Co-operative Gin Assured; Farmers Organize Monday

A Farmers' Co-operative Gin at McLean now seems to be an assured fact for this season's crop, as some 69 members had signed up to last Monday, with $5,675 pledged toward the necessary $8,000 wanted before the machinery is bought. In spite of the rain Monday night, 38 men met at the Chamber of Commerce hall and elected directors for the organization. D. N. Massay acted as temporary chairman of the meeting and J. S. Howard secretary. Mr. Massay opened the meeting by stating the purpose of the gathering. He said in part: "We ought to be prepared to take care of a 10,000 bale crop at McLean. Another gin here will not hurt the gins already here, but will rather be an asset to them. Anyway, it is better to have more gins than needed than to have less than needed. Our town is now back on its feet and growing, and we should push everything that tends to better our trade territory."

J. S. Howard gave the plans of the co-operative society and stated that the $56,000 gin at Childress was started with an initial pledge of only $5,000. "This is one of the biggest things our town ever had the opportunity to secure," said Mr. Howard.

M. D. Abbott said: "In canvassing our community, we did not find anyone opposed to the proposed gin. There is enough cotton raised here to pay out another gin, and in my opinion cotton is here to stay and we should provide for taking care of the crop."

M. C. Burdine stated that there were several thousand acres around McLean that would come to McLean this season, if proper service given them.

Andy Nelson spoke in the interest of the gin and said: "There is plenty of cotton in the McLean trade territory to support this gin. The farmers in my community are interested in seeing another gin here."

T. H. Andrews said he would like to see the gin built. Leamon Andrews stated that he felt that the gin would be a good thing for the farmers.

Homer Abbott stated that "Everyone we saw in canvassing our community said that we need a modern gin to handle bollie cotton."

J. K. Crews asserted that he had to stay all night in town several times last year waiting for his cotton to be ginned. "There ought to be enough gins to take care of the crop without causing any long waits."

Kid McCoy spoke in favor of the movement.

L. O. Floyd said he would be glad to sponsor the gin.

J. A. Eshew said: "I have never seen any place where another gin is needed as badly as it is here. We now have the best prospects for a cotton crop that I have seen in my 23 years experience in the Panhandle. We need a real gin."

D. M. Davis, W. P. Rogers and others expressed an interest in the proposition.

Chairman Massay then called upon the business men present, and President White of the Chamber of Commerce expressed his belief that the town was behind the farmers in the undertaking.

C. A. Strandberg endorsed the proposition.

F. H. Bourland promised the support of his bank, "with proper security, of course, which is only businesslike."

A. A. Callahan said: "This is a move in the right direction. The prospects are for a bumper crop at McLean." Mr. Callahan then told of a man who might be inclined to loan the company $5,000 to help get started.

J. R. Hindman stated: "We need the gin and need it badly."

Other present spoke to the proposition.

Mr. Massay observed that everything seemed very favorable, and called for nominations for a board of directors and the following were nominated: Andy Nelson, J. K. Crews, D. M. Davis, Kid McCoy.

Summer Follies

$100 First Prize Community Exhibit at McLean Fair

All cash prizes offered at the McLean fair this fall will be for community exhibits, with $100 offered as first prize, $75 for second, $50 third, and $25 fourth.

The McLean community will be barred from competing for any of these prizes, but all other communities in Gray County or the McLean trade territory are privileged to enter. It is expected that not less than ten communities will place exhibits at the fair.

A full score card is printed in the fair catalog and it will be easy to follow the score card. Competent judges will be secured and it will be well worth any community's time to secure one of these prizes.

Ribbons will be placed on all individual exhibits, and a full list of articles entitled to entry is to be found in the catalog.

Night Watchman Now Makes Rounds of Business District

McLean now has a night watchman who makes regular rounds of the business district each night.

Log Hancock was the successful candidate to be employed by the business men of McLean. Four candidates offered themselves for the place, and as each man put down the amount he subscribed toward paying the salary of a night watchman, he was allowed to vote for one of the four candidates. Mr. Hancock received a majority of all votes cast.

While the new watchman is being paid by the business men, he is under the direction of the city council and it is expected that the city will buy a regular watchman's clock to be punched on the nightly rounds, so that an accurate check may be made of the work.

HINTON SEES STRANGE BALLS OF FIRE IN SKY LAST WEEK

W. L. Hinton reports seeing five big balls of fire in the western sky about sundown last Friday. The fire looked something like an airplane burning, but no smoke was present. The fire slowly sank below the horizon. Mr. Hinton is at a loss to know just what could have caused the phenomenon.

CAMPBELL HAS FINE POTATOES

W. L. Campbell was in town Saturday with a sample of nice sweet potatoes from his field. Mr. Campbell stated that there were about four potatoes to the hill that are now big enough for eating purposes.

Ladies Baseball Teams Cross Bats Friday Afternoon

A "Fats and Leans" baseball game will be staged by a number of the ladies of McLean tomorrow afternoon at five o'clock on the local diamond.

We understand several of the ladies are considered good players and an interesting time is promised the fans.

The game will be staged to help the Chamber of Commerce and all proceeds will be turned over to the C. of C.

The McLean band will furnish music for the occasion and it looks like a big time for lovers of such events.

Following is the line-up for the game:

MEADOR BUYS PROPERTY

J. A. Meador has bought the building now occupied by his restaurant and will improve the premises in the near future. A new awning with the front of the building stuccoed, is contemplated among other improvements.

Mr. Meador has made good in the restaurant business and his friends will be glad to hear that he now owns his building.

