We urgently request every fancier of pure bred livestock to be present at this meeting. METHODISTS ORGANIZE FOR EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN

The Christian Educational set-up meeting for the McLean charge was held in the Methodist church Monday at 3 p. m.

Frank P. Wilson, director general for the charge, presided. The heads of the various departments of the church constitute the cabinet, and are as follows: B. J. Osborn, pastor; R. N. Ashby, Sunday school superintendent; W. L. Haynes, chairman board of stewards; J. L. Hess, lay leader; Mrs. S. A. Cousins, president Woman's Missionary Society; Lucile Stratton, president Epworth League; J. H. Bodine, chairman minute men. All were present but two.

Every one present showed intense interest and enthusiasm in the movement. The organization was perfected and plans laid for immediate work.

T. J. Coffey and wife are the proud parents of a new boy, who arrived in McLean Monday. Mother and child are both doing nicely. T. J. is as proud of his youngster as Newsman is of his'n, and is rather more inclined to use superlatives in his boasting. Fact is, he says some things that the more conservative take with a pinch of salt, among them being a statement that when he goes home the boy looks up at him and says, "hello, dad."

M. H. Kinard of Gracy was in town Saturday.

SIX BALES OF COTTON DAMAGED BY FIRE SATURDAY

During the baseball game Saturday afternoon, fire was discovered among the bales of cotton in the yard south of the depot. The burning bales were rolled away from the other cotton there, and the loss held as low as possible. Only two bales were destroyed, the other four being damaged only slightly.

The fire is supposed to have originated from cigarettes being smoked in the vicinity by small boys.

BACCALAUREATE SERMON AT 11 O'CLOCK SUNDAY AT METHODIST CHURCH

The baccalaureate sermon for the graduating class of McLean High School will be preached Sunday at 11 o'clock a. m., by Rev. A. D. Haynes of Canyon, at the Methodist church. The public is invited to be present.

All denominations are invited to dispense with their church services and come to hear him.

BUILDING NEW HOME

"Chuck" Cooke started work on a new home, on the lots just east of W. T. Wilson's residence, early this week. We are told this will be a modern home in every way, with all the popular built-in features and a spacious cellar. Newsman somehow wonders what Chuck will put in so large a cellar.

D'SPAIN'S HEN LAYS WHOPPIN' BIG EGGS

T. J. D'Spain, who lives 12 miles north-east of town, has a dominecker hen that pays no attention to hard times talk. This fowl listens to those who advocate pushing one's business and making the best of a hard situation, getting the maximum production from the facilities at hand.

One day last week Mr. D'Spain brought to town an egg this hen produced that takes the prize for bigness. In bulk it is as big as three or four ordinary cackleberries, weighing 12½ ounces and measuring about eight inches in circumference the long way. Unlike the usual elongated big egg, it is almost perfect in shape. The News is told that this hen produces two or three such eggs every week. The hen is not for sale.

SECTION FOREMAN SUFFERS BROKEN LEG IN ACCIDENT

M. I. Moreland of Alanreed, Rock Island section foreman, sustained a broken leg Sunday morning when the motor "hand car" on which he was riding left the rails. His wound was dressed by the company surgeon at this place, Dr. Montgomery, who took him to a hospital in Amarillo. We understand he is doing nicely and is expected to recover quickly.

Mrs. Jim Back and children left Friday for Breckenridge.

CALL ON MINISTER AT MIDNIGHT FOR WEDDING

Monday morning at 12:40 o'clock, Rev. S. R. Jones, Nazarene pastor, was aroused from his peaceful slumbers to perform the ceremony that united Mr. Joe Dunwoody and Miss Gertrude Roselius, both of Alanreed, in marriage.

Mr. Jones says he suspected at first that these young people had eloped, but they told him that they had been in Lefors all day Sunday, waiting for the county clerk to return and issue a marriage license. And after the necessary document had been secured, there was no minister nearer than McLean, and they could get here no sooner.

The ceremony was witnessed by Messrs. T. J. Kelley and Guy Dunwoody and Misses Aline Kelley and Ida May Dunwoody, all of Alanreed, who accompanied them to McLean.

GOODMAN-PATTY

On Saturday afternoon at the S. R. Jones home, Mr. Jones said the ceremony which united in marriage Miss Laura Patty and Mr. Oscar Goodman. The young people will make their home near Clarendon.

Miss Mildred Abbott returned last week from Ft. Worth, where she has been attending school.

Messdames T. F. Phillips and Ed Bailey were in from the Heald community Monday.

