

MOTOR IS PRODIGY OF POWER

Used in Largest Steel Plate Mill in the World—Makes Only Forty Revolutions a Minute.

A motor weighing 840,000 pounds is used to drive the largest steel plate mill in the world at Durham, England. It is a 20,500-horsepower motor, and turns only at the rate of 40 revolutions per minute. Great slabs of steel, white with heat, weighing ten tons, with dimensions up to 7 feet by 4 feet by 1 foot, are thrust into immense rollers. These turn out steel plates for battleships three-eighths of an inch thick, nine feet wide and sometimes 100 feet long.

In the days before electricity these feats were not possible. As nearly as one may estimate it, some six miles of horses, six abreast, would be required to turn this mighty motor over. The great Corliss steam engine of 1876, shown at the centennial, weighed nearly 1,500,000 pounds and was 55 feet high, yet this new motor, less than half its height, is 14 times more powerful.

"Yorick Hamn has an engagement."

"Says he'll have to double in brass."
"Well, he's got the brass to do it with."

PECULIAR "CURRENCY."

Business and advertising cards, new torn and dirty from much handling, have been circulating as money in Papeete, Tahiti, travelers have been surprised to find, since the middle of October, 1919, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. At that time, and in some manner not explained, all the smaller silver coins dropped out of circulation as though dumped into the water that greets this small island of the southern Pacific. Determined to establish a medium of exchange, at last, one of the business firms offered as "currency" its own business cards, bearing above the proprietor's signature the words: "Good for 50 centimes," 1 franc, or 2 francs, as desired.

SLIGHTLY WORSE.

"During my forty-old years on the road," said the veteran commercial traveler, "I have slept in at least 8,000 beds."

"Yarp!" grimly returned the landlord of the tavern at Grudge. "And prob'ly you are going to say that your bed here in the hotel last night was the worst you ever participated in?"

"Oh, no! Once when I was a young man and rather wild I slept the greater part of one night in a mortar bed."—Kansas City Star.

A PROOF.

"If women played football they would not be injured as badly as the men."

"Why not?"

"Did you ever hear of women being seriously hurt in the bargain sale rushes?"—Baltimore American.

FOLLOWED HER ADVICE.

Floto—Well, yuh see, my mother always told me to try and master the big things in life.—Baltimore American.

VARIATIONS.

"We have seen a great many reforms."

"No doubt," replied Senator Sorghum; "only let us not forget that we often think institutions are being reformed when they are only being remodelled."

From Alanreed

(Written for last week)

I am glad to note that you have a new reporter at Alanreed.

A sad accident occurred at Alanreed on Oct. 20. A young man about 17 years of age, son of Wilburn Pierce of near Shamrock, was killed in front of the J. T. Wilson residence. He was under a wagon, when a mule that was tied behind jerked back, pulling the wagon bed on the boy. Mr. Clay succeeded in getting the young man out from under the wagon and into the house, but he died in just a few minutes. The body was taken to Shamrock for burial.

On Oct. 22 a nephew of L. C. Parker was run over by an auto truck and badly bruised, but was able in a few days to return to his home at Clarendon.

Your Uncle John spent two days last week at Lefors in attendance upon the Hon. District Court.

Our people are very busy harvesting their crops, especially cotton.

Alanreed is glad to have Rev. R. J. Osborn as Methodist pastor for another year.

The Alanreed school is going along at full speed.

The "spooks" visited us on Halloween and mispiced a few things.

As ever,
UNCLE JOHN.

Hallow'een Jokers Jailed

The city and county jails were bulging with youthful Hallow'een prankers last Sunday night, thirteen being registered at the City Hall and twelve at the county jail. Twenty-five spooks, ranging in age from ten year old youngsters to grown men, were jailed. All paid their fine the next morning and were released. Their fun cost them about ten dollars apiece.—Memphis Herald.

T. J. Lyle of Shamrock will hold a big registered Hereford sale at Shamrock on Monday, Dec. 8th. Sixty head will be sold at auction by Col. P. M. Gross of Kansas City. Barbecue dinner at 12; sale at 1 p. m. Remember the date and write for catalogue. 44-5c.

