McLEAN TIGERS WIN GAME WITH CLARINDON PUPS

The McLean Tigers went into the football game with the Clarendon College Pups with their old form last Friday. The Clarendon lineup started with four men the Pull Dogs, Clarendon College's first team, in the game. Their presence did not keep the boys from winning to the tune of 6 to 0.

Several Clarendon players were injured during the game and were replaced with fresh men. Some changes were made in the local lineup by substituting players, but injuries were reported.

The college team is supposed to be as strong a team as will be played by the Tigers this season, and with proper support from the sidelines there is no reason why the McLean aggregation should not be the champions of the district.

The gate receipts amounted to $10.85, the largest crowd being present that has witnessed any game on the local gridiron.

FOOTBALL GAME FRIDAY AFTERNOON

The next football game will be played with the Canyon College Yearlings on the local field at the Fair Park tomorrow at 3 p. m. The Football Booster Club expects the business men to close their stores for the hours of the game in order that everyone may be present.

SAVAGE MAKES 3,000 MILE TRIP

N. E. Savage and son, Chester, returned Saturday night from a trip to Louisville, Kentucky, and other places, making a 3,000 mile trip, passing through nine states. Mr. Savage says he found no crops or other conditions as good as we have here. Farmers work longer hours and receive less returns for their labor in the old states than they do in the Panhandle of Texas.

HALE COUNTY FIRST PLACE AT AMARILLO FAIR

Hale county won first place at the Amarillo Tri-State Fair this week against strong competition, with Randall county 2nd, Floyd 3rd, Dallam 4th, Hartley 5th, Garza 6th, Castro 7th, Hemphill 8th, Lubbock 9th, Motley 10th, Wheeler 11th, Palmer 12th, Bailey 13th, Armstrong 14th, Gray 15th, Carson 16th, Hall 17th, Donley 18th.

It is generally conceded that the fair dates were too early for many of the exhibits. Gray county was handicapped with many immature products. A better chance would be given many counties by placing the fair dates later in the season.

CLUB BOYS LEAVE FOR AMARILLO

County Agent R. O. Dunkle took four of Gray county's club boys to Amarillo today (Thursday) to compete with other counties in a livestock judging contest at the Tri-State Fair. The boys making this trip are Oran Robinson and Jobe Abbott of McLean, Shelby and Hallie Gantz of Kingsmill.

THE McLEAN SCHOOLS

By Supt. D. E. Dean

The first month of the McLean schools will end Friday, Sept. 26. The school proper has run only three weeks, but the Teachers' Institute counts one week on the first month which makes four weeks in all.

Report cards for the first month's work will be given to the children on Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 1st. We are anxious that each parent and guardian examine the cards brought home by his or her children and sign the cards, then have the children bring the cards back to their respective teachers on Thursday morning. Do not keep these report cards at home; we want them at school.

It is very likely that the grades for the first month will be low. The student body has not gotten into the spirit of the work as it should, but the indications are that better work will be done hereafter.

We now have an enrollment of 425, there being 292 students in the elementary and intermediate grades and 133 in the high school.

The general atmosphere about the school is good. There is some indication of tardiness on the part of some children and some trunks have been reported, but, considering the size of the school, these are of minor consequence. We want the parents to see to it that their children leave home plenty early to get to school by 8:45. If a child is later than 8:45 he is marked tardy. These tardy marks will take from his record and can be a means of failure.

If the next eight months can be as smooth as the first one has been McLean will have had an exceptionally smooth school.

Our boys play the "Yearlings" of the Canyon Teachers' College here tomorrow (Friday) at three o'clock. Come and see the boys play. We must win this game, too, as we did last Friday's game. The school will be dismissed at 2:45 for the game. But we will take up school at 12:30 p. m. and have four 34-minute periods in the afternoon so as to get in all the classes for that day. We must not miss a fourth of our class work any more, for the classes which come on Friday afternoon are just as essential as those of any other day.

This word to the fathers and mothers of the boys who play football: You should see to it that your boy is at home at nights during the school nights preparing his work for the next day. Your boy is going to fail this year if you permit him to stay in town during week nights. We want the athletes to go on successfully and triumphantly, but your boy will fail if he loses his head about athletics.

Yours for a successful school.

Tony Dostalik of Oklahoma City was shaking hands with friends here Tuesday.

Mrs. C. S. Rice and son and daughter, Erwin and Miss Vera, attended the Amarillo fair Wednesday.

FIRST FROST IN PANHANDLE SUNDAY NIGHT

The News is in receipt of a letter from C. E. Francis, who is in Glen Rose in the interest of health. Mr. Francis left on Sept. 3rd for Oklahoma City, where he spent a week, but as his condition did not improve, he left for Glen Rose, and we are glad to learn that he is slowly improving.

McLEAN GINS READY FOR COTTON CROP

With two big ginning plants in the best of shape, everything is in readiness to handle the biggest crop of cotton ever grown in this community.