Farmers' Meeting at C. of C. Building Col. Lee to Speak

Col. R. Q. Lee, president of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, will address the farmers and others of this community at the McLean C. of C. hall next Thursday, Aug. 13, at 11 a. m.

Col. Lee is a practical farmer, one of the biggest poultry raisers in the state, president of a railroad and a banker. He will have something to say of interest to every farmer. His talk will be along the lines of diversified farming for best results.

With Col. and Mrs. Lee will be: Porter A. Whaley, manager of the W. T. C. of C.; Mrs. Whaley, an Associated Press correspondent; and representatives of the Amarillo Daily News and Globe.

It is not often that McLean people have a chance to hear speakers of such reputation, and it is hoped that a large crowd will be waiting to greet Col. Lee and party next Thursday.

Revival Starts Baptist Church Sunday Morning

Revival services will begin at the First Baptist church next Sunday morning, conducted by Rev. H. R. Whitley, pastor of the Pampa Baptist church.

Rev. Whitley comes well recommended as an earnest preacher of excellent address, and it is hoped that he may have the co-operation of all christian people.

J. B. Taylor, pastor's assistant of the First Baptist church at Wellington, will have charge of the song service. Prof. Taylor has a strong voice of pleasing quality and is known as a leader of no mean ability. All singers of the town are invited to assist in the song services.

Electric fans have been ordered installed in the church building for the meeting and additional seats will be secured to take care of all who wish to attend the services.

MORE RAIN THIS WEEK

Several showers of rain have fallen over this section the past week, making excellent growing weather for farm crops.

A BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mrs. J. L. Joyner entertained a number of little girls Wednesday afternoon in honor of little Miss Laura Lee Howard's 10th birthday. Refreshments of fruit punch and cake were served to the following: Little Misses Laura Lee Howard, Clara Pearl Gadin, Irene McCoy, Sabil Graham, Madge Landers, June and Josephine Turner.

Large Crowd at Banquet; Plates All Taken Early

McLean Fair Plans Discussed at the C. of C. Meeting

The McLean fair was the main discussion at the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday night. This was an adjourned session of the chamber, on account of the gin meeting announced for Monday night, the regular business meeting night of the C. of C.

President White made a report of the directors meeting in which the fair plans were made, bringing out the fact that community exhibits will be featured this fall. The cash prizes offered are large enough to bring out some real competition.

A number of free attractions will be secured for the fair, and a concession and amusement committee consisting of W. S. White, E. J. Lander and J. A. Meador were appointed. It was the sense of those present that the best arrangement possible should be secured.

The secretary reported that T. N. Holloway wanted to rent office space in the C. of C. building. This matter was referred to the executive board for action.

O. G. Stokely and D. N. Massay were appointed to have suitable signs painted for the new building. J. M. Manire asked for a donation of $10 to assist the orchestra to buy needed drum equipment to cost about $40. A motion carried to donate $20 to the orchestra.

Col. Lee's proposed visit to McLean was discussed, and it was agreed that as many farmers as possible be urged to hear Col. Lee and his party, as their messages are primarily to farmers.

The matter of the County Agent's office rent was taken up, and it was agreed that the C. of C. owed one half of the $40 due, but that a check be issued for the full amount and the County Agent asked to reimburse the chamber for the $20.

The secretary was ordered to pay the rent on the building each month in advance.

It was agreed to hold meetings at several school houses in adjoining communities to create interest in community exhibits at the fair, such meetings to be held the first weeks of September.

Those present and taking part in the various discussions were: W. S. White, E. J. Lander, C. A. Strandberg, O. G. Stokely, T. A. Landers, F. H. Bourland, J. S. Howard, D. N. Massay, E. M. Rice, J. M. Manire, A. T. Young, M. D. Bentley, W. T. Wilson and T. J. Coffey.

UNION REVIVAL CLOSED WITH SONG AND PRAISE SERVICE SUNDAY NIGHT

The Methodist-Presbyterian revival closed Sunday night with a song and praise conducted by Prof. E. G. Frazer, who has been conducting the music for the series of services.

Dr. R. E. Joiner was called home Sunday afternoon on account of a funeral, and it was decided to close the revival with a praise service.

A great many people expressed themselves as being helped by the revival, and although a few said that they were disappointed in that there were no visible results of the meeting, all were agreed that the preacher and singer did everything that could have been expected of them.

Prof. Frazer made the closing address, in which he thanked the orchestra and others for their cooperation, as well as The News for giving the meeting needed publicity.

A collection amounting to over $400 was taken at the morning service Sunday as a free will offering to Dr. Joiner and Prof. and Mrs. Frazer.

At ten minutes past six o'clock last Thursday evening, every plate of the 150 prepared for the Chamber of Commerce banquet was taken and late comers were being turned away from the door. All those who had tickets were provided for, but those who depended upon buying tickets at the door were disappointed.

After a selection by the orchestra, President W. S. White delivered the welcome address and presented Hon. Newton P. Willis of Canadian who acted as toastmaster for the evening.

Mr. Willis addressed the gathering by stating that it is the duty of the Chamber of Commerce to foster friendship among the people in the community. He said in part:

"A commercial club is as necessary to the growth and thrift of a city as an engine is to the motive power of a ship. You men of McLean have evidenced your wisdom in founding this active Chamber of Commerce to insure enterprise and progress. Only by this means can cities be built. Kansas City through its organization of business men proclaimed to the world that it would make Kansas City a good place to live in, and they did. Today when the radio emulations to the world that Kansas City is the heart of America, it is another evidence of the thorough federation of its business men to operate their municipal institutions. You have a wonderful opportunity here to populate the McLean country and develop the wealth of your broad acres which await the Midas touch of agriculture to convert them into wealth beyond the dreams of avarice. Great indeed is your manifest opportunity and God speed you in your noble work."

