According to a member of the school board, some $500 had been raised Thursday morning, and it is thought that nothing will hinder the deal going through as scheduled.

TAMPKES RETURN FROM COLLEGE STATION

Prof. and Mrs. A. A. Tampke have returned from College Station where Mr. Tampke spent four weeks at the A. & M. College for improvement work in his agricultural program. One week was spent in conference with the state supervisors and three weeks in working out County Time Program and Annual Teaching Plan. A few days on the return trip were spent visiting friends and relatives at Hucabab, Huntsville, Comanche and San Antonio. They reported heavy rains over most of the sections visited, with crops above the average. Heavy rains at Abilene compelled them to remain in tourist camps until the roads were passable. Four days were spent on the trip from San Antonio to McLean. In speaking of the trip, Prof. Tampke said: "We are certainly glad to be back in our good old comfortable home again; we don't want any more travel for at least twelve months."

A telephone has been ordered installed in the Tampke home for the convenience of farmers desiring the services of Prof. Tampke in any of their farm and shop problems.

Read the few sample prices in the advertisement on another page.

A Bridal Shower

Mrs. Harold Clement, a June bride, was very agreeably surprised Monday afternoon when Mrs. Scott Johnston and Mrs. Jack Gray acted as hostesses to a pretty miscellaneous shower given in her honor. The party gathered at four o'clock and several enjoyable hours were spent in an informal way, during which time Miss Sallie Campbell thrilled the house with experiences of her recent trip through the Western states, the most exciting of all being her encounter with the bear while in Yellowstone National Park.

Many lovely and useful presents were received by Mrs. Clement, who was a member of this year's graduating class of the McLean high school and very popular among the younger set.

Dainty refreshments were served to the following: Mesdames Arthur Talley, Witt Springer, Claud McGowan, Sherman White, Harold Rippey, Roy Campbell, N. A. Greer, W. J. Some of them stole a march and rode in but others were good sports and walked back to town.

Some improvements are planned in the store, including a modern meat market with an experienced man in charge.

The married ladies were asked to leave their husbands and children at home and make believe they were girls again, and their maiden names were used.

Three tables were arranged for "42," the tally cards being very unique cartoons of old maids and bachelors. The same idea was carried out in the cut flower decorations. PARK ELECTION NOT HELD

The election called for last Saturday in the matter of selling half of the city park was not held.

The election was called by proclamation of the mayor, and the city council did not meet to order ballots and election supplies until Thursday afternoon. The ballots were printed Friday, but as the nearest election supply house is in Dallas, supplies could not be ordered in time. However, supplies were found in such shape that an election could have been held. But due to the excitement of the Democratic primary and the opinion of some that there might be irregularities that would cause the election to be illegal, the election judge and clerks never opened the polls.

Several members were requested by the president to make short talks relative to the part their respective business relates to community welfare. H. S. Williams was the first speaker, who said public relationship is the biggest problem of the utility companies that they try to satisfy every patron.

Geo. Tummins said that in school teaching the whole community is in partnership, and no other business has any closer touch with the community.

Dr. Finley spoke of the longer average life afforded now, as compared with former days when little was known of preventative medicine.

T. A. Landers told of the relation of the newspaper to community life.

Chester Lander said that the drug store is an essential part of the community, ranking with the doctors in protecting the health of the citizens. Mr. Lander compared the old time drug store with its stock of patent medicines to the modern drug store where most every need of man may be supplied.

Run-off Will Be Held in Race for Sheriff

Sheriff Graves led the ticket in Saturday's primary with 1246 votes over the county, to Hurst 636, Andrews 636, Newton 291, King 186. The vote at McLean stood, Graves 139, Hurst 195, Andrews 103, Newton 54, King 42. Hurst and Andrews tying for second place will probably be decided by lot as to who will enter the second primary against Graves.

Ivy E. Duncan for judge received 1616 votes against Judge Wolfe's 1156. The vote at McLean was Duncan 66, Wolfe 407.

Charlie Thut for county and district clerk and F. E. Leech for tax assessor were re-elected without opposition. R. B. Thompson was elected district clerk, if such office is created.

