Work Started on Gin Foundations

Those who have grown weary of so much gin talk with nothing tangible to show for it, and have said that they wouldn't believe a gin is to be built until they see work started, have a cordial invitation to take a stroll to the site just south of the Rock Island pump station and look.

Tom McCarty has his well drilled on the ground, with a hole already drilled to a considerable depth. Forms have been made and pits dug for the concrete foundations the machinery is to be placed on.

A representative of the concern that is putting in the gin told the News man Tuesday that the steel building had been shipped, and that the machinery was being held until it arrived, so that there would be ample time to erect the ginhouse before the machinery gets here.

Odd Fellows Install New Officers

At the regular meeting of McLean Odd Fellows lodge on Tuesday night of last week, the following officers were installed:

Bee Everett, noble grand; Chas. Guill, vice grand; W. T. Wilson, secretary; O. K. Murphy, chaplain; Joe Hindman, warden; Pete Fulbright, inside guardian; T. B. Roby, outside guardian; C. J. Cash, R. S. N. G.; C. M. Cash, R. S. V. G.; L. L. Rogers, L. S. V. G.; B. L. Carpenter, R. S. S.

The following officers-elect were absent from the installation meeting and have not yet been seated in their respective offices: Barney Fulbright, conductor; Jess Ledbetter, L. S. N. G.; L. F. Wilkins, L. S. S.

McLean Odd Fellows are showing unusual interest in the lodge, especially for this time of year. When the days get long and hot, attendance usually falls off so that often not enough members are present for a quorum. But this summer almost as many members turn out for the meetings as there are usually during the winter months.

The lodge finances are in good shape, and plans are made for re-decorating the hall.

On Buying Trip to New York

We learn from W. J. Lang, local manager, that C. E. Stone of Wellington is in New York this week on his mid-season buying trip for the Forbis & Stone chain of dry goods stores.

Mr. Lang says that by going to market at this time the buyer is able to pick up many things in the way of exceptional values in merchandise, as well as to select goods more intelligently with which to replenish the stocks.

Many new things in ready to wear and other lines are expected to arrive within the next few days, as one of the purposes of Mr. Stone's trip is to select some of the best things in the latest styles.

Shower Tuesday Afternoon

A shower, barely heavy enough to settle the dust for an hour or two, fell in McLean Tuesday afternoon.

Reports came in from A. C. Waldron, east of town, that it rained enough on his place that he had to quit plowing for the day. I. P. Evans, five miles west, also got a good rain on his crops. We understand, too, that a heavy shower fell in the Thompson ranch neighborhood, south of town.

Building Addition to Store

The Haynes Grocery Company is finding the present quarters too small for the large and rapidly growing business, and is having a 25-foot addition built to the rear of their store building, which will extend it to the alley. The addition is of reinforced concrete.

Mr. and Mrs. Elvin McClain returned last week to their home in Amarillo after a visit with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Bogan and children returned Sunday from Dallas.

McLean Plays Three Games; Loses Two

McLean defeated Shamrock in a very ragged game of baseball Wednesday, the 14, on the local grounds by the score of 10 to 9. Batteries: Shamrock, Staggs, Blasingin; McLean, Dworak, Biggers, Alexander.

The McLean boys journeyed to Shamrock on Tuesday of this week and were beaten by the score of 7 to 0 in a game full of errors and few hits. Vester Cooke twirled for McLean and pitched a very good game but was given no support. Batteries: McLean, Cooke, Bowen; Shamrock, Buchanan, Blasingin.

Wheeler seems to be a jinx for the McLean ball team, having defeated the local boys three times in as many games, the third game resulting 2 to 0 in their favor Friday of last week on the home grounds. Dworak pitched a wonderful game for McLean allowing but five hits, three of these, however, being bunched in the fifth inning for the only runs of the game; on the other hand McLean found Richison for 8 hits but these were widely scattered.

