CHAPTER I—Detying all efforts to capture him, after a long sories of curriers and rabberles, a super-crook known to the pelice only as "The Bat' has brought about a vertiable reign of larger At his with end and at the man's own request, the chief of police assigns his best operative, Anderson to set on the trail of the Bat.

CHAPTER II—With her niece. Dale igden, Miss Cornella Van Gorder la living in the country home of the ate Courtleigh Fleming, who until his recent death had been president of the thorn bank, wrecked because of the theft of a large sum in currency, the cook and housemaid deserted the Van Gorder household, leaving, only the Japanesse Futler, Billy, Miss Van Gorder receives a note warning her to racate the place at once on pain of the in. She feels the warning is from the dreaded Bat, but determines to ignore it. Dale returns from the city, where she had been to hire a gardener.

CHAPTER III—Miss Cornelia tells dizzie Allen, her faithful Irish maid, who is decidedly nervous, that a decitive is coming that night. The gartener arrives, giving his name as brooks. Miss Van Gorder leads him nio a trap and he admits he is not a cardener but needs work. She allows him to stay. Dale comes from the fountry club with a friend, Doctor Vella Miss Cornella tells them of the hreatening note. They are interrupted by the smashing of a window in the louse.

CHAPTER IV—They find a store has been thrown through a glass Coor, weighting another missive warring them to leave Doctor Weils urges Mineyan Gorder to obey, but she fittinly refuses. The delictive, Anderson, arrives, is told of the situation, and announces will stay on watch that night.

CHAPTER V.—Miss Van Gorder tells Anderson she has an idea Courtleigh Fleming robbed his own bank and concealed the money in the house, but the detective believes the bank's cashier, Bailey, who is missing, is the guilty one. Brooks (who is really Bailey, the sought-for cashier, and bale's fiance) tells the girl he knows there is a hidden room in the house and believes Courtleigh Fleming, before his death in Colorado, concealed the bank's money there. Dale tele-fluones Richard Fleming, Courtleigh's nephew. asking him to come over.

CHAPTER VI—Dale tells Richard Fleming of her knowledge of the hidden room. He gets rid of her while he seeks and finds blueprints of the house. Pale, returning, finds he has he secret in a scrap of blueprint, but a refuses to give it to her, declaring he means to have the money if it is there. Knowing the finding of the money means servithing to Bailey, Dale seises part of the scrap of paper and during the struggle rieming is what and killed Anderson and the rest find her beside the body, with a revolver Doctor Welfs arrives.

CHAPTER VII-Reggle Beresford, CHAPTER VII—Reggle Bereaford, friend of Fleming, appears. Doctor Wells gets the scrap of blueprint from Fleming's body, but Anderson takes it from him. Dale hides her piece in a hread rell, which the butler removes. Some one seeks entry into the house and all but Dale and Wells go to investigate. Dale tells Wells of the piece of paper in the roll. He goes to get it.

CHAPTER VIII—Miss Van Gorder nforms Dale and Bailey of her knowl-edge that "Brooks" is Batley She also says she has reason to Goubt Wells' honesty. Walls tells Dale he did not and the piece of blueprint in the roll, the rightly guesses he is lying, but loss not realize the extent of his du-Wellse fries to burn the scrap of blueprint he had found in the roll but Anderson seizes it. Taking the detective unawares. Wellse stuns him and conceals him in an adjoining coom. A knocking at the front door collects the household. A stranger, obliquely badly hurt and in a dase, is admitted. He can give no explanation for his presence, and, worried over anderson's absence, the party disperses to search the house.

He lowered the detective to the floor and bent swiftly over Anderson, has tening to his heart. Good-the man still breathed-he had enough on his conscience without adding the murher of a detective to the black weight. Now he pocketed the revolver and the blue-print-gagged Anderson rapidly with a knotted handkerchief and proceeded to wrap his own mutter around the detective's head as an additional silencer. Anderson gave a faint sigh.