Land Comes on Market

17,712 Acres of South Plains Land—$30 Per Acre

The purchaser to assume $14.07 per acre, due to Baylor county, drawing 5 per cent interest and payable thirty-seven years after date, but can be paid at any time after seven years, at purchaser's option.

Balance $16.00 per acre, one-half cash, remainder divided into four annual payments drawing 6 per cent interest, the first year making an interest payments only, and the second, third, fourth and fifth year paying $2.00 per acre each year and the interest, making very liberal terms and giving the purchaser ample opportunity to get his improvements on the premises and get this land in cultivation before payment is due.

This makes it possible for a man to handle one or more of these tracts. There has been so much demand for these lands for actual settlement that Mr. Moody has consented to let it go that people may have homes.

This land is about thirty miles west of Lubbock, Texas, and nine miles from Roper, Texas, on one of the Santa Fe lines. It is on the east side of Hockley county, and considered one of the best tracts of land of this size on the South Plains, deep soil of the short grass and catclaw type, fine water from eighty to one hundred and twenty feet in unexhaustable quantities.

These lands are easily cultivated and will produce corn, cotton, wheat, oats, kafir, maize and sudan abundantly. Cotton in 1919 made from one-half to three-fourths of a bale per acre. Sudan brought as high as $83.00 per acre.

The South Plains country is fast coming to her own. The land is producing more per acre than South or Central Texas, where land is selling from $150.00 to $200.00 per acre.

Railroad, Mine, Forest Purchased by Henry Ford

During the last two months Henry Ford and the Ford Motor Company have purchased the Detroit, Toledo and Ironton Railroad, a 300,000 acre timber tract in Northern Michigan, and a coal mine in Kentucky. And it is rumored that other purchases are under consideration.

Two thousand railroad workers are automatically made "Ford men." In the near future they will be permitted to share in the investment opportunity with the thousands of other Ford employees. The minimum wage system and bonus distribution will also apply to the railroad men.

The Detroit, Toledo and Ironton Railroad will soon be known by another name. Avoiding congested centers, the railway is a direct line to the coal fields of Southern Ohio and the West Virginia and Kentucky boundaries. Solid coal trains may be routed through to Detroit without delay or interference.

Timber from virgin forests of the Upper Peninsula of Michigan will be used to furnish lumber for Ford automobile bodies and other requirements. Another link added to the chain of Ford industries is the Ford saw mill, located just outside of Detroit.

These acquisitions are wonderful links in the chain of Ford industries. Fewer outside organizations are being depended upon year by year. Already work on the Ford car and the Fordson tractor commences with the ore in Ford furnaces. Soon the coal will be transported from mines on a Ford railroad, and soon the timber will be cut from Ford virgin forests.

Including these new additions, the direct Ford payroll now contains approximately 100,000 names.

An Editorial on Hash

An American who recently returned from London tells us of visiting a Salvation Army restaurant, one of those havens for the poor man with only a sixpence in his pocket. As usual, the eating place was like a pin in paper and the walls were frescoed with Biblical texts, very many texts. Also there were a number of signs for the benefit of those seeking food. One sign read, "We make our own hash." Underneath was the Biblical text, "Father, forgive them; they know not what they do."

We can't help saying that, not being divine, we have been the direct opposite of forgiving a dish of hash rashly ordered in a restaurant. Why is it that public cooks make such a botch of a dish that is so easily made? That is, it seemed to be very easy for mother to make it. But let's not in any way compare restaurant hash with mother's hash—it's sacrilege. Her's was heavenly. Her's was real hash. We'd hate to be put on oath as to how she did it. We just remember that there was a little brisk bustling in the kitchen, a sound of quick chopping, a jiggle and a sizzling, then an odor—oh, boy, that odor was a meal in itself. And a few minutes later a big, steaming dish rested on the table with dad and every kid ogling it and almost dying for an instant taste of its contents.

Newspaper editorials usually run to weighty politics and weightier economics, but this editorial has to say that hash properly flavored and properly cooked is worth all the dishes of politics and economics in creation.—Exchange.

