CHAMBER OF COMMERCE WILL MEET MONDAY

The regular monthly business meeting of the McLean Chamber of Commerce will be held Monday night.

This will be the last meeting this year, and it is hoped that a full representation will be present. New officers will be elected at the first meeting in January next.

MISS BRIDGE ENTERTAINS HONORING NEWLYWEDS

Miss Altha Bridge was the charming hostess for a beautifully appointed six o'clock dinner last Saturday evening at her home, honoring Miss Matie Patterson and Mr. C. Quarles, whose engagement and coming marriage had previously been announced.

The bridal colors of white and yellow were carried out in a lovely center basket of chrysanthemums. The lights were concealed in wedding bells, and the delectable brides and grooms served as place favors.

Miss Ruby Cook presided as assistantes of the occasion and the bride and groom elect each responded to the clever toasts and advisory talks of R. O. Dunkle, Miss Altha Bridge and W. Sherman White.

The guests follow: Misses Mattie Patterson, Frankie Mae Upham, Marie Young, Opal Dutton, Jessie Tucker, Ruby Cook, Altha Bridge; Messrs. F. C. Quarles, W. Sherman White, Harold Smith; Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Dunkle.

PASTOR GARRETT WILL PREACH AT BAPTIST CHURCH SUNDAY

Pastor W. C. Garrett of the First Baptist church, who has been attending the Baptist General Convention at Dallas and the State B. Y. P. U. Convention at Ft. Worth the past two weeks, will preach at the Baptist church next Sunday.

Pastor Garrett preached at the Riggs Memorial Presbyterian church in Dallas last Sunday evening.

News From Gracey

By Special Correspondent.

N. S. Ray has improved his home by building another room.

Mrs. Clyde Wire and children returned last week from Lipscomb. Her mother, Mrs. G. S. Loyd, accompanied them.

Mrs. M. H. Kinard and some of the children are at home this week.

Simon Bush, who has been on the sick list, is able to be up again.

Misses Birdie and Loreta Derick were on the sick list last week but are better now.

Mrs. B. D. Fonten and family, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Kinard spent Sunday in the A. L. Lee home.

L. B. Lakey and son, Gerald, came on Monday from Lawton for a few days' visit.

Luther Johnson and sister, Mrs. Jewelle Norman, visited their parents at McLean Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Leeta Bush spent the week end at home.

T. J. D'Spain and family visited Grandma Chambers at McLean Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bidwell spent Sunday in the home of Mrs. O. L. Derick.

COTTON PICKERS COMPLAIN OF ROBBERY LAST WEEK

On last Friday examining trials were held in the Mayor's court for alleged robbery with firearms, two cotton pickers being the complaining witnesses. Four boys were allowed bail in the sum of $1,000 each, two of whom were unable to make bond and were taken to jail at Amarillo.

On account of the age of the accused boys, The News withholds their names.

J. E. Cubine and Carl Hefner left last Thursday for Mineral Wells, where the former will take medical treatment.

Michael Mertel of Slavonia was a McLean visitor Saturday.

Thanks

S. R. JONES WILL PREACH AT NAZARINE CHURCH SUNDAY AND NIGHT

Rev. S. R. Jones, former pastor of the Nazarine church here, will preach at the church next Sunday morning and night. This will perhaps be the last time Bro. Jones will preach here for a long time, as he has accepted a full time pastorate at Woodward, Okla.

METHODIST STEWARDS ORGANIZE

At a recent meeting at the Methodist church, stewards were appointed for the coming year and an organization affected with letters sent to every member of the church outlining plans for the year.

The members of the board of stewards are: J. H. Bodine, chm; Donald Beal, sec; Frankie Mae Upham, W. E. Clement, Mrs. J. A. Sparks, A. W. Haynes, Clay Thompson, Frank P. Wilson, L. E. Beck, W. W. Wilson, Homer Wilson, together with Geo. R. Rencau and J. W. Stauffer of Heald.

HENSHAW FARM SALE SUCCESS, ACCORDING TO AUCTIONEER MOORE

Col. V. H. Moore of Wheeler was in McLean last week and stated that the Henshaw farm sale advertised in The News to be held last Thursday, was a success. All good stuff brought top prices.

PAMPA METHODISTS BUILDING NEW CHURCH

According to the Pampa News, the Methodists of that town are building a new church. It is not the intention of the committee to finish the building at this time, but to finish the basement and use that until such time in the future when funds can be secured to complete the structure. It is estimated that the basement can be completed at a cost of $9,000.

W. L. Campbell orders The News sent to his address together with the Star-Telegram. Mr. Campbell apologizes for allowing his subscription to The News to lapse, and proves that he believes in supporting the home paper by showing us that his date line on his old home paper reads 1924.

A. T. Russell has moved back to McLean from Clarendon. Mr. Russell says he is glad to get back home and will probably enter some line of business here soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Willbourn Pierce and family of Alanreed were McLean visitors Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Terry W. Hudson of Erick, Okla., visited relatives here Sunday.

QUARLES-PATTERSON WEDDING SOLEMNIZED SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Mr. F. C. Quarles and Miss Mattie Patterson of Pampa were married at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Upham of McLean, last Sunday afternoon, Rev. J. L. Joyner, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, officiating.

The spacious living room of the Upham home was beautifully decorated with bridal colors and an altar banked with many beautiful flowers, overhung with a large white wedding veil, marked the place where the impressive double ring ceremony was said.

Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Dunkle, Mr. W. Sherman White and Miss Frankie Mae Upham preceded the bridal pair to the altar to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, played by Miss Fern Upham.

Miss Ruby Cook sang "Oh, Promise Me," accompanied by Mrs. Willie Boyett at the piano, just before the wedding march, and Mrs. Boyett rendered a piano solo immediately following the congratulations to the happy couple.

Refreshments were served to the bridal party and the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Upham, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Rice, Rev. and Mrs. J. L. Joyner, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Rippey, Misses Altha Bridge, Fern Upham, Ruby Cook and Inez Quarles of Amarillo; Messrs. Harold Smith and Dwight Upham.