Repairing School Building

The school board has had a crew of men at work for several days, repairing the school building, which has been somewhat neglected for the past few years.

The roof has been put in good shape, broken window panes replaced, and plaster is being applied to the walls where it is needed. The latter seems to be the most expensive item in the repair bill, as rains, coming in through a leaky roof, had caused much plaster to fall.

It will require an expenditure of about $1,500 to put the building in good condition.

Judges for Primary Election

J. W. Wilkins will preside at the Democratic election Saturday, and is to be assisted by A. A. Callahan, B. F. Newton, J. E. Kirby, T. J. Coffey, J. M. Noel and S. A. Cobb.

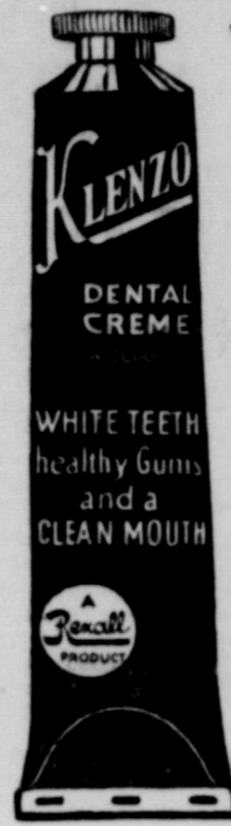

On account of the women voting and the large number who have paid poll taxes, it will require an unusually large force to hold the election. The News has not learned where the polls will be.

Moving to New Home

C. S. Rice and family moved this week to their new home on Second street, which is near enough completed for occupancy.

When finished this will be one of the most desirable residence properties in the city, being of concrete finished in stucco and of attractive design, and with the interior finished in excellent taste.

W. P. Dial of Memphis was in town Monday on business.

McLean used to be a good town for livery stables, for we had two large ones at one time.

Two years ago the old barn on Second street was torn down, and the removal of the Watkins barn takes away the only thing we had left to remind us that folks used to hire something slower than a service car when they took a drive.

Republicans to Hold County Convention

Dr. V. E. vBrunow of Pampa, county Republican chairman, has issued a call for a county convention to be held at Lefors on Saturday, July 31st.

A lot of odd colors of paints and stains are offered at special bargains. We don't print the prices, but when you call and investigate you'll smile.

"HEAVEN AND HELL." Swedenborg's great work, 400 pages, only 15c, postpaid; stamps taken.

Sent It Home

Over the garden fence the conversation suddenly turned acrimonious.

"An' if yore boy 'Erbert ties any more cans to our pore dog's tail," was Mrs. Moggins' stern ultimatum, "e'll 'ear about it, that's all."

"Ob, an' per'aps you've done wiv that saucepan wot you borrowed last Monday."

"'Erbert," asked Mrs. Grubb shrilly, "wot 'ave you bin doin' to Mrs. Moggins' dog?"

"'Nothin', ma!" replied the small boy unblushingly.

"There!" said his mother triumphantly. "An' you returned 'er saucepan yesterday, didn't you, dear?"

"Sent it back by 'er dog!" said 'Erbert.—Osage (La.) News.

DORT Quality Goes Clear Through

As you know, the Dort has evoked no inconsiderable comment throughout the country because of its hardy endurance and its low operative cost.

