Prof. London's Lectures Draw Large Crowds

Each evening this week a crowded house has turned out to hear Prof. A. S. London, dean of the Nazarene College at Bethany, Okla., who is delivering a series of lectures to the young people at the Nazarene church. The older folks are also finding these lectures good, and interest is increasing.

The singing is particularly good. A chorus has been organized, and Mr. Freeland's tender solos have met with hearty appreciation.

Mr. London will lecture on "Christian Education" and "The Possibilities of a Boy" Sunday morning and evening.

In his lecture on "Making a Man" Mr. London says: "Emerson says, 'Goodness outshines genius as much as the sun outshines the electric light.' Therefore, the first principle of manhood is righteousness. This is an impossibility without Christianity. The Bible says, 'Seek first the Kingdom of God.' Solomon says, 'The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom.' Conversion from sin is the first step toward the making of a man. However, this does not complete the work of manhood. Character must be built. Horace Greeley, while dying, exclaimed, 'Fame is a vapor, popularity an accident, riches takes wings and flies away, and those who cheer today will curse tomorrow; only one thing endures—CHARACTER.' A thing so important as this cannot be made in a day. Lowell says, 'The kind of world one carries about in one's self is the important thing. Everything else takes its grace, color and value from that.' The task of one's life is the building of manhood. A writer has said, 'This world is our college, disappointments and difficulties are our teachers, happiness is our graduating point, character is our diploma.' He who has character cannot be weak in life nor early forgotten in death. As an architect is greater than the building he rears, so a man is greater than the work he is in. A man is greater than anything he can do or say. God has given every man the raw material with which to labor. Manhood is the statue carved out of the raw material. Manhood is built from within. Milton says, 'There is nothing that makes men great, rich and strong but that which they carry inside of them.' Wealth does not consist in the abundance of the things a man possesses. But it does consist in the heart a man has within him. Manhood is the ripe fruit earth gives back to the Creator."

The O. M. Franklin Blackleg Vaccine

Made by the Originator at Amarillo, Texas

In the past few weeks a number of large herds in various parts of the country have been re-vaccinated with the O. M. Franklin product that were originally vaccinated with cheaper priced products. Is this fact not sufficient proof that the difference in price is not the only difference to be considered?

When you vaccinate be sure that the product you use will immunize your calves against blackleg PERMANENTLY AND POSITIVELY—the O. M. Franklin Blackleg Vaccine will. Distributed by Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Glass and little son of Eldridge spent the week end with relatives.

Wife of Panhandle Editor Dies

Mrs. Lee Satterwhite of Panhandle, wife of the Herald editor, died at the family home on Friday of last week. Funeral services were held at the Baptist church on Saturday, Rev. H. C. Gordon, Methodist pastor, officiating. A number of people from other towns were there to attend the funeral.

The News joins the press fraternity and the large number of friends in extending sympathy to the bereaved brother editor and family.

In the debate to decide the honors between the two literary societies of Clarendon College on Saturday evening, Hughes Quattlebaum of this place was one of the speakers on the winning side. In college life a great deal of importance is given to the inter-society debate at commencement, because of the keen rivalry. Hughes is to be congratulated upon his success.

Mrs. S. A. Cousins went to Clarendon Saturday to attend the commencement exercises of the college. Her daughter, Miss Janie, is a member of the graduating class.

Miss Flossie Jordan went to Canyon Friday to visit her sister, Miss Ruth, and to attend the commencement exercises of the W. T. S. N.

Miss Ethel Stockton returned Saturday from Bethany, Okla., where she has been attending college.

C. J. Cash motored to Amarillo last Thursday. He was accompanied home by Floyd Phillips.

Prof. Williams of Shamrock was here yesterday, giving instruction to the orchestra.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Kibler returned Monday from Stillwater, Okla., where they went to attend the commencement exercises of A. & M. college. We are glad to learn that their son, Byron, graduated with highest honors.

Mrs. Nida Green, accompanied by Ralph Jackson and three young ladies of the Heald Epworth League, went to Lockney Tuesday to attend the North West Texas League Conference.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Cooke motored to Amarillo Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. B. Ellis of Kigwa, Kan., came in Monday to visit C. L. Cooke and family.