The Smith-Coske gin has been thoroughly overhauled since last season; two men working constantly with the exception of one month in the summer, have put everything in the best of shape. Additions have been made to the buildings, new fans installed for the air line, new saws for the sands, new distributor, new seed boxes with easy dump attachment and a new seed house mean that much more cotton can be handled and in a more efficient manner than last season.

The Chickasa Cotton Oil Company's plant has just been installed this season, with the finishing touches added this week. This plant will be run by steam, and a new boiler and engine are ready for business. This company has all the conveniences needed, with a cake house added. The machinery is complete in every way to turn out a bale in the shortest possible time.

With two complete plants with a combined capacity of nine 70-saw stands should be able to handle all the cotton hauled to McLean this season without the annoying waits that are usually the custom.

We are assured that there will be plenty of cotton buyers in the local market to insure the highest possible price to the growers.

WORKERS' CONFERENCE BAPTIST CHURCH ARLIE CHURCH OCT. 7

The next Workers' Conference of the Wheeler-Collingsworth Baptist Association will be held with the Arlie church in Childress county Tuesday, October 7th, according to Missionary Oliver L. Oldham, who was a McLean visitor Wednesday. A full program has been arranged and it is hoped that a large delegation will be present from each church.

STAR FILLING STATION INSTALLS NEW PUMP

L. L. Rogers, proprietor of the Star Filling Station, has installed a new ten gallon visible gasoline pump at his station to take care of his increasing business. Mr. Rogers uses as his slogan, "Headquarters for Service" and he figures that the new pump will help him live up to his slogan in a better way.

CITY COUNCIL ORDERS SIDEWALKS BUILT

At a meeting of the City Council Wednesday, final plans for the proposed sidewalk improvement were adopted. A call for bids has been issued, such bids to be opened on Friday of next week. If a satisfactory bid is obtained we may see the walks put in before the winter season.

The council voted as a unit on the proposition as there has been no objection raised to the improvements.

PENTECOSTAL REVIVAL CONTINUES ALL WEEK

According to Rev. L. K. Jackway, who is conducting the revival at the Pentecostal Mission on North Main street, the services will not close as originally announced, but in answer to the public's demand, the meetings will continue until Saturday night, when another special service will be held similar to the service held Tuesday night. This service will be held in the city tabernacle.

Rev. Jackway is well pleased with his reception in McLean.

Mrs. Arthur Collins and son returned Sunday night from an extended visit with relatives at Lubbock.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Hindman attended the fair at Amarillo Wednesday.

Synopsis

BOOK ONE—CHAPTER I.—Fleeing from a brutal stepfather, an unhappy home, and a proposed husband she detests, Myrtle, a young French girl, stands in a country road on the verge of desperation.

CHAPTER II.—Halted by an exploded tire, two young Englishmen, Lord Gerald Dombey and Christopher Bent, are attracted by the girl's distracted appearance. She begs them to take her away from her misery in a spirit of adventure they do so, conveying her to Monte Carlo and leaving her with friends. Myrtle speaks English, her mother having been an educated woman.

There has been no previous time in her life when Myrtle had been required to marshal her thoughts and speak unaccustomed words, yet, at that moment, clearly and unfalteringly she told her story. She pointed to the weather-stained cottage behind.

"I live there," she said, "with three half-brothers and sisters and a stepfather. My mother was the village schoolmistress. She married for the second time a bad man, and she died. I have taken care of those children. I have kept the house clean and tidy. I have done what the cure told me was my duty, and all the time I have hated it."

"Why?" Christopher asked simply.

She looked across as though surprised at his intervention.

"Because the children are coarse and greedy and ill-mannered," she explained. "I wear myself out trying to make them different, but it is useless. It is in their blood, because my stepfather—is worse. Often he drinks too much brandy, he is quarrelsome, he is never kind. There is not one little joy in life, only when I escape for a little time and come here, and look down the road which leads to liberty, and wonder what may lie at the other side of the hills there. You see, I have read books—many books. My mother and father were both well educated. I know and feel that the life I am leading is terrible."

"There is something beyond all this," Gerald said. "There is something of instant trouble in your face." Again for a moment she was voiceless, a white, dumb thing stricken nerveless with horror. It was that look which had surprised the two men. Her breath, as she spoke, seemed choked with unuttered sobs.

"My stepfather brought home from the village tonight—the Widow Dunay. He is to marry her—to bring her to the farm. He brought, too, Pierre Leschamps, the keeper of the cafe. Horrible—horrible!"

"Pierre Leschamps," Gerald murmured softly. "Go on."

The girl opened her lips but the words seemed to stick in her throat.

"They propose, perhaps, to betroth you?" he asked, with quick understanding.

Her assent was mirrored in the agony of her eyes.

"He is fat and old and he drinks," she cried. "I would sooner die than have him come near me!"

"Look upon us as two friends," Gerald begged. "What would you have us do?"

The girl pointed once more to where the road disappeared amongst the hills.