The toastmaster stated that the exercises must be over by 7:45 p. m., and showed a pistol that he claimed would be used on the speaker who took more than their allotted time. This pistol came in handy several times later, as some of the speakers just barely missed getting shot, the gun firing just as they concluded their remarks.

Miss LaRue Loftin of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music obliged with a vocal solo which was enthusiastically encored.

Prof. and Mrs. R. G. Frazer of Dallas then sang a duet, but begged to be excused from an encore on account of the lack of time and, as Prof. Frazer wittily observed, that there was a piece of chicken on his plate and a Methodist preacher opposite, who looked as if he might have designs upon the said chicken.

After another selection by the orchestra, Miss Loftin played a piano solo, obliging with an encore that was enjoyed by all.

Dr. R. E. Joiner of Gainesville was then called upon and responded with an amusing negro story and said that cities are made by the citizenship and urged that we keep our ideals clean and strive for all worth while things.

The toastmaster introduced M. D. Bentley of our town with some intimate happenings of Mr. Bentley's school life. Mr. Bentley said that he was delighted with the success of the banquet and told of some of the program committee's work.

Along about this time the main course of the dinner was served, and the eatables had the most of the attention while the orchestra played.

The toastmaster complimented the girls who were waiting on the tables, and then called upon an old time cattleman, W. P. Dial of Memphis, for a talk. Mr. Dial paid his respects to the knockers and mossbacks that infest every community and urged his hearers to encourage neighborliness, stressing the fact that it is everyone's work.

CHAPTER I—Kate Cathrew, "Cattle Kate," owner of the Sky Line ranch, on her way to McKane's store at Cordova, seemingly infuriated by the sight of a girl plowing in a valley below, places a rifle bullet near the horses' feet. The girl takes no notice.

CHAPTER II—Nance Allison, the girl on whom Kate Cathrew had vented her spite, is with her widowed mother and crippled brother Bud farming land taken up by her father, killed a short time before in a mysterious accident. Bud is the victim of a deliberate attempt to maim or kill him. Kate Cathrew wants the farm for pasture land and is trying to frighten the Allisons into leaving.

CHAPTER III—Big Basford, Sky Line rider, desperately in love with Kate, picks a quarrel with a fellow rider, Rod Stone, and goes to the lasso Basford across the face with a quirt.

CHAPTER IV—Nance discovers in a cave a fine collie dog, evidently guarding a child. She tries in vain to overcome the dog's hostility and goes home mystified.

CHAPTER V—Next day Nance returns to the cave with food and makes friends with the dog and the small boy, Sonny. He tells her "Brand" takes care of him and "Dirk," the collie. Nance promises him to return next day with more "goodies."

CHAPTER VI—Selwood is certain Kate Cathrew is the head of a "cattle rustling" gang, with Lawrence Arnold, her partner, who rarely visits the ranch. Minnie Pine, half-breed at the Sky Line ranch, is in love with Rod Stone.

CHAPTER VII—Ranchers complain of the stealing of their cattle and blame Sheriff Selwood for his seeming inactivity.

CHAPTER VIII—Nance, visiting Sonny and Dirk in the cave, meets "Brand," and is favorably impressed. He tells her his name is Fair, which is Sonny's, and obtains her promise to keep their presence a secret.

CHAPTER IX—Nance becomes keenly interested in Brand Fair. The girl is relying on a field of corn to pay off debts she owes McKane.

CHAPTER X—Fair sees Sud Province, one of the Sky Line ranch riders in Blue Stone canyon, and tells Nance he and Sonny must move at once. The girl begs him to leave the boy with her, and he consents.

CHAPTER XI—A few nights later cattle are turned into Nance's cornfield and the crop destroyed. The Allisons realize the destruction is the work of Kate Cathrew.

CHAPTER XII—Nance tells McKane of the disaster and her consequent inability to pay her debt to him. She meets Kate Cathrew and humiliates her. Kate attempts to shoot her, but Selwood intervenes.

CHAPTER XIII—Fair visits the Allisons home and is warmly welcomed. He tells Nance he is on Kate Cathrew's trail for various misdeeds. While they are talking, by a lighted window, Nance is wounded in the arm by a rifle shot, fired with deadly intent.

CHAPTER XIV—A prospector, "John Smith," really Brand Fair, shows Sheriff Selwood the entrance to a passageway in the hills through which Kate Cathrew and her riders drive the stolen cattle.

CHAPTER XV—The Sky Line riders raid Bossick's ranch, driving off seventy-one head of cattle. Sheriff Selwood, on the watch since his talk with Fair, joins the thieves without being detected, getting all needed evidence to convict Kate Cathrew and her followers. His horse betrays him and he is shot and desperately wounded, but reaches McKane's store before he loses consciousness. The rustlers believe him dead.

CHAPTER XVI—The Sky Line riders learn that Selwood, who they know was the spy they had shot, is not dead, though unconscious, and his recovery is looked for. Fair tells Nance of his love, and finds it is returned. He gives her a package, telling her it explains the reason for Sonny's presence and evidence which will convict Kate Cathrew and her partner, Lawrence Arnold, of crimes which will send them to prison for life. She is not to open it unless something happens to Fair.

CHAPTER XVII—Sonny finds in the package left by Fair a picture of Kate Cathrew, and Nance reaches the conclusion that the woman is Sonny's mother and Brand his father. Lawrence Arnold visits the Sky Line ranch.

