Building for the Ages, Merchants' Community Message

Community Building Message

Merchants' Message on Community Building

(Editorial)

The merchants' message this week in a full page advertisement is on permanent community building and should be of interest to everyone in the McLean trade territory.

The merchants who are sponsoring this educational campaign do not hope to derive any direct benefit from the advertisements, but they are spending money in an effort to make this community a better place in which to live.

Communities built upon a foundation of good will toward all, a sincere effort toward honest dealing with our fellow men, are the communities that will endure long after others founded upon a less liberal application of the golden rule have passed away.

It is the earnest wish of every true member of this community that it shall grow and prosper. Each one is anxious and willing to do his share toward promoting this growth. Each may do his share by doing each day his daily task in the best way he knows how.

Confidence in home institutions, in our neighbors, and a pride in our local developments of both private and public nature will make for the progress and growth of this home community of ours.

FORMER McLEAN GIRL MARRIES AT STAMFORD

The following item is clipped from the Stamford paper:

Miss Lula Peters and Mr. William H. Braymer were quietly married at one o'clock Saturday afternoon at the Methodist parsonage with Rev. R. A. Stewart reading the impressive ring ceremony. Softly shaded lights and vases of cut flowers made an attractive setting for the wedding, which was witnessed by relatives and a very few close friends.

The bride was attired in a lovely ensemble suit of navy blue georgette, with a dainty pink blouse and hat. She wore a corsage of pink rose buds.

Mrs. Braymer is the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Peters of East Wesley Ave., and though having lived in Stamford only a short while, was won for herself a host of friends. The groom's home is in Bradford, Pa., but his friends here are numbered by his acquaintances.

Immediately after the ceremony the young couple left in their new car, a gift from the bride's parents, for a brief bridal trip. They will make their home in Stamford for the present.

Methodist Revival in Progress

Large Crowds Attend Methodist Revival

The revival at the First Methodist church that began Monday night is growing in interest at each service, with increasing attendance.

Rev. E. Gaston Foote, evangelist, is delivering forceful messages that leave no doubt of his sincerity of purpose, and an enjoyable feature of the services are solos by Prof. Robert Watkins.

Rev. E. Gaston Foote, Evangelist Methodist Revival

Services are held at 10 a. m. and 8 p. m. each day, with a 30 minute song service directed by Prof. Watkins preceding the evening services.

Organizations are being perfected whereby all departments of the church will have a part, regardless of age, and everyone is invited to attend the services, which will continue through next week. Prof. Watkins says that the singers of the town are especially invited, as are those who will join the orchestra.

Tonight (Thursday) Rev. Foote will speak on "The Crossroads." Friday night will be high school night, and a section will be reserved in the center of the church for pupils and teachers to sit in a body. Saturday night the subject will be "Samson the Flirt." Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, "The Tragedy of the Insufficient." Sunday evening, "Chickens Will Come Home to Roost." Monday night will be Odd Fellows and Rebekahs night, and members of these orders will meet at the hall and attend church in a body, special seats being reserved for them. Tuesday night the theme will be "Jonah and the Whale." Wednesday night, "Mr. Excuse Me, Please."

WALTON CHILD DIES AT ALANREED

Spring Pageant Pleases

School Program Friday Pleases Large Audience

A pageant of spring presented by the pupils of the grade school under the direction of Mrs. Jim Back was a very successful affair Friday evening.

The different characters in the scenes of The Passing of Winter, The Flowers Awaken, and the Crowning of the Queen were dressed to represent their parts and handled their lines and movements well.

This program was one of the most colorful yet shown in McLean, the costumes representing much time and thought to bring out each character portrayed in a very pleasing manner. The lighting effects on the stage showed careful planning, and added much to the effectiveness of the tableaux.

Music was furnished by the high school band under the direction of Prof. R. C. Davidson.

COURT HOUSE WILL BE SOLD HIGH BIDDER

The commissioners court has voted to sell the old court house building at Lefors at public auction to the highest bidder May 14th.

The building half the present size was erected in 1902, with Henry Weekesstr of Miami as contractor, and six years later doubled in size to take care of the county records. W. B. Baker, 31st district judge, held the first court in 1902, at which time Siler Foulkner was county clerk.

The ground upon which the building stands will revert back to J. M. Shaw, who donated the plot and $1000 in 1902.

