City Employs Full Time Secretary

McLean Postoffice Raised to Second Class July First

OFFICE RAISED TO SECOND CLASS

Business Increases Classification of Postoffice

The McLean postoffice will be raised to the second class on July first, according to Postmaster John B. Vannoy, who said that some important changes in the service.

Under the new arrangement there will be no general delivery service required on Sundays and holidays; however, Mr. Vannoy states that he may find it possible to open the general delivery window for 15 minutes on holidays, but it will not be opened on Sundays. The general delivery window will open at 8 a. m. and close promptly at 6 p. m. on other days. Night service begins at 6 p. m., and no night service is allowed in second class offices.

Less help will be employed, as the department will furnish the help, while heretofore the postmaster has been allowed a definite sum of money for help. At times Mr. Vannoy has added to that amount from his own pocket, as well as having the assistance of Mrs. Vannoy in the office. Counting hours the office is now running, with 35 working hours per day from the help, while after July first the work will have to be done with 26 working hours. Any extra help needed will have to come from substitute help furnished by the postoffice department at Washington.

A postoffice is automatically raised to the second class when the previous year's business amounts to $8,000 or over, and is made a first class office when the business reaches $40,000.

The Pampa postoffice was made a second class office last year and will be raised to the first class July 1st.

A reception was tendered the senior class of the McLean high school by the juniors at the home of Miss Mary King Monday evening.

The home was decorated in pink and white, the senior class colors, and refreshments of pink and white ice cream and cake were served.

Talks were made by Profs. Moore, Hammock, and Carrico, Misses Blount, Hugos, Payne and Partlow, and a number of seniors and juniors.

Musical numbers were given by Miss Johnnie Villa Haynes, and Miss Edith Renuau read the class will.

Games were played on the lawn, and a general good time is reported.

FIRE DESTROYS TURNER HOME

Fire destroyed the home of Vernon Turner in the north part of town Tuesday night.

Being a small building, the fire had made too much headway when the fire department reached the scene to save anything of any moment.

Miss Ruby Cook visited in Amarillo last Thursday.

WANTED FINDS LOST GLASSES LAST WEEK

Mrs. Everett Watkins lost a pair of spectacles last week and inserted a small advertisement in our classified columns, with the result that the glasses were returned. A neighbor had found them, and upon reading the advertisement promptly returned them.

The life advertisements appearing in the classified columns each week produce results, or they would not be run. Try one the next time you want to buy, rent or sell anything.

Baccalaureate Sermon Given Sunday Morning

The baccalaureate sermon for the McLean high school graduating class was delivered by Rev. D. H. Brynoff, pastor of the First Baptist church, at the high school auditorium Sunday morning.

Rev. Brynoff took for his text two passages in 1st Timothy, "Take heed unto thyself" and "keep thyself pure," showing the necessity of being on guard against the pitfalls of life. "In the battle of life, we cannot afford to neglect the word of God, that contains the greatest wisdom known to man," said the speaker.

"The greatest lives are those that are lived in the service of others, and a pure life contains no regrets." The speaker insisted that both the forces of good and evil come from within oneself and that the trials of life may be tests of character, and one may become stronger because of them, if their lessons are heeded.

The graduates were told that their studies are not finished, but that they should have definite convictions and stand for the right at all times, and in order to do that they cannot afford to neglect the Word of God.

Supt. Geo. Tummins, Rev. B. W. Wilkins, pastor of the First Methodist church, Rev. W. Hickman, pastor of the Church of the Nazarene, and Rev. W. A. Erwin, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, occupied the platform with the speaker. Rev. Erwin delivered the invocation and Rev. Hickman the benediction.

The graduating class marched into the auditorium to the strains of the processional, with Mrs. Willie Boyett at the piano. Mrs. A. B. Blake gave a vocal solo, and the class marched from the auditorium at the close of the service, with Mrs. Boyett playing the recessional.

City Bonds Carry with Small Vote

The $50,000 city bond issue for the extension and enlargement of the water system held Monday carried with a vote of 32 to 52.

A smaller vote was cast than in any election here for the past several years, very few people taking any interest. It is claimed that even two members of the council failed to vote.

One reason for the seeming indifference of the voters was the fact that the council had already decided to issue warrants for the improvements, should the bonds be defeated; the election only being held to save in interest rate, bonds carrying a smaller interest rate than warrants.