"If you leave me here," she declared, "I shall walk and run and crawl until I pass out of sight there, and perhaps they may borrow the widow's cart and catch me, and then I shall kill myself. Take me with you as far as you are going—somewhere where I can hide."

The car glided slowly up to where they were standing. Gerald did not hesitate for a moment. He stepped into his place at the driving wheel and motioned to the seat by his side.

"Agreed," he said. "We will start you, little one—tell me, how are you called?"

"Myrtle," she murmured.

"We will start you off on the great adventure of life. It seems to me that there can be nothing worse in store for you than what you leave behind."

The girl pushed open the gate and sprang into the car like a frightened thing. Gerald turned his head. Around the corner of the farm three unsteady figures shrouded themselves; three voices—two raucous and one shrill—called for Myrtle. There were threats, gesticulations. The girl covered by Gerald's side.

"Start!" she implored. "Start, please!"

Christopher, however, hesitated.

"I think," he said, "we should first hear what these people have to say. They have, after all, some claim upon the girl. It might be possible to sid her without bringing her away from home."

Myrtle clung to Gerald. Her eyes were swimming pools of passionate entreaty.

"Start, monsieur," she pleaded. "There is nothing for me but escape. Why does the other gentleman mind?"

"Get in, there's a good fellow," Gerald begged impatiently. "We don't want to have a row with these yokels."

The chauffeur was already in the dicky behind. Myrtle's eyes implored Christopher to take the place by her side. With his feet still on the road however, he leaned across her to Gerald.

"Gerald," he said, "this is a more serious affair than you seem to think. Who is going to look after the child when we get to Monte Carlo?"

"You can, if you like," was the careless reply. "I'm not thinking of playing the Lothario, if that is what you mean?"

"Word of honor!"

"Word of honor. Don't be an ass old chap. It's up to us to give the girl a chance."

Christopher stripped off his coat and wrapped it around Myrtle. Then he took the place by her side. Gerald slipped in the clutch and they glided off.

The twilight overtook them swiftly. The lights of Monte Carlo, as they commenced the long descent, were like pin pricks of fire thrust through a deep blue carpet. Myrtle, whose eyes had been fixed upon the flying milestones, leaned forward now with a little exclamation of wonder.

"It is fairyland!" she cried.

Gerald looked down at her indulgently.

"You live so near and you have never been even as far as this?" he asked.

"It is as I have told you," she answered. "I have never traveled ten kilometers from the farm in my life."

Christopher was almost incredulous. Gerald, however, nodded syncretically. Both young men had taken it for granted from the first that their charge understood no English.

"In France they are like that," Gerald remarked. "It is the souls that count. But this child—isn't she amazing. Christopher? Except for her clothes, there isn't a thing about her that suggests the peasant. She is like a child Madonna—an angel—who has stolen into the clothes of a girl gone for her first communion."

"I should still like to know what you are going to do with her when we arrive?" Christopher asked, bluntly. "Are you going to take her to the villa?"

"Later on, perhaps," was the careless reply. "Certainly not this evening."

"Why not?" Christopher persisted. "Your sister is very kind-hearted. It seems to me, as long as we have the girl on our hands, that she is the proper person to look after her."

Gerald smiled slightly.

"My dear Chris," he said, "you and Mary are pals, I know, but I am not sure that you altogether understand her. She doesn't like surprises. We must pave the way a little before we ask for her help."

Myrtle had been looking from one to the other of her two companions with a sense of growing trouble in her eyes.

"Messieurs," she interrupted, "it was wrong of me not to tell you before. I

"I speak a little English. I understand very well."

"You are a most amazing child!" Gerald exclaimed, looking down at her in genuine astonishment. "You have never been ten kilometers from your homestead, and you speak a foreign language! That comes of having a schoolmistress for a mother, I suppose. However, have no fear. We shall dispose of you pleasantly."

"Tomorrow," she said timidly, "I can find work."

"Tomorrow be hanged!" Gerald replied. "Look about you, little one. We are entering the town. If your story is true—and we know that it is," he added hastily, "you see for the first time shops, villas, hotels. The building in front of us is the casino. Now you see the lights that fringe the bay."

"It is amazing," Myrtle murmured. "They drew up at the side door of the hotel where the two young men were to stay. Gerald descended.

"Take care of the child for a few minutes, Chris," he begged. "I am going to interview one of the housekeepers."

He disappeared into the hotel. Myrtle watched his tall, slim figure until it was lost to sight. Then the fear seemed to return. She shivered.

"I am a trouble to him," she faltered. "He will hate me for it. I only meant that you should drive me somewhere where I could lose myself. Perhaps I had better go, monsieur. Can I not slip away before he returns?"

"He would be very angry if you did," Christopher assured her. "He has gone to arrange for some one to look after you for the night. Tomorrow I think you will do well if you try to find some work. If you wish it, I will help you."

Her eyes still devoured the door through which Gerald had passed.

"Tell me his name?" she begged.