Elections were held in 1908, 1919, 1925, and again this year before a majority was obtained to move the county site to Pampa.

A site has been bought for a new court house at Pampa for $31,000,000, according to Commissioner M. M. Newman, who states that the information given last week as to the price paid was incorrect.

An architect to furnish plans for a new court house will probably be employed by the commissioners this week.

FEW VOTES CAST IN SCHOOL ELECTION

Only 99 citizens took advantage of the chance to express their choice for school trustees in Saturday's election, including 12 mutilated ballots, which left 87 voters to elect all the old trustees on the ballot, adding Claud McGowen as the new man.

The vote for the winning trustees stood: C. C. Bogan 83, J. A. Ashby 54, J. S. Howard 52, J. W. Burrows 50, Claud McGowen 49, Sam Hodges 49, W. S. White 46. Eight other names on the ballot received votes ranging from 21 to 43 each.

MOTION PICTURES TO BE MADE NEAR ALANREED

T. W. Ball of Alanreed has formed a film producing company and will make motion pictures on the McMurtry ranch near Alanreed.

Mr. Ball is a son of S. L. Ball of Alanreed and says he has a strong company playing for him.

FOOTRACE SIDELIGHTS

Mrs. Jim Back

To read in the daily papers of the Pyle derby and that Pat de Marr was the first into Amarillo, and that Arthur Soumen, the Detroit Finn, was leading the entire race, did not mean much. But when they plodded into McLean last Saturday, braving both mud and snow, these marathon runners ceased to be an illusion and became a reality. Despite the inclement weather, the entire town, all excited, was out. But not until we had seen the racers run, walk, or limp in by ones, twos and threes did we realize what a strenuous task these men have undertaken to win the "pot of gold at the foot of the rainbow."

To some, this coast to coast ramp seems foolish, an exertion of unnecessary energy, accompanied by dangers too awful to be endured. That may be true, yet his contest will always be counted in all important event in the history of sports. Almost every nationality under the sun is represented, except the Chinaman, whose play turns to work when he gets up a sweat.

The runners declared they had been treated royally in Texas. One said, "Why, since Texas is so large, do we not get to see more of it?" When his geographical memory had been refreshed, he realized that Highway 66 goes through only the Panhandle of our state.

Mike Joyce, who is ninth in the race, is an Irishman, born on the hills of the old country. Mike says the story of St. Patrick must really be true, as he never saw a snake in all of Ireland. His wife and five children are waiting in Cleveland, Ohio, to give encouragement for the remainder of the trip. His children say they are not going to play the Victrola until daddy comes home, and if he brings the $25,000 back they'll put on the record "It Ain't Goin' to Rain no More."

One runner said, "Twas in crossing the desert that we suffered! Then we had long runs and wouldn't get into control until after night. Here we would feel around in the dark for coffee, sugared with desert sand, and cold sandwiches peppered with flying pebbles sifted out by the March wind. No words can describe what we suffered then with our parched lips and swollen feet! But now that we are in Texas, the weather has been cooler, our runs shorter, and we are faring fine."

Andrew Payne of Claremore, Okla., who is said to have won one thousand dollars for being the first into the state of Oklahoma, and who is slated to receive five thousand more if he leads into the capital city, and an additional five thousand if he beats into Tulsa, was only proving that paternal encouragement helps. Payne's father was along with him, and 'twas a pleasure to see his eyes sparkle as he said, "My boy is second in the race." Since leaving McLean, Andrew has taken one step higher and is now leading the entire squad in elapsed time. Should this Oklahoma boy be the first into New York, his home town will have given to the world two present-day favorites. (Will Rogers, America's famous cowboy humorist, also hails from Claremore).

Along with the racers was "Red" Granger, our country's greatest football star. "Red" is said to have acquired his wonderful physique carrying ice while he made a living for his mother and younger brothers. When interviewed, the athlete said, "I like your town, but I don't like your roads, but they'll be better when we pave Highway 66." He displayed a miniature rolling pin and smilingly said that he had just received it as a souvenir from the K. B. Klub. (I think Mrs. Filer was the donor). Being a single man, "Red" said he had no idea how it felt to have such a weapon used on him.

School Exhibit Enjoyed

Large Crowds View Interesting Exhibit

The school exhibit shown at the Wilkerson building last Saturday was enjoyed by moving crowds of people all day.