Larger water mains will be laid in place of small pipe in the residence district of town, and extensions will be made to serve residents not now in the water district.

FIREMEN TO ATTEND STATE CONVENTION

Doolen Elected Lion Tamer at Luncheon

S. C. Doolen was elected lion tamer at the regular luncheon of the Lions Club Monday.

Three candidates were placed in nomination, Lions Doolen, Boyd Meador and Arthur Erwin. Lion Doolen was greeted by a concerted roar of the assembled Lions upon his election. He responded with a short speech.

Secretary Sitter reported all supplies ordered for the better yards and gardens contest.

Lions Williams, Sherman White and T. A. Landers paid finer to the tall twister for infractions of Lions rules. Elmer S. James, contractor at the Baptist church and Chevrolet garage building, was presented as a guest by Lion Gray.

Miss Ruby Cook, recently elected pianist, was present and was called upon for a speech. She responded with several humorous stories that were highly appreciated by the club.

Following the business session of the club, a sing-song was indulged in with Miss Cook at the piano and T. A. Landers leading.

Those present were: Lions Gray, Cobb, Wilkins, Upham, Reep Landers, Meador, Doolen, Ercy Cubine, Christian, Coleman, W. A. Erwin, T. A. Landers, Springer, Sherman White, Bentley, Arthur Erwin, Sitter, Williams, Miss Cook and Elmer S. James.

LEFORS-PAMPA ROAD NOW IN GOOD SHAPE

According to Commissioner M. M. Newman, the Lefors-Pampa road is now completed from Back City to Pampa, with traffic crossing the new bridge over Northfork river at Lefors. Two miles of paving from the Pampa city limits will be laid, leaving only about one mile of the road that will be impassable in muddy weather, the rest of the road being of a more sandy nature will be passable at all times.

CITY SEC. EMPLOYED FULL TIME

W. E. Bogan Employed Full Time City Secretary

At a recent meeting of the city council it was decided to put the secretary on full time for the city at a salary of $150 per month.

W. E. Bogan, present secretary, has accepted the proposition, and in addition to the regular duties of the office, will assess and collect city taxes. The taxes have been handled heretofore on a commission basis by the city marshal.

It is planned to have a city office in some convenient building under the new arrangement.

It will be some 30 days before full arrangements are made for the new work.

This decision of the council is in accordance with a recommendation of the city auditor, who recently audited the accounts of the city.

STUDY CLUB MEETS WITH MRS. HENRY

Reported. The Twentieth Century Study Club met Thursday, May 16, with Mrs. B. N. Henry. An interesting study of ideals of character as expressed in some of our greatest Americans was discussed.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: President—Mrs. B. N. Henry. Vice President—Mrs. H. W. Finley. Secretary—Mrs. H. W. Brooks. Treasurer—Mrs. Sam Hodges.

A motion carried that the club sponsor a plan for the beautification of the city park, with Mrs. W. B. Bogan as chairman of a committee for the placing of a wading pool in the park.

The club plans to conduct a story telling hour for the little tots one day each week during the summer.

Dainty refreshments were served to the following visitors and members: Mesdames A. B. Blake, W. E. Bogan, F. H. Bourland, H. W. Finley, John Harris, B. N. Henry, O. E. Lochridge, L. V. Lonsdale, E. E. Watkins, Allen Wilson, L. Sligar and H. W. Brooks.

GRADE PROGRAM AT SCHOOL TUESDAY NIGHT

A program was given by the first four grades of the grammar school at the high school auditorium Tuesday night.

After the raising of the curtain, a continuous program was given, ending with a drill of the youngsters.

Despite the muddy weather, a large crowd enjoyed the exercises.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

D. H. Brynoff, Pastor All our regular services will be held next Sunday.

A week from next Sunday we expect to begin our revival meeting. Rev. Marcellus Watkins of Plainview will be the evangelist.

The church will publish a memorial bulletin at the close of the present building campaign. We will have a picture taken of the church and congregation at the first Sunday's services. This will be placed on the first page of the bulletin. It will also contain a list of all the contributors to the building fund. Every member's name should appear in this list as a supporter of the present building campaign. There will also be a number of other interesting items in the bulletin.

Mesdames Pauline and Beatrice Muncie returned to Wellington Wednesday after a visit with friends here.

