Patrol investigated 15 accidents on rural highways in Gray County during the month of February, according to Sergeant Dalrymple, Highway Patrol Supervisor of this area.

These crashes resulted in one person killed, five persons injured and an estimated damage of $6,165.00.

The rural traffic accidents for this county during the first two months of 1968 shows a total of 30 accidents resulting in one persons killed, 12 persons injured, and an estimated property damage of $16,800.00.

"With the April 15 deadline for obtaining inspection stickers drawing near, only 52 per cent of the registered vehicles in this county have been inspected," stated the Patrol Supervisor.

In order to avoid the inconvenience of the last minute rush and the possible shortage of seat belts, motorists are urged to get their vehicles inspected promptly.

Any driver operating a vehicle registered in Texas, that is required to be inspected, on public roads after April 15 without a valid 1968 inspection sticker will be operating in violation of the law and is punishable by a fine not to exceed two hundred dollars.

WHEN A CHILD DARTS OUT

Rare is the parent, and rare is the motorist, who has not been haunted by the vision of a child darting out in front of an oncoming automobile. Yet, tragically, such accidents are anything but rare.

If a child is injured or killed in this manner, who bears the legal responsibility?

In a sense the child himself is at fault, since he "took the initiative" in causing the accident. But the law adjusts its standard of care to fit the age of the individual. In most of these darting out cases, the child is too young to be tagged with the label of negligence.

Yet, the fact that the child is not responsible does not automatically shift responsibility to the motorist. Our impulsive, humanitarian sympathy for the youthful victim does not justify placing the blame on someone who is truly blameless.

Thus, a motorist is ordinarily not liable for running down the child who darts out suddenly from behind a parked car. For there is nothing to give the motorist fair warning of what is to come.

But there are many circumstances which should put the motorist on a special alert. An obvious example is the presence of a child in the street. The motorist should not assume, even if he blows his horn, that the child will promptly and prudently retreat to the sidewalk.

Even if there is no child in sight, other telltale signs may cry caution. For example:

In one case, the fact that a ball bounced into the street was held good reason for an oncoming motorist to expect that a child might follow.

In another case, a posted notice of "CHILDREN AT PLAY" was held sufficient to call for extra careful driving.

It is true that this special responsibility on the motorist, when children are in sight or in prospect, has a tendency to slow the movement of traffic.

But it is also true that cars are killing thousands of our youngsters every year. The law is willing to slow the traffic, to slow the slaughter.

Dickie Crockett from S.W.S.C. in Weatherford, Okla. visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Emory Crockett over the weekend.

WE DON'T WANT IT IN THE PAPER

What can an editor do when the only source of information on a news story refuses to give facts? The editor could go ahead and put in what he overheard from reliable sources, but then he takes a chance on being wrong.

Here is an example: A farmer in this county lost two dozen cattle. It could have happened to anyone. Circumstances were unusual. This may happen again to other. He refused to give facts. We imagine the story made the rounds, changing in details as it went. If it wound up correct it was purely coincidental. If we had been able to get the facts, some other farmer might have been spared a similar fate in months to come. Another example: A new business comes to town. We're denied information. By the time the story is ready for release it has made the rounds, sometimes wrong, sometimes partly right. We could have gotten facts correctly, dispelled rumors and started things off on the right foot.

There are other examples. You probably know of some. You no doubt have sat around telling your version of a story, listening to a second version of the same story and finally hearing two or three more versions. Chances are none of them are entirely wrong. TRUST YOUR PAPER with the news. It's our job. We go to the sources. We try to get exact information so there will be no doubt. We aim to be accurate. Being human, we will make mistakes but we'll be right more often than the gossip-mongers will. Learn to trust your newspaper to give you the news. Learn to trust your paper to handle your news. Learn to depend on the one local source that deals in accuracy. You'll be helping us; you'll be helping your friends; and more important, you'll be helping yourself.

BARBED WIRE and Babbling Brooks

Spring sun shines on babbling brooks — and barbed wire. A bird song lilts prettily on fragrant air — and a sniper shot splits the silence. New green burgeons through brown winter grasses — and red blood drenches jungle earth.

One's description of the season depends upon location. In some parts of the world there are happy people, enjoying the spring, looking forward to Easter services. Other faces of this globe find suffering people, anguished by the sunshine, hungry, afraid, lonely, dying.

Centuries ago on black Calvary hill, Jesus of Nazareth demonstrated perfect love. Down through the ages, His life and teachings have pointed the way for mankind to heal the ills of the world.

So, in this Lenten season let us offer ourselves—our time and talents—to the service of His Church, in its task of making His kingdom come upon earth.

TO THE VOTERS OF THE McLEAN SCHOOL DISTRICT

DEAR VOTERS!

Since a number of you do not know me personally or what I stand for -- have decided to write this letter.

Let me say right here and now, I am not running because I have an ax to grind, if that were the case I wouldn't even want my name on the election ballot. I want to see McLean grow and prosper, after all I do have a pretty fair investment in McLean and I want to keep it a good investment. I would like to see the school board make their budget public each year by having it put in the paper. Also would like very much to see better communication between parents, school board, and teachers.

Several have asked me what I think of a new school for McLean, this I can't honestly answer because I do not know how much tax burden this would impose on the people of McLean. I do think we should have much more modern equipment in our schools to help our teachers and students. The students could get a better education and be better qualified for college work. My platform is for anything that will help the community, the teachers, and the children on to higher learning. If after reading this you think I could qualify to act in your behalf by being elected to the school board, I would appreciate your vote.