The doctor thought rapidly. Soon or late the detective would return to ousness-with his hands free in id easily tear out the gag. The doctor indicated the door. It was too late now. Aiready he could hear Miss Cornella's voice above; it was only a question of a short time until Anderson in the billiard room revived and would try to make his plight known. And in the brief moment of that resume of his position, the knocking came again. But feebler, as though the suppliant outside had exhausted his strength.

As Beresford drew his revolver and moved to the door, Miss Cornelia came in, followed by Lizzie.

"It's the Bat," Lizzie announced nournfully. "Good-by, Miss Nelly. Good-by, everybody. I saw his hand, all covered with blood. He's had a

But there was no horror and no fear; only unutterable amazement as an unknown man, in torn and muddled garments, with streak of dried blood seaming his forehead like a scar, fell through the open doorway into Beresford's arms.

"Good God!" muttered Beresford, dropping his revolver to catch the strange burden. For a moment the Unknown lay in his arms like a corpse. Then he straightened dizzily, staggered into the room, took a few steps toward the table and fell prostrate upon his face, at the end of his strength,

When he had first fallen through the doorway into Beresford's arms, she had not known what to think. Now, in the brighter light of the living room she saw that the still face, beneath its mask of dirt and dried blood, was strong and fairly youthful-if the man were a criminal, he belonged, like the Bat, to the upper fringes of the world of crime. She noted mechanically that his hands and feet had been tied ends of frayed rope still dangled from his wrists and ankles. And that terribte injury on his head-she shud

All the commercial students of McLean high school enjoyed a moonlight (less the moon) picnic Monday night. About twenty-five young people and four teachers went to living quarters for the McClellan Creek with their lunch. The greater part of them rode on a truck. The roads were fine until they came to the creek, where there was a rather steep bank to climb. This, however, was soon accompfished, and many good things to eat were the order of the day. A ase of soda pop was taken along and they all "ate, drank and were merry." After many games were played around a large bonfire, the young people returned home, reporting the most enjoyable time or call at the court, 5 they ever experienced on a picnic.

Trapped by Her Past!

RECENTLY an actress, who a few years ago was popular on Broadway, submitted to True Story Magazine a most startling story. It told why she had left the stage at the height of her career never to be seen upon the boards again.

It was a tale of dread and terfor as each night she swayed her thousands to smiles or tears, her eyes, masking the agony in her soul, were seeking, always seeking among the audience, the one man in the world who had the power to drag her down from the pinnacle of success to the ignominy of defeat. Deep in her heart she knew that some day he would come, and that when he did her career would end.

And so when one night she received a note from a man in the audience who was awaiting her reply, she realized the time had come to settle her account with fate.

Her story entitled "Trapped by My Past," appears in True Story for June. With nothing hidden, nothing omitted she has put into it all the fire that perhaps once held you spellbound across the footlights. Maybe as you read it you will recognize her. If so you will then know the answer to a question you have probably asked vourself many times.

Protect Your Investment in Your Model T Ford

THE Ford Motor Company is making a new car, but it is still proud of the Model T. It wants every owner of one of these cars to run it as long as possible at a minimum of expense.

Because of this policy and because of the investment that millions of motorists have in Model T cars, the Ford Motor Company will continue to make parts until, as Henry Ford himself says, "the last Model T is off the road."

More than eight million Model T Fords are still in active service, and many of them can be driven for two, three and five years and even longer.

So that you may get the greatest use over the longest period of time at the lowest cost, we suggest that you take your Model T Ford to the nearest Ford dealer and have him give you an estimate on the cost of any replacement parts that may be necessary.

You will find this the economical thing to do because a small expenditure may enable you to maintain or increase the value of the car and give you thousands of miles of additional service.

No matter where you live you can get these Ford parts at the same low prices as formerly and know they are made in the same way and of the same materials as those from which your car was originally assembled.

Labor cost is reasonable and a standard rate is charged for each operation so that you may know in advance exactly how much the complete job will cost.