John F. Studer was elected county attorney with 1388 votes to Cary 737, Via 251. The vote at McLean was Studer 207, Cary 202, Via 27.

Miss Davis won for treasurer with 1774 against Smith 1083. McLean's vote was Davis 348, Smith 127.

The closest race in the county was for county surveyor, Doucette winning with 1366 votes to Fox 1322. At McLean Doucette received 115, Fox 318.

Holmes seems to be the winner for district attorney over Douglass, and Braly was leader in the same territory, but will have to enter the second primary with one of his opponents. Incomplete returns indicate Allen, but could be Wortman, as the vote is close between the latter two.

In the precinct offices Newman was elected commissioner with 412 votes to Massey 238. The vote at McLean was Newman 322, Massey 204; Alanreed, Newman 90, Massey 34. Rice was re-elected J. P. with 191 votes to Young 149. Harris King received 255 votes for constable to Carpenter 212.

At Pampa the vote for commissioner was Taylor 660, Cox 601, Walberg 540. This will be decided in the run-off with Taylor and Cox.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Jim Stanley, wealthy young New York business man, unable to concentrate in his dictation to his desk audiphone, has the machine taken to his home, intending to finish his work there. Rollin Waterman, his business partner and closest friend, comes in. Both men are avowedly in love with Doris Colby. Stanley proposes they toss a coin to determine which of them shall, that evening, first ask her to marry him. Waterman wins.

CHAPTER II—Nina Morgan, Waterman's secretary, also his mistress, has overheard his conversation with Stanley and resents Waterman's plan to desert her. Waterman tells her he is practically penniless and must make a rich marriage. He urges Nina to go to Doris and tell her she (Nina) has been wronged—but by Stanley. The girl consents, on Waterman's promise to take care of her.

CHAPTER III—Doris admits to her father her interest in both Stanley and Waterman, and is sure they are both in love with her, but she is unable to make up her mind which to marry.

CHAPTER IV—Nina goes to Doris with her story, securing a promise that Doris will not reveal the source of her information. She convinces Doris of Stanley's duplicity, and leaves her broken hearted, and realizing that it is Stanley she really has loved.

"Good heavens," she said, "I had quite forgotten. He's coming here this very night. I can't see him—I can't. I must tell Barker to send him away. Please ring the bell—hurry, hurry!"

"Dearest," he murmured, "Don't Cry—Please Don't Cry."

But Waterman had anticipated this emergency. "On the contrary," he said promptly, "I think it best that you should see him."

"What now? Oh, I couldn't, I couldn't!"

"Yes, now, darling. Think a moment—think. You have lost your friend, you say."

"Yes," she said, "and so have you."

"Yes, we've both lost him, haven't we? And yet we cannot tell him so. How do you propose to treat him?"

"Oh," she said, "I haven't thought—there hasn't been time."

"Well, I suggest that my idea is this. You cannot tell him you are no longer his friend without telling him why, and you can't do that. You must let him find it out by degrees, and I think the easiest way to start will be by telling him at once that you are going to marry me."

The violet eyes widened abruptly. In truth, the girl was startled. In a moment of keen suffering she had it true, gone to the arms of the comforting Waterman. She had lain there some moments. He had caressed her—she had allowed it. Yet it was not until this instant that she realized fully what this had meant to him. All this he saw in the moment of silence that followed his last remark. His fate was in the balance. He knew it. "Dearest," he breathed.

At length she turned away. "All right," she said, "as you wish."

His heart leaped up—he had won! He was safe. Now to clinch it. "Oh, I am sure I am right, darling," he hurried on. "It will be hard to do, but there's one thing about it, once done it will be over and swiftly over. Since you cannot tell him what you know about him and yet you must believe it, you can't go on seeing him day by day pretending you are still his friend. No one could do it. So let him know that you're engaged to me. If I am not mistaken, that of itself will be a bit of a blow to him."

She sighed as she dabbed at her eyes with her handkerchief. "I suppose you're right," she admitted. "Since it must be, the sooner the better."

"I'm sure of it."