Idle Island

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—On the verge of nervous collapse, due to overwork, Gay Delano, successful New York artist, seeks rest at Idle Island. She rents a cottage, the "Lone Pine," from an island character, the "Captain," and his sister, Alice Andover, "administratrix."

CHAPTER II—Gay finds the cottage is tenanted by an elderly lady, "Aunt Almira," who consents to move to another shore, the "Apple Tree." Awakening from sleep, Gay imagines she sees the face of a Chinaman peering in the window, but on reflection ascribes the vision to imagination. She settles down in her new home, anticipating months of well-earned rest and recuperation.

CHAPTER III—On an expedition of the island Gay, standing on the sea shore, is horrified by the appearance of the drifting body of a drowned man, which she nervously herself to bring to the shore. A bullet wound in the temple shows the man to have been murdered. Gay examines the dead face with a handkerchief, and makes her way to the "Captain" with the story. Returning with him to the shore, they find no body there, and Gay's story of the incident is set down to an attack of "nerves."

CHAPTER IV—Gay, unable to convince her neighbors of the truth, draws a picture of the face of the dead man, intending to send it to the authorities as evidence of the apparent crime. She meets a stranger, apparently another visitor, to whom she tells the story and shows the picture. He asks her to let him take it, but Gay refuses. Next day, after a night spent with "Aunt Almira," Gay finds the picture has been taken from the cottage. "Rand" Wallace, wanderer, and considered something of a "black sheep" by the islanders, expecting to find "Aunt Almira" surprised, Gay at household tasks. She likes him at once.

CHAPTER V—Gay's acquaintance with Rand ripens into affection. She sees the Chinaman again and this time is sure it is not imagination. Rand leaves the island on business. Gay determines to stay for a while.

CHAPTER VI—The stranger whom Gay had met the day of her discovery of the body introduces himself as Ronald Ingram, "Aunt Almira's" visitor on the island. "Aunt Almira" tells Gay of her son, "Buddy," who has been missing for years. On Rand's return Gay tells him of the Chinaman. He is impressed, suspicious of Ronald Ingram, and apprehensive of some evil-doing in a house known as the "Little Club," apparently unoccupied.

CHAPTER VII—Rand and Gay realize their mutual love, but the artist is not ready to give up her freedom and marry him. "Aunt Almira" is planning her Christmas party, her annual festivity. It is arranged to have it at the "Lone Pine." Rand becomes certain all is not right concerning Ingram and the "Little Club" house, and investigation convinces him his suspicions are justified.

CHAPTER VIII—Rand, continuing his investigations, sees a party of twenty-five Chinamen leave the "Little Club" house and make their way to the ferry and the mainland. Ingram is with them, seemingly in charge of operations. He gives admission to the clubhouse and finds evidence of what he had suspected, the smuggling of Chinamen and narcotics.

CHAPTER IX—Winter settles on the island without incident. "Aunt Almira" continues her preparations for the Christmas party, and Gay and Rand carry on their innocent romance.

CHAPTER X—Thanksgiving day Gay is snowed up at the "Lone Pine," but Rand breaks through, bringing her Thanksgiving dinner, which they enjoy alone. In the middle of December Rand tells Gay he is going to Boston to continue his work as investigator, but will be back in time for the party. Returning home after a brief absence, Gay sees a man in an apparently hapless state of intoxication making his way into her house. She finds him asleep on the floor in an upstairs room.

CHAPTER XI—Alice Andover appears and recognizes the stranger as "Aunt Almira's" long-missing son, "Buddy" Bridges. The two women, to keep him quiet while the party is going on, administer intoxicants, but the man gets away and comes back while the festivities are at their height. He has a satisfactory explanation of his absence, and the return of her son puts the finishing touch to "Aunt Almira's" happiness. Rand has not come, as he had promised. Gay feeling he has been made a prisoner, and apprehensive for his safety, calls her way into the "Little Club." There she finds a prisoner, she imagines is Rand, and with him, Ronald Ingram, and a group of men is taken on board a ship.

CHAPTER XII

No one questioned Gay's presence in the boat, no one so much as looked her way, or offered her a word. She dropped upon the bench, covering just where she was pushed in the pushing crowd. Shyly at first she kept her face lowered into her collar, but later, gaining courage, she dared to look about in search of Rand. Her eyes found him at last where he sat crowded between two others on the opposite side, and there was no opportunity for her to draw nearer to him at that moment.