The commercial, art, Latin, English, domestic science and vocational agriculture classes all had interesting work on display and many expressions of approbation were heard in regard to the high quality of the work shown.

Prof. Bob Watkins, Singer Methodist Revival

A great deal of the best work in many departments could not be shown, as it is to be sent to the State Department of Education to apply on credits asked for this term.

The work of the art department occupied almost one whole wall of the building, showing work in all grades. Special counters were covered with the work in English, commerce and Latin that were interesting to visitors.

In the domestic science department, garments and other work was on display showing careful training from the instructor.

Vocational agriculture and shop work was represented by tables, lamp stands, book ends, concrete work, etc. This was a most interesting part of the display, and Prof. Tempke was on hand most of the day to assist the visitors in understanding the various displays.

This exhibit was what would have been displayed at the county meet, had one been held with McLean participating.

COLD WEATHER THIS WEEK

Beginning with a snow Saturday, the past week has seen colder weather, but local prognosticators say that we may expect real spring weather soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Campbell went to Texola, Okla., Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Morse visited in Amarillo Friday.

Race Makes Night Stop in McLean

Hikers Come Through Snow and Rain Saturday

The first of the footracers to reach McLean Saturday crossed the line a little after one o'clock after a tough hike from Groom in the snowstorm.

After the first runner, contestants came in at intervals all afternoon, some trailing through Sunday.

The runners mixed with the local citizens and seemed to be glad to talk of their experiences, many human interest stories being gained from their recitals. One of the contestants is a millionaire's son and has the promise of the same amount as the capital prize if he holds out to the end, regardless of his place as winner. His father accompanies the race in a car, and the boy lacks for nothing to help him keep in the race. The Oklahoma entrant won a big prize by being the first to cross the state line Sunday.

Two long lines of cars lined the highway from McLean to Texola, the next stop, Sunday, and when the winner reached Texola Sunday afternoon there were runners all along the route from McLean to Texola.

The only portable radio broadcasting station arrived in McLean Friday and sent out programs that were appreciated by fans within a 300 mile radius.

K. B. KLUB

Reported.

The K. B. Klub and nine invited guests enjoyed one of the loveliest Easter events on last Thursday afternoon at the hospitable home of Mrs. H. S. Williams in the Floral addition.

The receiving rooms were ablaze with spring flowers and greenery, while a canary's sweet warble reached throughout the afternoon. Clever Easter suggestions featured the tallies, plate favors and refreshments.

The president was absent, and the meeting was called to order by Mrs. E. E. Filer, vice president. After a short business session, the meeting adjourned.

Four tables of bridge were in progress until a late hour. Believe it or not, high score was won by Mrs. E. E. Filer, second high was checked over to Mrs. Arthur Talley, and Mrs. J. E. Cubine, by not concentrating, was consiled with low score. Guest high was awarded to Miss Sallie Campbell.

Mrs. Witt Springer assisted in serving a delicious plate lunch to the following: Mesdames J. E. Cubine, Arthur Talley, Ray Davis, E. E. Filer, O. S. Shaw, J. E. Peters. Invited guests were: Mesdames S. B. Morse, John C. Haynes, C. P. Hamilton, L. G. McMillen, C. A. Gattlin, Roy Campbell, Jot Montgomery, Everett Watkins, and Miss Sallie Campbell.

Mrs. Arthur Talley will entertain with a bridge luncheon at 1:30 p. m. this (Thursday) afternoon.

PANHANDLE CROP REPORT

The Rock Island crop report for this month shows winter wheat in excellent condition in the Panhandle with prospect of one of the largest yields ever produced. Indications are that less cotton will be planted and increased acreage of grain sorghums.

The Bat

A Novel from the Play

By Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood

The Bat copyright, 1928, by Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood. WNU Service.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Defying all efforts to capture him, after a long series of murders and robberies, a super-crook known to the police only as "The Bat" has brought about a veritable reign of terror. At his wit's end, and at the man's own request, the chief of police assigns his best operative, Anderson, to get on the trail of the Bat.