At this moment Stanley entered the room, unannounced, since Barker knew quite well that his mistress was always at home to him. He paused upon the threshold just an instant. Nobody spoke. He feared the worst but he crossed the room briskly, took the girl's unresisting hand, and said, "Well, my dear Doris, and how are you tonight?"

"I'm very well," she said faintly, without looking at him.

"Good," said he. "Hello, Rolly."

"Hello, Jim."

"I haven't seen you in a long time not for four or five hours. Very seldom happens like that. Well, Doris, what's the news?"

"No news," she said faintly.

"I've got to contradict you, Doris," interrupted Waterman. "There is news, the best news I've had in a long long time or ever shall."

"It's delightful that you should have happened in as you did, for I am sure that Doris feels as I do when I say that it makes me quite happy that you should be the first to hear of our engagement."

Jim managed to force a smile. "Splendid," he cried, "splendid! My two very best friends! Doris, my dear friend, my very best wishes—the very best wishes that you could imagine, and then add to those about a thousand more still better ones. And as for you, Rolly, you know perfectly well that I consider you the luckiest man in the wide, wide world."

"Thanks," said Waterman, "I knew I could rely upon you."

"How soon is it to be?"

"We haven't got as far as that," smiled Waterman. "In point of fact it's only just happened."

Jim paused perhaps a second and a half. Within that brief time he made a decision. He suffered—intolerably—with an acuteness of which he had never dreamed. He had an uncontrollable impulse to get away—far, far away, with the swiftness of light. If he could only wish himself at the end of the world, and be there with the wish!

"Well, well," he said, "this is delightful! It will make me especially happy as I go away."

"Away?" queried Waterman.

"Yes, I know, I haven't told you, but for a long time I have had a plan in the back of my head. As you know I have been one of the backers of a series of archeological explorations that the museum has been carrying on in the interior of Tibet. Nothing is starting this week to join the party now in the field, and I'm going with him."

Doris felt that the time had come when she must say something, so she asked: "How long shall you be gone?"

"I've no idea—one year, two years, maybe five. And so I fear that I shall not be present at your wedding. But I plan to have a part in it, none the less. And as your wedding gift from me, my dear fellow, I present you with all my interest, right, title and all that kind of thing, in the business now managed under the style of Stanley and Waterman."

"My dear Jim!"

"Now don't say no. I'm through with it. I'm sick of the Street. I've had six years of it and I'm tired of the game. You enjoy it. You're good at it. I'm afraid at times the limitations I've imposed upon you have irked you a little. I'm afraid I've been a bit of a drag."

"Not at all," murmured Waterman politely.

"Oh, yes, I have seen that there were many times when you were irritated by my ultra-conservatism. But now all that is passed. The business is yours—lock, stock, and barrel."

"But I say, this is mighty sweet of you."

"Not at all. An event of this importance, an alliance between my two best friends, requires to be commemorated by something more substantial than the presentation of a pie-knife or a mantle clock. There, there—say no more about it. Now I must be off. Good night, Doris." He took her hand again. "I'll see you again before I go, but again let me say how charmed I am. Next to being happy one's self the most delightful thing in the world is to be assured of the happiness of the two people in that world one loves the most."

"But, my dear Jim, I can't thank you enough—such a princely present!" objected Waterman.

"Nonsense. Why here you are, my two old friends, going to be married—I'd like to do something nice for you—and, well, this is it—that's all. And you know perfectly well I can afford it. I ask only one thing of you in return."

"Whatever it is, it's yours," smiled Waterman.

"In the first place, be happy, but much more than that, make her happy because you see that's about the dearest most important thing in the world."

"You—you'll write, perhaps," asked Doris, feebly.

"Oh, now, and then, maybe, and when I come back, Rolly," he added with a smile, "you shall render me an accounting of your stewardship. Good night, Doris, dear. Good night, Rolly, old boy." He gripped both their hands again. As he reached the door he turned once more and beamed upon them. "You two dear people," he said, "I love you both and always shall!" With that he was gone.

Waterman turned uncomfortably toward the girl.

"Rolly, oh, Rolly, Rolly," she whispered brokenly, as she slipped again into his arms. "I can't believe it, I can't believe it."