The young couple left at once for their new home at Cordell, Okla., stopping over night in Amarillo.

The bride is one of the most popular young women of Gray county, having served the past three years as Home Demonstration Agent, and numbers her friends by her acquaintances.

The groom has been employed in a hardware store at Pampa until the past few months, when he has been working as a salesman for the International Harvester Company out of Amarillo.

Roy Robinson returned from Lawton, Okla., this week. Roy has been employed as accountant for some time in Lawton, but says he had rather be nearer home and will probably stay here until the first of the year. Roy likes his work and intends to become a certified public accountant.

J. M. Carpenter has our thanks for a Star-Telegram renewal at the bargain rate.

Kid McCoy says to keep The News and Star-Telegram coming to his address.

Frank Hommel of Alanreed was a McLean visitor Sunday.

W. H. Holmes of Amarillo was in our city Sunday.

FORMER MAYOR RETURNS TO A. & M. TO COMPLETE STUDY CITY MANAGEMENT

College Station, Nov. 26.—Convinced that the city management plan is the best form of government for cities and towns and realizing the many technical requirements of knowledge to successfully discharge such an office with its multiple duties of sanitation, street improvement, city planning, water purification, managing utilities, etc., after three years as mayor of Alice, E. V. Spence has returned to the A. & M. College and is taking the new graduate course in city management.

AGRICULTURAL CENSUS TO BE TAKEN THIS YEAR

Advice from Washington indicate that a census of agriculture covering the crop year 1924 and relating to conditions on or near January 1, 1925, will be taken by the Department of Commerce, beginning Dec. 1, 1924, and ending on or before Jan. 31, 1925.

The enumeration will require the services of 15,000 to 20,000 enumerators acting under the direction of 212 supervisors, and will cover the farm population only, classifying them as under or over ten years of age; together with the usual inquiries relative to taxes production, etc.

Sample questionnaires are being widely distributed to the farmers to familiarize them with the information soon to be called for by the enumerators.

ATTICUS WEBB TO SPEAK WEDNESDAY NIGHT AT METHODIST CHURCH

Rev. Atticus Webb will deliver his address on law enforcement at the Methodist church next Wednesday night, Dec. 3. Admission free to everyone.

Godfrey Kre of Slavonia was a McLean visitor Sunday.

P. J. Barnes of British Columbia came in Sunday on business.

Paul Macina of Slavonia was a McLean visitor Saturday.

Richard Spinks of Haskell was a McLean visitor Saturday.

Mrs. J. T. Foster left Saturday for her home at Lamesa after an extended visit with relatives here.

W. M. Allston of Gracey was a McLean visitor Saturday.

F. E. Robinson was in from the ranch Saturday.

S. J. and M. Roe were Amarillo visitors Sunday.

LEGION THEATRE BEING REPAIRED AFTER FIRE

W. L. Haynes has a force of men working this week repairing the fire damage to the Legion Theatre. The office rooms on the second floor are being plastered this time instead of wall board, and the inside of the theatre redecorated throughout, making a nicer place than before the fire.

Dr. W. E. Ballard had purchased the building, but as the papers had not passed, Mr. Haynes is putting the building back into shape before the deal is finally completed.

Dr. Ballard has also bought the wooden buildings occupied by the City Market and Scott's Kitchen, from Mr. Haynes.

SCHOOL PLAY TO BE GIVEN NEXT WEEK

The News has printed tickets for a school play to be given next Thursday evening at the school auditorium. Proceeds to go toward improving the auditorium.

McLEAN SCHOOL PROGRESS

By Supt. D. E. Dean

Our school is now on its fourth month. We have a good school, but crop gathering has hurt us. We all know that making a living comes first, but the school will be glad when the crops are harvested and sold and everybody has a pocket full of money.

We have but one object in view and that is to have a good school in McLean. A failure in the school this year would be the greatest disappointment in my life up to this time. I am glad to know that the schools in which I have worked in the past have been good, and I am equally anxious and hopeful that this one shall be the best one of all.

The student body in McLean, speaking generally, are good workers and well behaved. We certainly want the school to remain as good as it is and so get better, if any change is made.

News From Enterprise

By Special Correspondent.

Loss Hancock and Charlie Nicholson made a business trip to Wellington Saturday.

Hubert Bentley and W. H. Mathis were in McLean with cotton Saturday.

Mrs. Fannie Nicholson, Misses Lona Nicholson and Florence Arnold were Ring visitors Sunday afternoon.

Walter Edney and Robert McIntosh took dinner with little Henry Mathis Sunday.

Nolan Luttrell of Hedley was an Enterprise visitor Sunday afternoon.

Miss Vivvie Lee Allred went to Wellington Sunday to attend school.

Robert Mathis of McLean visited home folks last week end.

Rev. C. B. Hock took dinner in the Mathis home Sunday.

Mr. Edney had business in McLean Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Shirley visited his sister, Mrs. Bentley, of Carpenter last week end.

Mrs. Evan Sitter was a McLean visitor Friday.

Mrs. Beattie Hess is on the sick list at this writing, but we hope she will be better soon.

Mr. McIntosh and family took dinner in the Mathis home Sunday.

Hubert Bentley attended court at Clarendon Wednesday.

Fred Hock and Buster Nicholson took dinner with Robert and Prescott Mathis Sunday.

K. S. Rippey of Electra renews his subscription to The News this week.

Mrs. J. T. Foster of Lamesa is a new reader of The News.

MORSE WELL STRIKES OIL AT 2370 FEET

The Holmes Morse No. 2 oil well struck a good showing of oil last week when forced to shut down for lack of fuel. Both oil and gas were present at the 2370 foot level.

A car of fuel was received yesterday and drilling resumed. Indications are good for a paying producer at this well and leases are active.

Oil operators and lease agents are in town most every day now, conferring with local oil men.

A QUIET THANKSGIVING

Thanksgiving Day in McLean was a quiet affair. Many of the stores closed for the day, and several family reunions and dinners in private homes were given.

