Grand Jury Makes Report Lefors Court

To the Honorable Newton P. Willis, Judge of the 84th Judicial District, Court of Gray County, Texas:

We, the Grand Jury of the 84th Judicial District Court of Gray County, Texas, duly convened for the June term of said court, do hereby submit to your Honor the following final report:

We have returned 18 true bills of indictment in felony cases to your court, among which are violations of the prohibition laws, robbery with fire arms, burglary and other miscellaneous offenses of a felony grade. In passing upon these matters, we have extended our best efforts to arrive at the true facts in each case, and at all times have striven to return bills of indictment where the evidence warranted same. It has been our intention or desire to place the stigma of indictment against the record of any person unless, we conscientiously felt that the laws of this State had been violated.

At the same time we were empaneled the Honorable China C. Small was presiding over your court, and in his opening instructions to us he mentioned among the many law violations that of the prohibition law be it manufacturing, sale or possession of which is commonly known as "home brew." In every case of this connection presented to us, we have endeavored to return bills of indictment against law offenders of this line, where, from the evidence presented, we believe a conviction could be had. We realize that it is more difficult to obtain conviction in these cases, we especially suggest and recommend that our law enforcement officials use all lawful means and methods to stamp out this particular character of law violation.

We wish to commend and we heartily approve of the manner in which our Sheriff, E. S. Graves, and his department has handled his office. We realize that he has been exceedingly efficient and the good work he and his deputies have performed reveals to us the paramount reason for law enforcement in this county.

We find much complaint from school trustees of the different districts over the county to the effect that funds due the common school districts are being withheld by the State because of the fact that the County Depository has not made out certain reports required by law and has not made a proper bond. We further find that our County Commissioners have been negligent in not requiring this report and bond, and we suggest that our County Attorney make a careful investigation of this matter and take such steps as are necessary to bring about a proper and speedy remedy in regard to the school and county funds.

We have reached us relative to county and city peace officers accepting money from law violators to give them immunity from the law. All these rumors seem to be unfounded.

We wish to thank you and the Honorable China C. Small for the cooperation and assistance you have rendered us during our recent session. Without elaborating in detail, we wish to state that lawlessness is being reduced to a minimum in Gray County. We know full well that there will always be law violation in every community, and the time will never come when the law will be forced as to every person everywhere. Our county is now in the center of a great oil field. We are a fast and rapid community. Naturally, there will be a great influx of inhabitants, and with such there will be a lawless element. From our investigation during the past 5 days we feel convinced that our officers have done their duty, and that the county is in the hands of sane, honest and courageous officials, and that law violators are apprehended and brought before the bar of justice as great a percentage as humbly possible.

With this report we request your favor to discharge us finally for the term.

Respectfully submitted,
I. B. HUGHEY, Foreman.

Arthur Erwin returned last week from California.

McLEAN WILL BE REPRESENTED AT HIGHWAY MEET

It is planned for a delegation from McLean to be present at the U. S. 66 Highway convention at Amarillo Monday. Those who want to go with the bunch are expected to be at the C. of C. building at 8 a. m.

Word has been received that the Oklahoma City delegation will be in McLean Sunday at 4 p. m. and will request that McLean join forces with them, but it is thought that most of McLean delegates will want to go Monday.

The committee appointed at the luncheon Tuesday reports 49 memberships at $5.00 each secured at McLean.

MRS. BOYETT'S PIANO PUPILS IN RECITAL PLEASE BIG CROWD

A large crowd attended the piano recital Tuesday evening by pupils of Mrs. Willie Boyett.

This recital is an annual affair looked forward to by McLean music lovers, and Tuesday's entertainment was fully up to the standard expected.

Printed programs were distributed that added much to the pleasure of the audience, and an intermission number by the high school band was enjoyed by all present.

In beginners work, Vida Colebank made highest average and Bonnie Bell second. Nora Lee Morgan made highest average in intermediate work and Laverne Pettit and Melrose Richardson second. In the more advanced work, Lola Ruth Stanfield, 4th grade, made highest, with Floye Landers, 6th grade, and Lucena Holloway, 4th grade, second.

Floye Landers, Nora Lee Morgan, Laverne Pettit, Lucille Scott and Lola Ruth Stanfield's names were on the attendance honor roll.

The following were on the program: Invocation by Rev. B. W. Wilkins. Joe Billie Bogan, Juanita Carpenter, Burrell Wingo, Emogene Hardendorf, Bonnie Bell, Vida Colebank, Dorothy Cousins, Clara Pearl Gatlin, Charlie Mae Carpenter, Lawrence Bourland, Laverne Pettit, Bobbie Appling, Melrose Richardson, Lucille Scott, Ruth Hess, Margaret Hess, Letha Ashby, Nora Lee Morgan, Lorena Ashby, Lucena Holloway, Lola Ruth Stanfield, Floye Landers, Lois Kirby.

SHAMROCK NEGROES BEAT McLEAN TEAM

Two negro teams were matched at the local baseball diamond Wednesday when Shamrock won from the McLean negroes.

A game was matched the same day between the McLean first team and the McLean Cubs (white) with a score of 4 to 0 in favor of the Cubs. Only one error was made during the game.

B. Y. P. U. PICNIC TODAY

The following are attending an Associational B. Y. P. U. picnic south of Shamrock today: Jesse Cobb and family, N. E. Savage and family, George Abbott and family, Mrs. T. N. ROAD BOND ELECTION PRECINCT NO. 4 SET FOR JULY 16

The commissioners court set July 16 as the date for the special road bond election for this precinct at the hearing Monday.