Stanley plunged down the steps as the heavy door closed behind him and hurried blindly across the Avenue. There was tumult in his brain. He had not expected defeat. Not that he nourished any overweening estimate of his personal attractions, or that he regarded them as in any way superior to those of his friend. On the contrary, in his eyes Waterman was quite the best looking man of his acquaintance, the most winning and the most agreeable. Yet Doris had always been to him everything that was kind and sympathetic and understanding. He had never, it is true, made love to her directly, yet she must have known, he thought, what he thought of her and being uncommonly intelligent she must have guessed that before very long he would ask her to be his wife.

He had no suspicion whatever of the truth. By no conceivable means could he possibly have guessed the devious route by which Waterman's success had been achieved. He could not know the sudden shock to which the girl's whole nature had been subjected, nor how much she suffered at the conviction of his turpitude. He could not know that Doris in her suffering had unconsciously, blindly put out her hand, yearning for comfort and had taken almost without knowing it the only comfort that offered itself.

No suspicion of all this crossed at could cross the mind of the stricken Stanley. His nature was of the sturdiest and most direct. Life had been too easy for him. Everything had been plain sailing. This was the first great shock of his life and it shook him to the core of his soul.

Resolutely, consciously, he endeavored to put the past behind him. He would burn all his bridges, sink all his boats. Yes, that was the thing. Immediately he burned with the wish to be gone. He waved his hand at a passing taxi whose driver pulled up sharply that his rear wheels skidded slightly against the curb. Ten minutes later, in his own apartment, he was telephoning:

CHURCH OF THE NAZARENE

W. P. Homan, Pastor
We are indeed glad to report that last Sunday was a day long to be remembered by all who attended our services. The power of God was manifestly felt by all present. We were all with one accord in one place. The Sunday school was well attended and the lesson was intensely interesting. Our superintendent is well pleased with the progress made by the Sunday school. The Lord manifested His power in an unusual manner in the preaching hour. We asked the congregation for an offering of $100 to complete our appointments to the annual assembly, and in just a few minutes we had raised $140 for that purpose and $110 for other causes, making a total of $250, and the saints greatly rejoiced, as the offering was being taken and realizing the truth of the scripture when said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Glory to God.

Our prayer meeting last Wednesday night was wonderful beyond all expectation. As Sister Tilley led the service, the glory of God shined on the people and eight souls were saved during the service. God is hearing and answering prayer. Bless His name forever. The leader for the prayer meeting this week was Paul Ledbetter, the youngest person that ever led prayer meeting in McLean.

The opening services of the Sunday school Sunday will be in charge of class No. 3. Regular services next Sunday. Come thou with us and we will do thee good.

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH

B. W. Wilkins, Pastor
Our services were much improved last Sunday over the Sunday before. Attendance and interest at all meetings was encouraging. With the passing of some of the matters and conditions which detract from the regular activities of church work, we fully expect decided improvement from now on. Let us strive to make the best of our opportunities thru the month of August. If you have been absent, why not double your interest and concern for a while?
We appreciate the presence of a number of visitors last Sunday. A cordial welcome is extended always to visitors, friends, and to our membership.

CHURCH OF CHRIST

W. B. Andrews, Minister.
Sunday morning's crowd was the largest we have had in several Sundays. Attendance was off at the night service.
The meeting at Heald started Sunday afternoon and is to continue two weeks. In the absence of Bro. Rebel Cooper, Bro. W. B. Andrews will start the meeting. Bro. Cooper is expected the latter part of the week.
Let us assist Heald all we can at this meeting, and then we may reasonably expect them to help us at our meeting beginning the third Sunday in August.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

R. R. Rives, Minister
The services at this church will be held next Sabbath at the usual hours:
Bible school 10 a. m.
Preaching by the pastor 11 a. m. to 3:30 p. m.
Young people 7:30 p. m.
You and your friends are cordially invited to worship with us at the services. Come let us worship together.

It is unfortunate that the park election could not have been held and the people have had a chance to express themselves on the proposition.

The Christian Science Monitor says about Al Smith: "He is entitled to the vote of every citizen who would re-establish the open sale of liquor in the land and call back the saloon with all of its infamies."