"This is a pretty bunch to bring back to me, Caldwell," said Kate Cathrew, tapping her foot with a whip, "one man disabled and another pounded into jelly. Who's this d—n stranger who's so handy with his gun?"

"Name's Smith," said the foreman sulkily, "and I'd better tell you right now, that Selwood isn't dead. He's alive and they're waiting for him to come round so he can—talk."

Cattle Kate's face flamed red.

"Not dead? Bring Province here!"

But she would not wait as was her wont when summoning her men. She whirled and strode along the veranda to meet Province who came in no good grace.

"I've a notion to kill you on the spot!" she cried furiously, "you fool bungler! Of all the crazy, wild, impossible things! Why didn't you get that man? The one person in the world who knew of the Flange and Rainbow's lot behind! You let him get away!"

"Done my best," said the man evilly, "and to h—l with those who don't like it."

Quick as a flash the woman raised her whip and struck him.

With a roar he returned the blow, and Big Basford who had followed, leaped for him, clawing with his good hand, but Caldwell knocked Province down instead.

"Take him away," said Kate Cathrew coldly, her hand at her cheek, "Lawrence Arnold will be here soon."

I'll let him deal with this."

It was night again and the stars were hung like lanterns in the sky. The little wind was coming up the river, the little soft wind that Nance Allison loved.

Once more she sat in the doorway with Brand Fair beside her. There was no light on the table this time, so that she could not see his face with its quiet dark eyes, its thick hair above and the straight line of his lips with their gentle smile. But the feel of his arm against her own as he held the sleeping child, set up that nameless longing in her, the glowing glory of unknown joy which had become of late a sadness.

She was filled with vague sorrows and premonitions, as if, having found the priceless possession of this man's companionship, she was about to lose it.

It was not death wholly that she feared, but a more subtle thing, an inhibition of the spirit, a gulf that seemed to lie all shadowy between them—a dark, mysterious gulf where in the imperious face of Kate Cathrew swirled amid the shadows.

But presently Fair spoke and she shook off her depressing forebodings.

"Nance," he said softly, so low that his deep voice was scarce more than a whisper, "I have wanted to tell you more of my life and Sonny's for a long time, but somehow it seemed too bad to add another's burdens to those which you already bear, even though vicariously. However, the time seems nearly ripe for me to reap the reward, one way or another, of those years of effort and hardship which I have spent running Kate Cathrew to earth. What this reward will be I don't know, of course. No one can foretell. The men of Sky Line are a hard bunch, criminals and worse. They'll never be dug out of that nest of theirs without a fight and a hard one. Somebody's going to be killed, that's certain!"

He heard the girl catch her breath in a little gasp, and shifting Sonny, he put his arm around her.

"However it does come out, there's one thing I want to tell you, a package I want to give you for safekeeping. Will you listen, Nance?"

The big girl nodded dumbly. Her heart was throbbing painfully, the breath labored in her lungs. A trembling set up along her muscles, and the stars seemed to dance on the black velvet of the sky.

Gently Fair leaned down until his face was against her cheek, tightened his clasp.

"I have been all over this land of ours," he said presently, "and in some several others. I have met many women—of many classes. I have been no saint and no great sinner. But always in my secret heart there has been a place all swept and garnished—and empty, Nance."

"Since the day in Blue Stone canyon when I first beheld you rocking the child in your lap—this secret place has been gloriously full. Nance—Nance—I have been like a worshiper without, laying my forehead to the sill. All the things I have dreamed of I find in you—the strength, the sweetness, the courage. You are beautiful—and you are too good for any man. But I—have dared to love you."

He ceased and turned his lips against her cheek.

For Nance Allison the stars were singing together at the dawn of creation, the glory of the spheres had appeared before her.

"Answer me, girl," said Brand Fair tremulously, "tell me what's in your heart."

"I—I—" said Nance, "I—think it is the light from the open gates of Paradise—the smile of God Himself—because I am so happy!"

"Sonny, old-timer," said Fair, "here's where you take a back seat for once," and he rolled the child, still sleeping like the healthy little animal he was, over on the floor.

When the man arose to go some seconds later he gave Nance the package which he had taken from a pocket.

"Keep it, sweetheart," he said, "and open it if—anything happens to me. It contains information vital to Sonny's life and future—the address of the New York lawyer who knows all my affairs and his, and also copies of the proof he holds which can send Cattle Kate and Arnold and all their lot behind the bars for life. Take it straight to Sheriff Selwood if you have to act for me, and if he is alive and conscious. If not, Bossick will do in his stead. He's a good man. There's a picture in that package. Nance—the face of Sonny's mother. But I'm not figuring that you'll have any call to open it—not by a long shot. This is all by way of wise precaution, you know. Now give me one more kiss."

Brand Fair rode away and the girl he left upon the cabin's step was too far adrift on the seas of happiness to realize that he had not told her the one thing vital—who was Sonny's father?

CHAPTER XVII

The Face in the Package.
At last Nance Allison knew the meaning of the great light that seemed to glow upon all the world of the Deep Heart hills.

Instinct awoke in her and she beheld the face of love.

Abasement seized her.

What was she in her loneliness and poverty, that such a man as Brand Fair might find her worthy?

What had she ever done of valor that one might admire her?

She had merely been a drudge, working out her soul to carry on her father's dreams of empire, to hold fast the place which he had left to her and hers.

She had only labored and stood firm, watching with anguished eyes the fruits of those labors being destroyed—she had made no effort to strike back at her enemies.