Sincerely Yours,

LOOKIN' BACK

by Vera Featherston Back

Friday's mail brought two letters of importance to your columnist. First was the announcement from Texas Press Women, Inc. that "Looking Back" had been awarded second place among other columns from Texas women. It was entered in their annual state-wide contest for members of that organization.

Second was a letter from Mrs. W. O. Olson of Olustee, Oklahoma. Mrs. Olson is the former Blanche Wheelless and lived with her parents in the Huntsman Community. She recalls so much of the early days of our part of the county that we thought you would enjoy reading it all:

Dear Mrs. Back,

I wrote you about a year ago concerning your book, "Feathers." Will say that I got your personal copy and the Altus library bought one, too.

Your column, "Lookin' Back" is superb! I missed it very much the week it did not appear. The poem "McLean" is so true of that golden spot. I have a poem I cut out of the McLean News over 40 years ago. I had forgotten about it until I ran across it in an old trunk. I am curious about the author and thought if anyone would know who he is, it would be you. Am enclosing it. Maybe it will help in your history of McLean. This author expresses my feelings profoundly. My father, M. S. Wheelless, farmed and raised a few cows. I remember my mother canning peaches and apples from the Veatch and S. A. Cousins orchards. We raised a prolific garden: sweet potatoes, tomatoes, beans, etc. Wild grapes, O boy! My mother made the best wild grape jam ever!

We had ten acres of watermelons. The first grade was shipped by rail from McLean. The second grade, or those not uniform in size, my father took to Jericho, Groom, and Pampa by wagon and sold them to the stores. The rest he would exchange for sugar, flour, and coffee. Our living was rich and fine and cost practically nothing.

It must have had all the necessary vitamins as there are five of us children, all past our fiftieth birthday, still living and healthy.

My father passed away five years ago at the age of 89½ years. My mother is 90, waits on herself, and does light housework. Her mind is keen.

Back to the watermelons: I want to say that not even the Rush Springs melons of Oklahoma can compare with the McLean melons. They were as big as bushel baskets and sweet as nectar!

Sincerely,
Mrs. Blanche Olson
Olustee, Oklahoma

Thank you, Mrs. Olson, for such an interesting letter, so full of old-time history. We welcome such letters! Come up some fourth Sunday and meet with the Alanreed - McLean Historical Society. You might find some old friends whom you haven't seen for years. The time is 2:30; the place the school cafeteria. We meet this coming Sunday.

In the meantime, Mrs. Olson, write down every thing your mother remembers about your family and the people of this part of the country—or any of the country, as far as that goes. We need family stories, and yours should be a good one.

PLANTING SEED WORK AS COMPUTERS

Farmers have had computers working for them for many years. Each seed they plant works as a tiny computer. Plant breeders, explains R. J. Hodges, Extension agronomist, program the little "computers" to do a certain job. The characteristics of the plant depend on how the seed was "programmed" with built-in factors to resist diseases and insects, to increase yields, to resist lodging and to uniformly mature.

Even though April 15 is almost at hand, as taxpayers we have only reached the half-way point. About half of us have filed our income tax returns - a few of us have spent our refund checks, but at least half of us are still looking for those records that we did or did not keep during 1967. There is no better time than right now - get out those records and get that tax return ready.

Meat Marketing Tips Given

The liberal supplies of beef enjoyed the past several weeks in markets will continue, says Gwendolyn Clyatt, Extension consumer marketing specialist. Beef production is expected to be about the same as a year ago with a supply of the high quality roasting and broiling meat. Pork supplies will be plentiful. Both lamb and veal supplies will be well below a year ago. These meats, however, will be available in sufficient quantities for you to include them on the family menu this spring. Fryers are featured in many markets and grade A large size eggs continue to offer the greatest quality for your egg money, says the specialist for Texas A&M vegetable items in good supply at pleasing prices include apples, oranges, grapefruit, bananas, white potatoes, head lettuce, loose turnips, celery, cabbage, carrots, dry yellow onions, sweet potatoes, radishes, green onions, mustard and turnip greens.

PLAY 'EM RIGHT

The hardest thing about fishing is getting strikes. But probably the most disheartening is to hook a possible trophy then lose the fish before it's netted.

Landing fish, say the experts at Mercury outboards, always involves some luck, but, by using the right techniques, the odds can be shifted in your favor.

First, the hook must be set firmly - the exact force required depends on the fish. For instance, soft-mouthed species such as bass and pan varieties call for comparatively little power to sink a hook home, but for fish such as muskies you'll need a stiff rod and a hard solid strike.

Playing a fish requires a good deal of discretion. You should never baby it, but, on the other hand, don't try to "horse" it in. Too much pressure is the sure way to snap leaders or jerk hooks free. Finding a happy medium calls for patience when a fish is strong and heads off across open water on a linestripping run. The further he goes against the line, the more tired he becomes, thus the more pressure you can safely bring against him works for you.

The most important point to remember is to never give the fish a chance to pull against anything solid. Should he jump, give him plenty of slack by dropping the rod momentarily, then recovering cautiously with the rod high. Work the rod in a pumping motion as you reel in line - lift, then lower and reel in a regular pattern.

All the fun in fishing is playing the quarry to the net. Whether you release a battler or put him on the table, the fight is the one thing that makes a certain trip memorable.