A community service for the churches was planned last evening, but on account of the short time and lack of proper announcement, the crowd that gathered for the service under the direction of Pastors Thomas and Joyner of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches, was not as large as could have been desired.

However, there was no lack of the Thanksgiving spirit among our citizens, and the weatherman gave us one of the prettiest days of the fall.

THANKSGIVING FOOTBALL GAME THIS AFTERNOON

The Thanksgiving football game will be played this afternoon on the local gridiron, when the McLean Tigers meet the Fighting Irishmen from Shamrock.

C. L. WOODS MECHANIC AT SMITH BROS. CHEVROLET

C. L. Woods will have charge of the mechanical department of the Smith Bros. Chevrolet garage. Mr. Woods needs no introduction to McLean as an auto mechanic, having been engaged in that business before. Read his ad on another page of The News.

WORKING THE DEER PEEPUL FOR THEIR READY CASH

Throughout this cotton section there are now as many different types of people as can be found in an oil town or a mining town on a boom. Walking down the streets of any town within a radius of fifty miles of Quanah, a person can meet some kind of fakir on each corner. There is always the man who sells glasses that will fit no one, and his close partner who will sell you anything for two and a half and give you a good oil cloth wallet for your good will.

On the next corner is a medicine grafter with a black face helper and for a dollar he will sell you a cure-all, that has to be taken with a firm belief in the medicine, else the effect will be the same as some nasty-tasting colored water. In truth, that is all that is ever sold this way.

It is also a small thing nowadays to see a local merchant dash out of his store halfless and wild-eyed. He will look up and down the street and then start off, in the general direction of the crowd after the man who has just given his clerk a bad check or worked a short change gag on some inexperienced help that he has been forced to employ to take care of the rush of business.

Each fakir, beggar, street vendor, medicine peddler, and any kind of proposition of a transient nature interferes with legitimate business and it would be surprising to know just how much money one of these does take out of a town in a short time. All give nothing to a town and only take from it, and most are stung who buy or patronize this class. Anything that they sell could be duplicated at any local store, but for some reason peculiar to society, there are people always who had rather be duped by an outsider than to allow a friend to make a normal profit off their sales.—Quanah Tribune-Chief.

Synopsis

BOOK ONE—CHAPTER I—Pleading from a brutal stepfather, an unhappy home, and a proposed husband she goes, Myrtle, young French girl, stands in a country road on the verge of desperation.

CHAPTER II—Halted by an exploded tire, two young Englishmen, Lord Gerald Dombey and Christopher Bent, are attracted by the girl's distracted appearance. She begs them to take her away from her misery. In a spirit of adventure they do so, conveying her to Monte Carlo and leaving her with friends. Myrtle speaks English, her mother having been an educated woman.

CHAPTER III—Gerald sees a beautiful young woman in the gambling rooms and is fascinated, but can only learn that she is called Pauline de Fontaine and is with her aunt. He is unable to secure an introduction. Christopher and Gerald decide Myrtle shall not go back to her home. Lady Mary, Gerald's sister, secretly in love with Christopher, disapproves of the young men's guardianship of Myrtle.

CHAPTER IV—Gerald and Christopher arrange for a mutual guardian ship of Myrtle.

CHAPTER V—Lord Dombey makes the acquaintance of Pauline. He is puzzled by the air of mystery and condemnation surrounding her.

CHAPTER VI—Myrtle falls desperately in love with Gerald, but he, a natural flirt, is only mildly interested in the girl, while Christopher Bent really loves her and would marry her.

CHAPTER VII—A mysterious Russian, Zabin, wins a large sum at the gambling tables. Gerald learns he knows the De Fontaines, but can get no information from him.

CHAPTER VIII—Christopher makes little progress in his courtship of Myrtle, who is completely infatuated with Lord Dombey and would gladly become his mistress. He really cares little for her, his interest being all in Pauline.

CHAPTER IX—Gerald tells Pauline of Zabin's gambling. She is at once interested, and asks him to find the Russian and bring him to her and her aunt. Gerald finds Zabin. The Russian has lost all he had won and practically everything else he had. On their way to the ladies Zabin kills himself.

CHAPTER X—It is learned that Zabin was the steward of Madame de Fontaine, and has lost at the gaming tables 2,000,000 francs, all the money she and her niece possessed. The two women leave Monte Carlo after selling their jewelry. Gerald is unable to trace them. He begins to evince an interest in Myrtle, to Christopher's disquietude.

CHAPTER XI—Gerald is giving a convivial party to a few acquaintances of the gay world. Myrtle urges him to allow her to attend. The company is not suitable for a young girl, and he refuses.

Gerald, as usual, felt the sporadic glow of exaltation, spurious because its influence was wholly external. His face became graver, his tone was almost stern.

"What we hope you will find there," he said, "is happiness. Christopher has explained to you about this post in England?"

"Yes," she answered.

"You will like it?"

"No!"

"But you must be happy, Myrtle. We want you to be happy," Gerald declared.

"If you want me to be happy," she whispered, "I shall always be happy because it is you—your—"

Gerald, a moment ago, had been full of good intentions, of good advice. Myrtle leaned toward him. Her slim body, sweet but throbbing with eagerness, prayed for his embrace. Her left arm stole out toward his shoulder, as though to turn his head.

"Gerald!" she whispered.

"Myrtle!" he begged, "you must not—"

Then all Gerald's good resolutions crumbled for the moment. Her lips were pressed to his, warm and sweet, passionate with the fervor which comes from the soul alone, which takes no account of lesser things than the heaven where, to the innocent, love only dwells. She rested in his arms, tumultuously happy. Somewhere in the field below was a bonfire of fallen pine boughs, and for years afterward the smell of burning wood, fragrant and aromatic, brought back to Gerald the memory of those few seconds. There was a flash of lights below from an approaching automobile. Gerald drew away, pale and a little remorseful. Myrtle's face was like the face of a child who has seen Heaven.

"We must get on," he said hoarsely. She lay back in her place without moving until they began the last descent into the town.