John Cunningham has decided to put on a public auction sale of lots from his tract of land lying one block southwest of the school house and this is the closest in vacant property available for city lots, and has several desirable building locations in the several acres. T. J. Lyle of Shamrock will hold a big registered Hereford sale at Shamrock on Monday, Dec. 6th. Sixty head will be sold at auction by Col. P. M. Gross of Kansas City. Barbecue dinner at 12; sale at 1 p. m. Remember the date and write for catalogue. 44 5c.

Don't Be "Average" Man

Young people must make themselves efficient and handle their earnings properly during their productive years if they are to escape the common lot of being dependent in old age.

Under normal times the average educated man gets a salary of $2,000 a year. He works forty years, making a total of $80,000 in a life time. The average day laborer gets $3.00 per day in normal times, three hundred days in the year, or $900 a year. In forty years he earns $36,000. The difference, $44,000, equals the financial value of an education. To acquire this earning capacity requires about five months' time, or one hundred and fifty days in the Tyler Commercial College. Divide one hundred and fifty days into $44,000, the value of an education, and you will find that each day spent in the Tyler Commercial College is worth $293 to you without considering the satisfaction and pleasure of living a much more successful life.

The life insurance companies have compiled the following astounding figures on one hundred average men: At the age of sixty five the records of these men are as follows: Thirty five are dead, one rich, four wealthy, six are self supporting but are compelled to work for a living, fifty-four, or over half the number are dependent on children, relatives, or charity. If you could sit down and talk to those fifty-four you would receive the caution to "prepare and train." That is the secret of success—preparation and training. You don't expect to die young, and surely you don't want to be in the class who are dependent in old age. This is a sad state of affairs and can only be remedied by getting the proper kind of business training in youth. Fill in and mail for free catalogue. Get out of the average class. ETCHING AND DRY POINT

Distinction Between Two Methods Not Perfectly Understood by Most People.

Etching has the delightful charm to the artist of many accidental effects. These are especially characteristic of the bitten line where the drawing of the artist is scratched in the surface through an etching ground that protects the copper everywhere from the acid except where these scratches have been made.

A less common use of the etching needle and the copper plate is in the process known as dry point. Here there is no covering of the plate with a ground, or any use of acid—the picture is scratched directly into the copper. With this process, as will be readily understood, on each side of the line is thrown up a little ridge known to etchers as the "burr," and it is to this burr that the dry point owes its especial charm. There is a notable richness in the darks that reminds one of the velvety black tones that are so characteristic of mezzotints.

Many workers in dry point first make a sketch and then transfer this to copper by means of stenciling.—Scribner's Magazine.

IRRITATING FACT

"The natural remedy does not always answer."

"How do you mean?"
"There is poor Doctor Drome, who itches for fame and fortune and has to scratch for a living."

SPEED OF ANTELOPE

The running speed of the antelope was ascertained in a picturesque and unprecedented fashion, it has been disclosed, during the recent exposition of the American Museum of Natural History into the little-known hinterlands of Asia, says Popular Mechanics Magazine in an article in its recent issue. The leader of this expedition decided to devote a day to chasing an antelope herd in his automobile. Consulting his speedometer records later, he found that the herd had traveled at 80 miles an hour for almost two hours, and then had slowed down to about 50, or a little less.

ONLY THE BEST WANTED.

Clad in fine raiment, the Englishman who had inherited a fortune entered the chemist's shop.
"I want one of them plasters to stick on yer back," he explained.
"Yes, sir," replied the chemist, politely hiding a smile. "You mean a parous plaster."

FERVID LITERATURE.

"Do you care for photoplays?"
"I never go to the movies," said the busy editor.
"Lost your illusions, eh?"
"No, I keep my photoplay illusions by glancing over the staff press agents' leaves."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

CLASSIFICATION.

"What do you understand by 'class legislation?'"
"I haven't quite made up my mind," said Farmer Cornstowel, "except as far as to decide that some of the legislation up to our state-house sounds like it might have come from the infant class."

A MOMENT'S RELAXATION.

"I understand you always make money on a falling market."
"Well," replied Mr. Dustin Stet, with a sly, self-appreciative chuckle, "I manage to get a bear living out of it."—Washington Star.

"HOLY RUSSIA" A MISNOMER

Expose Shows That Many of the So-Called Sacred Relics Are Dummies.