The three men, Ingram and Hodge, with the one in charge of the boat, stood together and talked. Gay was beside them, but their voices were so low that she could catch only scattered words of what they said, and none but Ingram's, whose voice was familiar.

"Hanging around spying—No, don't it, business is one thing, but murder is murder. Do you like that? I can't have a hand in it. Remember Blakely. Nothing on me but smuggling and coast running. Few years at most. I've got mine suited away, too, believe me."

"Remember Blakely." Was it Blakely who had come to her in the cove, with the bullet wound in his brow? Not Ingram, then, who caused that gashing wound, but another, Garman, to whom they were taking Rand. Gay's fingers fondled her pistol, tentatively, but well she realized that any such action would be worse than folly, for these were desperate men, and they were armed. Ingram might stick at murder in cold blood, but self-defense would put a different color on his scruples. If she could only get to Rand, slip her pistol into his hands, release his bonds. Still there was no opportunity, and she could think of no subtle expedient to contrive her ends.

She would have liked to fling herself across the intervening space and put both arms tenderly about those drooping shoulders.

"If I dared, I would. How surprised they would be. 'Rand,' I'd say, 'kiss me.' I dare say they would all drop dead of astonishment." Her teeth chattered nervously, her knees trembled, cold little smiles wrinkled her lips. "I am going to laugh," she thought, "I know I am simply going to scream with laughter. How absurd this is. Going to sea with a band of murderers.—Ridiculous. People don't do such things. Such things don't happen. I must be losing my mind. I dare say I am crazy, as they think on the island." A low dry chuckle gurgled through her cold lips. The man at her side turned.

"Cold," he muttered. "They don't put themselves out much to give service, eh?"

Gay's reply was an indistinguishable murmur, but she guarded her thoughts more closely.

The men smoked thirstily. She felt they were not fellows of a common hand, but separate, each for himself, except Ronald Ingram, Hodge and the little Chinaman, and the men who manned this boat. The others held aloof, nor did Ingram show any spirit of camaraderie to one of them. It was some sinister personal business that brought these men together.

Suddenly, in the darkness ahead, the lights of a ship showed up, lights green, and red, and pale.

Gay fingered her pistol nervously, tempted to fire desperately for help, taking the chance that help would come. Watching warily she waited a moment. The boat seemed to be heading direct for the slip, not avoiding it; yes, they were making for it. That ship, then, was Garman's, where they were taking Rand. There was no signaling between the two that she could see, but the great majestic monster of the sea stowed, came to a stop, and the small boat pulled alongside.

Ronald Ingram nodded toward the prisoner. "Bring him, Hodge," he said, and then ran quickly up the ladder first of all.

Hodge and the Chinaman prodded Rand up and shoved him to the ladder, which he climbed limply enough, though he must have been stiff with the cold and the exposure, as were they all. Gay's first impulse was to crowd forward, to go up the ladder after him, but remembering in time that a nearer view of her person might disclose a lack of mannishness in spite of her boots and knickers, she hung modestly back. One after another they hurried up, and the Chinaman indicated her forward.

Already the ship was heading east, as the men stumbled forward into the corridor and up the stairs into the warm bright smoking room. Gay slipped into a corner in the shadow of the door and crouched there, watchful, catlike.

Hodge came in with the prisoner, shoved him unceremoniously into a seat on the opposite side of the door, beyond Gay's sight, and went quickly out again.

She slid forward in her seat and peered around the projection of the door to the opposite corner where Rand sat alone, dejected and silent, his chin far down in the woolen collar of his coat.

During the bright lights, she got up and crossed the room quickly, slipping into the seat beside him, her arm trying against his.

At the unexpected touch and pressure, he threw himself back in his seat suddenly and looked at her. For the first time she saw his face. She never knew how she repressed the cry of horror that rose instinctively to her lips at the sight of him. She had never seen him before. The face was sly, vicious, hard, the most evil face of all she had seen that night.

It was not Rand. She was alone at sea with the murderous band.

Her flesh crawled upon her quivering nerves as she shrank back. She was sure he could not fail to hear the great pounding of her heart in her throat, the sob on her lips.

Rand, Rand!—The name beat in her ears, throbbing in her pulses. Shear terror, panic seized her. She grew frantic in terror and despair. She edged away from him, farther, farther, until she reached the door, where she peered out into the dim corridor.