Newspaper reports claim that Tunney has at last acquired the fighting heart with an instinct to kill. This fact is gleated over in some quarters as a very desirable fact—and yet we call the world civilized.

A street beggar who was arrested in New York recently had $70.00 in his pockets, and when called a "bum" by the policeman, became indignant and showed his bank book good for $20,000. It is no wonder we see so many beggars, when the profits are like that.

The advertising manager of a nationally known chain store organization, with stores in small towns, has this to say about advertising: "Occasional advertising is of no advantage whatever. It has been proven through years of experience that constant advertising is the only profitable means. No newspaper man can produce miracles with an ad 'once in a while.' It is like taking medicine. No one dose of tonic is going to start you going. Your customers will watch for your ad if it appears regularly. They will not look at the paper to see if it is there. They forget about it." This system of chain stores has made a consistent success following the advice given above. It can be duplicated by any merchant.

Disciples Follow Krishnamurti Into Hills

One thousand members of the Order of the Star, founded by Jeddhu Krishnamurti, the young Hindu philosopher, followed him into the Ojai hills in southern California, camped in a tent city and opened a religious congress. Photograph shows some of the disciples unloading their baggage, and a portrait of Krishnamurti.

"FILLING SPACE"

Had a fellow to hand us the other day a printed article about a certain brand of goods he carried and told us we could use that to help fill up the paper. Went over to the same fellow in about an hour, took $5.00 worth of stuff from his shelf and was walking out when the fellow said: "Do you want to pay for them or have them charged?" We told him we needed a few things in his line and we figured the amount we charged for his article would pay for the goods. He got sore, of course, and we had to put the goods back and kill the fellow's item boosting up his goods.—Graham Leader.

Rev. B. W. Wilkins of the First Methodist church is teaching a class in Epworth League work at Wheeler this week.

PRINT SHOP FABLES

Boy: Hoy!—What a Nasty Man! Has he been setting fire to the Orphan Asylum? Nope! He just stopped his paper out of spite. And Will the Editor cut his throat, leaving a widder and eleven starving Orphans? Again, Nope. The Editor is Rich and Don't give a darn.

TOO MANY OF 'EM

The editor of the Big Spring Herald took occasion last week to rap these fellows who say "don't say anything about this until everything is 'ase," and then when an out-of-town daily reaches his desk the next morning he finds the "whole story" printed in it. He puts his little editorial up high in the front page with a box around it. And the fellow that didn't see it was blind if he was a Herald subscriber. But that's the case. The home town news is requested to be squelched, when it is possible the very fellow asking the request of the home editor as correspondent for some foreign daily, then the home subscriber wondered why the news published in the out-of-town daily exclusive of the home paper. And, too, once in a while a fellow will request the editor not to say anything about a certain piece of news because the time is not yet ripe, and when the paper comes out the next day it has a ruckus because it wasn't printed and says the editor doesn't like him. Sometimes we think the editor ought to take the bits between his teeth, get the facts in the case, and print them to his own satisfaction.—Graham Leader.

CHEAPER GOODS

Read advertising always benefits both the advertiser and the consumer—the buyer. For real advertising does not cost anybody anything. You buy a glass of Coca-Cola for five cents after millions of dollars have been spent telling you about it. Twenty years ago you bought a fine suit for $25.00—but today after millions and millions of dollars have been spent in telling you about it, you buy a better one for $10.00.—Quannah Tribune-Chie.

Miss Fern Upham spent last week end in Amarillo.

"Willie! Keep your hands out of those pickles!"

"Gosh, ma, it's cold in this tent!"

"Woman, if you think you can drive better than I can, etc."

"Wow! Out of gas in this God-forsaken country."

Back home again: "Oh, darling, we had the loveliest time on our trip! Such scenery! And the way the children behaved. No. No trouble at all with the car. Yes, we're going to do the same thing every year, aren't we, Harry?"

"Uh-huh," murmurs husband, sorta kinda falling on the floor choking sorta.—Minnesota Ski-U-Mah.

WHEN EAST MEETS WEST

She (from East)—"And what do you use those long rope lines for?"

He (from West)—"Why, to catch cattle with, of course."