For centuries the Russians used to style their country "Holy Russia," but under the bolshevist regime they must forsake the appellation, for so-called holy relics of Russian saints on examination prove to be gross deceptions on the part of monks. Annually thousands of Russians made pilgrimages to these shrines and contributed money according to their means, writes Dr. Peter J. Popoff in Current History. In the presence of high dignitaries of the church and representatives of the people, the relics of St. Mitrofan, a contemporary and co-worker of Peter the Great, were opened at the monastery of that name at Varonush, and found to be an imitation of a human body stuffed with cotton. Next were examined the relics of St. Tikhon at Zadonsk, in Varonush province, and found to consist of cardboard containing some bones. For centuries men and women have kissed what was supposed to be the hand of St. Mitrofan, seen through a minute opening in the white kid glove of the saint, and believed the saint to be a "great miracle worker."

JOKES MADE IN THE PULPIT

Men of the Cloth Have Frequently Been Gifted With a Keen Sense of Humor.

Ministers of religion seem to be blessed with a sense of humor, remarks London Tit-Bits. A reverend gentleman apparently possessed an overwhelming sense of humor, but his jests and jokes, although occasionally ill-timed and delivered at inopportune moments, were nevertheless amusing.

It is said that once on going up into his pulpit, he found that the pages of his sermon had been put out of order by a brother humorist who was present, and as he had not numbered them he was unable, or most likely did not trouble, to get the pages in order again.

He explained the matter to his flock, and then told them who was responsible. He then said, "I've no time to put the leaves in their proper places. I shall read it as I find it. You can put it together when you get home." He then read through the confused mass of paper. One wonders what his congregation thought of it!

BY SOME MISCHANCE.

Spring an empty seat on a street car. I hurried over and sat down next to a well-dressed young woman. In placing my handkerchief in my pocket I must have gathered up somehow the girl's silk ribbon sash, for as she rose to go she noticed her sash in my pocket, and, turning to me, asked me to kindly give it to her. I pulled out my handkerchief and along with it came the two ends of her sash, much crumpled and mussed from having lodged in my pocket. I apologized, and promptly buried myself in my newspaper to hide from the aroused eyes of all around me.—Exchange.

GETTING PRACTICAL.

"You know Bookins, the tenor who used to sing to Miss Sirenicks that every morn he would bring her violets?"
"Yes; did he?"
"That's what he did, and they got married; and now they're living in the country where every morn he has to bring her two buckets of water and help wipe the dishes!"—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

THE QUESTION BOX IN JAPAN

It Contains Queer Problems Subscribers Ask the Newspapers to Solve.

Japanese newspapers are called upon to answer a variety of questions that might well stump a lawyer. The Samato came up against the following recently:

"Last month I married a certain man, but he has now divorced me. His unaccountable excuse is that my eyebrows are a pale color and that I must therefore be a leper. Can I sue him for the damage he is causing to my reputation? A Subscriber." The answer was: "Yes, you can sue him for breaking off the marriage, as he cannot use a pale-colored eyebrow as a cause for divorce."

More of a poser was submitted to the wisdom of the Yomiuri in the following: "I am a woman of twenty years. I was born with a round face and my friends make fun of it. Please tell me some way that I can change the shape of my face, for the persecution to which I am subjected is more than I can bear. A Subscriber."

The editor deserves credit both for the truth and sympathy of his answer: "I am very sorry, but I do not know of anybody who can change the shape of your face. However, be encouraged, full-faced lady, as you are the personification of the health of humanity."—Japan Advertiser.

Our friend Moody, of the McLean News, has been married but a few months. Recently his wife went to Denton to visit her mother and left him to do the housework. Moody began to spend his nights in town and in the day time he went mooning around like he had lost all his friends. He told the readers of his splendid paper that his wife would be gone another week if she didn't receive a telegram to come home. Friends of Moody, who are supposed to know, tell that he finally decided to send the telegram, but what to say puzzled him for awhile until a happy thought struck him. So he cried, "Come home at once. I can't find the broom."—Wellington Leader.

Another Great Kitchen Convenience

The modern MEAT GRINDER is just another example of household efficiency. The poor old kitchen, neglected for a thousand years, is only just now coming into its own. And if the old saying is true that the "road to a man's heart is through his stomach," this kitchen improvement is certainly a step in the right direction.