UPHAM NAMED DIRECTOR HARDWARE ASSOCIATION

W. B. Upham, manager of the McLean Hardware Co., was elected a director of the Panhandle Hardware and Implement Association at the closing session of the twelfth annual convention at Amarillo Tuesday afternoon.

Than Mr. Upham there is not a hardware man in the whole Panhandle who has more of the trade's confidence and good will. He has built up one of the best businesses in the country and is rated among the most successful.

Other officers of the association elected Tuesday afternoon are: E. P. Thompson, Memphis, president; S. E. Cole, Lubbock, vice president; Clarence Thompson, Canyon, secretary. Mr. Van Sant is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Van Sant, who have resided here for almost five years. He was a graduate of McLean High School in 1918, and is at present a clerk in the Rock Island depot.

They will make McLean their home, and the good wishes of their friends are that they have a long and happy wedded life.

Methodists, Remember Your Church Vow

The Greatest Institution in Your Church Is Calling On You in An Emergency

EDUCATION for some years past has been largely controlled by the higher schools of Europe. These schools became hot-beds for infidelity from which the schools in America have been afflicted.

The world war, along with other destructions, practically destroyed these schools. In fact, the educational system of the world is in a state of confusion. Some of the supreme questions before the world now are: Where are the centers of education for the future going to be? And who is going to control the character of education in the future?

The opportunity of the centuries offers itself to America right now. If Europe be allowed to get her breath before America acts, those same old schools will be established.

The Southern Methodist church, in its general conference in 1918, foresaw the opportunity and planned wisely.

The missionary opportunity came with challenging offers and we accepted it nobly in the Centenary by pledging $50,000,000 for its support.

Now the educational opportunity is challenging us in awful appeals for $30,000,000. These two appeals complete the magnificent program for the present quadrennium.

THE METHODIST CHURCH, which has been distinctively a pioneer church, has the opportunity of a life time offered her to lay marvelous educational foundations. Will she let it slip away from her?

No, Never!

The individual member: "This divinely indorsed program for Christian Education will not fail with my endorsement. After much prayer for guidance, I am going to pledge each year for five years an amount that will be really a sacrifice, for I am trusting in the Supreme Ruler of the Universe."

The Ishmaelite

(L. P. Loomis, Poet of the Panhandle Press Association)

Out on the rim of the world, high above the stagnant lowlands, placed on a tableland whose length and breadth is that of a matchless empire:

Out in the full light and glory of heaven's wondrous sunshine;

Out where the golden sunset seems to fondly linger and touch with loving finger tips a million trysting places ere it carresses a fond good night;

Out where rugged stately canyons with verdure covered valleys and brooklets of sparkling waters cold and clear—like a string of priceless pearls adorning midday's breast—

Lies a landscape which truly seems to have been specially moulded by the Master Mason of the universe and laid as the footstool of the Rocky Mountains.

This landscape we lovingly call the Panhandle, a land of alluvial soil now being carpeted over with Nature's verdant offering to the God of Spring.

The Panhandle is a land of promise, a land of opportunity, a land of realization. It has been said that the Panhandle has dispelled more illusions and has given incentive to a greater number of hopes, and has rewarded more bountifully when the future looked dark than has any other section of the universe.

To the skyline of promise, the rainbow of hope to the homeseeker looking toward the setting sun for a treasure land of health and a plant soil and season inoculated with productivity.

The Panhandle is truly an irresistible magnet to virile and adventurous folk who love stalwart manhood.

Three score years or more an Ishmaelite heard the call of the West and turned his talents to the westward skyline to seek out "the land I will show thee." He had heard it on the Asklon, it had been repeated in Gath and affirmed in Galacia that out in the Panhandle was where the West Really Began.

He found Ponce de Leon's dream land blackened with buffalo on a thousand hills and oft times a thousand buffaloes on one hill. He found the graceful deer, the timid antelope, the wild turkey, the bob white and the prairie chicken.

He elbowed out the Red Man and fed herds on the succulent herbage. His saddle was his limousine and where night overtook him he pitched a tarpaulin for his mansion. He was lord of all he surveyed, undisputed in his sovereignty and mightier in his sphere than regal king or potentate.

The stars of heaven lighted his sleeping hours like altar lights from heaven's sanctuary and wirelessly to him the message that the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob still rules and all is well.

The moonbeams chased the threatening shadows of night and lispings breezes swayed the nodding wild flowers that fringed his royal couch. As he watched from his couch magnificent the astral procession move along the shimmering highway of the sky, he bowed his head in acknowledgment to the Great Ruler of the Universe as the supreme architect who controlled the destinies of universes.