No protests of any kind were made at the hearing and it is expected that the election will carry without opposition.

A petition for a separate district for the Tampa precinct was presented and 15 days set for a hearing, and if no opposition develops, their election will be some time after the middle of August.

Bond buyers are already opening negotiations for the purchase of Precinct No. 4's bonds, should the election carry. Three bridges and lateral roads, as well as the paving of 66 highway are included in the proposition.

June 23-24 have been set as the dates when the commissioners will act as a county equalization board, and notices are now being mailed to taxpayers.

JUDGE CHAS. CLEMENTS PRESIDING AT LEFORS

Judge Charles Clements of the 64th judicial district at Plainview is the presiding judge at Lefors this week in an exchange of benches with Judge Newton P. Willis.

The exchange was brought about for the reason that Judge Clements was formerly district attorney of his district and was attorney for the state in certain cases, which disqualified him to preside in those cases.

Judge Reese Tatum of Dalhart, presiding officer of this administrative district, ordered the exchange.

COOL WEATHER THIS WEEK

Following a light rain the first of the week, the weather has been cool enough most of the time to necessitate firing up the heating stoves.

Alanreed Lot Opening Day Well Attended

Several hundred people were present at the opening day for the sale of lots at Alanreed Tuesday.

A program had been arranged by J. W. J. Ball as master of ceremonies. Mr. Ball introduced E. B. Hedrick, president of the Chamber of Commerce, who told of the object of the day. J. T. Bullock of the Townsite Co. then made an address, followed by the engineer of the Oil Fields Construction Co., who are going to erect a two-story building at Alanreed. O. H. Foster, secretary-manager of the McLean Chamber of Commerce, made an address in which he told of the good will existing between McLean and Alanreed. Two ladies of the townsite company's sales force also made talks.

Music for the occasion was furnished by the Alanreed Girls Glee Club, and the McLean band gave several selections.

A large number of McLean citizens were present for the exercises.

FREE BAND CONCERT MAIN STREET TONIGHT

A free concert will be given by the McLean band on Main and First streets tonight (Thursday).

According to Prof. R. C. Davidson, director, the band will be dressed in full Scotch uniform, as they appeared at the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention at Wichita Falls.

This will be the first concert to be given by the band. However, they have made several public appearances, in spite of the fact that they have been playing as an organization for only a few months.

MILLER-THUT

Married, at Amarillo, Monday, June 13, Miss Flossie Marie Miller of (Carndon and Mr. George Thut of Lefors. Rgv. W. C. Garrett pastor of the Second Baptist church, performed the ceremony.

The newlyweds left immediately for an extended trip to Western points, after which they will be at home at Lefors.

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH

B. W. Wilkins, Pastor
Our services for the week are as follows: Sunday school meets at 10 o'clock promptly. Preaching services at 11 a. m. and 8:30 p. m. Epworth League meets promptly at 8 o'clock p. m.

Last Sunday was marked by fine interest in all services. One member added to the roll. This makes fifty additions for this conference year.

Wednesday night we are studying the Sunday school book entitled "The Pupil." About fifteen are taking this course preparatory to taking the examination for credits from our Sunday School Board at Nashville.

Tuesday of this week was known as "Social Day" with the women of the church and their meeting was held at the pastor's home. Thirty-eight women were present and an exceptionally pleasant time was reported.

This church offers to all its members, its friends and any visitors or strangers who may be in town an earnest invitation to worship with us.

PEDDLER TURNED DOWN

The editor of The News was approached by an electric lamp peddler one day this week, and we hope the local merchants who have lamps to sell treat the printing peddler in the same way.

There is only one way to build a town and that is for the merchants to co-operate with one another. The merchant who buys out of town the things not in his line is helping cripple his town.

Buy printing at home. We turn down all peddlers.

Miss Ruth Gardner of Waco is visiting her sister, Mrs. J. M. No. 1, this week.

Mrs. J. R. Hindman went to Amarillo Friday.

J. W. Knorpp Speaker at Luncheon

J. W. Knorpp of Groom was the principal speaker at the Chamber of Commerce luncheon held at the American Cafe Tuesday.

At the request of President L. G. Meadlen, Sec.-Mgr. O. H. Foster presented the speaker, using "fools" as the basis of his remarks, taking a sentiment printed on the place cards and elaborating upon it, showing that all great men of history have been called fools by those who can see nothing but things to criticize in their actions. Mr. Foster paid his respects to all who are working for the betterment of McLean and insisted that full appreciation should be given them. He then introduced the speaker of the day as a "Prince of Fools."

Mr. Knorpp posted a large United States map upon the wall and began at once upon his subject of boosting the "Main Street of Amarillo." Mr. Knorpp said there are only two salaried officers in the highway association, gratis, he mentioned a West Texas Chamber of Commerce solicitor who receives a commission on all memberships. This man told him that some good money could be made at McLean on highway memberships, but Mr. Knorpp informed him that no commission was paid on highway memberships, all money goes direct to headquarters to be expended in advertising the road.

Some $30,000 will be spent this year advertising the route, and of this amount Texas had only paid $100 up to Monday. Mr. Knorpp said that the highway is worth as much to the town as the railroad and much more than another railroad would be. The route has no assurance that the federal designation will be held unless it is properly taken care of; it will take hard work to keep it, and steps should be taken to hard surface the road all along the line.

A feature of the luncheon was a clarinet solo by Prof. Robt. C. Davidson, accompanied by Mrs. Willett Boyett at the piano.

A committee was appointed to solicit memberships from McLean at $5.00 each for the highway advertising fund.