"His name," Christopher replied, "is Lord Dombey."

She repeated it after him, a little hesitatingly.

"I shall always think of him as Gerald," she said. "It is a very pretty name. Tell me, why did the chauffeur say 'your lordship'?"

"Because he is the eldest son of an earl and he is entitled to be called Lord Dombey."

"He is noble, then? I am not surprised. He seemed like that to me. And you, monsieur? May I know your name?"

"My name is Christopher Bent," he replied, "plain Christopher Bent."

"Christopher is a very nice name," she said, with a trifle of unconscious condescension, "but of course it is not like Gerald's."

She looked longingly back towards the crowded doorway, and the young man who stood by her side was aware of a curious and altogether inexplicable sensation. He suddenly found himself envying Gerald's careless but fascinating manners, his good looks, his light, debonaire manner of speech. Even this little walk picked up at the roadside was already under his spell. Then Christopher remembered other things about his friend, and his face grew stern.

Gerald returned presently with a neatly-dressed young woman. He held out his hands to Myrtle and assisted her to alight.

"It is all arranged, child," he announced. "Annette is a chambermaid here. She will take you to some rooms close at hand, where you will be most comfortable. Tomorrow morning, early, Christopher and I will come and see you."

"Mademoiselle will be entirely well suited," the young woman declared. "It is but a few yards away."

Myrtle, still wrapped in Christopher's coat, looked a little pathetic as she stood upon the pavement by Annette's side.

"I shall not see you again tonight, then, Monsieur Lord Dombey?" she asked shyly.

"Not tonight," he laughed. "And Monsieur Gerald is quite enough from you, petite. Tomorrow we will have a long talk. Have no fear—you shall not return to the farm unless it is your wish."

Myrtle stooped and with a sudden, passionate gesture raised his hand to her lips. Then she dragged Annette off without looking behind. Gerald laughed a little consciously.

"Our village maiden is somewhat demonstrative," he remarked lightly. "Come on, Chris. A cocktail while they unpack our clothes. I've telephoned to the villa. We must do a duty dinner there first, but afterward I will show you the land where the pleasure seekers of the world have built their temples."

Chapter III

Lady Mary Dombey was a young woman of very pleasing appearance, but there were occasions upon which she could look stern. This was one of them.

"I am never surprised at anything that Gerald does," she told Christopher, who was seated next her at the dinner table, "but I must say that I should never have expected you to have been mixed up in one of his escapades. What are you going to do with the girl?"

"We hoped," Christopher ventured, a little doubtfully, "that you might be able to make use of her as a kind of under sewing maid, or something of that sort."

"Thank you," Lady Mary replied, without enthusiasm. "I am perfectly satisfied with the services of my own maid."

Lord Hinterleys, who had taken only a languid interest in the conversation, intervened for the first time.

"Where is the young person now?" he inquired.

"In some rooms one of the housekeepers at the hotel found for me, sir," Gerald replied.

Lady Mary rose to her feet.

"I can't decide," she said, "which of you two has lost his heart to this paragon of village loveliness. However, I feel sure that my advice is the best. Send her back to her people."

Gerald strolled to the door with his sister and returned to his place, fingering his cigarette case irritably.

Lord Hinterleys slipped his wine thoughtfully.

"I am not suggesting for a single moment," he observed, "that your attitude toward this young woman is not and will not always be entirely irreproachable, but at the same time you must remember that we are in a country where such adventures are likely to be misunderstood. I feel inclined, therefore, to endorse your sister's advice. I should do all that I could to encourage her to return to her people."

"We'll talk to her in the morning, sir," Gerald promised.

"Don't think we shall stop long, if you'll excuse us, sir," Gerald confided, as he rose to his feet. "It's Christopher's first night in Monte Carlo and I want to show him the ropes. Come along, old chap, and make your adieux," he added, turning to his friend.

Lady Mary made room for Christopher by her side. She was scarcely possessed of her brother's good looks, but her complexion was good, her features unexceptionable, her eyes clear and as a rule sympathetic, her tone and manner attractive. Her figure, especially in a riding habit, was undeniably her skill at golf and tennis far above the ordinary amateur. It was not for lack of offers that, at twenty-four years of age, she was still unmarried.

They talked for some time with interest. Lady Mary's wit was kept and her insight unusual. During a pause in their conversation Lord Hinterleys looked across the room through his horn-rimmed eyeglasses.

"Your friend seems to get on very well with Mary," he remarked.

"They've always been pals," Gerald acquiesced.

"Doing pretty well at the bar, isn't he?"

"Thundering well. They say he's certain to be one of our youngest K. C.'s."

Lord Hinterleys said nothing for several moments.

"Mary has her aunt's hundred thousand pounds," he said at length. "She is a difficult young person to marry. Knows her own mind, though. I should never interfere."

"Chris is a good fellow, but I don't fancy he has any thought of marrying just yet," Gerald remarked. "You won't mind if I take him off now, sir? We shall meet for lunch at the Golf club tomorrow."