It was a happy life—those pioneer days out in the open—and the Ishmaelite made it a part of his character. The grazing herds, the brand pens, the horse wrangling, the marketing trips—all held charms and made memories that only a free range rider knew, a rider whose domain knew no boundaries.

His camp fire was a true symbol of brotherhood. He chose the big ideas of life and pushed aside the little annoyances as unworthy a man. He despised the narrowness that is characteristic of the East.

He was generous to a fault, paid high tribute to honor's code, and brooked no lesser consideration.

He knew no leniency in dealing out the cards of justice in the game of life where decency and clean companionship called for summary action.

Our Ishmael was the vanguard of civilization. He rode the hills alone. He improvised music to the murmuring winds and seconded with his whirring lasso. He respected the sacred silences of the tree monarchs of the ravine and the valley.

He loved the fastness of the canyons where gurgling streams dodged along to hunt the open places among the trees. He knew the trying places of nature where only the meridian sent shafts of light to mark their recesses.

He roamed the pathless prairies. He saw the soaring eagle and heard its screaming cry. He heard the call of the lone coyote trying to out-tenor Caruso and learned to love its lonesome wail.

He hunted wild turkey and watched the graceful stride of the timid antelope as it skirted the ground in racing away.

The fragrance of the purple cactus blossoms supplanted the American Beauty rose. He sensed a prayer of thankfulness for his herds when the heavy clouds curtained the firmament, when the lightning sent livid rapier thrusts as messengers of a king for the disturbing thunders to growl and angrily shake the cooling rain upon a thirsty land.

Though often nonplussed and tired in heart and lured on to losses by the vapory tricks of a mirage season, he came true and played the game fair and square. And often as he gathered round the old chuck wagon fire to gossip over the day's pleasures, ere time to retire, the silvery moon crept up behind and its mellow rays in benediction spread o'er the stout tarpaulin that made up the cowman's bed.

These plains were monotonous in the solitudes, yet they were the homes of a dormant wealth that would in time deck the purple of an eastern potentate.

The physical features of a land are the type and symbol of the humanity that dwells thereon.

We may wish for Bogham, where red lilies blow.

We may trace the silken sands of Samarcand's alluring shore.

We may long for the land where the cypress and myrtle are emblems of deeds that are done in their clime.

But our Ishmaelite found his valley of the moon on the broad tableland of the Panhandle, and he is today that type of mankind who built his character in the great open places of Nature's out of doors.

where men had room to grow and invigorating air to breathe.

And to this type of Plainsman, the pioneer cowman, the scout who led the caravan of homeseekers to the Panhandle we dedicate this little tribute. Honest, clean, rugged, big-hearted, big-brained, charitable, neighborly—what splendid attributes of character. And they have come down to us as great men. They may have a rough, unseemly exterior, but their ideals are as true as the clime in which they live. Acts of brotherhood are the outward and visible signs of the jewels of clean living, of hearts of refined gold.

Out where the West begins, a pair of unionalls may be the uniform of a cattle king, a bank president or a railroad director.

No lily of the fields graced the meadows of Palestine with greater fragrance; no pool of Siloam mirrored heaven clearer than the Panhandle today reflects the virtues of advanced civilization, culture and morality built from the foundation laid by our Ishmaelite, the pioneer cowman.

We bow in humbleness of spirit and mete tribute to these Ishmaelites of the Panhandle. They have successfully filled every avenue of the business world. The lure of the city has called many of them. We find them now under the glare of the electric lights. The spell of the motley pushing throng calling them, the survival of the fittest arousing their true sporting spirit for a square deal, and the game of finance challenging them to deal a hand.

As they were the factors in moulding and shaping the destiny of the Plains, so they are the factors of the city, holding seats in the exchanges, directors in banks and building corporations.

And ever and anon to these big-hearted cowmen the mirage of life calls their minds galloping back to the old days and they would fain cast aside their circumscribed web of cumbersome conduct and limited pastures, and revert back to their old koran which has been expressed in these words by another author:

"I believe in the strength of the hills, in the silence of the night and the music of the birds and bees."

"I believe in the wonders of the outdoors, in the inspiration of the stars, in the allurement of life in the open, where we can confess to the flowers and birds and confess our faults and mistakes under the silent stars and hear the winds murmuring absolution. We shall live long enough even though we die young, and we shall carry with us into the unseen world something which will make it worth while to be immortal."