Those present were: L. G. Meadlen, O. H. Foster, Byrd Guill, J. L. Hess, B. W. Wilkins, L. Pelton, B. F. Gray, R. H. Keese, J. W. Knorpp, L. V. Lonsdale, L. L. Hibler, J. Hibler, R. C. Davidson, C. Begin Here Today

PAULINE MALLINGATE, who has been strangely absent from her home in London for 18 months, is believed to be "Mrs. Creswood," mistress of "The Moat," a mystery house in Yorkshire, not far from the place owned by Mrs. Bertha Northwood, a friend of the family.

HENRY EMERSON, wealthy stepfather of the girl, has vanished mysteriously from a summer resort where he had been staying with his wife and another stepdaughter, Lorna. He is believed to be a prisoner at "The Moat," suffering from wounds inflicted by the hirelings of

DR. JULIAN EMERSON, who, under the pretext of being related to the missing man, has taken Lorna and her sick mother from the resort to Mulberry House, an old estate in Paxton Common, where he is holding them captive.

BERAID CRAVEN, Lorna's lover, has joined with Mrs. Northwood and Noel Shannon, British war ace, in tracing the missing family. Through information obtained from Ellen Storey, a maid at "The Moat," Craven and Shannon fly to Paxton Common. There Dr. Emerson unwittingly hires Shannon to take him to Yorkshire. Midway to his destination Shannon is forced down by a storm. Dr. Emerson is thoroughly angered and refuses to go on with Shannon, who in due time arrives at the home of Mrs. Northwood. She writes a letter to Pauline and Shannon starts out to visit "The Moat."

In the meantime Dr. Emerson suffers a nervous collapse in the village where Shannon left him, and is taken to a hospital.

Craven, at Paxton, manages to see Lorna at Mulberry House. They agree that Craven should go for help, while Lorna, to avoid suspicion, shall remain with her mother. Two of Dr. Emerson's guards intercept Craven as he is leaving. They beat him into insensibility and leave him in the roadway. He is taken to the home of Mrs. Donald in the village.

Meanwhile Shannon has arrived at "The Moat," persuaded Pauline to believe that she is being duped by Dr. Emerson and moved the entire household, with Henry Emerson, to the home of Mrs. Northwood. Noel has now been informed that Julian Emerson is lying in a hospital suffering from a stroke.

Now Go on with the Story

Noel Shannon went out into the grounds and walked about in the early sunshine.

There was no pity in his heart for the man lying stricken in that small hospital. It was only the working of fate. After all, the hand of justice, though it may be delayed, falls as a general rule at the right moment.

He rather hoped that both Mrs. Northwood and Pauline would sleep late, but he did not think this was possible, and, as a matter of fact, as he was walking further into the depths of the garden, he heard his name called, and turning around, he found himself face to face with Mrs. Creswood.

As she looked at him, her quick intelligence read that he had something to tell her.

"You have some news?" she said. He nodded his head, and gave her the gist of the message which had been telephoned through.

"Stricken with paralysis!" said Pauline Creswood. She shuddered. "What a dreadful fate! Why, if I had been asked to describe Julian Emerson, I should have said he was a giant of physical strength and health."

"I didn't like the look of him when we got him out of the plane yesterday," Shannon said. "I suppose he has been living under a fearful mental strain these last weeks, or perhaps months. And you know there's nothing like mental strain for knocking a man out. Well, that clears the way for us miraculously. It's very beautiful out here," the young man added, "and I suppose we are a little early for breakfast. Won't you sit down? I want to ask you some questions—I want to know what you can tell me about this man Emerson. I know you gave me a full account of your own experience with him, and what you imagine he had in mind when he brought away Henry Emerson and was having this man coerced so dreadfully?"

"I wish I could really tell you," Pauline answered earnestly. "But I can only conjecture. Of course the fact that my stepfather is very rich lies at the bottom of the whole thing, and putting two and two together, I see now that Pat was awful because Julian Emerson had need of money and determined also to use Mulberry House. To prevent my poor Pat from asking awkward questions, he must have been plying him with the same drug that was so injurious to him in Paris."

"Who was the man Carter to whom you telegraphed the other day?"

She looked at him quickly. "How did you know I telegraphed Carter?"

He explained briefly what Craven had told him, and she shrugged her shoulders.

She paused an instant, then she said: "You want to know who

She folded Pauline in her arms and kissed her tenderly, and as the younger woman drove away she wept bitterly.

Carter is? Well, Carter is an enigma. He is a man who has been working for or with Emerson for a long time. I should say in the beginning he was a bright one; an educated one, and evidently a gentleman. But he has been drug-ging himself so terribly that all that he might have been has been destroyed. And when I tell you that Emerson put my husband in Mark Carter's care, perhaps you will understand how cruelly, how wickedly how subtly the other man worked. For with Carter as his guardian there never could be a chance for Pat. I am going to join Pat today," Mrs. Creswood added. "I want to go to London as early as I can. I discussed this with Bertha last night and she agrees. I know now that Henry Emerson will be well taken care of—and I must go to Pat. God knows if I shall save him," she added bitterly and sadly, "but I must go to him, Mr. Shannon."

Noel Shannon took her hand and patted it.

"Of course you must! Why, that's the one and only thing you must do. As soon as I can hear from Jerry whether our conjecture about the Mulberry House is right, why Mrs. Northwood will go there as quickly as a train or a car can take her, but it's better for her to remain here taking care of Henry Emerson until I get definite news from Jerry."

"Perhaps I shall be able to get you some information when I get to London," Pauline said eagerly. "I shall be in touch with the Mulberry House."