Build Up a Reserve

The general whose army wins the battles of today is not in command of men. The winning general is the man who commands the most money and who has the largest reserve of credit. When you have ready money and a reputation for ability and honesty, you have proportionate credit at your command.

The easiest, quickest and surest way to get ready money is to save a part of all you make in this bank REGULARLY.

With this money which you have saved, and your reputation, you can command credit. Then you are in a strategic position—you will place your own limit on the extent of your success.

THIS BANK WILL HELP YOU START AND WILL HELP YOU HOLD THE PACE.

THE SELFISH MAN

YOU are selfish, aren't you? You look out for A No. 1, don't you? A lot of folks say the Selfish Man is not a good citizen. That is not always so. Because a man looks out for himself, that doesn't mean he doesn't look out for others. The Selfish Man is often the best man in the town. He does for his town and the people who live there as much good as he does for himself. Do you know why that is? It is simply because he man who best looks out for himself MUST look out for others as well. He Buys at Home Mr. Selfish Man is looking out for himself. In the first place he gets whatever he needs and can get from the merchants in his home town. He knows that the local merchant is going to stay in business. He is giving him the best and the most that his money will buy. The local merchant has a local field. That field are only a certain number of customers. He cannot expand to do without any of his customers. Mr. Selfish Man insists also upon getting what he gets before he buys. He knows there is always more risk in buying goods he has not seen. There is the risk that they may not be exactly what he wanted. There is the risk of damage by the carriers. He is so selfish he wants the local merchant to be those risks. He also knows that when he sends money here in his own home town, that money will circulate here. Sooner or later a part of that money will come back to him. He sends it out of town hundreds of miles, thousands of miles away, and money will never come back to him. The whole community that much poorer in actual cash. Mr. Selfish Man is also poorer. You see Mr. Selfish Man cannot help himself without helping all of us here in our own. This Selfish Man about whom we speak KNOWS that he serves self best who best serves others. He Owns His Home Mr. Selfish Man sooner or later owns his own home. He doesn't wonder why he should pay rent all his life. So he saves money until he has enough to start that home of his. He is so selfish, he wants his money for himself. He does not see why he should waste it, so others can save it. He buys his land in his own town. He gets his building supplies from home dealers where he can go and look it over, pick out exactly what he wants. He employs working men in his own town to put up his building for him. And in a few years' time after he gets the idea in his head, Mr. Selfish Man has a nice home all his own. He has been very selfish and has helped himself. BUT he has saved his money and kept it in his own bank here—and the Stay-at-Home Money has helped all us Stay-at-Home folks. He has bought his land from our local estate dealer here and has helped him just that much. He has bought all his building supplies here, and has helped our merchants and their clerks and their workers. He has employed all his labor here and has helped them to make a living. Enlightened selfishness is the highest form of generosity. He Goes to Church Mr. Selfish Man is not satisfied to stop with the material things of life. A man so selfish is sufficiently intelligent to know that there are some things in this world which are not of this world. He wants his share of them. So he goes to church. He doesn't treat his religion by mail. He helps support the church. He helps pay the pastor. He knows that these things are necessary to his own selfish interests. And because he does all this for himself, he is doing it for his fellow men—his neighbors, his friends—all of us who live here. Strange as it may seem to you, reader, this Selfish Man about whom you are telling you, not only BELIEVES the Golden Rule, but he LIVES the Golden Rule. He Subscribes for His Home Paper Mr. Selfish Man is so selfish he cannot have his own paper. He doesn't like to get his news second-hand. He doesn't wait for his paper until someone else throws it away and he can pick it up. He is so selfish he wants HIS paper. Now he knows that his paper needs something more than a subscription to make it go. Paper is so high, labor is so high, everything that goes into the make-up of a paper is so high, that very few newspapers in these days make any money on the sale of their papers. The paper generally costs as much as it sells for—often a good deal more. Your newspaper must depend upon advertising to make a living, and unless it makes a living, there can be no home newspaper; nor any other newspaper, for that matter. Mr. Selfish Man knows this. He wants his local newspaper, and because it cannot live without advertising, he advertises in it. That is one reason he advertises here. But if you think Mr. Selfish Man advertises in his local paper simply to help it make a living, you are very far off the right track. Remember he is SELFISH. Don't forget that. He advertises because it is the ONLY way he can sell his goods; for Mr. Selfish Man is a Business Man also. He doesn't believe that our people here have second-sight—not to any great extent. He has a lot of goods in his store that customers cannot see—he cannot display everything he has, so everyone will see it. So he goes out in his local paper and he tells people what he has to sell. That is just as if he put all his wares in a front window where everyone would pass and see them at one time. Now he cannot do that. There is no window in town big enough to show all his goods and he knows that. So he advertises in his own paper. He knows, too, that every time his home paper is published it goes to all its subscribers. By no possible way could he get all those subscribers and readers to pass his store at one time; much less will all of them come into his store at one time. It might be weeks, perhaps months before he could reach them in any other way. He knows of a small expenditure for advertising he can reach them at one time—and