"May I come to your party tonight, Gerald—now?" she whispered.

"No!"

asked.

"I shall think so all the time—and I shall miss you horribly," he assured her.

"Perhaps you will, perhaps you will not," she replied enigmatically. "You must put me down here. This is my corner."

She jumped lightly down, with only a touch of his fingers for farewell. Gerald, although he had set a stern face against the rush of ideas and anticipations which were crowding into his brain, felt a little pang of disappointment as she left him without further protest. He would never have allowed her to come, he told himself, as he drove slowly off. Yet at that moment he had a vision. He escaped a taxicab by a few inches.

Myrtle waited until Gerald was out of sight. Then she crossed the square, walked a few steps along the Rue de Paris, paused before the curtained door of Madame Lenore's little establishment, and pushed it open. Madame Lenore herself came forward. There was something sinister, though not unfriendly, in the smile with which she greeted her visitor.

"What can I do for mademoiselle?" she inquired.

"Can I have the clothes for the evening which you showed me when I first came here?" Myrtle asked, a little anxiously.

"But certainly, mademoiselle," the Frenchwoman answered graciously. "Mademoiselle desired them for this evening?"

"I want to wear them tonight," was the happy reply.

"There are some other things mademoiselle will require," Madame said, thoughtfully, "and it will be necessary for mademoiselle to have the coiffeur. Mademoiselle will place herself in my hands for the evening? I will promise that there is not a girl in Monte Carlo who will be half so beautiful."

"I want to look as nice as it is possible for me to look," Myrtle confided.

"I will do just as you say, madame."

"Is it a party which mademoiselle desires to attend?"

"A supper party," Myrtle replied. "It is at half-past eleven."

"At the Hotel de Paris?"

"Yes!"

Madame glanced at the clock.

"If mademoiselle will return at eight o'clock," she said, "I will have a coiffeur here and give him instructions myself. Afterward we will dress here. I live here—my assistant and I—on the floor above. It will not incommode us."

"I shall be quite punctual," Myrtle promised. "You are very kind, madame."

The unwilling admiration shone once more in Madame's beady eyes as Myrtle turned and walked lightly away.

"It is a pity," she sighed, "that the girl is such a fool!"

Chapter XII

Once more Christopher and Lady Mary braved the night air on the terrace of the Villa Acazia. The latter pointed across the gorge to the villa on the other side, a shadowy-looking building, built and without any sign of habitation.

"I wonder what Gerald does without his little playfellow in the afternoons?" she observed.

Christopher frowned.

"I know what he did this afternoon. He took Myrtle over to Nice."

"Myrtle?" Lady Mary repeated coldly. "Your little protegee?"

"Yes," Christopher assented.

"You young men will end by getting into trouble with the police or your own consciences."

"I am not in the least afraid of either contingency," Christopher assured her.

"Then why do you look so disturbed every time the girl's name is mentioned?" Lady Mary asked him, pointedly.

"If I do," Christopher said, "as I tried to explain to you before, it is not on my own account."

Lady Mary laughed.

"You can't imagine that Gerald is likely to find her dangerous!" she scoffed. "Why, he was head over ears in love with that strange girl over at the Violette yesterday, and, besides, Gerald isn't vicious—you know that."

"Gerald is very weak sometimes," Christopher said bluntly. "He has been terribly spoilt, of course, and in this particular instance the trouble is that the child fancies herself in love with him."

"In love with Gerald! How ridiculous!"

"You don't quite appreciate her, if you don't mind my saying so," Christopher declared, a little timidly. "She is extraordinarily innocent. All her life she has been starved for kindness and beauty. I don't think there was ever a human being in the world who needed help and counsel more than she does today."

"Shall I remove her from temptation?" Mary inquired, after a moment's reflection. "My maid has just broken it to me that she is going to stay here and get married. Shall I take your protegee back to England in her place?"

"If only you would!" Christopher exclaimed eagerly. "You needn't keep her. My cousin is going to find a place for her as nursery governess, but she isn't quite ready yet."

"Will you?"

"Immensely," he assured her. "I shall miss our tennis more than anything. To tell you the truth," he went on, "except for the tennis and the rather amazing golf, I don't think Monte Carlo appeals to me very much."

"You are no gambler," she observed.

"I haven't the faintest inclination towards it," he confessed. "I hate the things in life which I cannot control."

"Isn't that a little rash?" she ventured. "You might have to hate your own affections."

He was silent for a moment. She watched him curiously.

"I don't think I am the sort of person," he said, "who would be likely to be led very far by his affections alone. What about the child, Mary?"

"I will take her if you wish it," she decided. "She must be at the station at eight o'clock. You know that we have to make an early start. There will be nothing for her to do. Janet has packed and will arrange all my things for the journey."

Christopher drew a long breath of relief.

"You are a dear!" he exclaimed enthusiastically. "You can't imagine what a weight this is off my mind."

"I am doing it for your sake," Lady Mary told him. "I do not like the child. I disapprove most strongly of the whole situation. However, I will do what I have promised. We are going straight to Hintersleys. She can remain there until your cousin is ready for her."

Gerald came strolling out to them, pausing on the way to light a cigarette.

"What are you two conspiring about?" he inquired.

"I have been saying good-by to your sister," Christopher replied.

Gerald passed his arm around her affectionately.

"We shall miss you, dear," he said.

"I think I am really rather sorry to go," Mary confessed. "Father is not ting quite restless, though. He never cares to stay in one place too long."

Gerald glanced at his watch.

"I must be off," he announced. "I've a few of my frivolous friends coming in to supper after the opera. Are you coming, Christopher?"

"I don't think so, if you don't mind. Gerald," was the apologetic reply.

For some unaccountable reason Gerald felt relieved. He took his leave of his father and sister, started up his car, and drove through the scented darkness back to the hotel. All the time he was conscious of a little quiver of excitement for which he could not account. The Villa Violette, at which he gazed as he turned out of the avenue, was dark and empty. He thought of Pauline and sighed. The ghost in the empty seat by his side faded away. He was for a single moment a man, angry with himself, bitterly regretful.