She—"Yes, but what do you use for bait?"—Leigh Barr.

Our Home Town

The Center of Our Business and Our Social Activities---
the Place We Call Home

Are we doing, day by day, the many things we should do to make this Home Town of ours an even better place in which to live?

- Do we assume our share of civic responsibility
- Do we always put our best foot forward
- Do we boost our home town to outsiders
- Do we meet adversity with a smile
- Do we trade with home merchants
- Do we pay our bills promptly

Folks, when we can all answer "YES" to these few questions, then, and not until then, will we be on the road toward a bigger and a better McLean.

THE AMATEUR BANKER

Employee—I would like an increase in salary, sir, as I am going to be married.
Employer—And you would like to have a little bigger fund to draw on for household expenses?
Employee—No, it isn't that. My future wife knows exactly how much I get, and I would like a little extra for my own use that she doesn't know about.

Considered the Baby

Mrs. Tellit—You-in Dorothy, you know, always wanted to have a little baby daughter so she could name her June.

Friend Bill—"Does she know Mrs. Jones well enough to talk to?"
Mag—"No, only to talk about."

We think a man who wears a frown Has something on his mind, and give to many a minute clown The burdens of mankind.

Fussy

An elderly lady walked into a railroad ticket office in Toronto and asked for a ticket to New York.
"Do you wish to go by Buffalo?" asked the ticket agent.
"Certainly not!" she replied; "by train, if you please!"

He—Probably—his girl dropped him.

He wants but little here below,
Nor wants that little long;
Our prima donnas want more, though,
And want it for a song.

Knew Herself

She—I'll grant your income would be enough for us to marry on, if only you hadn't such expensive fads.
He—Expensive fads? What expensive fads have I?
"Me, for one."

Happy Ending

June—So Kit married Charlie. Was it a perfect romance?
Marie—Yes, indeed. She gets every one of her alimony on the very day it's due.—Town Topics.

A Sad Case

"Herbert, why are you wearing shoes in bed?"
"I'm getting so shortsighted, my dear, that I can't recognize the people I dream about."

Wouldn't Show

Harry—Yes, some that won't show a blue serge suit.

Wouldn't Hate Much

Clarence—All your love for me is turned to hate.
Gilda—If I had I wouldn't hate you very much.

Way Baby Cries

"The way Mrs. Jones's baby cries is a perfect scandal."
"Yes; it's a pity they can't hush it."

MEN VS. PARTY

How much better it would be if we could lay aside our prejudices and vote for the men who are most capable to hold the office sought.—McLean News.

Better! Certainly it would be better. But there are people in this country who would rather vote for the party than vote for the man. Prejudice is a pretty good word to use in this big game called politics. Yet if a good man and a bad man are up for the same office the voter should put the good man in office and kick the bad one out of the running. Men, not party, should be the slogan, but it is not. But until party leaders see the folly of putting up men of doubtful repute, the party bosses will deal out the dirt for the voters to swallow. And the mess will be swallowed, even if the voters have to hold their noses. Pity, but 'tis true.—Higgins News.

SLACKERS

Not having been a Chamber of Commerce secretary forever, but having worked at several jobs between Santiago, Cuba, and Denver, Colo., it has always been a puzzle to me why there are good and respectable people, well able financially, mentally and physically, to be of untold value to their community, that never in any sense financially or otherwise attempt in any way to serve their community. I suppose we must admit that the "big etter I," "self preservation" and "the almighty dollar" have often come between men and their home communities.—G. L. Boykin in Clarendon News.

Sammy and His Sandwiches

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS
(Copyright)

SAMMY was one of the young men who, having done perhaps a bit more than his bit in the war, had come home to fallen fortunes. His business, previous to his marching away with the first contingent to sail for France, had depended largely upon legs and the swift and sure way in which he used them. Sammy had been both a crack tennis player and a first-class salesman for a sporting goods house—the one aiding and abetting the other.

But, neither tennis nor salesmanship being possible now, Sammy had racked his fertile brain for a sitting-down job that would make him a decent living.

It was during a trip through England that he had seen the well-known van with the funny little Scotch chap standing upright on its roof, advertising that well-known brand of sandwich so dear to the business man's inward man.