And despite all this, Brand Fair loved her!

Loved her and had laid his lips to hers in the first love-kiss of her life!

Verily was she blessed beyond all reason and she lifted up her heart in praise.

It was a holy night she spent upon her knees in the soft darkness with her work-hardened hands clasped on the ancient coverlet and the long gold lashes trembling and wet upon her cheeks. It was an offertory, an adoration and a covenant.

She felt the hours pass with benediction.

At the first gray light she lifted her face and with a smile at her lips' corners she murmured the ancient words of David's immortal thanksgiving:

"The King shall joy in Thy strength, Oh, Lord; and in Thy salvation how greatly shall he rejoice! For Thou hast made him most blessed forever; Thou hast made him exceeding glad with Thy countenance. Thou hast given him the desire of his heart, Selah."

"Mammy," she said at breakfast, "I've got to tell you something—you and Bud!"

There was a soft radiance about her long blue eyes, a helpless surrender to the smiles that would keep coming on her features.

Her mother looked on her calmly. "Well?" she said.

But over Bud's young face there passed a spasm of pain.

"You needn't tell it," he said sharply. "We know—don't we, mammy? It's Brand—"

"Sure, we know, Nance, honey," said Mrs. Allison gently, "an' we want to tell you, Bud an' I, how plumb happy we are—how glad we are to see happiness come to the best daughter, the best sister, two people ever had on this here earth. Ain't we, Buddy?"

The boy swallowed once, then looked at Nance and smiled.

It was not the least courageous thing he was ever to accomplish, that smile, and his mother knew it, for he adored the girl, and she had been his only playmate all his life.

But at his mother's subtle words jealousy died and love stepped back triumphantly.

"We sure are, Sis," he said and kissed her on the cheek.

The child slept late that morning. Perhaps he had been more or less disturbed by Nance's wakefulness. She stepped to the bedroom door once and looked at him, but left him there.

"We might as well sit down," she said, "he's fast asleep yet and I can feed him when he does get up."

They talked gaily all through the meal, reviewing the wonder that had come to Nance, and it seemed a new future was opening before them all.

"Brand seems like one of us already," said Mrs. Allison, "an' I think with joy what a help he'll be to you an' Bud—th' land is rich an' will keep us all in plenty with a man like him to manage an' to stand between us an' Sky Line. An' he's like your pappy was—kind an' still, a strength an' a hope for us. If Bud is willin' we'll offer him share an' share."

"Sure," said the boy decidedly.

When he had once capitulated Bud stood firm, wholeheartedly backing his decision.

"I just don't seem able to grasp it all," said Nance happily, "it seems like our whole life has changed overnight. There is light where darkness was, hope again where I'd about given it up—and now we'll never have to give up Sonny."

"That's so!" cried Mrs. Allison, "an' I hadn't thought of that. Never seemed like we would any way—bless him."

"Me?" asked a fresh little voice from the doorway, and the child stood there, rumpled-headed, in his small nightgown made from flour sacks. The faded red lettering still stood frankly out across his diminutive stomach.

"Yes—you," said Nance, "come here to your own Nance."

Sonny stilled in, holding up the hindering garment with one hand, the other shut over some small article.

As Nance lifted him to her lap he laid this on the table's edge.

"See," he said, "the pretty lady. She was in a bundle on your bed—where'd you get her, Nance?"

For a moment the laughter still drew her lips, the soft light of happiness still illumined her eyes.

Then the light and the laughter were erased from her features as if an invisible hand had wiped them.

In their place came first a blankness, an incredulity—then, as realization and memory struck home to her brain, the anguish of death itself swept across her face.

She stared with dilating pupils at the small picture.

"Nance!" cried her mother, "Nance!" She raised her eyes and looked at Mrs. Allison and the latter felt a chill of fear.

"Take—Sonny, Bud," she said slowly, "and get his clothes."

Bud, tacitful and quiet, did as she asked, and when she was alone with her mother the girl held out the picture.

"Brand told me—last night," she said haltingly, "that a package he gave me—to open in case anything happened—to him—held the face of—of—of Sonny's mother. This is Cattle Kate Cathrew."

"My good Lord A'mighty!" ejaculated Mrs. Allison.

Nance nodded.

"Then—who's his—father?"

"Who d'you suppose, Mammy?" asked the girl miserably, "I'm afraid it's Brand—the man who says he loves me!"

The gaunt old mother came round the table and put an unaccustomed arm about her daughter's shoulders. Carresses were rare with her.

"No," she said decidedly, "Brand Fair ain't a deceiver. I'd stake a lot on that. I feel to trust him, honey. Whatever is wrong in this terrible tangle, it ain't mammy's word on that."

The girl straightened her shoulders, lifted her head.

"I do trust him, Mammy," she said gallantly, "whatever has happened in the past I know it has not made him a liar—and I feel to be ashamed of myself."

"Needn't," said Mrs. Allison succinctly, "it's natural—th' age-old instinct of jealousy. Come down from our naked ancestors when th' man was th' feed-getter an' th' woman fought with tooth an' nail if another female hove in sight. You'd like to go right out now an' scratch that woman's eyes out, wouldn't you?"

A slyly smile trembled on Nance's lips.

"I guess I would," she said unsteadily, "because—you see—if she's his wife—why—he can't take another."

"There's divorce laws in this country, ain't there? How do you know she's his wife now?"

"Mammy," said Nance gratefully, "you're the most wonderful woman I ever knew! You've got more reason than a houseful of lawyers. And I'm going to take heart right now. I'll put this picture away in the package and wait till Brand is ready to tell me all about it—and I'll stand steady in my love and my faith."