that is the only way he can do so. Some years ago Mr. Selfish Man read not only all the news in his local paper—but he read over all the advertisements. He took out his pencil and made a list of the names of the merchants who were advertising. Then he found that on the list were most all the successful men in his town. Mr. Selfish Man reasoned that there must be something between the two facts, that these men were successful AND that they advertised in their local paper. By putting 1 and 2 together he found they made 3—as they always have done and always will do. He found that Success in Business and Advertising were those two 2's that when added together always make 1. And soon Mr. Selfish Man found out what most of us here have long since learned, that the local merchant advertising in his home paper told the TRUTH in that advertisement. Mr. Selfish Man found that in his advertising here he just had to tell the truth. He figured out that if he advertised a Pink Elephant for sale it would bring a lot of people to his store. But if, when they got there, they found he only had a Yellow Tom Cat, by no possible way could he sell them a Yellow Tom Cat for a Pink Elephant. No merchant is so foolish as to misrepresent his goods in his LOCAL PAPER, when LOCAL PEOPLE all call on him and see for themselves exactly what he has. Let's Be Selfish Let's be Selfish ourselves. When we see a banana skin on the sidewalk, let's kick it into the gutter. It may save us from a nasty fall—and it may also save others. When we put money in the bank, let's put it in our own bank, whose officers we know. It will help us—and will surely help others. When we buy goods, let's buy them here in our own place, where we can see what we get and know we are getting our money's worth. I will help us—and will help others. Let's subscribe for our own paper and advertise in our own paper. I will SURELY help us—and help others. Who best serves himself, best serves his fellow men. That is the heart of the Gospel of Selfishness—of that real, genuine Unselfish Selfishness which is one of the greatest things in this life. SEMPER PARADOXUS QUESTIONABLE A colored preacher called on a white minister. He found the white man writing. "What you-all doin'?" he asked. "I'm preparing notes for my Sunday sermon." The colored parson shook his head. "I certainly would never da dat, sir," he said. "De dobbil am a-lookin' right over your shoulder and knows everything you gwine to say and am prepared for you. Now, I don't make no notes and when I gets up to talk, neder me nor de dobbil hisself, don't know what I'm gwine to say." Groceries are cheaper a Puckett's Cash Store. Advertisement ttc. C. S. Rice went to Amarillo the first of the week to attend the fair. A. T. Young was in Amarillo on business this week. RADIO HAS STAGE DOOR JOHNNIES Radio Johnnies do not wait at stage doors with smiles and bouquets, but they do slip away quietly in the moonlight and drop love messages into the nearest mail box addressed to their favorite radio actress. Then some of them wait and wait until Rose Brown, charming dramatic star with the KGO players, can simply find time to answer and say how nice it was of them to write her. "My radio friends will have to be patient," Miss Brown said today. "They have overwhelmed me with letters." "Your voice is marvelous,"—his from a Radio Johnny who is also a miner in Arizona. Miss Brown's work as "Judy" in the drama "Daddy-Long-Legs," broadcast recently, drew forth a deluge of letters. Among them was this: "Dear Judy, please kiss your 'Daddy-Long-Legs' again some time, if it isn't asking too much. Your voice is the sweetest I have ever heard over radio." Apparently life at sea is more enjoyable when the voice of Rose Brown comes in on the air. Here is what a Radio Johnny, who is a mate on a tramp steamer, has to say: "Jumping swordfish! Half the crew are in love with your little leading lady, Rose Brown—including myself." "We are all head over heels in love with the sweet voice of Rose Brown," writes a faithful operator on the S. S. Newton. "The boys are still talking about her." That memories of days gone by are awakened in the minds of gray-haired Radio Johnnies is indicated by this letter: "When Rose Brown speaks it makes me think of old times gone forever. Have you one of her pictures? I wonder if her picture is as charming as her voice." "I'd rather be a radio actress than anything I know," said the demure little lady to whom every mail brings so much evidence of admiration. "Radio Johnnies are so sincere; they are just every-day folks like you and I, you see." REGULATION INSTEAD OF TAXATION The tax-paying public has done its part for the automobile driver in constructing and maintaining good public highways. It is now up to careless automobile drivers to do their part by sparing the tax-paying public from the additional expense of grade changes at railroad crossings. All that is necessary for these drivers to do is stop, look and listen before crossing a railroad track. Because a small per cent of the hundreds of thousands of automobile drivers persist in carelessness in crossing railroad tracks, there are those who demand that grade crossings be eliminated, little realizing, apparently, that the danger is in the driver rather than in the crossing, or that the public's share of the expense of such changes would be large and burdensome at least. Carefully computed cost of changing a grade crossing shows it to be from $50,000 to $80,000, and in some instances as much as $300,000 or $400,000, contingent upon the location and surroundings. In apportioning this cost it is customary for the railroad and the public to bear the expense jointly. There are 256,000 grade crossings in the United States which to change at $50,000 each would entail an expense of $12,800,000,000. Isn't this a pretty heavy burden to impose on the public? For what the railroads pay directly may be repaid to the railroads by the public. A law compelling vehicles to stop at railroad crossings would be no expense to tax-payers, and fines for disobedience would enrich the public treasury. The officials of the Tri-State Fair at Amarillo deserve much praise for the treatment accorded the representatives from the different counties in charge of the county exhibits. Everything possible for their convenience was arranged, including free passes to the fair grounds for all exhibitors and their cars.

