CHAPTER I-Delying all efforts to capture him, after a long series of murders and robberies, a super-crook known to the police only as "The Bat" has brought about a veritable reign of terpor. At his wits' and, and at the man's own request, the chief of police assigns his best operative, Anderson. to get on the trail of the Bat.

CHAPTER 11-With her niece, Dale inden, Miss Cornelis Van Gorder is iving in the country home of the inter Courtleigh Fleming, who until his recent death had been president of the Union bank, wrecked because of the theft of a large sum in currency. The cook and housemaid deserted the van Gorder household, leaving only the Japanese butler, Billy. Miss Van Gorder household, leaving only the Japanese butler, Billy. Miss Van Gorder household, leaving only the Japanese butler, Billy. Miss Van Gorder receives a note warning her to vacate the place at once on pain of that She feels the warning is from the dreaded Bat, but determines to gnore it Dale returns from the city, where she had been to hire a gardener.

CHAPTER III-Mise Cornelia tells Lizzie Allen, her faithful Irish maid, who is decidedly nervous, that a de-tective is coming that night. The gar-dener arrives, glving his name as Brooks. Miss Van Gorder leads him into a trap and he admits he is not a gardener but needs work. She allows him to stay. Dale comes from the Country club with a friend, Doctor Wells. Miss Cornelia tells them of the threatening note. They are interrupted by the smashing of a window in the bouse.

CHAPTER IV-They find a stone has been thrown through a glass door, weighting another missive warning them to leave. Doctor Wells urges Mise Van Gorder to obey, but she firmly re-ruses. The detective, Anderson, arrives, is told of the situation, and announces he will stay on watch that night.

CHAPTER V-Miss Van Gorder telle Anderson she has an idea Courtleigh Fleming robbed his own bank and con-cealed the money in the house, but the detective believes the bank's cashier. Bailey, who is missing, is the guilty one. Brooks (who is really Bailey, the sought-for cashier, and Dale's flance) tells the girl he knows there is a hidden room in the house and believes Courtleigh Fleming, be-fure his death in Colorado, concealed the bank's money there. Dale tele-phones Richard Fleming, Courtleigh's mephew, sking him to come over.

CHAPTER VI-Dale tells Richard Fleming of her knowledge of the hid-den room. He gets rid of her while he seeks and finds blueprints of the house Dale, returning, finds he has the secret in a scrap of blueprint, but he refuses to give it to her, declaring he means to have the money if it is there. Knowing the finding of the coney means everything to Bailey. Dale seizes part of the scrap of paper and during the struggle Fleming is shad and killed Anderson and the rest find her beside the body, with a re-volver Doctor Wells arrives.

"That's true," said Miss Cornella firmly. A silence of troubled thoughts fell upon the three. Miss Cornelia took out her knitting.

"Did you ever try knitting when you wanted to think?" she queried sweetly, after a pause in which the detective tramped from one side of the room to the other, brows knotted, eyes bent on the floor.

"No," grunted the detective. He took out a cigar-hit off the end with a savage snap of teeth-lit it-resumed his pacing.

"You should, sometimes," continued Miss Cornella, watching his troubled movements with a faint light of mockery in her eyes, "I find it very helpful." "I dou't need knitting to think straight," rasped Anderson, Indignant-Miss Cornelfa's eyes danced.

Anderson turned to Miss Cornella. "Did you?"

"Yes," admitted the latter quietly, her knitting-needles at last at rest. "I knew he was Mr. Bailey, If that is all you mean."

The quietness of her answer seemed to infuriate the detective.

"Quite a pretty little conspiracy," he said. "How do you expect me to do anything, with the entire house hold against me? Tell me that."

"Exactly," said Miss Cornella, "And if we are united against you, why should I have sent for you? You might tell me that, too."

He turned to Balley savagely. "What did you mean by that 'three wurs more'?" he demanded.

WHY STORMS INCREASE DURING THE NIGHT

It is an interestig fact, according to the Weather Bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture, that winter cyclones moving northeast in the United States, and doubtless similar storms also in other parts of the world, increase in size and intensity more rapidly by night than by day. This is because the cool section of a cyclone area is relatively clear and the warm section cloudy. At night, therefore, the clear section gets colder, or at least colder than it would otherwise be, owing to the great toss of heat from the surface by radiation, while the clouded side more nearly maintains its tempeature. During the daytime, on the other hand, the clear side warms up by means of the sun's rays

Although our school did not get humor? to attend the Interscholastic League meet at Canyon, we were duly represented by Pauline Webba, Lucille Ayer and Laka D'Spain in the typewriting contest. Mrs Payne accompanied them. Our representatives left McLean Thursday evening and arrived at Canyon Thursday night. By Friday our girls were ready for the contest, which started Friday afternoon at one o'clock. rain They typed valiantly for fifteen minutes. After the contest was over the girls were informed that they had won third place, Dalhart first place and Amarillo second. In spite of the fact that our girls did not win first place, the school is justly proud of them.