We do believe that every dollar spent on the efficiency of the kitchen reflects increased health and happiness throughout the whole home.

BOBBIES OF SOME GREAT MEN

George Washington's Chief Diversion
Training Foxes—Cleveland
Painted Children's Toys.

George Washington's principal diversion was training baby foxes. He was fond of fox hunting. He took the animals home and trained them in all kinds of tricks, which he then exhibited to his friends, says the Detroit News.

Francis Bacon was so fond of fine clothes that he spent his odd time trying to devise new styles and stores of dress. During his life he made some 1,200 drawings of fashions and costumes. When he could not get anybody to wear them he had a number of men to don the grotesque attire and to promenade the streets for his pleasure.

President Cleveland liked to paint the children's toys and little bits and ends of household furniture. Seated on a stool, with the youngsters of the White House around him, Mr. Cleveland would amuse himself for hours decorating his toys in the liveliest shades.

Fenimore Cooper couldn't write unless he had gumdrops to chew, and a librarian. He bought gumdrops in ten-pound lots.

Daniel Webster had a curious way for painting the faces of his wife. One week the poor beasts would walk around with blue faces and the next would appear with red ones. The effect was so novel that it pleased him, and from that time forth he changed the color whenever he had a few minutes to spare, and would laugh heartily at the astonishment of his friends when they saw the queer looking beasts.

General Smuts Takes Wind of Con-

Army Officer.

Lawyer, journalist, politician and soldier, General Smuts, who is credited with having more than a little to do with the framing of the League of Nations covenant, has been referred to as "the brainiest strong man of the union parliament of England."

He is a glutton for work; he never gushes. "Let me see," said a high and mighty young officer sitting next to him at a reception in London, shortly after the Boer war, "haven't we—ah—met somewhere?"

"Yes," replied the general. "Thought so," remarked the officer, adding with a bored air, "one meets so many people; let me see, where did we meet?"

"In South Africa," retorted the general curtly, "you surrendered to me during the war."

LOVELY LIARS

BY JOE SAPPINGTON

Truth in all ages has been lauded as the greatest of human virtues, while lying has been frowned upon and condemned as an evil thing.

Was it Solomon or Theodore Roosevelt who said, "All men are liars?" Well, it makes no difference as to the author; he hit the nail on the head when he said it. What an awful world this would be if everybody told the truth. Oftentimes it requires more courage to tell a lie than it does to tell the truth. If everybody told the truth, humanity wouldn't be on speaking terms with itself, and death, destruction and desolation would reign supreme all over the world. "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned." Just think of that and then try to stick to the truth when discussing woman generally. Hell is represented as being a useful place filled with Bolsheviks, mean Republicans, grafters and profane-ers, and naturally there must be a whole lot of fury down there, and the poet says the worst grade of it comes from a woman scorned. I know of but one woman on earth that I would dare tell the truth when discussing looks and age. Just give me ten feet start of that woman when we have a family row, and I'll tell her exact age and just how she looks un-painted, with her hair hanging in the closet on a nail and her teeth reposing on the center table.

Truth is all right in its place, but one has got to know how to handle it or it is liable to explode prematurely. I have heard preachers from the pulpit denounce liars for everything they could lay their tongues to, who would have gotten as mad as a wet hen at the poor devil who was trying to live up to the truth in all its essentials if he had told them what he thought of them and their sermons.

The most precious and lovely liar who ever lived upon this earth is fair woman. Generally speaking, women are too tender-hearted to tell the truth about each other while standing face to face. I know a woman, in fact I have been on speaking terms with her, more or less for the last thirty years, who extols truth as one of the greatest virtues, and has taught her children to observe it; yet, strange to say, she does not always practice what she preaches. To illustrate: Not long ago a lady friend called on her and I will give the conversation as I now remember it: "Why, if it isn't Mrs. Jones! So proud you have called. I was just thinking of you, Mrs. Jones, and wondering what had become of you. 'Now, take off your wrap and don't say you have only a few minutes to stay. You are looking so well, Mrs. Jones. Pray tell me if you have discovered some elixir of perennial youth. I was just saying to a friend of mine a few days since that you had the most beautiful complexion. Do tell me the secret, that I may employ it to restore my own jaded, tired out, faded looks." The caller: "Now, Mrs. Sap, you know you look at least ten years younger than I do. Just the other day I remarked to Mrs. Brown that I would give anything in the world if I had your figure and style. Mrs. Sap, please tell me how you manage to look so fresh and girlish at your age. Why, do you know, lots of people say you look as young as your daughter, and I have a hard time convincing strangers that you are mother and daughter and not sisters."