CHAPTER II—With her niece, Dale Ogden, Miss Cornelia Van Gorder is living in the country home of the late Courtleigh Fleming, who until his recent death had been president of the Union bank, wrecked because of the theft of a large sum in currency. The cook and housemaid deserted the Van Gorder household, leaving only the Japanese butler, Billy. Miss Van Gorder receives a note warning her to vacate the place at once on pain of death. She feels the warning is from the dreaded Bat, but determines to ignore it. Dale returns from the city, where she had been to hire a gardener.

CHAPTER III—Miss Cornelia tells Lizzie Allen, her faithful Irish maid, who is decidedly nervous, that a detective is coming that night. The gardener arrives, giving his name as Brooks. Miss Van Gorder leads him into a trap and he admits he is not a gardener but needs work. She allows him to stay. Dale comes from the country club with a friend, Doctor Wells. Miss Cornelia tells them of the threatening note. They are interrupted by the smashing of a window in the house.

CHAPTER IV—They find a stone has been thrown through a glass door, frightening another maid, warning them to leave. Doctor Wells urges Miss Van Gorder to obey, but she firmly refuses. The detective, Anderson, arrives in the middle of the night and announces he will stay on watch that night.

CHAPTER V—Miss Van Gorder tells Anderson she has an idea. Courtleigh Fleming rubbed his own bank and concealed the money in the house, but the detective believes the bank's cashier, Bailey, who is missing, is the guilty one. She suggests that they search for the cashier, and Dale's fiancé tells her he knows there is a hidden room in the house and believes Courtleigh Fleming, before his death in Colorado, concealed the bank's money there. Dale telephones Richard Fleming, Courtleigh's nephew, asking him to come over.

CHAPTER VI—Dale tells Richard Fleming of her knowledge of the hidden room. He gets rid of her while he seeks and finds blueprints of the house. Dale, returning, finds he has the secret in a scrap of blueprint, but he refuses to give it to her, declaring he means to have the money if it is there. Knowing the finding of the money means everything to Bailey, Dale seizes part of the scrap of paper and during the struggle Fleming is shot and killed. Anderson and the rest find her beside the body, with a revolver. Doctor Wells arrives.

CHAPTER VII—Reggie Berrisford, friend of Fleming, appears. Doctor Wells gets the scrap of blueprint from Fleming's body, but Anderson takes it from him. Dale hides her piece in a bread roll, which the butler removes, and all but Dale and Wells go to investigate. Dale tells Wells of the piece of paper in the roll. He goes to get it.

CHAPTER VIII

The Blackened Bag

As is chance, she did not turn. The hall door opened—the head behind the settee sank down again. Jack Bailey entered, carrying a couple of logs of firewood.

Dale moved toward him as soon as he had shut the door.

"Oh, things have gone awfully wrong, haven't they?" she said, with a little break in her voice.

He put his finger to his lips.

"Be careful!" he whispered. He glanced about the room, cautiously.

"I don't trust even the furniture in this house tonight!" he said. He took Dale hurriedly in his arms and kissed her once, swiftly, on the lips. Then they parted—his voice changed to the formal voice of a servant.

"Miss Van Gorder wishes the fire kept burning," he announced, with a whispered "Play up!" to Dale.

Dale caught his meaning at once.

"Put some logs on the fire, please," she said loudly, for the benefit of any listening ears, then in an undertone to Bailey, "Jack—I'm nearly distracted!"

Bailey threw his wood on the fire, which received it with appreciative crackles and sputterings. Then again for a moment, he clasped his sweet heart closely to him.

"Dale, pull yourself together!" he whispered warningly. "We've got a fight ahead of us!"

He released her and turned back toward the fire.

"These old-fashioned fireplaces eat up a lot of wood," he said in casual tones, pretending to arrange the logs with the poker so the fire would draw more cleanly.

But Dale felt that she must settle one point between them before they took up their game of pretense again.

"You know I sent for Richard Fleming, don't you?" she said, her eyes fixed beseechingly on her lover. The rest of the world might interpret her action as it pleased—she couldn't hear to have Jack misunderstand.

But there was no danger of that. His fall in her was too complete.

before them. "But who in God's name killed him?" he muttered, kneeling before the fire.

"You don't think it was—Billy?" Dale saw Billy's face before her, for a moment, calm, impassive. But he was an Oriental—an alien—his face might be just as calm, just as impassive while his hands were still red with blood. She shuddered at the thought.

"You Don't Think It Was—Billy?"

Bailey considered the matter.