Our New Terms

The increased cost of merchandise, wholesale houses selling for cash only, and the financial condition of the country in general, makes it necessary that we confine our business to thirty days' credit only, and we expect all accounts to be paid on the first of each month, that we may be able to extend to the public our usual thirty-day credit terms. Pay your bills promptly and save us and yourself the embarrassment of our having to ask you for the money.

Small Herds of Sheep Make 100 Per Cent Profit

A. L. Hurst of McCoy community is one of the farmers of Floyd county who realize good profits annually from a small herd of sheep on the farm. It is his experience that they are even more profitable than hogs. This month his wool clip has been good, and following the clipping, he shipped a half-car of his herd to the Ft. Worth market last week. Anyway you figure it, he declares, the profit was fully 100 per cent. He finished out the car with fat hogs, which also sold at the day's high mark.—Floydada Hesperian.

Miss Janie Cousins returned Monday from Clarendon.

Sheriff's Sale

The State of Texas, County of Gray: BY VIRTUE of a certain Order of Sale issued out of the Honorable District Court of Gray County, on the 15th day of April, 1920, by W. R. Patterson, District Clerk of said county against J. M. Osborne, Alice Osborne and J. T. Davis for the sum Seven hundred forty-five and 74/100 [$745.74] Dollars and costs of suit, in cause No. 606 in said Court, styled Guaranty State Bank versus J. M. Osborne, et al, and placed in my hands for service, I, W. S. Copeland as Sheriff of Gray County, Texas, did, on the 25th day of April, 1920, levy on certain Real Estate, situated in Gray County, described as follows, to-wit:

All of lots fourteen (14) and fifteen (15) and the north half of lot sixteen (16), all in Block No. forty-five (45), together with all improvements thereon, situated in the town of Alanreed, Gray County Texas, as shown by plot of said town, and levied upon as the property of said J. M. Osborne and Alice Osborne. And on Tuesday, the 1st day of June, 1920, at the Court House door of Gray County, in the town of Lefors, Texas, between the hours of ten a. m. and four p. m. I will sell said property at public vendue, for cash, to the highest bidder, as the property of said J. M. Osborne and Alice Osborne by virtue of said levy and said Order of Sale.

And in compliance with law, I give this notice by publication, in the English language, once a week for three consecutive weeks immediately preceding said day of sale, in the McLean News, a newspaper published in Gray County.

Witness my hand, this 28th day of April, 1920.

W. S. Copeland,
19-4. Sheriff Gray County, Texas.

If You Want to Know How Much You Ought to Get, Find Out How Much You Have to Give (BY BRUCE BARTON).

A great word has been added to the vocabulary of business in recent years. It is being overworked, as all new words are. We shall doubtless become very tired of it, as we have become tired of "psychology" and "efficiency" and "merchandising" and other overworked words. But the idea that the word represents has come to stay. The word itself is SERVICE. I was in the office of the general manager of a great corporation recently. The business he manages has departments in almost every large city. It is a business that has unquestionably been of enormous benefit to the people of America, and has incidentally—made millions for its founder. The general manager read me a letter from the "Old Man." I obtained permission to copy four paragraphs. Here they are. What do you think of them as the confession of faith of a millionaire? "I can honestly say that I have never worked at the business for profit as the main motive. My profits have been incidental, though absolutely necessary. I have always conducted my business solely for the purpose of what I considered 'public service.' Had I conducted my business for the purpose of making profit, I might have made as much money as I have made, although I doubt it. I am sure that I would not have made a quarter as much." I know a man who has grown rich by building and operating great hotels. I slept in one of his hotels the other night, and in the morning I dropped into my pocket a copy of his instructions to his employees. Here are some quotations from that book: "A hotel has just one thing to sell. That one thing is Service. The hotel that sells poor service is a poor hotel. The hotel that sells good service is a good hotel. It is the object of this hotel to sell its guests the very best service in the world. The service of a hotel is not a thing supplied by any individual. It is not special attention to any one guest. Hotel service means the limit of courteous, efficient attention from each particular employee to each particular guest. This is the kind of service the guest pays for when he pays his bill—whether it is for $2 or $20 a day. It is the kind of service he is entitled to, and he need not and should not pay any more." It is interesting to note how, in the course of time, the practical men of the world finally come around to the point of view of the worlds dreamers. Napoleon, the practical man, refused to see the dreamer Fulton with his absurd claim that he could make a boat run against tide and wind. But today all practical men pay tacit tribute to that dreamer. For two thousand years practical men have looked with a sort of tolerance on the teachings of a certain carpenter of Nazareth. What he said was very good, of course, but utterly impractical. Yet the service idea, which is the big new idea in business, was first discovered by that carpenter: "Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant." It is the one solid, practical rule for building a business or a business career. If you want to know how far you will go in business, take account of stock; find out how much service you are equipped to perform. If you want to figure what you are likely to get, first figure what you have to give.