"Yes, you will, of course," said Shannon, "but don't forget there's that dreadful brute with whom you may have to deal. And he won't be kind to you, you know. My task will be to go back to where I left Julian Emerson. I shall go by air—it won't take me very long, but I'll wait around a bit and see if there is a telegram from Jerry, and I wonder if the doctor will allow me to have a quiet little conversation with your stepfather? I came into this suddenly and I am a stranger, but I want you all to know that there is nothing I won't do to help bring things into their proper shape again."

The doctor arrived while they were at breakfast. His report on Mr. Emerson's condition was most satisfactory, and he gave permission to Mr. Shannon to talk a little while with the sick man. He asked Mrs. Creswood to go up to see her stepfather before she drove to the station to travel to London.

Bertha Northwood cheered and encouraged Patrick Creswood-Wittington's wife by every means in her power.

"You must be dying to see that unfortunate boy," she said, "and I hope, if his condition will permit, that you will get him away from the dreadful place where Mr. Shannon saw him. I expect you will be able to do all you want, Pauline, for the serious illness of the man who calls himself Dr. Emerson gives

She faded Pauline in her arms and kissed her tenderly, and as the younger woman drove away she wept bitterly.

As the aviator had declared, he was waiting about for a telegram to come from Gerald Craven and it was not until lunch time that this message came, through as before, on the Junction.

Both Mrs. Northwood and Shannon were terribly upset when Parsons repeated to them the message which Leonard and Mrs. Donald had sent.

"An accident!" said Noel Shannon. "No, not an accident; he must have met with some bad treatment! I'll go." He suddenly changed his mind. "No, you go, Mrs. Northwood, because I must take up the matter of Julian Emerson. To begin with, we can't leave him lying there a cause of anxiety to strangers, and in the second place, should he make a quick recovery, he's got to be nabbed before that comes about."

"Have you had any conversation with Mr. Emerson?" Mrs. Northwood asked anxiously.

ACCESSORIES TELL STORY

DRESS OF SOCIETY FOLK AT RACES SHOWS NEW TRENDS; BUTTON-HOLE AND SHOULDER FLOWERS GOOD

BY HARRIET

ACCESSORIES often make or mar the costume, whether it be a tulleur or an evening frock. The well-dressed woman knows this. Nothing in her wardrobe occupies the time and thought that accessories do.

For the woman of moderate means, accessories become all the more important. For she must choose a purse that will go with several costumes, a necklace that will add charm to two or three frocks, and gloves, shoes, hosiery and the ever-present buttonhole flower that will be just as attractive with her spring coat as with her summer print dress.

This week the accessory that attracted the most attention at the Belmont Park races where all society parkers was the round purse carried by Mrs. Frank Henderson which had a picture of the hero, Lindbergh, across its surface and a small American flag stuck up over it.

Perfection of Detail

With a Continental blue one-piece frock of kasba, with matching coat embroidered in gray, she wore a smart toque of delicately shaded velvet violets, gray pull-on gloves, black patent leather pumps with the binding and the one strap of gray kid. Her gray hosiery followed the trend away from beige shades.

Pearls seem as popular with the feminine world as ever. If one wears a single strand of pearls it should lie snugly around the neck. But if that strand doubles or becomes a triple necklace, it may be either as long or short as Milady desires.

The shoulder flower seems as ubiquitous as ever, only varying in kind and color rather than the place worn.

Crystal Flowers

Mrs. Leland Orvis, another Social Register leader, wore a charming boutonniere of three small crystal flowers in lavender, flesh and cream on the shoulder of her jaunty two-piece sweater suit in rose and tan pattern that simulated tweed.

Her plain suede sport hat of black gained distinction from its half-moon ornament of gleaming pearl with the Man-in-the-moon distinctly visible in its cutting. Her black lizard pouch purse matched her black lizard one-strap pumps.

Belts play an all-important part this season. A novelty leather belt with a snappy buckle, accompanied by a novelty flower fashioned from the same leather, makes a smart set for sports.

This season the scarf is again appearing as the proper neckwear for sports. But it is the 'kerchief' kind of scarf. It may be dots, squares, geometrical designs or appliqued patterns on plain colors. Plaids are very good but the scarf of flowered material is not worn. There are new summer sets of gingham or hand-blocked linen hats, parasols and shoes. Other sets, fully as gay, have straw woven shoes, purses and hats. A late fad is for parasols in sport, stubby shapes made from the new pliable straw.

Accessories, all important, should always bear a definite relation to the costumes they complete. In color, design and fabric, they must harmonize or Milady would be better without them.

LATERAL ROADS NEEDED

Merely constructing highways in the state will not solve our road problems. It is not enough that we have a system of highways that will make easy the passage of tourists through our state. Of course, that would help, but that will not meet the crying need of the state.

Farmers must be given good roads to our towns and cities. Every community in the state is entitled to a highway that will give it easy access to the outside world. No farmer should be isolated by our road system so that he is subject to the inconvenience of traveling miles in search of a modern highway.

It would be fatal to the economic system of the state if we should so far forget ourselves as to ignore the needs of our rural communities. — Brunswick (Ga.) News.

TRY ADVERTISING

The man who advertises his products is saying, "I believe in my own goods. I know they will stand the test. I am spending my hard-earned money to tell the world the merits of my wares. And I know I can stand up for my business to succeed."

Many men who do not advertise also have meritorious products, but few others will know it. People will not take a chance when they buy something somewhere else in which they already believe. The merchant who is afraid to describe the real value of his wares will not win the confidence of the public, and confidence is vital to business.

If you know the things you sell are all right, why not tell the rest of the community about it? There is no need of keeping good news to yourself.