"More likely the man Lizzie saw going upstairs," he said finally. "But I've been all over the upper floors."

"Nothing," Bailey's voice had an accent of doubt finally. "Dale, do you think that—?" he began.

Some instinct warned the girl that they were not to continue their conversation uninterupted. "Be careful!" she breathed, as footsteps sounded in the hall. Bailey nodded and turned back to his pretense of mending the fire. Dale moved away from him slowly.

The door opened and Miss Cornelia entered, her black knitting bag in her hand, on her face a demure little smile of triumph. She closed the door carefully behind her and began to speak at once.

"Well, Mr. Alopecid—Urticaria—Ru beola—otherwise Bailey!" she said, in tones of the greatest satisfaction, addressing herself to Bailey's rigid back. Bailey jumped to his feet mechanically at her mention of his name.

He and Dale exchanged one swift and hopeless glance of utter defeat.

"I wish," proceeded Miss Cornelia—obviously enjoying the situation to the full, "I wish you young people would remember that even if hair and teeth have fallen out at sixty—the mind still functions."

She pulled out a cabinet photograph from the depths of her knitting bag and during the struggle Fleming is shot and killed. Anderson and the rest find her beside the body, with a revolver. Doctor Wells arrives.

Dale took the photograph but continued to stare at her aunt with incredulous eyes.

"Then—you knew?" she stammered.

Miss Cornelia, the effective little tabernacle she had planned now accomplished to her most humorous satisfaction, relapsed into a chair.

"My dear child," said the indomitable lady, with a sharp glance at Dale's bewildered face, "I have employed many gardeners in my time—and never before had one who mangled his finger-nails, wore silk socks and regarded baldness as a plant instead of a calamity."

An unwilling smile began to break on the faces of both Dale and her lover. The former crossed to the fireplace and threw the damning photograph of Bailey on the flames. She watched it shrivel, curl up—be reduced to ash. She stirred the ashes with a poker till they were well scattered.

Bailey, recovering from the shock of finding that Miss Cornelia's sharp eyes had pierced his disguise without his even suspecting it, now threw himself on her mercy.

"Then you know why I'm here?" he stammered.

"I still have a certain amount of imagination! I may think you are a fool for taking the risk, but I can see what that idiot of a detective might not—that if you had looted the Union bank you wouldn't be trying to discover if the money is in this house. You would at least presumably know where it is."

The knowledge that he had an ally in this brick and indomitable spinster lady cheered him greatly. But she did not wait for any comment from him. She turned abruptly to Dale.

"Now I want to ask you something," she said, more gravely. "Was there a blue-print, and did you get it from Richard Fleming?"

It was Dale's turn now to bow her head.

"Yes," she confessed.

Bailey felt a thrill of horror run through him. She hadn't told him this!

"Dale!" he said, uncomprehendingly, "don't you see where this places you? If you had it, why didn't you give it to Anderson when he asked for it?"

Dale's refusal.

"Couldn't she?" queried Miss Cornelia, pityingly. "The detective thinks she could—save you!"

Now the full light of revelation broke upon Bailey. He took a step back.

Miss Cornelia would have liked to comment tartly upon the singular lack of intelligence displayed by even the nicest young men in trying circumstances. But there was no time. They might be interrupted at any moment—and before they were, there were things she must find out.

"Where is that paper, now?" she asked Dale sharply.

"Why—the doctor is getting it for me." Dale seemed puzzled by the intensity of her aunt's manner.

"What?" almost shouted Miss Cornelia. Dale explained.

"It was on the tray Billy took out," she said, still wondering why so simple an answer should disturb Miss Cornelia so greatly.

"Then I'm afraid everything's over," Miss Cornelia said despairingly, and made her first gesture of defeat. She turned away. Dale followed her, still unable to fathom her course of reasoning.

"I didn't know what else to do," she said rather plaintively, wondering if again, as with Fleming, she had misplaced her confidence at a moment critical for them all.

But Miss Cornelia seemed to have no great patience with her defection.

"One of two things will happen now," she said, with acrid logic. "Either the doctor's an honest man—in which case, as coroner, he will hand that paper to the detective—" Dale gasped. "Or he is not an honest man," went on Miss Cornelia, "and he will keep it for himself. I don't think he's an honest man."

The frank expression of her distrust seemed to calm her a little. She resumed her interrogation of Dale more gently.