"I was a cad to kiss her like that," he muttered. "All the same, a child has no right to such lips."

Gerald was met in the hall of the hotel by Charles, the maitre d'hotel to whom he had left the arrangements for his supper party.

"If milord will be so kind as to ascend with me," the latter suggested, "I can show him the preparations I have made."

Gerald nodded and ascended to the first floor.

"This is the most convenient suite for milord," Charles explained, "because the door at the left-hand there communicates with milord's own suite of apartments, where his friends, if they like, can leave their hats and coats. I shall serve the supper myself. Everything will be as commanded. The supper table can be moved into a corner of the room at any time desired—as soon, in fact, as milord cares to start dancing."

Gerald nodded and dismissed the man. He stood for a moment in the center of the waxed floor, his hands behind him and a freshly lit cigarette between his lips. The sight of these preparations for the night's festivities had left him curiously unmoved. He could picture the whole affair—a little cosmopolitan crowd of giggling, shrieking girls, half French, half Russian, with a dash, here and there, of the Egyptian and the Italian. Nadine, with her pale cheeks, her eyes half green, half yellow, like the eyes of a cat, her alluring smile. Then there were Clotilde and Phynette, Parisslans to the tips of their fingers, blatant in their desires, frank and unashamed of the silken net they trod. It was, after all, a dull game to play. The finesse of refusal had never seemed so flat, the ignominy of consent so repulsive. He thought of Pauline, cold as the snows, proud and indifferent, yet with the charm of hidden things in her clear eyes and delicate aloofness. Her indifference had hurt—how much he realized when he thought of the coming evening. And then, like a flash, his mood changed. There was the other type, as beautiful in its way, as serene, as wonderful in its strange, virginal passion, the lips that had clung to his with the frank offer of supreme unselfish love.

COMMON SENSE AT GRADE CROSSINGS

"Not least among the problems encountered in the effort to reduce automobile accidents is that of the railroad crossing with its annual toll of approximately 2,000 lives and some 6,000 non-fatal casualties," says Insurance Field.

Common sense would counsel that a man stop and look before crossing a railroad track. As automobile drivers will not do this voluntarily, why not make it unlawful to cross a track without coming to a dead stop. This would certainly be a humanitarian piece of legislation and would be no expense to the taxpayers. As a matter of fact it would be a money maker for public treasuries due to fines collected for failure to obey the law. Most of all, the lives of many persons would be saved who would otherwise carelessly cross the track.

WORKING THE MERCHANTS

The merchant is an easy mark for all the schemes that come along. He is caught in every public collection. He is roped in every time a drive is put on. His windows are borrowed when advertising space is needed. He is asked to close his store every time two people have a feeling simultaneous that they must sneeze. He must pay taxes to the city, pay taxes to state and county, pay a special license in the city for doing business, pay special taxes for handling certain line of merchandise in addition to the other several taxes, and has to bear all the burdens of hard times, poor collectors, high rents, etc.—Thomasville Times-Enterprise.

Yes, the merchants are being made the "goat" in a great many schemes. If they fail to see the proposition in the way it is submitted, they are condemned as "narrow and selfish." Their windows are transformed into billboards. If they demur against closing on a certain day, they bring down a storm of indignation. Some of these say the "worm will turn" and an outraged merchantry will turn a deaf ear to the entreaties of various organizations and clubs who persist in "tormenting" them with projects that mean little to the merchants—Mains Journal.

DOGS ON AUTOMOBILES

Carrying dogs on the running-board of an automobile results in many dogs being killed by falling off or being thrown off, and killed or maimed, and many are lost on the highways. The Oregon State Humane Society has prepared and will present a law to protect dogs carried in this way.

It is called an act regulating and prohibiting carrying dogs on automobiles and provides that it shall be unlawful to carry a dog upon the hood, fender, running-board or other external part of any automobile unless the same shall be protected by a frame work, carrier or other device sufficient to keep animal from falling from the automobile. Suitable penalty is provided.

There should be such a law enacted in every state and a copy of the proposed Oregon law can be secured by addressing Judge Bennett, counsellor for Oregon Humane Society, 1102 Spaulding Building, Oregon.

The Flivver Hobo is a tramp I've met in hordes this summer, At many a town's Free Auto Camp— A most accomplished lummer. Gone is the ancient hobo's life And solitary habits— The new one has his kids and wife, And often raises rabbits! He winters in a Southern clime Near various watering places; He spends the sunny summer time In the Great Open Spaces. He takes a few odd jobs to pass The time, when unmolested, And earns enough to buy the gas To move on when requested. The future isn't hard to read— One generation's distance Sees all his children grown to lead A similar existence.

WHEN PREACHERS AGREE

In the Washington Star appears the story of a friendly argument that arose between two young chaplains of different denominations, in which the senior chaplain rather cleverly got the better of his opponent.

"Let us bury the hatchet, my brother," he said. "After all, we are both doing the Lord's work, are we not?"

"We certainly are," said the junior chaplain, quite disarmed.

"Let us, then, do it to the best of our ability, you in your way, and I in His."

It appears that the shortage of cotton pickers is about over, at least near town. One farmer reported that six men called at his farm Tuesday and 15 persons phoned the house asking for work, but as he had a field full of hands and only one more day's work, they were not needed.

Supt. Dean, in his address at the Baptist church last Sunday, stated that the desire for approval makes professionals of amateurs. If we are anxious to have the approval of our fellow beings, how much more should we desire the approval of our Maker. God's approval of a man's life should mean also the approval of men, but in some cases it does not. However, with the approval of God on our lives, we can very well dispense with the approval of men.

The fact that farmers are bringing their cotton to McLean from other towns on account of the prevailing high prices being paid here should be a source of gratification to every citizen. Several men from a nearby town have stated that the market here is about a cent a pound higher than in their home towns. Hogs brought 50c per pound more in McLean than they could have been sold for in Fort Worth last Saturday, however, this wide spread was on account of a local fight between buyers. Still it is pretty generally understood that McLean pays the very highest prices for the farmers products.