Of course, if you are already rich and don't need more business, there is no need of going out after it. But if you could use an added number of satisfied customers and your cash box still has a little room left at the top, why not try advertising? Others have—and they liked the results so well they have never stopped.

PRINTED WASH FABRICS

Printed wash fabrics are just now at the height of their popularity. They are made in all kinds of cotton materials, man-made fibers of rayon, acetate, organza, tulle, gauze, and novelty corded fabrics have an accepted place. The distinguishing characteristics, according to the Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, is that the designs are printed on the fabric and therefore appear only on one side. American designers have developed large numbers of last year's designs which can be used in the printing process. This makes it possible to secure printed fabrics of this kind which are new and do not fade. The color is guaranteed fast in many cases. To be sure that this guarantee is reliable, it is advisable to purchase well-known brands and also take a sample home and wash it to be sure the color is fast. This precaution is particularly necessary if the material is to be used for children's clothing, which must stand frequent laundering.

The patterns are exceptionally charming this year. In some cases the designs have been taken from hand-embroidered figures. Small patterns are popular. Novel printed geometric designs are new. Some of these, developed in black and white, gray, or blue, are especially attractive for older women.

For hot summer afternoons, bathing, family and organza will be in and fresh. The sepias, cotton armcases, and corded cottons are popular for house dresses and for a small daughter's school and play frock. Large flannels, collars and necks, or intricate motifs of a plain background the same color as the background or one of the figures. The material give these dresses character and interest. For the girls' party dresses, printed tulle, organza, and lawn are popular and appropriate fabrics.

MEMBER
Texas Press Weeklies
Texas Press Association
Panhandle Press Association
National Editorial Association

The Texas Press Association is in session this week at El Paso, and we hope the members will show some of the birds down there that their carefully worded invitations to patronize Mexican bars are insidious to law abiding Americans. There might have been a time when editors were inclined to do so, but it is not true of any we know now.

Both knitting concerns, one featuring "rawnee Eili," the other the man, and the other sponsoring "Jackie Tyler," the blind salesman, have gone broke and their affairs are in the hands of their creditors. It will be hard to find anyone to sympathize with their misfortunes. Taking an unfair advantage of the gullible public seldom pays for long.

In spite of the fact that we like to boast of co-operation, you do not often see an advertisement boosting a competitor, yet such an advertisement is in this issue of The News. Business life would be a delightful game if all competitors were clean and each man fought for the business due him in a fair manner. There can be no objection to a gentlemanly competitor, and it is entirely possible for one competitor to be one's best friend. Fighting a competitor is a losing game for both sides, with the odds in favor of the defendant.

State Press of the Dallas News grew excited on his lack of knowledge when he read about a "go-devil" in this column a few days ago, and says the farm flapper in his office gave a prompt definition of her idea of the machine, which reads at this distance as if she were trying to describe an old-fashioned Georgia stock. We are glad to inform State Press that a "go-devil" is a sled chutivator used for the first, and sometimes second, cultivation of crops planted in lister furrows. As listers are practically universally used in the Panhandle, so go-devils are a part of every farm equipment—and, notwithstanding the farm flapper, they do not have plows on them, but use discs and sometimes long knives; neither do they have handles, but a seat upon which the driver rides, and one horse could not pull one, but it requires two horses, and it is not uncommon to see four horses hitched to one. In order to complete State Press' education along western farming lines, we might say that 2-row go-devils are used that follow the lister furrow, and four to six horses are used on these machines. 2-row go-devils use cutter discs or plows. We have seen such machines used, which cultivate every other row, with a sled go-devil hitched behind, plowing the middle row. We apologize to our regular readers for space taken up in describing a common implement, but State Press is supposed to know something about everything, and no one's education is complete that does not contain knowledge of Western farming.

1000 ISLAND DRESSING

Thousand Island dressing is a mayonnaise dressing in which chopped highly flavored materials are added. There is no rule about what these ingredients should be. Some of those used—and there may be half a dozen—are hard cheese, hard-cooked eggs, pickle, olives, radishes, celery, green peppers, pimentos, capers and onion. It is easy to make use of small amounts of such materials as you have on hand, rather than to purchase special things to make this dressing.

LEMON PIE FILLING

Here's a reliable recipe for lemon pie filling: Mix 3 tablespoons of cornstarch with 1 cup of cold water and 1-8 teaspoon salt; place over the fire and stir constantly until thickened and the cornstarch thoroughly cooked—about 10 minutes. Add 3/4 cup of sugar, 4 tablespoons lemon juice, grated rind of half a lemon, 1 tablespoon butter, and 3 egg yolks, well beaten. Cook for one or two minutes over steam. Pour into a cooked pastry shell and cover with a meringue made by thoroughly beating the egg whites and adding the sugar and a little salt. Bake at a low temperature (250 F) for 20 minutes, then raise the temperature until the meringue is light brown.

SENIOR CLASS WILL

By Naomi Curry
Ladies and gentlemen, superintendents, teachers and friends:
Upon behalf of my client, the Senior Class of the McLean high school of the city of McLean, the state of Texas, I have called you together upon this serious and solemn occasion to listen to her last will and testament, and to receive from her dying hand the few gifts she has to bestow in her last moments. Calling so rapidly loose from life, and finding so many things of such gigantic importance to be attended to before the end should come to her, realizing at the same time that she had no longer any time left to spend in admiration of her own virtues, she had, collectively and individually, determined to distribute with her own hands to those whose needs she felt most keenly. As a result of this announcement a wild scene took place amidst most frantic pleading and scrambling among her friends for this or that so long coveted gift; but she has tried to distribute wisely unto those who will make the best use of such gifts as she has in her power to bestow, and she trusts that she has faithfully done her duty. These are her decisions, as at last definitely arrived at through very generous consideration. Coming to the final disposition of her brain and the unusual disfigurement in its grey matter, she hereby gives into your possession, praying that you will accept them as a sacred trust from one who has gone before.