SEEK OUT HIDDEN BLESSINGS

Writer Well Says That in That Habit May Be Found Source of All Happiness.

That old poet, Goethe, said a wonderful thing when he uttered these words: "I never have an affliction that does not turn into a poem." This bit of sunshine philosophy is worth all the poems Goethe ever wrote. It is sublime. It is the keynote on which the woman who worries may tune her harp for every day, and there will never be a discord.

To weave poetry out of affliction, to find hidden blessings in every trial, to gain patience and enduring power from suffering, to carve character out of crosses—therein lies the secret of your philosopher, and therefrom gush the springs of happiness.

It is a knack to bear crosses lightly, as Florence Smith Vincent tells the New York Tribune. It is born of good sense and good cheer and good will. No cross is ever too broad for the back it falls upon. And when backs do break beneath their burdens, it is because they resist and rebel and will not adjust themselves. It is because they resist rather than co-operate with the laws of the universe, which distribute joys and sorrows according to rule.

ACCOUNTED FOR

"These feminine antimatrimony clubs generally go to pieces." "That is because they are mismanaged."

MOTOR BOATS IN CHINA.

Motorboats are gaining in popularity among the Chinese, and the time seems not far distant when they will be in far more general use for business and pleasure. It is reported to the far Eastern division of the commerce bureau that at least fifty boats are being constructed in the various yards at Canton, and that there is a demand for motorboat engines developing from 15 to 25 horsepower. While American engines are popular, manufacturers should take into consideration that the Chinese give great weight to the price, rather than basing their purchases solely on quality, especially as European manufacturers undoubtedly will take advantage of this fact in their efforts to capture this growing market.

AMERICAN SCHOOL IN CHINA.

Americans in China expect soon to send their children to the first American school to be established for American pupils in that country. It will cost about $500,000, the collection of which virtually is completed. The buildings are to be located in Shanghai. The new school is intended to serve the entire American population in China, which numbers about 6,000. High school courses will be offered, so that graduates may be admitted to the leading universities in the United States. Heretofore, American pupils in China have attended British schools.

ILL-TREATED.

HUBBY PUT HIS FOOT DOWN

Made It Very Plain There Was One Privilege to Be Denied His Wife's Pet Cat.

It was during the noon hour, when restaurants are most crowded. They were an elderly man, well dressed, and a middle-aged woman, overdressed. Her cheeks bore a hectic flush, her eyes were aglow—she was far too excited to eat and poured a stream of words into her companion's ears.

"And, lovey, you should have seen him—such pride in his bearing as he stood on that cerise velvet cushion before a hanging of the same shade! I tell you he was gorgeous. Can't you picture the contrast? His smoke colored skin and his amber eyes. I knew the judges would give him the blue ribbon."

"They couldn't have done otherwise. And he deserved it, he certainly did, my precious Persian. I can't see why you object to his sleeping with us. Why, when I told Mrs. Smith that you objected she was so surprised. She simply could not understand it. All four of her pet Angoras sleep with her."

"Let her," he snapped, with an ominous click to his jaws. "You can pin Omar's blue ribbon to the footboard. But he won't sleep with me. That's flat."

And for fifteen minutes the woman wept silently—and he smoked furiously, looking off into space and wondering about something. Heaven knows what!—New York Times.

FEAR WORK OF EVIL SPIRITS

Why Kayans of Borneo Give New-Born Child the Name of Some Repulsive Object.