Our community has more to be thankful for this year than in many years past, if material prosperity can be taken as a criterion. With more cotton planted than ever before, no insect pests to bother, and the finest of weather all fall in which to gather the crop, should satisfy anyone on that score. The fact that we have not had to import negroes or Mexicans, with all the attendant evils, to help gather the crop should be a source of gratification to all of us. Not only is cotton of material benefit to the community, but all the staple crops have yielded abundantly, which means prosperity for all of us. The old saying that the farmer supports the world can be easily realized in the smaller communities where we can feel our dependence upon the rewards from the soil. While we never have a total crop failure, we should be thankful for the good production with fair prices this year.

VOGUE OF WINDSHIELD ART A LITTLE MORE THAN HALF

Police authorities in certain cities of the United States and Canada are ordering removal of ornaments, such as bathing girls, red devils and the other trivial decorations from the windshields of automobiles. Undoubtedly any obstruction of an auto driver's view constitutes an element of danger.

Another side of the matter illustrates the sheep nature of certain classes of people. A recent American visitor to Europe, who left before the windshield art manifested itself, was surprised on his return to see hundreds of thousands of automobiles bearing girls or devils plastered against the glass. He inquired what had occurred during his absence; what new fete was being advertised, or what great feat celebrated. Blank faces met his inquiry everywhere. He doesn't know yet why motor America suddenly broke out in red blotches of bathing girls and devils. Neither does anyone else. But it offers an opportunity for study. Somewhere one who is a conscious or unconscious master of mob psychology is applying his knowledge to business. It would be worth a story, this capture of the public mind at intervals. The method of it should be made known to the public whose cooperation is so essential to its success.—Dearborn Independent.

JUNIOR EDITION

Editor—LeRoy Landers
Assistant Editor—Bobbie Hodges

Since the senior class is always just a little ahead of the juniors in worldly wisdom, those who are known as juniors are considered very ignorant indeed. Maybe we are. Maybe those in the graduating class can look down on us and call us "green" now, but not for long!

The entire class is so studious, so in earnest and so interested in their work this year that things are moving along in a great way. Ask Miss Young, ask Mr. Rogers, and then, if you are still unconvinced, ask Mr. Dean about us. And they will tell you that the parents of every junior have entered complaints against the teachers for letting us study so hard. Mothers cannot get their hard working children to come to the supper table. Fathers cannot persuade their ambitious offspring to go hunting with them or to take their money and go to the show.

Not that anyone complains about the length of the lessons. Mr. Dean is faced with such a volley of protests when he gives a nine or ten page assignment that he is compelled to double, and even treble it before peace is restored! (??)

Now all this is bad enough, but that is not the half of it. Perhaps you have heard that we are going to have Thursday and Friday off, and maybe you have learned the significance of the last Thursday in November? Well, the whole faculty had to exert their utmost ability in diplomacy to quiet the juniors when this was announced, for there was not one in the whole class who wanted those two days off. Goodness knows, it is hard enough to have to stay out of school Saturdays and Sundays!

Ye! Boom! Rah! Juniors!

It's You; Just You
If you want to be in the kind of school like the kind of a school you like. You needn't slip your outfit in a grip. And start on a long, long hike: You'll only find what you left behind.

Real schools are not made by those afraid
Lest somebody else is ahead.
Where everyone works and nobody shirks,
You can raise a school from the dead;
And if, while you make your personal stake,
Your neighbor can make one, too,
Your school will be what you want to see—
It isn't the school, it's you!

Miss Young (in junior English class)—"J. F., who wrote Irving's Sketch Book?"
J. F.—"Shakespeare."

Easy for Her
Lorena—"Mrs. Dunkle, when a typist wants an advance on her week's salary does she employ the 'touch' system?"

Oh, Leonard!
Judge—"I don't know a thing about cards. What's a diamond flush?"
Leonard (reddening)—"That's the look that comes on a fellow's face when a girl he likes starts talking about diamonds."

Mr. Dean (sternly)—"Are you boys and girls laughing at me?"
Pupils—"No, sir."
Mr. Dean (still more sternly)—"Well, then, what else is there in this room to laugh about?"

Senior Boys Defeat Sophs
On last Thursday afternoon the senior and sophomore boys basketball teams met in a zippy game on the court of the H. S. campus.
The seniors won by a final score of 28 to 25, but lost all prestige in the third quarter when the sophs tied or 10 points in the lead.
The senior was a star, and as the score, the teams were evenly matched. This game finished a series played between the classes to determine which class had the better team, and, since the seniors were undefeated, they were declared champions.

Attention Boosters! McLean High School has an unlimited number of talented players. Let's have two district championship teams this year? ? ?

The line up in the Thursday game was as follows:

Seniors	Forwards	Sophs
Davis	Jordan	Wilson
Watkins	Centers	Waters
Martin Dwyer	Guards	Durham
Mick Dwyer		Jackson

Chapel Exercises

Last Wednesday, Nov. 18, the student body met in the school auditorium immediately after the lunch hour for chapel exercises.

Mr. Dean made a few announcements and Miss Carpenter's pupils lived up the program with an amusing little song. After the students had sung "America," Rev. Thomas, the new Methodist pastor, gave us a short and interesting talk, taking the expression "Use your head instead of your heels" for a subject. Rev. Thomas talked for a little while, throwing new light upon this subject, causing us to look at the question from new and interesting angles. He showed us by examples and illustrations how the great majority of us were failing to use our heads in our different paths of life, and, since we do not use our heads, we have to use our heels.

Last Friday the McLean Tigers went to Shamrock for the purpose of playing the Shamrock "Fighting Irishmen." This game was matched by the boys without the aid of the coach, and, since they stopped regular practice some time ago, there seemed to be a very small chance of their coming home victorious.