"That's my big girl!" said the mother, "now get to work at something. It's th' best cure—on earth."

SPORT NEWS IN DAILIES

It has always been a strange thing to us why the sports and sport writers seemed to have such a strange hold on the big daily papers. A prize fight will get columns of space every day for weeks and it does not bring back a cent in revenue except that it may sell some extra papers. Baseball, the organized variety that makes big money for its owners, spends no money with the papers to compensate them for the thousands of dollars in space and telegraph tolls the papers give it. It has no advertising-reader value and the advertisers do not want to be on the same page with the sport news. What do the promoters who make the money out of sports give the newspapers in return for all the space given them?—The Oklawaha Press.

NATURAL

A weekly magazine has created something of a sensation by bearing an alleged plot whereby, it is charged, a certain boxer was to have been eased into the world's heavyweight championship.

Why get excited about it? Has professional boxing been conducted on so pure and lofty a plane that a story like this should cause a flurry? Is this the first, or the hundredth time that crookedness in the boxing game has been exposed?

No. This particular story may or may not be true. But it is exactly the sort of thing that is characteristic of the game as it is now conducted.—Amarillo Post.

WHY ADVERTISE IN THE DULL SEASON?

It is well to follow the lead of highly successful merchants. The wisdom of spending money is tested by the returns which advertising brings. And no merchant expects his business to thrive without advertising.

There is no finer example of a successful business man and merchant than John Wanamaker. His success was attributed to advertising as much as to other efficient methods of merchandising.

John Wanamaker always carried heavy advertising during the dull season. John Wanamaker knew business psychology. He knew also social psychology. And what is as important as both of these put together, he had a world of common sense.

Dr. Johnson's article on "Why Advertise in the Dull Season?":

John Wanamaker was not a farmer but he knew the farmer's mind. He was not a banker yet he knew the banker's mind. He was not a union man, still he knew the mental habits of the union man.

With all his knowledge this leading merchant grew rich by putting into practice what he knew. He advertised in the dull season. He had six reasons for doing this. All of these six reasons stand clearly.

1. Prospective buyers have more time to read in the dull season. They read the advertisements as well as the crime news or athletic stories. Hence advertising reaches more people during the dull season.

2. Every advertisement read makes an impression on the mind. Something about the advertisement sticks to the memory. When the time to buy comes, the reader becomes a customer of the store which had the good judgment to advertise during the dull season.

3. Because business is dull some merchants cut down their advertising. The wise merchant takes advantage of this for he knows that advertising competition is less. His advertisement may be the only one of its kind in the paper, hence the trade will be brought to the store during the dull season. This helps to prevent the dull season for that store.

4. Advertising in the dull season creates confidence among the people in the store during the advertising. The people regard that store as successful, and everyone knows there is nothing that succeeds like success.

5. To advertise in the dull season makes it possible to get the best advertising rates, for an annual contract is always better than a seasonal contract. Space can be handled at a cheaper rate by newspapers and at the same time yield better return to the merchant as the other four reasons show.

6. Continuous advertising has been proved from three to seven times as valuable as occasional or spasmodic advertising. Constant reminding brings constant customers. Tests of this have been made in large cities and in small towns and always with similar results. So advertising in the dull season makes for quick turnover of goods, increase of service to customers, because fresh goods are always on hand and year in and year out a weather profit, for there are fewer losses.

It pays the merchant, it pays the customer, and is a genuine service to the public at large to advertise in the dull season of the year.—Dr. C. D. Johnson, head of school of commerce and business administration, Baylor University, Waco.

We understand that an order has been given a Gray county paper to publish the list of delinquent taxpayers in the county.

While big business is slowly eliminating the smoke nuisance in the cities, tobacco smoking goes on apace. We can appreciate smoke coming from a smokestack at this distance better than having to breathe second-hand tobacco smoke in an office.

Fred L. Haskett is back on the job as editor of the Childress Index. Fred is an AI newspaper man, and we have several former Childress residents here who give him a good name as a community builder. We are glad to see him back on the Index.

It begins to look as if our sidewalks are too narrow. When weeds are allowed to almost meet over the walk, either the walks should be wider or the weeds should be kept down, and it appears that it might be easier to require wider walks than to persuade folks to cut weeds.

We were talking with a peddler a few days ago who sells an article to be found in the local stores and he admitted that he never made less than ten dollars per day profit in any town he works. This strikes us as very good wages for a man who has nothing invested but his gift of gab.

Mr. A. Cowham expressed disappointment because the McLean girls were not interested in cowboys. McLean girls, in common with all other up-to-date girls, are not interested in a caricature of the old time cowboy, and we have our doubts if one of the old timers could get very far with the girls now-a-days. Now, the wide-trousered sheiks are another subject.

It is easy to tell the merchant who does not believe in advertising by visiting his store, observing the old goods on his shelves and listening to his hard luck story. Regardless of one's opinion of the merits of advertising, the fact remains that the man who advertises is the man who enjoys the trade and stays in business after his non-advertising competitor is forgotten.

Slaton now has two Chambers of Commerce. We are at a loss to understand how two organizations of this character can function better than one. It will certainly take some close co-operation to accomplish anything for their town. We would hate to have to contribute to two organizations to duplicate each other's work in McLean.

With drought stricken communities in other parts of the state, it will be no trouble to secure help in our cotton fields this fall. This will mean that it will not be necessary to import negroes; a question that is always raised about this time. Every community lives to regret the first time they allow negroes to come in. Let's continue to keep them out of our community for the best interest of all of us.