Listen, then, while I read the document as drawn up and sworn to by me, the class of 1927, in testimony and individual parts, upon which to pass out of this sphere of education, in full possession of a trained mind and well trained memory, and almost superhuman powers among, do make and publish this, our last will and testament, hereby revoking and making void all other former wills and promises, one to the other, as the ideal wish of the hour.

And first we do direct our funeral services shall be conducted by our well-wishers and friends, to our superintendent, Prof. George Summers, our sincere affection, our deepest reverence, our heartiest gratitude, and the whole unmitigated praise of our eternal memory in an attempt at partial payments for all that he has done for us during our long years at McLean. We now make over to him a heavy mortgage on our future in the Great Unknown Beyond.

In our each attempt, each victory, each success and honor that we may achieve in the arena of the world—and to accept for himself, as interest on our deathless debt, every iota of the honor, knowing that it is all due to his faithful instructions. Also, we give and bequeath to our beloved faculty all the amazing and startling information and knowledge that we have furnished them from time to time for various examination papers. We know that much which we must have been entirely new to them, as well as to all the teachers and all the students everywhere, and would throw a line of familiar kind and a new light of thought throughout the whole world of science and learning, even outside the walls and halls of the McLean high school. If the faculty see fit, they are hereby authorized to give such information to the world as they may feel the world is ready to receive it. We trust that they will also feel at perfect liberty to make use of all such bits of wisdom and enlightenment for the education of the class to come after us. This, of course, is left entirely to their personal discretion.

We likewise give and bequeath to the Junior Class, as a student body, the entire Senior Class' knowledge of English and Physics. We trust that the class may be able to survive it.

The following may seem trifling requests, but we hope they may be accepted, not as worthless things hastily thrown away, because we can no longer use them, but as valuable assets to those who receive them, and as a continual reminder of the generosity of the heart displayed in our free and full bestowal.

1. To our class-room teacher, Miss Dauer, the profound admiration and over-enduring friendship of the class of 1927, in individual as well as collective manifestation.
2. To Miss Williams, the balance in our class treasury to be used in buying a pair of rubber shoes for detective work. We feel sure that she will need these in dealing with the classes that are to be our successors.
3. To Marie Browning, Vice School Bank's box.
4. To Clara Anderson, Andre

Wilson's red hair.
5. To Zella Mae Lankford, Naomi Curry's gift of gab, a bottle of ink. (Miss Payne).
6. To the 1928 commercial class, a bottle of ink. (Miss Payne).
7. To Chester Savage, Rachel Stratton's chewing gum.
8. To Doris Corum, a lock of Naomi Hunt's curly hair.
9. To Roscoe Morgan, Lloyd Hunt's executive ability, but not his beauty. He feels the need of a hat and would not be coaxed into leaving it behind, even with Roscoe, who needs it so badly.
10. To Laeuna Waters, this ruler. Although he is very tall, Jack Anderson is giving him one foot more—the foot of the senior class.
11. To Frank Corum, Rachel Stratton's ability in penmanship.
12. To Margaret Johnston, the example of all the members of this class. We have proved ourselves unable to keep quiet on a few occasions. Sheer numbers ought to convince and convert.
13. To Laeuna Holloway, Floy Rowe's ancestors, as she feels that she can face the world behind her own coat of paint. Perhaps Laeuna can, too.
14. To Joellene Vannoy, Floye Landers' pleasure in receiving letters from a far off gentleman friend.
15. To S. A. Cousins, Bee Cash's short hand book.
16. Lloyd Hunt wills D. V. Biggers some pads of paper to write to Dorothy with.
17. Jack Addillen wills Norvin Ashby a pocket knife to break up by sticking it in the floor.
18. Our seats in the class room and chapel may be taken by whoever is able to grab them first. Our SENIOR DIGNITY. May they uphold it forever with all seriousness and gravity, endeavoring to realize its vast importance, in spite of their natural light-mindedness and irreverent party. Last comes the one man owing for us to part with. To our successors we must leave our pieces in the heart and thoughts of our teachers. They will love them even as they have loved us, and as unworthy as we feel they are. We trust that the class of 1927 will appreciate all of this as deeply as we have done, and that it may be their most precious possession, as it has been ours, and see one we are most unable to hand over to them. All the rest and residue of our property whatsoever and whosoever of what nature, kind and quality soever it may be, and not herein disposed of after paying our debts and funeral expenses. And we do hereby constitute and appoint the said principal sole executor of this our last will and testament.

In witness whereof, we, the class of 1927, the testators, have to this our will, written on one sheet of parchment, set our hands and seal this twenty-seventh day of May, 1927, being and nine hundred and twenty-seven.

CANTIGNY STILL WEARS SCARS OF YANKS' FIRST BATTLE

The wreck that was Cantigny June 28, 1918, when American courage under fire was first demonstrated in the World War is pictured above. Inset are Ernest Dubos (left) and Armand Cordier, soldiers who returned from the wars to rebuild their shattered home village.

A ROOSTER crows. Ducks, waddling in the mud at the edge of the village pool, quackingly protest against the invasion of a herd of cattle. The fields in the gently-sloping valley are green. Three workmen are singing as they put the finishing touches on the new church. Ernest Dubos and Armand Cordier scuff along the street to their toll.