"Now, let's be clear about this. Had Richard Fleming ascertained that there was a concealed room in this house?"

"He was starting up to it!" said Dale, in the voice of a ghost, remembering.

"Just what did you tell him?"

"That I believed there was a hidden room in the house—and that the money from the Union bank might be in it."

Again, for the millionth time, indeed, it seemed to her, she reviewed the circumstances of the crime.

"Could anyone have overheard?" asked Miss Cornelia.

The question had rung in Dale's ears ever since she had come to her senses after the firing of the shot and seen Fleming's body stark on the floor of the alcove.

"I don't know," she said. "We were very cautious."

"You don't know where this room is?"

"No, I never saw the print. Upstairs somewhere, for he—"

"Upstairs! Then the thing to do, if we can get that paper from the doctor, is to locate the room at once," Jack Bailey did not recognize the direction where her thoughts were tending. It seemed terrible to him that anyone should devote a thought to the money while Dale was still in danger.

"What does the money matter now?" he broke in somewhat irritably. "We've got to save her!" and his eyes went to Dale.

Miss Cornelia gave him an ineffable look of weary patience.

"The money matters a great deal," she said, sensibly. "Some one was in this house on the same errand as Richard Fleming. After all," she went on, with a tinge of irony, "the course of reasoning that you followed, Mr. Bailey, is not necessarily unique," she rose.

"Somebody else may have suspected that Courtleigh Fleming robbed his own bank," she said thoughtfully. Her eye fell on the doctor's professional bag—she seemed to consider it as if it were a strange sort of animal.

"Find the man who followed your course of reasoning," she ended, with a stare at Bailey, "and you have found the murderer."

"With that reasoning, you might suspect me!" said the latter a trifle too loudly.

Miss Cornelia did not give an inch.

"I have," she said, Dale shot a swift, sympathetic glance at her lover—another less sympathetic and more indignant at her aunt. Miss Cornelia smiled.

The Children's papers have consolidated recently, as have the Wichita Falls papers. It is not possible for two papers to give the service that one can give in any town, and every such consolidation means better business conditions for the towns affected.

The snow and mud made the footrace a disappointing affair in McLean. The bedraggled appearance of the runners had more the appearance of a holo convention than an international race. However, most of the runners came into town seemingly in high spirits, despite the uncomfortable weather conditions.

The school board has serious problems confronting it and should have the co-operation of every citizen in planning for the needs of our school. The school is one of the most important of community interests, but neither school board nor superintendent can make it what it ought to be without full co-operation from the patrons.

"The whiter the bread, the sooner you're dead," as used by one firm, may not be a perfect slogan, but the fact remains that more attention should be paid to the average diet. A well balanced ration is cheaper, tends to longer life, with better health while you live. The world is slowly learning to eat less and a better variety of foods.

Country would never prosper if it bought half of its supplies from foreign lands, and a community must depend upon its citizens trading with one another if it is to prosper. It is only upon confidence and trading with each other that we may hope to prosper. In order to have this confidence, each one must strive to merit it by right treatment of his fellow men. Advertisers in this paper can be depended upon to back up their statements with quality goods and pleasant service. You can safely depend upon the merchant who advertises in the home paper and buys his printing at home, for the man who practices what he preaches is always dependable.

Do Husbands Really Trust Their Wives?

HERBERT: (to Betty, his wife) I'm sorry, but you'll have to stop going to Guido Petti's studio. His affairs with women are the talk of the town.

Betty: That's silly. No matter what Guido's relations with other women may be, he is a perfect gentleman— with me I shall continue my studies with him.

Weeks pass. Guido Petti and Betty are in the studio alone.

Guido: (drawing her to him) So beautiful you are. Soon we shall go abroad—just you and I.

Betty: But—my husband—

Guido: Bah! What does he know of your desires? So young you are—so lovely—

Suddenly he clasps her in his arms—kissing her with a fierce passion she is powerless to resist. Unheard by either, the door opens—someone starts to enter—then retreats, closing the door softly.

Two hours later Herbert bitterly accuses his wife.

Betty: Stop, Herbert! You don't know what you are saying. I swear to you—

Herbert: (lingering her aside) I'm through with you. I should have killed you as you lay in your lover's arms. Take what you want and get out.