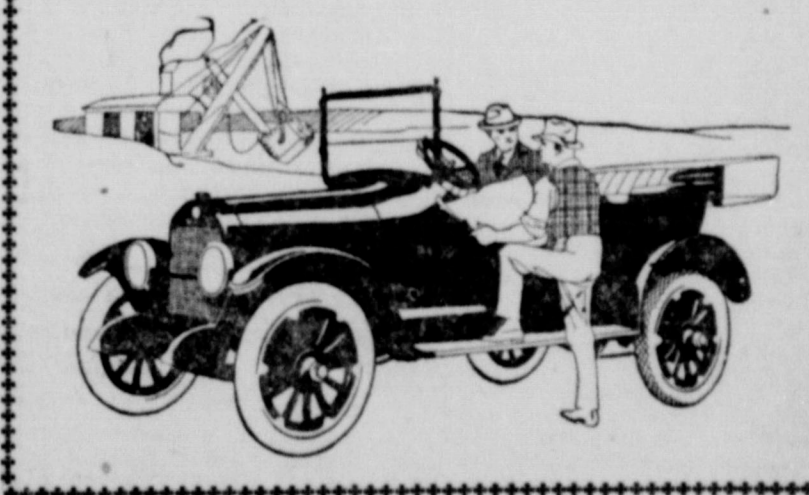

It has come to be known everywhere that continuity of performance and thrift in oil and gasoline are characteristics of the Dort that can be counted upon with certainty.

Yet we sincerely believe that the engaging ease with which the Dort drives, the ready alertness with which it handles and the smoothness with which it rides are fully as worthy of your attention as its inexpensive maintenance and infrequent need of service.

Borrowed Sunshine

By DORA H. MOLLAN

This is a story of two days in the life of Joan Carruthers—two days separated by two weeks. On the first, Joan stood, her face pressed against the window pane, engrossed in her one and only amusement. For when one has risen so far that sunlight in a barge's basement in those times of high prices and must live on the proceeds of such daily toil, there is but little left over for extras, and when one spends five evenings every week at school and a sixth and part of Sunday in study, there is little time left over for frivolities anyway.

Joan was studying stenography as a means to an end; not that she liked it so well, but it stood for shorter hours and more money. Most of the girls in the store had heard of stenography and went to dances and shows with them—and married them and led lives just like Joan's mother's over again, and Joan remembered that only too well.

Now, as it arose like a picture, blinding out for the moment the entrancing one actually before her eyes, the color-rite of that old life was a doubtful dream. Not one ray of sunshine had penetrated into their dark basement home. Not a single bit of material or spiritual brightness had it contained. Joan's mother had been a little drab wife of a woman, with all the joy of life knocked out by her drunken, morose husband. Well, she was at rest now! Joan didn't know where the father was, and didn't want to. As she shuddered at the thought of him, the picture changed like a fade-away and the one really before her eyes gained added brilliancy by the contrast.

That scene typified everything Joan's life had lacked and for which she was struggling. Even the one thin, watery beam of sunlight that found its way into her third floor hall room was reflected from the window directly across the narrow street. The apartment back of those windows over the way, so near in actual distance, was miles removed from the sphere of Joan's life. To look into it was, to her, like a peep into fairyland.

There lived a beautiful lady and a wondrous prince, in a country of gorgeous colors—and with, on each side of the blue and orange curtains over those windows all that could be shut for her sight, Joan prayed hard that they might be forgotten tonight, for a third person was present in that room.

This third person, masculine, was by name Strickland—Dr. Stanton Strickland—and by nature endowed with a full share of good looks. Of the first of these facts Joan was ignorant; the second she magnified. To her he looked a Greek god—or a movie star! Joan didn't know, either, that the prince was just plain Mr. Bertram Smith and the beautiful lady his wife and sister to Stanton. Neither did she know the subject under discussion, but she could see by the glow from the orange shaded light—for her own one dim gas jet was dark—when they all arose and passed through a door into another room and so out of sight. Also, that before going, the visitor lighted a cigarette and threw the match on a stand close by the window.

But even emptied of its glorified occupants the room fascinated her. She would have one like it some day, if working hard would bring it! How that orange light brightened everything—was reflected everywhere, even on the curtains; on one in particular, the one nearest where the visitor had sat! Joan came to, suddenly, from her dreams, and looked hard at that particular curtain. Suddenly she turned away, opened her door and fairly flew down the two long flights of stairs.

Into the street she sped, and across it. Breathlessly she ran up the stone steps of the house opposite, the house of the reflected sunshine, and pushed and pushed again and again the button of the electric doorbell.