It is the ninth anniversary of the Battle of Cantigny, June 28, the first battle in which American troops participated in France.

To go back over the nine years—

Cantigny, in 1918, was a test. The village was held by the Germans as the apex of their line in the Montdidier-Noyon salient. The First Division, coming up from Chaumont-en-Vexin, relieved the French. The French said the sector was "quiet" but that it could be made into something respectable.

There was a month of preparation. Then at 6:45 a. m., after an hour's artillery barrage that shredded the town, the troops went over and in exactly 88 minutes the objective of 2186 yards was gained.

American Resistance
Then it became a problem of holding on. The Germans didn't propose to lose Cantigny. So three "strong points" were located, two in the woods near the blasted village and one in the cemetery to the north. The first German counter-attack came two hours later.

The Americans, noting that the attacking troops were not following their barrage closely, allowed it to roll over. Not until a scant hundred yards separated the opposing forces did the Americans fire.

Then they mowed down 500 Germans with machine gun fire and sent the survivors of the attack scurrying for protection in Laval Woods.

Not once, but six times, did the Germans counter-attack that day. Every attack met the same fate.

Soldiers Home

Today the town has been rebuilt, after a fashion. Ernest Dubos and Armand Cordier were the first citizens to return in the summer of 1918. They had left when the Germans entered in March. Among their tasks was one of removing traces of the "strong point" in the cemetery where the Germans were stopped. But one single monument was standing.

They patched it up with concrete and it may be seen today, in striking contrast to the new marbles that have been erected. Then Camille Degouty returned and Madame Wattetlet, Henri Delporte, who had been held a prisoner in Silesia for four years, came back, along with a few others.

Houses were erected, barracks were used as homes, fields were tilled and now Cantigny is at least an heroic attempt to return to a pre-war basis. German and American helmets may be picked up in the heart of town, shell casings are numerous, "duds" are still found in the meadows.

The fountain erected by the National Geographic Society as a memorial near the street that passes the new church contains no water. It was constructed without either intake or outlet. The windmill in the barnyard nearby creaks in the wind.

Beyond, in the forest of Cantigny, where the Americans had their jump-off lines, the trees are black wrecks, though young bushes are growing.

There's a monument to the right of the road on the hill that was so difficult to hold.

Henri Delporte, the four-year prisoner, gets his French and German badly mixed in his conversations.

Madame Wattetlet, who runs the lone cafe in the village, has locked up the electric piano near the bar. The taxes for playing it are too high and the volume of business doesn't warrant a profit.

When the American Legionnaires go back to Cantigny they will find it has a new water pool, surrounded by a fence, down the slope from the church. Around the graveyard is a fence made of German barbed wire.

Many Americans visit Cantigny, as many members of the American Legion plan to do when the convention is held in France in September. Nearly everyone has a camera. These amateurs have expressed a decided interest in snapshots of Ernest Dubos and Armand Cordier.

GETTING EVEN

Some people think they are getting even with the editor when they come in and "stop their paper." They should be reminded of the story of Horace Greeley and his irate subscriber who thought that he was dealing a death blow to the great man's paper when he stopped his subscription. He waited to see the effect, but could not find any. Then he went to Greeley and told him of the crushing blow he had inflicted.

"Oh," said Greeley, "now go home and stick your finger in a pail of water; then draw it out and see if you can find the hole."

The editor of The Journal regrets to lose a subscriber for any reason. But when some fellow stops his paper to "get even" with us, we suggest that he follow Horace Greeley's advice.—Sayre (Okla.) Journal.

MERCHANT PRINCES

We know business men who are many "princes" whom we admire for their many good qualities. We know whom we like to talk about things that are of mutual interest—who are forward-looking city-builders—men, in short, whom we are glad to know. And yet, they pay so much from out-of-pocket, that it gives us the cramps to think about it. If they saved a whole lot of money, it might be different. But when they do not, it is unkind for us to understand. It has always been particularly hard for us to "savvy" why the largest users of printed supplies almost invariably give the home printer the fill-in and short orders. Give him a spot at the large orders, and allow him as much time for delivery as the "foreign devil" takes (no matter what he promises), and the home printer will usually be right on his price—chairless Post.

BROWN GRAVY

The easiest way to make a brown gravy to serve hot with a roast is to stir the flour into the fat drippings and brown by heating carefully over a hot flame. Use about as much flour as you have fat. You will get a brown color if the meat drippings are almost entirely fat—that is, if no water has been added in roasting the meat. After the mixture becomes brown, water or milk is added to complete the gravy. Another way to make a rich brown gravy is to brown the flour before it is added to the gravy, in a smooth, polished skillet. Some housewives keep flour browned in this way on hand for gravies. Flour loses its thickening power when browned, so some additional white flour must be used in making a thick gravy.

Mrs. S. C. Powell and daughter, Miss Rhoda, came in last week from Missouri for a visit with their son and brother, M. T. Wilkerson, and family.

