students Nine successfully completed the requirements of Clarendon College's Office Technology Program. Office Amanda Hauck of McLean, Texas was one of the nine graduates. She is the daughter of Don and Cynthia Hauck of McLean and a graduate of McLean High School.

Graduation ceremonies were held May 10, 2005 in the atrium of the M.K. Brown Academic Center in Pampa, Texas. According to Jan Haynes, program instructor, approximately 120 people attended the ceremony.

The Office Technology program is a fast-track, concentrated program designed to provide the student with specialized classroom instruction. The program prepares students to enter or re-enter the job market more efficiently by refreshing previously learned skills and by teaching basic skills for entry-level jobs.

Students master computers, calculators, telecommunications and other complex office equipment. The course enables students to acquire high-tech skills and the confidence needed to succeed in the work world.

TEye on Health Is Your Sight In Jeopardy?

(NAPS)-Over 17 million Americans are robbed of their vision by eye diseases such as glaucoma and macular degeneration. Worse yet, as many as half of those affected many as han of those affected may not know that they have a sight-threatening eye dis-

While many classify these as "older folks' diseases," a significant number of people affected by these diseases are under 65

"That's why all Americans, especially those over 40, need regular eye exams—which are, in most cases, the only way to detect and prevent vision loss caused by age-mated eye diseases," said related eye diseases," said ophthalmologist Susan Taub, MD, FACS and chairman of the Better Vision Institute (BVI).

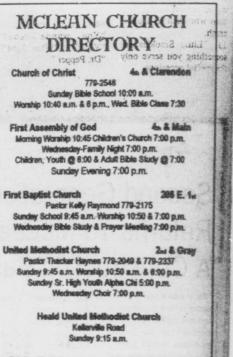

(BVI). Also at higher risk for developing age-related eye diseases are women and peo-ple of certain ethnicities, in particular, African- and Asian-Americans. In order to maintain one's wijnen health and indepen vision health and indepe dence in later years, the BVI recommends regular, comprehensive eye exams for Americans over 40. For more vision health information for the entire

Are You a True Texan? 27 Ways To Tell

If you cannot relate to these, you are not a "TRUE TEXAN

You're from TEXAS if ... You can properly pronounce Corsicana, Palestine, Decatur, Wichita Falls, San Antonia, Mexia, Waco, Amarillo, and Waxahacie

2. You think that people who complain about the wind in their states are just sissies

A tornado warning siren is your signal to go out in the yard and look for a funnel.

4. Your idea of a traffic jam is ten cars waiting to pass a tractor on the highway.

You've ever had to switch from "heat" to "A/C" in the same day.

6. You know that the true value of a parking space is not determined by the distance to the door, but by the availability of shade.

7. Stores don't have bags, they have sacks.

8. You see people wear bib overalls so a funeral. You think everyone from a bigger city has an accent 10. You measure distance in m 11. You refer to the capital of Texas as "home of the Longhorns." 12. It doesn't bother you to use an airport named for a man who died in a plane crash.

13. Little Smokies are ething you serve only for special occasions.

14. You go to the lake because you think it is like going to the ocean.

15 You listen to the weather forecast before picking out an outfit. 16. You know cow pies are not made of beef. 17. Someone you know has used a football schedule to plan their weddir g date.

18. You have known someone who has had a belt buckle bigger than your fists.

19. A bad traffic tie up involves two cars staring each other down at a fourway stop, each determined to be the most polite and let the other go first.

20. You know which state Miam-uh is in and which state Miam-ee is in.

21. You aren't surprised to find movie rental, ammur ition and bait all in the san e store.

22 Your "place at the lake" h is wheels under it. 23. A Mercedes Benz is not a tatus symbol. A

Ford F3 50 4x4 is. 24. You know everything goes be ter with Ranch. 25. You learned to shoot a gun or you learned how to multiply. 26. You actually get these jokes and are "fixin" to tell your friends.

27 Fin Ily, you are 100% TEXAN if you have ever heard his conversation: "You wanna coke?" "Yeah." "What kind?" "Dr. Pe per."

Going Beyond "Don't Talk To Strangers"

"Rather than teaching children to fear strangers, which is at best, woefully inadequate, we need to use positive messages," says Dr. Broughton. "Children need to learn skills and confidence, not fear and avoidance." says Daniel Broughton, M.D., a pediatrician at Mayo Clinic Children should know their name, address and phone number (with area code) so, if lost, they can be reunited with their family.

Older children should know parents' work numbers

Away from home, older children should always be with a friend, always tell an adult where they will be, and say "no" if they feel threatened or uncomfortable.

Children need to know that appropriate strangers -store clerks or police officers -- can offer assistance if they are lost or need help.

Parents need to listen, and respect their children's feelings. Children can sense unease in inappropriate relationships. They'll likely share their concerns if parents routinely take all of their concerns in life seriously rather than downplaying or shaming them

Children need to know that they do not need to kiss, hug, touch or sit on the lap of anyone, relative or not, if they do not wish This respect for their to. wishes translates into selfrespect and the ability for children to say no to unwanted contacts without generating fear.

Parents need to supervise children who use the Internet. Although still relatively uncommon, the practice of pedophiles and child molesters approaching children on the Internet is occurring more frequently.

Parents need to keep reinforcing safety messages through middle school and high school. According to the U.S. Department of Justice, most victims of nonfamily abductions were 12 years or older (58 percent). Most were girls (65 percent).

Parents should realize the limitations of participating in programs where children fingerprinted or otherwise identified. These programs can frighten children and raise fears in adults without giving perspective on the real nature or risk of abduction.