We know a preacher in a nearby town who uses government printed envelopes. We wonder how he feels when he asks his home town editor to publish his church announcements free. We also know a county officer who orders his stationery from a down-state firm, but at election time he can appreciate the county printers. If everybody practiced buying away from home, our communities would not be worth living in.

The News appreciates the kind words spoken by Dr. Joiner and Prof. Frazer at the revival meeting. We try to be found on the right side of every moral issue of our town regardless of personal beliefs in the matter. We did not take notes on any of Dr. Joiner's sermons, but that does not mean that we do not remember them. Our only regret is that press of business deterred us from having a close personal conversation with the gentleman, but we are glad to endorse the efforts of the gentlemen in holding up high ideals for our people.

It was suggested at a directors meeting of the Chamber of Commerce Monday that a two million dollar yearly income could be secured from the sandy land lying east of town, if this land was set in vineyards. Grapes begin bearing within three years time and such an income could be made available in about five years time if vines were set this fall. There is no question of a market for grapes, when solid train loads of California grapes go through Gray county enroute to New York every season. Of course, grape raising would mean smaller farms, but the income would be much greater than from anything else planted on such soils.

WEDDED BLISS

Why do married men instinctively duck when the telephone rings? There'll be a half dozen men sitting around a desk, smoking, joking, happy, having the time of their life, when all at once the phone rings. The front legs of the chairs hit the floor, the grins disappear, a strained, anxious look comes into the face of each man there, while the man who owns the office reaches out carefully and slowly and lifts the receiver off the hook. Everyone holds his breath as the man who holds the receiver says "Hello" in a low tone of voice.

But almost instantaneously a grin breaks out over his face, you can hear the exhalation of a half dozen men and almost feel them relax as the spokesman yells, "O! hello, Jim, how in the world are you? Sure, come right on up.

Absolutely, you bet." But sometimes the worst fears are realized and you hear Tom say, "Yes, right away. I did, but I had a few letters to get out. Yes. Yes. Yes. Sure will. Nobody. All right. Yes, I will. In just a few minutes." And hangs up the receiver sadly. And everyone gets up at once and they all file silently toward the elevator.

Let's see, what do they call it? Oh, yes, wedded bliss.—Collingsworth Standard.

PUBLICITY SEEKERS

Publicity has always been a vital force in the advancement of anything or anybody—providing it is the right kind of publicity, of course.

Laymen, those not familiar with the publishing business, would be surprised if they knew just how many organizations, just how many business firms and just how many individuals seek publicity—free publicity—continually.

Newspaper publicity of the right sort has long been recognized as the best kind of publicity, and as a result the editor of any paper, regardless of whether it is a four page, five column "hand stuck" sheet or a great metropolitan publication, must always be on the lookout to prevent his publication from being the dupe of organizations and individuals, through its news columns which should be held inviolate for the readers of the paper.

A newspaper has but one thing to sell.

That one thing is advertising space.

Yet most people never stop to think of that fact when they attempt to ram-rod through the news and advertising columns of a newspaper, their own policies to reach their own ends, for selfish gain. No one would think of going into a grocery store and asking the grocer for a loaf of bread or a sack of flour—free. And no one would think of going into a bank and expecting the president to give him money, for selfish uses.

Yet that is precisely what is done when a person approaches a newspaper for free publicity which will benefit him and himself alone—or at the best a small clique of people.

Most newspapers are glad to co-operate with any worthy organization which is not carrying on for selfish gain.

And most newspapers are happy to give honor and credit to individuals where honor and credit is due.

Yet very few of them are willing to force their readers to read a lot of free publicity which is utterly devoid of news value in order to espouse a selfish cause of any kind.

Whenever it is possible for persons seeking this kind of publicity to gain their ends, the newspapers and the newspaper reading public will suffer.—Lubbock Plains Journal.

BENEFITS OF ADVERTISING
 Advertising reduces the cost of selling because it reduces the time taken to make the sale. It reduces the time taken by the retailer to make the sale to the consumer; it reduces the time taken by the wholesaler to make the sale to the retailer, and it reduces the time taken by the manufacturer to make the sale to the wholesaler. It is oil on the wheels of distribution. It makes them revolve more smoothly and more rapidly. It removes some of the obstacles to selling, which always exist in the mind of every purchaser.—A. S. Butler.

WHEN WRITING PAID
 "Hurrah! Five dollars for my latest story!"
 "Congratulations, young man. From whom did you get the money?"
 "From the express company. They lost it."

RATHER BRUTAL
 Egoist—"Ah—the most beautiful strange young lady just smiled at me."
 She—"How considerate of her—the first time I saw you I laughed out loud."

CHURCH SHOULD ADVERTISE
 "Every church should have a fund for newspaper advertising and every preacher should be taught the first principles of journalism. The time is coming when the church editor will have more space than the sporting editor. The next great revival will come when the press sets itself to redeem the world. Every preacher should co-operate with the newspaper. It is his best friend."
 Rev. J. T. Brabner Smith, before Methodist Regional Church Council, St. Paul.

MURDERING THE STARTER
 A country man with a local reputation as a vocalist, attended a dinner and was asked to sing. Although he had no music with him, and was as hoarse as a frog, he consented to try, but broke down.
 "Never thee mind, tad," said an elderly guest, trying to cheer him up; "never mind the breakdown, for thee's done thy best; but the fellow that asked thee 't sing ought to be shot!"—The Leather Washers Journal.