What happens to Betty after she is driven from home by her husband completes one of the most pathetic dramas ever enacted in real life. Don't miss "First in a Woman's Heart," in May True Story Magazine.

Twelve Square Feet of Shelves

GENERAL ELECTRIC Refrigerator

You will notice that the General Electric Refrigerators are unusually roomy. The model illustrated—designed for an average family—has twelve square feet of shelf area. This means that you have a shelf a foot wide and twelve feet long to store your food. In no other refrigerator can you get such great shelf area for the same over-all size.

The General Electric Refrigerator has no belts, fans or drain-pipes. It is unusually quiet. It never needs oiling. And it is made and guaranteed by General Electric.

The mechanical perfection of the design and the extra food storage area make the General Electric a remarkable value. We would like you to come in and study the wide range of models. Time payments can be arranged, if you prefer. Come in today.

Building for the Ages

Built centuries ago, yet built so well that it will withstand many more centuries, the Sphinx stands as a lasting monument to honest effort.

So may we of McLean built, not alone the material creations which go toward making up this community, but may we also build good will upon a foundation of honest trading with our fellow men, so that it will outlast even the most substantial of concrete erections.

To make our dreams of a greater community come true, we must start to build from the very foundation. Confidence in our home institutions, as evidenced by our trade relations with them, is the cornerstone—careful and conscientious regard for our credit standing in our dealings, and a willingness to do our full share in any and every enterprise that tends to the good of our community, are the materials we should use in our building, if it is to outlast the ages.

Then we will have a community of which we may well be proud.

HOSPITAL FUND REPORT

Approximately $600.00 is now due on the McLean crippled children's hospitalization fees in Oklahoma City, and we earnestly solicit donations for this fund.

Ophelia Cunningham and James Cobbs have been in the sanitarium 18 weeks each, Noleta Johnson 16 weeks, and the other children, the Petty baby and Odell Dyer, approximately two weeks. At $15.00 a week hospitalization fee for each patient, this amounts to approximately $900.00. $300.00 has been sent to this fund, as shown in a previous report.

Through the courtesy of the American Theatre, we are planning on putting on a benefit picture some time within the near future, and we hope that its patronage will give us many dollars to put in the treasury.

The following are excerpts from a letter from Ophelia Cunningham, dated April 9: "I am feeling good all the time. I have a new cast on my feet. My feet are straight as can be. Say, tell Mr. Newman that I am feeling fine after my two operations on my back. It don't hurt me any more. My feet are feeling awful. I'll sure be glad when this cast business is over. I try to walk without my crutches. I can stand up without holding five minutes at a time, but how my feet burn in the cast. It feels like my ankles could jump out, but I don't mind just so I can get well again. I want to see you all in McLean, and tell Mrs. McMillen hello for me. Tell all the people in McLean and tell the Red Cross that I am getting along fine and give my love to the Chamber of Commerce. You know when I came down here my back was running yellow and green stuff and if they had not sent me here I would have died. The doctors and nurses and sisters are wonderful to me and I love them all."

In a letter from Miss Duncan of the same date she says: "Ophelia is fine. She is improving wonderfully well. Pretty soon Dr. McBride will take her to his private hospital and she will receive special massages and special diet, and we are going to do our best to bring her out as a whole. My cousin of McLean is very anxious to see her. I will be glad to see her when she comes to McLean."

PERSONAL LIBERTY

If a law is to be condemned because it violates our personal liberty, then practically all of our police regulations, to use the word in its widest sense, ought to be condemned. If it is a violation of personal liberty to shut up all saloons, it is a violation of personal liberty, though in a lesser degree, to close them on Sunday or to close them after a certain hour of the day. If I am an immigrant from a country in which it is customary for the best people to spend Sunday afternoon in drinking beer, I am justified in thinking that my liberty is interfered with by the operation of Sunday laws. The same is true of many other things. If I am an immigrant from a country in which polygamy is legal, I may justly feel that it is an invasion of my personal liberty to force me to content myself with one wife. It is certainly an interference with my personal liberty to say that I shall not spit in the trolley car, if I am obliged by physiological necessity to do so.—Henry W. Farnam, "Confessions of a Prohibitionist."

Measure your windows with care before buying curtain material. Allow at least nine inches extra for hems and shrinkage. Cut the goods by a thread if possible. Accuracy in cutting and neat sewing help insure well-hanging curtains. Many people like to put hems in by hand, but if a great number of curtains must be made at one time this is not always possible.