Sammy decided that if one man could create so great a demand for sandwiches in England he didn't see why he couldn't do the same in his own land.

So Sammy started making sandwiches. He began in a very modest way and concocted and made all his wares himself. He wrapped them daintily and engaged the services of a small but energetic and smiling boy to go around the offices with his basket of tempting sandwiches.

Sammy had hosts of friends to begu with and it wasn't many months before he was able to take a tiny shop down in the business district.

One sunny day, she came into Sammy's shop. She was quite the loveliest creature that Sammy had ever beheld. "I want some sandwiches for kiddies," she said with a smile. "I'm giving a children's party tomorrow and I should like something pure and wholesome."

"Kiddies love brown bread, with cream cheese and nuts and chopped cherries," said Sammy, having said cherries instead of raisins because of the cherry redness of his fair customer's cheeks. "And how many kiddies have you?" he asked.

"None," she shook a negative of the head to accompany her words. "It is my Sunday school class I'm giving the party for. I shall want about six dozen sandwiches and I will—did Sammy fancy she colored slightly?—I will call for them tomorrow—if they will be ready about two o'clock."

She left something intangible behind her—perhaps a fragrance or maybe it was just the essence of wonderful womanhood. Anyway, whatever it was Sammy realized it wasn't for him. He was a cripple, torn by the ravage of war. If his fingers sought and touched the small cross he carried hidden in his vest pocket it might be that some solace lay there to make amends. For Sammy had been decorated for conspicuous bravery. And that same bravery was carrying him on now so that he smiled as he glanced at what had once been a pair of manly legs.

John Manners looked up from his great desk in a nearby office as his daughter came in, and all the tenderness in the world was in his eyes as he saw who it was.

Legal Wrangle in Sight

After Valentine Christ was jilted by his sweetheart more than half a century ago he sequestered himself in a dilapidated old house in Cleveland, Ohio, and was rarely seen except when making a real estate deal. At his death in 1910 a purported will left his fortune of $2,000,000 to John Christ and Mrs. Martha Dambach, his brother and sister, but did not mention a second brother, Adam Christ, who broke the will and received a third share. Recently a second will, yellowed with age, was found in the attic of Valentine Christ's old home, leaving his entire fortune to his brother John. If this will is upheld by the courts it will mean a redivision of approximately $25,000,000 worth of property to the heirs of John Christ—and the lawyers.—Capper's Weekly.

Pigeon Liquidated Debt

Pigeons were welcome visitors at the window of the Cincinnati (Ohio) apartment of Mrs. Amoretta Fitch, always receiving a few morsels of food until their hostess discovered they had begun to eat her cherished window plants. Then she put up a screen to shut out her feathered eaters. A few evenings later a single pigeon came to the window and hovered about the sill as if to attract her attention. She shooped it away, but it came right back and dropped a shiny, new dime on the sill and flew away, not to return.

Warns of Vesuvius

Dr. Akira Inamura is known as the leading seismologist of the Far East and is called by some scientists the greatest in the world. He has recently made a very careful examination of Mount Vesuvius in Italy and believes it is due for a serious outbreak. He says Japan was not expected to experience a great earthquake disaster similar to that of 1923 for at least another century.

Woodpecker Made Trouble

A persevering woodpecker, which drilled two holes through wooden protection on pipes leading from a large tank, is responsible for the village of Emmons, Minn., being without water. After the bird had pecked the holes under the steel tank, subzero temperature froze the pipe and split the tank, letting all the water out.—St. Paul Dispatch.

HER PAST

They were very much in love with each other, and the young girl had but recently accepted an engagement ring from her sweetheart.

Although everything was perfectly planned for their future, the young man was inquisitive to the point of folly.

"Tell me, dear," he pleaded, "have you ever been kissed before?"

The girl blushed. She did not know what to say for the best.

"Well, ye-yes; only twice," she confessed reluctantly.

"What?" he shrieked, "Why by?"

"Don't be ridiculous, dear," returned the girl. "It was only the church choir and the baseball club."

Mrs. Luther McCombs was in from the ranch Saturday.