HOW ABOUT IT?
 Watching a circus parade is interesting. Perhaps you look at the lions and tigers in the wagon cages, but you ought to take a look at the horses that pull the wagons. Here will be six horses, two abreast, hitched to a wagon. But usually the team nearest the wagon does the pulling. The front teams keep going, but their tugs are loose—not very strong on the pull. Too many people support the home merchants like the front teams. They like to be in the procession, they like to lead the parade, but they don't do much pulling. The spectators look upon and admire them, but few notice how little they pull, so they "get by." The way to pull for prosperity is to hold a close connection between yourself and the institutions upon which are dependent the turning of the wheels of progress.—Lubbock Plain Journal.

THE SOCK PEDDLER
 A few days ago a sock peddler came to Texila, called at this office and began to tell us of the wonderful bargains he had to offer in ladies' silk hose and men's shirts. As is our custom, when these fellows call, we promptly told him that we preferred to patronize our home merchant. Mr. Peddler walked out and we thought no more about him until this week one of the ladies of the town called here to inquire if Mrs. Castleberry had received the stockings ordered from this peddler. We informed the lady that we made no order, whereupon she told us that our names had been used as one who had given him an order.
 This fellow deliberately lied when he told this. In fact it is common custom of these "cattle" to lie, as their success depends upon the practice. We never patronize these fellows, as we much prefer to do business with our friends where we know we will get a square deal.—Texola Tribune.

KNOCKING BUSINESS
 "I went into a store the other day to buy a suit of clothes," said a gentleman recently, "and the owner talked hard times and pictured such a gloomy future that I decided I had better wear my old suit a while longer. But on down the street I struck up a conversation with another merchant who said 'things were not so bad, we'll get along all right,' and talked so encouraging that I went in and not only bought a suit, but he also sold me a hat and a pair of shoes to go with it." Perpetual Wealth
 Purebred livestock on the farm is a source of perpetual wealth. A few purebred cows, hogs and chickens on the farm will insure lasting prosperity and year-round profits by giving the farmer something to sell throughout the whole twelve months, instead of three or four.

Away From The Crowds
 America is still undiscovered, still waiting to be discovered—by you! Away from the paved highways, deep in the hidden solitudes—are shady groves fragrant with the scent of flowers—sun-drenched valleys—lazy streams—or hurrying brooks as befit your mood. Waiting to please you with their untouched charms.
 Take your Ford and venture forth into the delights of the unknown. Leave the beaten path to others. Go where you will—whether the road is paved or not.
 It is the car of the true adventurer; the car that no going—be it sand, dirt or rocky road—can halt; the car that will take you safely, certainly and happily to where nature hides her true loveliness.

duty to work for the community betterment.
Attorney J. B. Clark of Shamrock was the next speaker, declaring that this was one occasion when a lawyer could afford to tell the truth. Mr. Clark got a laugh when he told a story on the toastmaster. The speaker stated that he has found McLean citizens to be loyal to their home town, and said that the worst hindrance to the growth of most small towns is that the citizens mean to stay until they get able to move to larger towns where there are modern conveniences, instead of working for modern conveniences at home. Mr. Clark urged that if a town was not good enough to live in without knocking, the knocker should move.
The toastmaster's gun fired just as Mr. Clark took his seat, and in the little by-play incident to getting started again, the fact was brought out that a "big gun" was characterized by its "smooth bore."
Henry Ansley of the Amarillo Globe was introduced as the cowboy who had demonstrated the theory of evolution by becoming a newspaper man.
Mr. Ansley stated that no two-by-four lawyer could beat him to the draw and advised the toastmaster to leave his gun alone while he had the floor. The speaker regretted the fact that the McLean girls paid him no attention at all, leaving his hearers to infer that he was used to slightly different treatment by girls of other towns. He stated that he had been raised in Texas and gave the difference in being raised and reared, as a preceding speaker had claimed. Mr. Ansley urged that a large number of our citizens take advantage of the opportunity to hear Col. Lee, president of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce when Col. Lee and his party visit McLean on August 13.
The toastmaster then took the remaining time to say that what any of the better cities are today is due to the progressive spirit of their citizens. Amarillo was no larger than McLean just a few years ago, but its citizens determined to make a city of it and they have succeeded. Gray county, according to Mr. Willis, could support six times the present population, if vacant lands could be put into cultivation.
The orchestra played for the banqueters to file out of the building, and everyone seemed delighted with the success of the affair.

McLEAN WINS FROM ALANREED IN FAST GAME OF BASEBALL

McLean and Alanreed played a baseball game on the Alanreed diamond Tuesday of this week. The game was a tie up to the fifth inning, when McLean made one run, and the succeeding innings were hotly contested, with a final score of 6 to 3 in McLean's favor.

The game started with the following batting line-up, several changes being made in the McLean team during the game:
McLean: Alanreed, F. Landers, H. Palmer, H. Rippey, C. Burdine, S. Cubine, J. George, J. Haynes, G. Oakley, M. Burks, D. Wood, E. Rice, K. Rector, R. Powers, A. Steger, B. Smith, M. Castleberry, J. Meador, W. Brown

SINGER TELLS FISH STORY

Prof. Frazer, who conducted the music during the union revival just closed, was overheard telling F. H. Bourland a fish story that had been told him at another town. It seems that Prof. Frazer's informant was trying to impress him with the easiness with which the fish could be caught. He stated that the weather was so warm that the fish climbed up on the bank to fan themselves with their tails, and it was an easy matter to walk along and brain them with a club. We have an idea that Mr. Bourland was about to tell a hunting story, but he very wisely refrained after hearing this fish story.