The game, however, was hotly contested from the time the whistle blew. The McLean team fought with determination and held the Shamrock aggregation to 3 touchdowns, the game ending with a score of 19 to 0 for the Irishmen.
Seeds sown for Shamrock, while Phillips and Powers did exceptionally good work for McLean. Tom Clark, McLean tackle, who has only reported for practice a few times, demonstrated his fleetness of foot by running onto a Shamrock back when it appeared impossible for the man to be stopped before crossing our goal line.

The seventh grade met Thursday, Nov. 13, and elected the following officers for the year:
President—Winnifred Howard.
Vice president—Margaret Johnston.
Secretary—Ursi Hester.
Treasurer—Bernard Hester.
Reporter—Letha Ashby.

The class met the following day and organized a literary society. The following officers were elected:
President—Johnnie Villa Haynes.
Secretary—Maybelle Vestch.
Program committee—Margaret Johnston, Dorothy Cousins and Ursi Hester.
Sponsor—Miss Luella Atracan.

The literary society decided to meet once a month and discuss current events and modern history.
Class programs, invitations, visiting cards, promotion certificates, diplomas, report cards, tickets, Christmas cards, etc., may be had printed to order at the News office. The News is glad to donate a space for the School News each week and will appreciate a chance to figure on your printing needs.

We heard a man talking about the hand of a Quannah woman he had shaken. He said he was afraid to turn it loose for fear it would drop in the dirt; it was so flabby and lifeless.—Ojinnah Tribune-Chief.
It is not often that one finds a person whose hand feels like a dead fish in the Panhandle but there is no pleasure in shaking hands with that kind of person anywhere. A firm, live handshake is evidence of a personality worth having as a friend. Nobody appreciates the dead fish kind.

County Attorney John F. Spiller of Pampa was a business visitor in our city Friday.

WHEELS OF CHANCE AT COUNTY FAIRS

Many Gambling Devices Are Always in Evidence at Such Gatherings

In visiting our various fairs, one is always confronted with an array of stands and concessions which are but thinly veiled gambling schemes for separating the unaware visitor from his money. Henry F. Lake Jr., editor of the Gunnison (Colo.) News-Champion, had the following to say after visiting a fair in an adjoining county:
One thing marred the celebration and that is the gambling stands where hard-faced men and women spin the wheel of fortune and you bet against a sure percentage to win occasionally a painted doll or a hem. Oh, yes, this same thing spoils our own celebration, so one should make no remarks. But it does seem as though we ought to outlaw gambling, even if some people do insist on it.

Anyone who went down the line at the recent Colorado State Fair, for instance, would agree with Mr. Lake in his reference to the operators of these concessions as "hard-faced men and women." They have no interest in the community other than reaping their harvest of coin and getting away with it. The argument made by many fair managers is that it requires the sale of these concessions to meet the expenses of running a fair. If this is the case, it is not very creditable to the citizenship of the community or state involved. If a fair is a worth while thing for a community to support, it should not be necessary to wink at the state laws and good morals once a year in order to make a financial success. There is questioning the undetractability of bringing this raffish of human driftwood into a community. They entice young and old to play so-called games of chance that are so fixed as to insure the operator of a sure profit. At the Colorado State Fair we heard of a club boy attending the state encampment losing a sum of money at one of these concessions. The county agent went to the person running it and made such a roar that the money was returned rather than have the matter given further airing. The way to remedy these things is to create a healthy public sentiment against them. If the fair managers are between the horns of the dilemma in meeting the expenses of the fair, those who support the fair must come to their rescue and help them out. Community sentiment is almost universally opposed to the fair fakir and grafter. All that is necessary is to crystallize this sentiment into action.—Western Farm Life.

Say, Mr.

Did you ever stop to think that we are a firm right here in your town, doing business in McLean, Texas, own our homes, pay tax in your town, school community and county; help you to pay your bonded indebtedness? Yes, we are doing that—and we know that we deserve your consideration, and ask that you always remember us with a liberal share of your patronage. We are very grateful to those who have become our customers and we want to insist on you who have not patronized us to give us a trial. If not, why not? Our place is headquarters for the best in flour, corn meal, shorts, bran, cotton seed meal, cake and other mill feeds. Our coal is as good as the northern fields of Colorado produces, and you make a mistake when you don't buy the best. Yours for business,

Grandma's Christmas

By Frank Herbert Sweet

DON'T know," sighed gentle Grandma Burke. "I thought I was doing right to sell the farm and bring the children to town for school an' social advantage; but with picture shows an' dancin'—I don't know."

She cleaned her wrinkled and capable hands from the dough and turned to see that the fire and kettle of melted lard were just right. They were. Then with deft, experienced fingers she began to drop twisted bits of dough into the hot lard, which in a few minutes changed them to crisp doughnuts. "Such appetites," she nodded to herself happily. "Sue an' Kate an' May are always just as hungry as Tom an' Win, or even big Sam who's grown up an' staided down to regular work. Five will rush in from school, an' Sam later, an' all will grab up doughnuts, an' how they will eat!" She giggled reminiscently. "I do wish daughter Nell could have lived to see 'em grow up so, even May fourteen, an' her twin Win almost as big's his brother. Nell would have done better by 'em, of course, but I've done my best."

The outer door was flung open and a rush of many feet crowded into the hall. Grandma looked up expectantly. But the feet stopped at the parlor door, and a subdued hubbub of voices arose. Grandma sighed again, and bent lower over her work. "Them flutter-budgets, Rose an' Jenny, from across the way, an' Tom's chum, Andy Smith, Plannin' another dance, likely. I wonder if any one of 'em remembers tomorrow's Christmas? I do wish the flutter—" Grandma cut off what she wished by closing her lips tightly. But only for a minute, then her thoughts went on in a different key. "I won't be a crosspatch the day before Christmas," the moving lips emphasized the change of thought. "They're just bubbin' healthy children, an' Sam's already quieted down from a lively boy, an' the others will in time, an' Rose an' Jenny an' Andy are flutters just because they can't hold in."

"I Won't Be a Crosspatch the Day Before Christmas."