If there is a demand for a fair at McLean, one can easily be staged at a later date. It is the opinion of most people that a fair about the middle of October would be of greater value to the community than at the date originally agreed upon, as crops would be better matured and animals would be in better flesh. This matter will be decided at the next meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, and it is hoped that all interested in a fair this fall will be present.

Football is now first in the interest of the sport loving world, and as long as the game is kept from commercialism it probably deserves all the attention it gets from those who like to take their exercise vicariously. The cheap sport who is willing at all times to bet on games should have short life at football games. Gridiron officials should see that such persons are put out of the grounds in all high school games.

The enlargement of the postoffice is a much needed improvement that can be appreciated by everyone. Our postoffice facilities have been a joke for some time on account of the limited room, both for the patrons of the office and the postmaster and helpers. The new arrangement makes more room and is better in every way. Postmaster Vannoy is due the thanks of the community for his faithful efforts to have the postoffice keep in step with the progress of the town.

The showing Gray county is making at the Amarillo fair is not what it could be if everyone had put forth the efforts they should have to get the products together. When the burden falls on only a few who are willing to give their time and money to gather up the products necessary to put on an exhibit like the one Gray county is now showing, it is impossible to get the best products in every class. Why not start in now and plan for a first prize exhibit for 1925? We have the staff if we are willing to put forth the efforts necessary to get it properly exhibited.

The Pampa fair boosters left no doubt of the progressiveness of our sister city, in their visit here Monday. Every member of the party seemed imbued with the idea of making as good an impression of their home town as possible, and they succeeded in a great way. Editor Smith of the Pampa News is to be congratulated on his home town, if everyone in Pampa is like the sample we saw Monday, and we have no reason to believe otherwise. We express the hope that we may soon have a decent road between McLean and Pampa and that more visiting may be done by the citizens of the two towns. We need to develop a county spirit, and such visits are bound to be of value to the county at large.

Garages and confectioneries of Clarendon have agreed to close on Sundays between the hours of 10 and 2, with a minimum of help working during the other hours. There is no excuse for buying gasoline or oil on Sunday except in a case of life or death, as has been proved by actual experience by the writer. It is just as easy to anticipate our wants in this regard and be prepared for Sunday as it is in any other line. The person who buys on Sunday is just as guilty of breaking the moral law as the one who sells, and there are few cases where the seller is grasping enough to keep his place of business open on Sunday if he did not think that his customers demanded it. A day of rest each week is needed by everyone, regardless of religious belief, and the public conscience should be awakened along this line until there will be a demand for Sunday closing. Should the occasional merchant desire to keep open on Sunday, trade with the man who respects the Lord's Day, and it will not be long until all will close.

We hear talk some times that the home town does not offer any opportunities to the young folks, but they must go to the city when they begin to earn their living. This is one of the greatest mistakes made by Old Man "They Say," for the one who would be "buried" in the home town would be buried in the city—only in much quicker time. There is opportunity in the home town for those who have energy and vision, and the opportunity is much greater than in the larger town, with far less competition. It may be easier to get a job in the city, but we are talking of those who will not be satisfied to be a cog in the machinery of some other fellow's business, but who are anxious to start something on their own hook. Characters such as these will make a success anywhere and easier in the home town among friends, than in strange surroundings.

A municipal auditorium is a possibility for McLean. At first thought such a building for a town of our size might seem impossible, but a plan can be devised whereby we may have such a building to cost around $10,000. There is no question of the need for a place for a city hall, athletic club, ladies' rest room, city court room, public library, school auditorium, protracted meetings, etc. All could be held in a municipal auditorium, as well as the annual fair. If a Fair Association could be put over, taking the responsibility out of the hands of the Chamber of Commerce and sell fair memberships a good start would be made toward an auditorium. We can have such a building, if enough of our citizens desire it. What do you think of it?

A lady who is prominent in church and social circles asks The News to lend a hand against rogues, and the things that follow their staging in our town. Most people know The News' attitude against gambling devices and such things, and we are glad to help in a campaign of education along such lines. The lady stated that if the business men of McLean would refuse endorsement of all such affairs, it would in all probability discourage promoters to such an extent that we would not be bothered by the evils that follow. There is no question but that the business man need some sort of organization in all matters of public donation. No man wants to be left out of anything that the majority of folks endorse, but many times just a little hesitation at the start of a paper would be at the whole town. The Chamber of Commerce has tried to help by appointing a committee to act on all such schemes and if merchants would refuse to sign any donation paper without the endorsement of the Chamber of Commerce, much money would be saved for better purposes. Some money has already been saved the business men by this committee in turning down advertising schemes for the community that would be worthless as far as results are concerned, but many of these schemes are put over without coming to the committee and it is these that should be required to get the endorsement before contributing to their support.