Yet a little while and this type of Westerners, the Ishmaelites, the Panhandle Plainsmen, shall walk with us no more, and we shall miss their Western handshake.

They paved the way for a great empire. They built humanity on new ideals and lived their lives as sponsors for an empire.

The long day of life passeth, the sun has saluted the horizon and is nearing its downward course; yet a little while and the all beholding sun we shall see no more.

The setting of the sun of life is taking a frightful toll in the ranks of our pioneer cowmen. The enlistment in that regiment which rides out West, through the unfurling curtains of time which silently part and relentlessly close as the troubador enters into the murky twilight of that journey impervious to us is daily enlisting our grayhaired pioneer veterans of civilization.

But that entry into the portals that open on the mysteries of life into that sacred free range of human souls, where the brand of clean living is checked into the pens by St. Peter, is to the pure-hearted as one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams.

Then let us live our lives so that when our time shall come to meet

METHODIST CHRISTIAN EDUCATION CAMPAIGN

Some people are asking, "What is the Christian Education Campaign?"

Ask the well-informed loyal Methodist and he will tell you. The last general conference, which met in 1918, trusting in Almighty God, believed that the allies would whip the Germans, and so planned accordingly. Our leaders foresaw the tremendous work of reconstruction following the war. They recognized the wonderful opportunity which Christianity in America would have for missionary work, and for laying foundations for a new pure Christian education.

In a very short time the armistice was signed, and these opportunities came with tremendous proportions.

A careful survey of the missionary fields was made. It was found that, in order to meet the needs in anything like a reasonable way, $35,000,000 would be required.

Also, a careful survey of the educational fields was made. It was found that it would require in the least figures $33,000,000. In order not to confuse the two features of the movement, it was divided into two divisions, one missionary and the other educational. By doing so, each phase of the movement would receive its proper emphasis, thereby making the entire movement an educational program, resulting in great profit to the church.

The missionary division of the campaign was launched first and would lay the foundation for the educational division.

Said division was called the Centenary for a historical reason. It was a marvelous success—the money feature of it resulted in our pledging $50,000,000 in five years. The instructive feature resulted in the missionary conscience of the church being stirred as never before.

Then in its proper place in the program, and in due time, came the Christian Education division of the campaign. We are now within three weeks of the end of the time allotted for the entire campaign, with the result, to date, that the Christian Education conscience of the church is stirred and the mind enlightened as never before. We are uttering a prayer out of our very soul, and hoping in our heart that the money feature will result in our pledging at least the $33,000,000 so much needed. Oh, with what anxiety do we spend the few remaining days!

Who will be so disloyal and faint hearted as to speak a word that would discourage and start confusion now, at the critical moment when victory may be ours, and defeat would be so fatal?

When a general plans a military campaign, in the course of days he orders the final charge; should it begin to rain, will he call a retreat because it rains? So the church, in the course of years, having planned wisely and wrought remarkably, ordering the final charge, to which we have looked so long, will she call a retreat in the face of victory because a financial depression has struck? Brother, think seriously, and be careful with your disapproving and discouraging remarks at this, the most critical time in the most momentous movement our church has ever projected. She has never undertaken such a task of such magnitude in her history. I am proud of my church, that she is capable of such visions, and moves with such courage. We can put over this stupendous job; we must, we will.

THE TRIP TO THE STATE INTERSCHOLASTIC MEET

"Our trip was enjoyed to the fullest extent by every one of us," was the remark made by the boys who went to the Interscholastic League meet at Austin last week. They left here Wednesday afternoon and returned Sunday night. According to those who attended the meet, and judging from the number of new all-state records that were made, this was beyond doubt the greatest meet that has been held in the history of the league.

Our boys had been well trained and were in the very best physical condition for the occasion. They were strongest principally in short dashes, and easily equaled several of the state records. In the 50-yard dash two of the boys were easily taking a fifth of a second off the state record, which has stood since 1913, but in the contest at Austin they were unable to do their best and lost early enough that they had a chance to visit the places of most interest in our capital and go through the state institutions located there for the afflicted, as well as the different departments of the State University itself. A trip to see the governor's mansion, the magnificent capital building, offices of the governor and other prominent men, made the boys all agree to "Let's move our offices here too some day."

The entire trip was a most interesting one and of great educational value to each of the boys who went. Being their first year's experience, the boys did exceedingly well and deserve credit for their accomplishments. In the different events our boys averaged from about fourth to seventh, which places them far above the average, and next to the winners themselves. Each individual came away a good, cheerful, sportsman-like loser, and with a determination to win next year.