Well, to an eavesdropper that conversation would have seemed to have been pitched on a fifty-fifty basis. Honors were easy, and both had lied in a most lovely manner. After Mrs. Jones had departed, I casually remarked to my wife: "Mrs. Jones certainly is a beautiful woman. If I were her husband I sure would be proud of her. She looks so fresh and plump and her complexion is simply a peach. Wish you looked like her, and I would give—" but the storm broke and I got no further. My wife took the floor in the most vehement manner and denounced me as an idiot. She said: "You don't appreciate your own wife and want to insult her by praising another man's wife. That Mrs. Jones is the dowdiest woman in town and none of our set ever think of inviting her to our parties. Talk about her complexion, why she has liver splotches on her face as large as doughnuts, and she spends most of her husband's salary buying paint to dab them over. You say she is plump. If you had said stuffed you would have been correct. A pillow slip wouldn't hold all the things that woman is stuffed with. I know I have a faded, run-down-at-the-heel look, but just think who I have been living with for thirty years. It's ten thousand wonders I don't look more like an old Indian squaw than I do." There you are. Wouldn't even allow me to agree with her in what she said herself about her fellow-woman. Now, as to myself, I am what might be termed a reciprocal liar. I hand it back to them just like they hand it to me. Now, when I meet a friend who wants to engage in a lying contest he will find me ready and willing to accommodate him. If I should meet a friend and he should say: "Joe, you look younger than you did twenty years ago." You would hand it back quicker than a flash and say to him: "I don't look a day older than you did forty years ago." But should I meet Bob Walker or some other fellow who looked like he had been sojourning and tramping around on this globe for more than half a century, and he or she should get gay and speak disrespectfully of my gray hairs and bald head, I would slam it back at 'em by asking how it felt to be living on borrowed time and were they keeping the interest paid up. No fairer liar ever lived than I am.

"I'll be perfectly frank with you, sir," said the applicant for a job. "I served a term in prison."

"It wasn't one of those model prisons with hot and cold shower baths, sun parlors, glee clubs, intramural baseball teams, debating societies, movie shows and 'Beating Back' organizations, was it?" asked the head of the firm, dubiously.

"Oh, no, sir. We didn't have anything of that sort. In fact, during all the time I was there I never once heard the warden refer to the convicts as his 'boys.'"

"If that's the case, I'll give you a chance."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

ASK HIM HIS BUSINESS.

Deep in a ponderous calculation, the professor leaned over his desk. One hand held his massive brow; the other guided the pencil.

Suddenly the library door was flung open and a nurse entered, smiling broadly.

"There's a little stranger upstairs, professor," she announced, of course referring to the very latest arrival.

"Eh?" grunted the man of learning, poring deeply over his problem.

"It's a little boy," remarked the nurse, still smiling.

"Little boy, eh? Well, ask him what he wants!"—London Tit-Bits.

BOUND TO GET RID OF HIM.

"A newspaper man to interview you, sir," said the servant.

"Tell him I'm so hoarse that I can't talk," answered the candidate.

"I told him that," said the servant, "but he said he'd ask the question and you could nod—yes or no."

"Tell him I've a stiff neck and can't nod."—London Tit-Bits.

Buying Meat by Parcel Post

City Marshal J. R. Maddox is now getting his fresh meat by parcel post, and his friends declare that he is getting remarkably quick deliveries without bothering himself to order.

Protesting at the City Meat Market Monday afternoon against the high cost of living in general, and the high cost of fresh meat in particular, he declared that he planned to buy from a popular mail order firm, borrowing a catalogue from a farmer friend who was handy. However, he didn't order, but however, again, he did get the meat in less than two hours through the post office. The charges were $1.75, and the meat proved to be a choice bit of the tip end of the soup bone. —Floydada Hesperian.