Now and then sounded the wail of bells from below; the spit of steam and the pound of the engines increased.

The corridor was empty, dimly lighted. Gay edged outside the door and stood a moment uncertainly. Doors down the corridor, to the right and the left. One stood open—a cabin—there were chairs, a desk, bright lights. If only she could gain access to some passenger, some traveler, she thought she could not fail to gain protection. Gay slid slowly along the wall until she was beyond sight of those in the smoking room. Then, with a desperate flying leap, she gamed the open door, the shelter of the cabin. It was empty of occupant.

Steps sounded on the stairs leading up to the smoking room, a voice called orders.

Gay flashed a frightened glance about the room. Beneath a shelf of books along the wall of the cabin a wide bunk was made up, the blankets turned back. Beneath the bunk showed a foot locker. But the bunk was wide, and Gay was not large. With movements quick as thought herself, she squirmed under the bunk at the foot, behind the locker, and wriggled up until she was out of sight from the room. In the silence she moved up a little, so that she could stare out from behind the shadow of the foot locker.

The cabin was unusually large, with a bath adjoining. The desk was covered with books, papers, writing equipment. There was a typewriter. On the walls were files of papers, more books, professional instruments, and on a row of hooks were coats, caps, uniforms—men's things. Gay's heart sank. It was a man's room, a seaman's room. There was gold braid on the cuff of the coats on the walls, four stripes.

"Oh, dear heaven," gasped Gay. "It is Garman's cabin!"

Her eyes swam dizzily, her head reeled. Garman—who didn't stick at murder—poor Blakely—

Instinctively, half realizing what she was about, she started to shudder out, feet first, from beneath the bunk.

"Come On In, Ingram—Cold as the Devil."

But she was stayed by sudden noises, steps and voices in the corridor.

"Bring us coffee, Bert.—Come on in, Ingram.—Cold as the devil!"

THE DOCTOR FOR MAYOR

The only doctor in Scrapville decided that he would like to be mayor, so he came out in the Scrapville Times with the following notice: "Fellow citizens, I am running for mayor. I have no particular platform, no reforms to make, nothing to say against my opponent; I merely desire to be mayor of this town before I die. I know every man, woman and child in this town. I have been present at every birth, marriage or death in Scrapville for the past forty years. If I am not elected I am going to leave the town. But before I go I will tell all I know about each one of you."

For the first time in the history of the town everyone of legal age turned out. When the ballots were counted the old doctor had received all at one vote, and that was cast by a man who had just moved into the town—Los Angeles Times.

ON SALESMENSHIP

J. R. Arbuckle, the coffee king, who left an estate of $100,000,000, is credited with this story which he went to use as an example of the keen discretion which he contended was necessary to business success. A woman well on in years entered a drug store and said to the druggist: "Have you any cream for restoring the complexion?" "Restoring, miss? You mean preserving!" said the druggist heartily. And he sold the woman more than $10.00 worth of cosmetics.

COALS OF FIRE

A farmer boy went to the city against his father's wishes. The old man wanted the boy to help him on the farm, and predicted disaster for him in the big town.

Evidently the father was wrong, for in his first letter home the boy wrote: "I have a fine position with a good company; that's a feather in my cap." In his second letter he said, "I am breaking into society and have been put up for a good club; that's another feather in my cap." Then he wrote, "I am engaged to the most popular girl in town; that's still another feather in my cap."

There were no more letters for a time until one day the father received a wire collect, saying: "Please telegraph me railroad fare home; I'm broke."

To which the father wired back: "Nothing doing! Take the feathers out of your cap, stick them on your back and fly home!"

WHAT IS AN ADVERTISEMENT?

When Davy Putnam was a very little boy he once asked his celebrated father what an advertisement was. His aunt, who early made a habit of recording every interesting occurrence in the young explorer's life, recently revealed the reply. It was: "An advertisement is the picture of a pretty girl eating, wearing, holding or driving something that somebody wants to sell."

Newspaper advertising is one kind that does not antagonize the prospective customer, but on the other hand is pleasing to the reader when properly worded. Many other forms of advertising are only tolerated by the customer, because he has no chance to escape it.

Pampa is after contractors and owners who fail to take out building permits in that city. A recent ruling will make it impossible for the electrical and plumbing contractors to get permission to work on any building that has not a building permit tacked somewhere about it. There seems to be a great deal of respect of this character in McLean, and it might be a good idea for the council to put some teeth in the building ordinance here. The securing of a building permit is only a bit of red tape that costs the building nothing, but may mean a great deal to the welfare of the city, and the owner as well.