B. Maulding, who are non-residents of the State of Texas, to be and appear before the Honorable District Court at the next regular term thereof to be holden in the County of Gray at the Court House thereof, in Lefors on the 27th day of October, 1924, then and there to answer the cross action filed by Harvey Close in said Court on the 24th day of September, 1924, pursuant to a petition having been filed on the 20th day of September, 1924, in a suit numbered on the docket of said Court No. 1194, wherein Walter Darlington is plaintiff and Florence Owen, T. Rives, the said transfer being made four notes, a superior lien over Notes Nos. 5, 6 and 7, B. T. Rives in turn transferred said three Notes Nos. 2, 3 and 4 to defendant Harvey Close, the legal holder and owner of said three notes; that on or about the 27th day of October, 1920, defendant Florence Owen, then Florence Harper, transferred Notes Nos. 5, 6 and 7 of series of seven notes to defendant Melvin Johnson, who transferred said Notes Nos. 5, 6 and 7 to defendant W. HARD ROADS BENEFIT ALL Authorities on rural improvement are constantly showing how much the cost of marketing commodities is reduced by hard roads. Yet such highways cost so much that the country districts would in many cases have to mortgage their property beyond its value to build these roads.

People living in cities should realize better that a considerable portion of the prices they pay for food is charged because of the cost of getting that food from the farms to the shipping points. Whatever it costs to transport stuff over bad roads, is eventually paid by the consumer. So when the city districts consent to pay something toward the cost of country roads, they not merely improve conditions for the automobile, but they reduce the cost of their own food.

OUR LOCAL ORGANIZATIONS

About this time, as the almanacs would say, the community organizations of McLean map out their plans for the winter.

If the members thereof remain at home on meeting nights, if they leave a few to do all the work and if they exercise their wit and ingenuity in criticizing the efforts that these few shall make, if they decline to take office and won't help in the committee work, then those organizations will not probably set the river afire this coming winter.

But if the members of the churches, fraternal societies, clubs, etc., will take hold and do a little work, or at least put their hammers out of sight and use their hands and voices for the purposes of applause, then these various organizations will accomplish results that we shall all be proud of. It will mean a better town to live in and one that has a larger future before it.

A MERCHANT'S TALK ON ADVERTISING

One of the big dry goods men of the South gives the following interesting facts on advertising which proves what the men think of advertising who have really tried it out: A few weeks before my fortieth birthday, which was several years ago, my wife handed me a good-sized bunch of letters one morning, the letters being addressed and stamped, and suggested that I drop them in the mail box on my way to the office. I wore my raincoat that morning, as it happened to be raining, so I slipped the letters in the pocket of the coat, and, upon arriving at the office, I placed the coat in my locker and forgot all about the letters. I did not wear that same coat again for several weeks, and that's where my trouble started. These letters happened to be invitations to my fortieth birthday party. The evening of the party came, the stage was all set. The dinner was supposed to be at 6:00 p. m., but nobody showed up. We waited until seven, but my friends failed to arrive, then, lo and behold, my wife said to me, "Do you recall a morning some few weeks ago when I gave you those letters to mail? They were the invitations to your party." Immediately the thought struck me, "By golly, those letters are in the pocket of my raincoat at the office." That incident reminds me of an old friend of mine who was in to see me the other day. He told me about a motor trip he had taken, driving from Minneapolis up North a few hundred miles. It happened to be on a Saturday. He visited several towns on his trip, calling in at many stores, and he remarked to me, "Do you know there were about two chain stores in each one of the towns I went through, and they were the only stores that were busy—the other stores did not appear to be doing anything." That caused him to investigate, just as a matter of curiosity, so I asked him the names of the towns he visited. I then wrote to the newspapers in each of the towns and requested that they send me their papers of Thursday and Friday, two days before the Saturday when my friend called at those stores. Upon receipt of those papers, I found that in four out of five papers, all the store advertising that had been done was done by the chain stores. That solved the problem. The retail merchants in the towns where my friend visited had failed to advertise in the newspapers, inviting the public to their store that Saturday, and the public, not receiving an invitation, did not come, but the chain stores had invited them with a neat, effective ad, attractive in style and chuck full of common sense, and, naturally, that is where they went. So the stores that failed to receive their friends were like my birthday party—the crowd didn't come.

I venture to say in all the failures of retail merchants the last three years not twenty per cent of these some merchants advertised religiously in newspapers, whereas if they had, their investment in newspaper advertising would have brought sufficient trade to prevent a great amount of their losses.