When a child is born among the tribe of Kayans of Borneo it receives the name of some repulsive object, or is simply called "it," so that, not having a distinctive name, the evil spirits cannot identify it and cause it harm.

When the child is two or three years old they give it a name, say, Tijan. The father is thereafter known as Tama Tijan, Tama meaning "the father of," and the mother is known as Inai Tijan, the mother of Tijan. The father's original name is dropped and frequently is forgotten, unless there are other fathers of Tijans.

If Tijan dies, Tama Tijan's name becomes Oyong Kehing, meaning "Kebing the Bereft," provided Tijan was the oldest child. If a younger child dies, the father becomes Akam Kebin. If his wife dies he becomes Aban Kebing, and if he becomes a grandfather his name will be Laki Kebing, Laki being distinctly an honorary title.

HIS BIT.

"Where were you during the war?" asked the meddlesome person. "While your countrymen were dying on the battlefields of France and others were toiling to keep them supplied with munitions of war, you skulked at home."

"I didn't skulk," said the meek citizen, indignantly. "I answered every call, both at the front and rear door; I took in the ice, the milk, the coal, the mail and the laundry; I washed the dishes, swept the floors, manicured the cat and watered the ferns while my wife was out selling Liberty bonds and making four-minute speeches."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

WOMEN LEARN BILLIARDS.

English women are not only establishing themselves much more firmly in the realm of sport, they are advancing in a hitherto neglected direction, says the continental edition of the London Mail. Golf courses have had more women players than usual, but it is in the game of billiards that women have made the biggest strides. There are signs that the near future will see a marked increase in the number of women billiard players.

TOO SMART.

One day in school my teacher asked: "Who can give the tenses of ill?" Upon raising my hand she said: "All right, Adele." I replied: "Ill, dying, dead." The class immediately snickered, and it wasn't until I was on my way to the principal for being "too smart" that it dawned upon me just what I had said.—Exchange.

After Walt Mason

Walt Mason has blood in his eye, he wants to lie right down and die. His heart is making its last flutter, because he has no country butter. He wants to bawl the women out, and cuss and rant around and shout, about the lack of Jersey salve in olden times he used to have. I'd like to see a churn propelled by his blistered hands till he rebelled. Sioshing the old cream up and down making butter for folks in town. So gosh darned funny it always is, for Masons that don't know their bizz, to kick about their daily grease, and try the farmer's frau to fleece. Rides in the choo choo they never earn, all they deserve is just a churn, and listen to the splash and splutter, as they shake out that country butter. Some butter!—From Country Frau, Oquawka, Ill.

A War Story

Edith Wharton, the story writer, told this war story: "The American wounded were being brought in from the Marne battle, and a fussy American woman in khaki uniform and a Sam Browne belt knelt over a stretcher and said: 'Is this case an officer or only a man?' The brawny corporal who stood beside the stretcher gave her a grim laugh and said: 'Well, lady, he ain't no officer, but he's been hit twice in the inards, both legs busted, he's got two bullets in both arms, and we dropped him three times without his lettin' out a squeak, so I guess ye can call him a man.'—Pekin, Ill., Daily Times.

"The Deadlier Sex"

By Bayard Veiller, the Celebrated Playwright

Her father told her that if that big, broad shouldered, good looking young financier would only get away from Wall Street, he was sure he would turn out to be really human and decidedly worth while.

So to save the stockholders of her father's railroad from ruin she kidnaped that young man and had him set down in the middle of a wilderness. And there she held him helpless. It is not a sex problem picture, but a delightful story of adventure and love in the land of the tall, clean forests; a real picture.

Will Need Storage to Save 1920 Grain Crop

Amarillo, May 19 —From the best obtainable information, it now becomes quite apparent that the car supply for the movement of the 1920 crop will be very limited indeed. It is, therefore, of more than passing importance that the farmers of this Panhandle country provide themselves with storage facilities to accommodate the harvest of 1920.

It is a very significant fact that the railroads, operating under the most acute disadvantage, moved from the Panhandle and Plains territory of Texas between January 20 and May 5, 1920, some 16,183 cars of grain, according to the facts presented before the Interstate Commerce by the Panhandle Plains Chamber of Commerce.