Parents should keep on hand a high-quality recent photo of each child, such as school photo. Law enforcement officials consider photos the best tool in finding missing children.

Parents should promptly report a missing child. The Amber Plan, the national program to immediately flood a region with news of an abduction, is credited with helping to recover more than 130 children since it started two years ago

Thursday, July 7, 2005-THE GROOM NEWS-Page 5 Ear Tag Proposal Could Be Like Social Secuity Card For Cattle

THRALL - It's not Social Security for cattle, but the proposed electronic ear tag to be used as part of the National Animal Identification System would act much like a Social Security card.

Dr. Jason Cleere, Texas Cooperative Extension beef cattle specialist, told producers at the Stiles Farm Field Day a lifetime number assigned to the tag will help trace an animal's path throughout the supply chain.

"It's like a Social Security number for that cow," he explained. In the event of a foreign animal disease, tracking the animal's movement could be as quick as 48 hours, he said. The small, read-only tag has copper wire and a computer chip bound inside. The tag will feature a visual set of numbers on the outside and will also be encoded with the same numbers to be read electronically. Cleere said ranchers will not need to worry about purchasing !... additional equipment to read the tags.

There's been a lot questions from folks saying this is going to put the small people out of business," he said. "You won't have to buy expensive computer equipment. If you are a small operator, you are not ng to have to have a reader this computer. You cases it physically wate that, names Anothe Saper transfer by paper. 5

Ear tagging and general questions on how the system will work were explained by Cleere during the field day's beef session. Most cow-calf producers wanted to know who would be responsible for tagging their cattle once it becomes mand tory prior to sale.

"The reality of it is you need to start thinking about how you are going to tag these animals," Cleere advised. "Not everybody has a good set of pens to work cattle in."

Perhaps an even bigger question was why such an identification system was developed in the first place.

"A lot of individuals think the system started out with the first case of BSE (mad cow disease) in December of 2003," Cleere said. "It started before that. They officially announced the plan in January 2003 and it was in response to the Homeland Security Act. With that case of BSE in December, that's when it was put on the forefront. The whole overall goal is diserse trace back. If we were to have a foreign animal disease outbreak, we can track those animals and size where they have been."

Commission. This unique number will help trace an animal back to its origin, and will allow producers in the future to purchase electronic ear tags for their cattle as part of the national identification system, Cleere said. The registration process for premises identification is fairly easy, he said, and can be done on the Web, or by phone, fax or mail.

One of the things we're telling producers is this is a changing and evolving program," Cleere said. What beef producers can do now is go ahead and register their premises or operations. This can be done now before it's mandatory.

Once tagging of cattle does become mandatory, Cleere said, it's important producers be prepared. He said producers need to start thinking about facilities and how to comply with the program. The tags are expected to cost $1.50-$2, Cleere said. He also advised producers that it would be best to "to tag cattle at home" rather than using a tagging service that would tag animals.

The more your cattle are handled, the more shrink (weight loss) you're going to have," he said. "Some producers are castrating calves soon after birth. You could tag them then, or you could wait until the day before you decide to sell."

The tag retention rate is greater than 95 percent. according to Cleere, Full implementation of the

Medicare Recipients Look Over Drug Program

Austin, Texas) Medicare recipients who received a credit towards the purchase of prescription drugs by enrolling in an interim drug discount card program for 2004 or 2005 most likely qualify for government-subsidized financial assistance when they enroll in a Medicare Part D prescription drug Income program. requirements for the credit are close in range to those required for financial assistance with the new drug benefit beginning January 1. 2006

The interim drug discount card program which began in May 2004 and continues through the end of December 2005 offers lower-income elderly and disabled adults enrolled in Medicare Part A and/or B a prescription drug credit if their annual income is under $12,919 for singles or no more than $17,320 for a married couple. Depending on time of enrollment in the program, lower-income ors may have received a $1200, $600, or $450 credit on their drug card.

Next year, these beneficiaries may be eligible to continue receiving assistance in a Medicare Part D program. Individuals who earn less than $14,355 a year or $19,245 a year for a married (and living together) couple could expect help with the monthly premiums, annual deductibles and copayments for the drug benefit.

Those that applied for the interim credit did so because they needed help paying for their prescription drugs. That credit, along with the discount cards, expires at the end of the year. It's important these individuals know they are eligible for financial assistance with the new prescription drug program in 2006," explained Paul Pearson, Regional Director for the Healthcare Leadership Council, a coalition for quality health care and artner organization with Medicare Today.

The Social Security Administration began mailing applications in May to millions of lowerincome Medicare recipients who may qualify for the prescription drug subsidy next year. Applicants must mail the completed application to Social Security to qualify. Beginning July 1, the forms may be completed online at www.socialsecurity.gov. Applications are also available by calling Social Security at 1-800-772-1213 or by visiting the website

In addition to the annual income limits, Social Security will need to know the value of any savings and/or investments, excluding homes and cars. For individuals, that limit is $11,500 and no more than $23,000 for a married couple living together. Special circumstances allow Medicare may beneficiaries with higher income than the set limits qualify for Part D assistance.

Medicare recipients interested in receiving an interim drug discount card to help offset their prescription drug costs through the end of the year can apply by going to www.medicare.gov or by calling 1-800-MEDICARE. For eligible lower-income seniors, a credit of $300 will be offered beginning July 1 towards their monthly costs.

Medicare Today, broad-based partnership of organizations representing seniors, patients, health care groups, employers and others, has been working with the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services and the Department of Health and Human Services to educate and inform Medicare beneficiaries, the media and the public about the new Medicare prescription drug coverage and other benefits. For questions or assistance with the interim drug discount card program or Medicare Part D, visit www.medicaretoday.org.