PLUS LABOR AIDED BY ROADS

Road building, now an industry well over the billion dollar classification, takes up much of the slack in labor surplus.

In constructing the 7,600 miles of concrete rural roads and 3,200 miles of streets last year, for instance, it was necessary to transport and lay 38,000,000 cubic yards of road material. To build a single mile of hard surfaced roadway 18 feet wide requires roughly two train loads of materials. The amount of labor required for these operations can be easily appreciated.

Economists have long been urging that needed public improvements be pushed beyond the blue-print stage into actual construction during the short industrial depressions that may be occasionally expected. Assured government surpluses, they maintain, could be well applied to road building projects and other improvements. Practically every community has had projects in contemplation for a long time. These should be built without delay, for they will help keep labor employed until conditions readjust themselves.

Recently, Representative Celler of Brooklyn presented a resolution in the House suggesting that Federal government construction of roads and other structures be speeded up to relieve the present unemployed situation. He points out that factory unemployed is greater now than during the industrial slump of 1921. Representative Celler's proposal is much in line with that of Governor Smith of New York, who recently urged the acceleration of all of New York state's construction projects in the effort to stabilize employment.

Looking back over this nation's economic history for the last few years, it is apparent that highway building has been of prime importance in giving the coin of the realm a wide distribution. The construction of public improvements, particularly of highways, it must be borne in mind, accomplishes something, else and that is the deeper rooting of prosperity.

Surprisingly significant is the fact that this, the world's most prosperous country, has more good roads than any other nation. And more are needed.

Always iron with the thread of the goods, and iron until the garment is dry. Otherwise it will pucker. Stainy glasses on hems, tucks or seams, can be removed by moistening a piece of cheesecloth with clear water, wringing it out, and wiping it quickly over the stony surface.

Work the butter for sandwiches to a cream, but do not melt it. Cut the bread into thin even slices. If you are going to trim off the crusts, do not butter too near them. Bread for sandwiches is best when about 24 hours old.

Chocolate that appears white on the outside has been kept in an overwarm place, so that some of the fat has melted and come to the surface. It is not injured in any way for use.

MICKIE SAYS—

NOT A THING TO KICK ABOUT TODAY! NOT A SINGLE SUGGESTION TO MAKE! EVERYTHING IS HOTSY-TOTSY IN THE OLD NEWSPAPER BUSINESS TODAY!

WHAT'S YOUR HURRY?

What's your hurry, anyhow, driving down the street, Driving like a lunatic— Scaring folks you meet? You will get there some day. If you take your time; Better be a little late than commit a crime.

Where'd you get the idea that you own the town? Speeding like a maniac, Knocking people down? Are things so important, in this world you live, That you have to take away life you cannot give?

Don't you 'spose, to other folk, Life is dear and sweet, And, like you, they've got a right To be on the street? Better drive a little slow— Tho' it isn't fun— Than to worry later For the harm you've done. —Mae E. Smith.

SCHOOL EXHIBIT

A school exhibit was held in the Wilkerson building on First street Saturday. All grades in school contributed, in some way, to the success of the exhibit.

Mrs. Sligar displayed work done by the seven grades in her art classes. This work was exceptionally good and was highly admired by everyone.

Mr. Langke had a fine exhibit of good work done by his class of boys in farm and shop work.

The Home Economics class, under the supervision of Miss Partlow, displayed a fine line of work. Everyone seemed to be surprised at the progress made by this class.

The history, English, Latin and commercial departments had good exhibits also.

Mr. Tummins was one of the many who followed the racers on their way to Shamrock Sunday.

Teachers have been very busy during the week end grading examinations and rechecking six-weeks grades. None of them had time to make news by spending the week end out of town.

Plans are being worked out for a May fete. Candidates for queen have been elected by each of the four high school grades and one by the grammar grades. A program will soon be complete and parts assigned.

On Tuesday morning, April 6, the chapel program was given by the evangelistic party from the Methodist church, composed of Rev. Gaston Foote from White Deer and Mr. Robert Watkins from Hedley. Mr. Watkins first sang two songs, which were enjoyed by the students. Rev. Foote gave us a talk on the value of determination, or the ability to stick to whatever we begin.