Owing to the delay, however, in the movement of the 1919 crop, a very great loss was sustained by the people of this section of the country, much of which could have been avoided had the farmers been equipped with the proper storage facilities.

It is urged, therefore, that we should provide some escape from a recurrence of the loss through which we have suffered so seriously in the past year.—F. R. Jamison, secretary Panhandle-Plains Chamber of Commerce.

NOBODY WANTS A BABY

By OLIVE R. BARTON

(© 1929, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

When Phillip McChesney parked his car as usual in front of the building in which he had his bachelor apartment, and stepped from the marble-lined corridor into the passenger elevator, he had no reason to believe that the long lane of his life had come to the proverbial turn.

He was getting very tired of the lane. As he slipped his key into his door it occurred to him he was doing pretty much the same thing he had been doing every afternoon for many years and was likely to do for many more.

My, how tired he was of the routine! How sick he was of everything! How different it would have been if Madeleine had consented to marry him! He was devoted to Madeleine—pretty, willful and altogether selfish Madeleine.

But what was the use of even thinking? She never would have him. She had told him so a hundred times.

"You see, Phil, we are too much alike to be running mates," she said. "We both want a good time, but we want it in our own way; neither of us would be willing to give in to the other. If you wanted to go to a movie, I'd want opera. If I chose Mrs. E.'s dinner you'd be sure to want something else. I think I ought to marry some one different from myself. I'm such a useless creature, you know. I never did a good turn for anyone in my life. Neither did you, now, did you? All you've ever done was to make money. I'd like to think of my husband as somebody unusual. It's so ordinary to be just rich."

Phillip's thoughts were getting too unpleasant for further retrospection. But he knew Madeleine was right. He was only good to make money, and everyone was doing that now.

Every bank, firm of brokers and bond company listed in the evening paper was gorging in riches. The stores and shops were prospering, too, every one of them, clearing an enormous profit. Wasn't there anything in the world but money?

Ah! Yes! There was pleasure. Money and pleasure; that was all. And on the front page of the paper the different kinds of trouble resulting from the mad pursuit of both.

Suddenly he saw this unusual notice: IMPERIAL THEATER, Fairbanks in "The Sportsman," First Class Vaudeville. SPECIAL.

"To the holder of the lucky ticket a real, live baby will be given away. Eleven months old. Good parents. 'Don't miss the chance!'"

"Ridiculous," thought Phillip. A live baby! They wouldn't dare do such a thing. But suppose they did! Who in New York would want a real, live baby? A dog or a monkey might have a chance—but a baby! The red slowly mounted his temples. He was fond of children, unusually so of babies, and he found himself getting curiously excited over the thing.

They'd no business raffling off a baby even if it could be done legally. But the worst of it was no one would want it!

The lane of Phillip's life was approaching a sharp curve at last, had he known it.

That evening found him sitting uneasily through ten reels of film and listening to half a dozen vaudeville sketches in the very show house that advertised the baby—he couldn't stay away—his indignation and curiosity had grown by degrees until now he was waiting for the lucky number to be read.

The house was packed to its limit—the S. R. O. sign had long been out—of a deathlike stillness hung over the ace as the numbers were read. The 10th number out of the box was to Baby Marie.

At last, "2755," called the man drawing the numbers. "Who has 2755?"

Will the person holding 2755 please step this way?"

Phillip looked around curiously. But there was no response. No one seemed to have the number. Every one looked at his neighbor, necks were craned all over the house. But no one stirred.

"I thought so," said everybody. "Nobody wants a baby!"

"I thought so," said Phillip with the rest. "No one wants a baby."

His indignation began right here to boil. It impelled him at last to get up and start down the aisle. He gained the stage by enormous strides.

"If no one wants the baby, I'll take it," he said. "It's an outrage, the whole affair. But if the baby is an orphan and has no home I'll see that it gets one. I—I'll take it home and raise it myself."

There was tremendous applause then. Although it seemed no one wanted the baby, the crowd was glad enough for some one else to play angel.

The manager smiled down into Phillip's earnest, indignant eyes.