The hall door opened softly, and a fuzzy head and snapping eyes appeared. It was Rose Cady. "What does my nose smell?" she questioned, sniffing. "It tells me I'm hungry. May I come in?" "Of course, dear." Rose shot in, one hand outstretched. "May I?" she begged. "All you can carry," beamed Grandma. "They're just right to eat now, while hot. I wonder why the children—"

The key turned, and a few moments later the sound of strained and heavy steps passed through the front doorway and into the parlor.

"Gettin' ready for a dance, an' that's the Smith music box they're bringin' in. Likely they're up to a lot o' deco-ratn', an' ain't give a thought to Christmas comin'. I wish—no, they're just high-spirited young folks makin' ready for a good time. That's all."

But in spite of herself there was a shadow on Grandma's face the rest of the day. She had hoped for a big surprise Christmas dinner, all to themselves, with no intruders.

She mixed and baked until after midnight, then slipped through the side door to her room. She was awakened by a slight step.

"W-h-y, Grandma," reproved the merry voice of Kate. "Nine o'clock! and you're still in bed. Not ill, are you?" with a sudden note of anxiety.

"No," apologized Grandma—"just overslept."

"All right, Merry Christmas! And come right into the hall when you're dressed. You may look now."

Grandma rose hurriedly. She heard the voices of Rose and Jenny Cady, and even Ed's.

"Not even a family Christmas together," her thought deplored. "And here so early means a lot more fixin' for the dance. I'd like—for 'em to have a nice time, of course," she thought flitted, loyally. "Young folks need pleasure."

As she opened the door to the hall there came low strains of music. Grandma looked startled for a moment, then a soft flush of pleased surprise came to her face. It was a Christmas hymn they had been accustomed to sing at home when she was a girl, and she had carried it on with her grandchildren. But she never had heard it in music.

In her eagerness she stepped to the parlor doorway, which was almost hidden in greenery. Suddenly two pairs of arms were inclosing her neck, and one pair belonged to Rose. Other arms were reaching for her; and beyond, hesitating Sam, who was too big to kiss anybody, lifted his arms.

"Why—why, my dears," murmured Grandma, looking bewildered.

"Look up," laughed Sue.

Grandma did, and there was a huge bunch of mistletoe over the door.

"Lead the queen to her throne and render homage," ordered Kate.

There was a raised chair decorated with holly and mistletoe, near one side of the fireplace. Grandma was conducted to it deferentially, then the ushers sank to their knees with grave faces but snapping eyes.

"Hail to the queen of love and the kitchen," they chanted, and Jenny added, "including crisp doughnuts."

"Oh, my dears—my dears," softly.

"Now for the distribution of presents," cried May, springing up. Grandma had noticed rotund stockings along the fireplace, with an extra large one near her end, and sundry packages on the floor underneath.

The big stocking was laid on her lap, and packages began to follow. She recognized things she had wished, and books she had mentioned a desire to read. For Grandma, in spite of her perfect housekeeping, loved to read.

"I—I thought it was for a dance," she faltered, her hands caressing the gifts.

"O-o-oh, Grandma!" The idea! On this day! It's for all of us, but mostly you!"

Rose and Jenny were dancing about, as pleased as any of the family. Grandma's tremulous hands reached out and drew them close.

"You must stay with us all day, dears," she urged happily—"and Bill, too. There's plenty an' to spare cooked. Christmas has begun so wonderful that you must help us carry it through."

HERE IS A YARDSTICK TO MEASURE A CITY

A "community yardstick" is a useful article of engineers' equipment, according to the Pennsylvania Public Service Information Committee.

It may be applied to a community—no, quite a metropolis nor yet a town that consists principally of "Main Street"—in order to determine how desirable it will be for public utility or other industrial plant location.

Public utilities are community advertising, and the first issue to which the "yardstick" might be applied would be measuring the financial condition of the local utilities. Of equal importance would be the utilities' relations with their customers and the general public, and whether they are giving satisfactory service.

These are matters that are quickly noted by the casual visitor—especially if he should happen to drop into town at night, find a haphazard trolley schedule, indifferent telephone service and an electric light system reminiscent of war days.

Even the water supply system may prove a bitter memory to the weary traveler, who finally decided to forego further struggle with the faucets. And in the morning the aggravating climax—breakfast delayed at the hotel because the gas service is crippled.

The uses to which this "yardstick" may be put are varied. Among problems it may be used to measure are:

Is there a progressive Chamber of Commerce? Is there a suitable public auditorium? Do conventions come to the city often? Is there an enterprising local newspaper?

Are the sewerage facilities adequate and capable of extension? Are the railroad shipping facilities good? Are the streets on good condition? Is the mail service satisfactory?

What is the racial and national character of the population? What are the front foot property values in the industrial and retail sections?

AMERICAN INDOOR SPORT

The other fellow's business," says the McLean News, "always looks better than ours and we are willing to agree that he makes entirely too much profit." Yes, one of the great American indoor sports is complaining that the other fellow's prices are too high. Recently we heard a fellow grouching because he had to pay $125 for an article that could have been bought for $1 before the war, yet he himself is drawing twice as much wages as he got in those days.—Plainview News.

NOT REMARKABLE SOIL.

Smith—"Last Monday I planted three rows of potatoes, and they were all out of the ground next day."

Neighbor Jones—"Unbelievable—wonderfully productive soil!"

Smith—"No—your wonderfully industrious chickens."

LUCKY ANGLER

Maud—"The dictionary says that a 'bob' is something used in angling."

Marie—"I suppose that's why you got yours, dear."

TEXANS HAVE NEED FOR MUCH TELEPHONE SERVICE

Texas has developed the "telephone habit" until there is one telephone for every ten of the population. In 1900 the needs of the State were met by one telephone for every 100 persons.

The increase in the number of telephones in the State has been ten times more rapid than the increase in population.

The real growth of Texas telephone systems began since the year 1895. The old Southwestern Bell Telephone Directory printed during this year had all telephone subscribers in the State listed in one book. Galveston was the only city which had as many as 1,000 telephones. The whole book listed fewer telephone subscribers than are at present listed in the Austin or Wichita Falls telephone directories.