SENIOR CLASS PROPHECY

By Beatrice Cash
 This is the time when through the sweet June days
 the graduates pass to seek their separate ways;
 this is the time when their desires must be strong the gods must pause to hear their plea;
 this is the time when ring, from far and near,
 these eager questions on Minerva's ear.
 And do I answer? Can I answer?
 Nay!
 I know their possibilities, but who may,
 even with that, predict how they may use the gifts of life so many youths abuse?
 Not I, indeed! Nor would I if I might,
 encourage overmuch their inborn right.
 As certainly I would not voice one thought that might discourage more than goddess ought!
 And so I listen—patiently and kind—
 and try some word of counsel wise to find,
 that may guide fiery youth in pathways right—or this alone, I linger here tonight!
 Their longings wait in millions to mine ear;
 were less than goddess who paused not to hear,
 and I've been drawn by strong thoughts to this scene to say some words for Class 1927!
 And waiting here many a petition;
 I'll open them and read, with your permission!

dear! O dear! With which shall
 I begin?
 As Troy howe would know if she may win success in literature! Dear me!
 It looks as though the ink on this would fill big books!
 In literature—her composition's fair,
 her penmanship—but that's not here or there,
 or authors never write a decent scrawl;
 she may succeed—and then again,
 she may fail;
 so scarce to say? 'Tis all in her own mind that she success or failure has to find!
 Mother! Lloyd Hunt would like to know
 he can be a doctor! Surely so!
 he can be what he wants to be,
 of course;
 I'm sure his Latin can't be any worse
 than those who succeed each year,
 and so he probably will do better than we know!
 What? Audra Wilson would really like to sing?
 Now, who would ever dream of such a thing?
 Well, if she has a voice—and it must be—
 I'm sure the girl can sing for all of me!
 Needs much patience, in the practice, years,
 that's forgotten as success appears.
 What's this? Rachel Stratton would like to be—a nurse!
 Well, now, that's good! I'm sure she might do worse.
 There's always need of loving heart and hand
 to care for those who constant care demand;
 and she seems gifted with a tender heart—
 I believe she's fitted for the part.

What? Jack McMillen would be a millionaire!
 He knows not that great wealth is but a stare!
 He lay up meeting treasures upon the earth
 by cost him all his heart and soul are worth!
 He would store with truer wealth
 his mind,
 his satisfaction he would surely
 find.
 Hithes, I would say to him, "Beware!
 And to your higher self devote your care!"

Miss Curry writes a dainty note;
 she wants to go, she says, where women vote
 and be elected governor of the state;
 she feels she was born for just such fate.
 Well, well! She's bound to win
 the prize, I guess;
 I'm sure I wish her every known success!

Miss Landers would be an actress

TOBEY AND TYKE

By Redner

The idol of the public ever where;
 She says she's won such honors
 here at school,
 She feels ambitious on the stage
 to rule.
 I would not counsel her to step too far;
 'Tis very fine to be a tragic star,
 But health and strength are taxed too much, they say.
 'Tis hard for a, but strongest ones
 to pay
 The price for every victory that they find;
 I hope—I really hope—she'll change
 her mind!

Now, what is this? Ah, Naomi
 Hunt confides
 She's anxious to get married, and decides
 To answer "Yes!" to the first one who dares
 To proffer her the honored name he bears.

Well, well! I'm sure she's wise, and surely can
 With one sweet smile bewitch the bravest man;
 And surely she has chosen the better part—
 To reign at home—the queen of one man's heart!

Vida Colebank would like to travel
 'round the world
 And bring back every flag she finds unfurled!
 She wants to be an explorer and
 be brave

In search of tokens worth one's while to save—Somebody's brother loves those souvenirs!
 I hope she gets her chance ere many years.

'Tis late, and I must hurry on my way,
 For I have many pleas to hear today.
 I cannot linger longer with the class
 Which now from McLean high school
 is to pass;
 I'm sure they're very brave and
 wise and true,
 And they'll be prospered well in all they do.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Wilson left

THE GOOD CITIZEN

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for June 19: The Character of a Good Citizen.—Text, 1 Peter 2:11-17; 4:1-5.

Dear loved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul;

Having your conversation honest among the Gentiles: that whereas they speak against you as evil doers, they may by your good works, which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation.

Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme;

Or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evil doers, and for the praise of them that do well.

For so is the will of God, that with well doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men:

As free, and not using your liberty for a cloak of maliciousness, but as the servants of God.

Honour all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honour the king.

Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind: for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin.

That he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God.

For the time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings, and abominable idolatries;

Wherein they think it strange that ye run not with them to the same excess of riot, speaking evil of you.

Who shall give account to him that is ready to judge the quick and the dead.

SUBMIT yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake.

Peter here outlines the duties of Christians—citizens of two kingdoms. By the very fact of his Christianity man is a subject in God's kingdom. Earthly government, good order, demand his allegiance as well.

The New Testament expressly urges that man obey the laws of the commonwealth of which he is a part unless those measures conflict with divine regulations. But such a conflict is rare. How many laws in modern America would a man find himself compelled to disobey because of his allegiance to Christianity?

Strong for Perfection

It is the function of government to establish just relations between men in society. It is every good citizen's duty to strengthen the forces of government. Reasonable and fair laws must be obeyed that earthly government be made as nearly like the order of the Kingdom of Heaven as possible.

A Christian's insight and conscience must render him all the more careful to discharge his obligations to the community in such a way to improve society. It is only as a good citizen sees his fellow men with the vision of brotherhood that he becomes in the highest sense a good citizen. Love is the fulfilling of the civil as well as the moral law.

Law and government are not merely a convenience or a protection for one's own property and personal rights. If such were the case society very soon would lapse into a condition of injustice. Law and government must be inflexible where there is not as much more emphasis upon the duties as upon rights.

The famous Justice Brandeis wrote:

"The subject who is truly loyal to the Chief Magistrate will neither advise nor submit to arbitrary measures."

This fact is recognized in the foundation of our own government. The principles of democracy under which we live were the result of a revolutionary era which could not have been achieved had the men behind it understood the New Testament as teaching obedience to unjust laws.

The purpose of laws in a democracy is to guard the welfare of all the people against privileges of a few. In the spirit of love and brotherhood the true Christian will carry out that great purpose of his citizenship.