"Very good, young man. If you really mean what you say, suppose you call at the St. Stephen Children's Home tomorrow, here's the address, and Baby Marie will be handed over to you if the board of trustees are satisfied you are a responsible person. They tried to find homes for a dozen little tots this week but weren't having very good luck."

"Then it isn't just a raffle?" asked Phillip, relieved.

"Not exactly! Don't want to hedge, do you?"

"Certainly not! I'll get the child tomorrow. And Phillip turned and walked out.

A light hand fell on his arm, and he turned.

"Madeleine! What are you doing here? Are you alone?"

"Yes. Oh, Phillip, I saw the notice about the baby and I just had to come, too. It sounded so awful! And I want to tell you how perfectly splendid you were. Do you really mean it? Are you going to get that baby?"

"Certainly. I said I would."

"And take it home?"

"Yes."

"And bring it up?"

"By the grace of God, yes. It would be one thing I might be useful for, besides making money," a little bitterly.

"But you'll have to have a nurse."

"Two, perhaps."

"And it will be very expensive, and—and inconvenient," she reminded him.

"Well?"

"Oh, Phillip, let me take the baby. I was just going up anyway when I saw you. And I'm a woman."

"You take it!"

"Yes. Why not?"

"You said you were selfish and useless."

"You said you were, too!"

"And you wouldn't marry me for that reason. The reason doesn't seem to exist now," eagerly.

She had no reply to this. She looked away quickly, but her eyes were very soft.

"You haven't that excuse now, dear. I wonder if—" A new thought had struck him. "Why can't we give the baby a home together, dear? What do you say?"

"All right," she half-whispered. But he heard.

CHANGES IN CAPITAL CITY

Some Little Difference Between Washington Today and As It Was a Century or So Ago.

Visitors in Washington, this winter, will appreciate some of the contrasts between the city of today and the capital of the United States of a century or more ago, as described in the recent biography of one of the early justices of the supreme court. In those days, it appears, the White House was surrounded by a rough rail fence, characterized by a contemporary as "not fit for a barnyard," while Pennsylvania avenue was merely a stretch of "yellow tenacious mud," bordered on either side by tree stumps. There were no hotels then. Washington lived in boarding houses. But it was possible to sit at the table with Thomas Jefferson and John Marshall, all for fifteen dollars a week, including service, "wood, candles, and liquors." Now we have the city spacious and beautiful, with our choice of comfortable hostesses, if not of prices. And lo! It is all "bone dry."—Christian Science.

Crave Our Gift of Anecdote.

Some time ago it was less unusual than it is now for one person to absorb the conversation with pleasure to himself and others. Anecdote is out of fashion here (in England), but apparently it remains popular in America.

Very often lately we have heard the conversation of prominent Americans, from the president downward, admired for the color and richness lent to it by witty anecdote and analogy. Perhaps they will revive the fashion in the old country.

Humorous anecdote has a double value. A hearer in one place qualifies himself to become a speaker in another. Also there is no doubt that each man in a company united by laughter laughs more heartily than any man can laugh alone.—From the Spectator (London).

Wellington Paper Promotes Marriage

The Leader want-ad columns have been the source of much results in the way of buying, selling, finding, etc., and the people of this country have learned that it is the best medium of letting the world know what they have to sell, buy or want. Frequently we tell our readers of the good results obtained from the want-ads, and we now have something out of the ordinary.

Some weeks ago a good citizen of this county, hearing that the Leader was a good advertising medium, came in and had us put in our columns a want-ad asking for some lady to correspond with him. This we did and we have refused to satisfy hundreds of people who wanted to know who it was that inserted the advertisement. Well, we are going to let the cat out of the bag. The party has married one of the ladies who answered his advertisement, and we are at liberty to tell it now.

Tuesday morning early, Mr. M. E. Clepper of Quail stopped the editor on the street and said, "I am on my way to the County Clerk's office to get licence to marry Mrs. Anna Deen of Montague county, who resided in Wellington last year." "Is she one of the women who answered your advertisement?" we asked. He replied in the affirmative and happily went on his way to the court house. A few minutes later the couple had Justice P. W. Myers unite them in marriage.

May they live long, be happy, and prosper.—Wellington Leader.