It seemed ages before anyone came, and Joan had time to wonder whether she was doing the right thing. Finally the door was opened by a stupid-looking maid, who fled screaming at the only word of Joan's breathless speech she seemed to grasp. Again Joan ran, this time up two other long flights, into a hall and through it straight into that fairyland she had glimpsed from afar.

But the bad demon whose entrance into this paradise she had witnessed was by this time writhing in long, curling flames up the beautiful curtains. With a fierce, militant resentment against this despoliation of her fairyland, and reckless of the danger in her battle to preserve it bareheaded, Joan seized the flaming curtains, tore them from their fastenings, threw them to the floor and cast a heavy rug upon them.

And so, hurrying to discover the cause of the extraordinary commotion, they found her, just awakening to a realization of her surroundings, and her burned hands.

Doctor Strickland reached Joan just as the pain brought blessed unconsciousness. He carried her to a couch, demanded various articles and skillfully dressed the burns, the while they wondered who she might be and whence she came.

Presently consciousness returned, and though with it returned, too, the aging of her wounds, Joan struggled to her feet, and with halting voice started an apology for her intrusion. Her strong hands gently pushed her back and three people voiced gratitude and questions.

Joan tried to explain. "I have sunlight and mine so! Not much of either has ever come my way. All that I get comes from your windows. I was waiting, but I'm going to get my own. I'm studying," she began, then stopped short at a twinge of pain and gasped twice at the queer bandaged limbs. Mrs. Smith caught that look and read it. Impulsively she spoke:

"You're not going to do any studying for awhile, are you? Well, but just stay right here and be served by me, my dear, and Stanton will come every day to dress your burns."

"I sure will," the latter volunteered, "and perhaps Miss Joan, since she knows more so much, will be willing when she's better to tell me what ones to use in my new office over among my poor folks on Caroline street."

Joan sat straight up. "Caroline street?" she exclaimed. "I was born there. Oh, never make it bright! Bring some color into their gray lives! Make it—like this!" She looked about her at the room, then sank back with a little moan of pain.

They gave her a sleeping potion and put her to bed. So ended the first day.

The fortnight has passed! The burns are healed, the bandages gone. But on Joan's left hand something has been substituted that binds tighter than any bandage. She stands in a "beard" of sunshine watching Mrs. Smith hang silver curtains of bronze gold hue. Through the door strides a Greek god? Or could it be a movie star? No! Just a high-hearted man who has dedicated his life and knowledge to humanity. He puts an arm around Joan.

"Just see the beautiful sunlight, Joan," she says, "and to think—I'm not away of across the street, looking in, but actually being in it—with you! Oh, Joan, if I can only help you bring it into other people's lives, as you have brought it into mine!"

"I didn't bring it to you, little wife; you flew straight into it—but I'm going to keep you there always."

Where We Fished.

"So you were fishing yesterday, Raeta?"

"Yes, sah, so I was. Who did tell yer sah?"

"Nobody told me, Raeta. I saw you fishing in a boat."

"No, sah, yer wrong; I never fished in a boat, boss."

"But I saw you with my own eyes, Raeta, and you were fishing in a boat."

"Yer certainly peed wrong, boss. I was sittin' in de boat, but I waser fishin' in de river."—Yonkers Statesman.

Notice of Republican County Convention

Pursuant to a call issued by Hon. Phil E. Bear, chairman of Republican State Executive Committee, I hereby call a delegate county convention at Leflore, Tex., at the courthouse, the county of Gray, Saturday, July 21st, 1920, at 12 o'clock noon, to elect delegates and alternates to attend State, Senatorial, Congressional, Representative, and Judicial District Conventions, and to transact such business as may properly come before the county convention.

The election laws provide that no person may participate who is not a qualified voter, and only Republican electors and others who believe in the principles of the Republican party, endorse its policies and will support its nominees in good faith are entitled to participate in such conventions.