ANVIL PARK RODEO NEWS BULLETIN

Canadian, Texas, May 21.—The 7th annual Rodeo and Cowboys Reunion will be held here June 13, 14 and 15 this year. Preparations are in hand to make this the largest show that has ever been held in the North Panhandle. Livestock is arriving every few days, consisting of Brahms steers to ride, and Mexican longhorns for the steer wrestling. The Corporation has been accumulating bucking horses for the last seven years in the Southwest, and today they have 50 head of top bucking horses, that are carried on green pastures and fed during the winter months to buck a few seconds each day for the three days rodeo held here each year. These horses are given a critical test and examination for their fitness to buck.

Leonard Stroud and his Congress of Cowboys and Cowgirls will have charge of all specialty acts consisting of trick and fancy riding, roping, hurdle jumping, roman standing riding, etc. Leonard is one of the pioneer and topnotch showmen of the United States, and the Rodeo Corporation consider themselves very fortunate in securing the services of so able a showman. Mr. Stroud has been a World's Champion cowboy athlete for a number of years, and he is even getting better each year in his new and thrilling acts that he will give for the approval of the spectators.

If you came last year, you will not miss it this year. Make your plans to attend the largest and best Rodeo ever given on the North Plains. Advertisement 1p

SALT

If you want to be smiling and fresh, and are anxious to stay that way, remember the story of Lot's wife. And don't look behind you today.

Reminiscence is often three foolish, Retrospection is apt to be sad; To turn into a pillar of rock salt, Of course would be just too bad.

The present is active and passing; The past has ceased to exist; The future lies far on before us Where the mountain-top's lost in the mist.

If you're living, your eyes are intent On the scenes and the roadway ahead; But if gazing at tracks you've stepped out of, You are a pillar of salt, and you're dead!
—W. A. W. in The Chaser.

All the machinery is on top— you never see it, never oil it, barely hear it

All the machinery is on top—do you realize the importance of this simple statement? This achievement is the result of fifteen years of painstaking research to determine the simplest, the most efficient design. It has made the General Electric Refrigerator one of the outstanding engineering accomplishments of recent times.

All the mechanism, together with a permanent supply of oil, is contained in an hermetically sealed steel casing. Here it is safe from dust and difficulties. This distinctively electric refrigerator operates so quietly you can scarcely hear it. It is plugged into any convenient outlet as simply as an electric iron—there is no plumbing, soldering or wiring to be done.

Please plan to visit our display rooms. Any model may be bought upon deferred payments.

GATHERIN IN THE "SUCKERS"

The National Better Business Bureau has estimated that questionable stock selling concerns issue "tipster sheets" which have a circulation of 15 million, to push the sale of questionable securities.

As a result of such activities, un-informed investors are defrauded of millions of dollars annually with little or no legal redress.

Don't go to a horse doctor if you seek advice on investments. Make inquiry from a reputable investment banker or responsible broker dealing in stocks or bonds listed on recognized exchanges.

AVERY Sled and Two-Row Listed Corn Cultivators
Give a good crop a good start.
When your listed corn is young, is the time to lay a foundation for profitable growth. Careful cultivation at this time brings a generous reward.
Listed corn farmers who work their corn through the early stages with Avery Sled and Two-Row Cultivators, bring down to the young crop exactly the required amount of finely pulverized soil and give their crop the best possible start. They do the most for the crop, in the easiest and best way, when good care is most needed.
In designing the Avery Sled Cultivator, which runs in the furrow astride the row, every essential has been provided for doing the work easily and accurately. The Avery Two-Row
Listed Corn Cultivator offers a broader draft of the same principle, but due to the exclusive Avery equalizers and other features, it cultivates two rows with the same ease and accuracy as does the single-row machine.
Avery Sled and Two-Row Cultivators bear the unmistakable quality characteristics of all Avery tools. Because they do better work and last longer, they are the most economical in the end to buy. They are built in America's finest implement factory—to meet a need that springs direct from the soil—by men inspired by 100 years of implement-building leadership.
Ask us for the details. We will gladly give you all the facts upon request.
There is a full line of famous Avery walking, riding and tractor plows, mowing implements, and Champion harvesting and haying machines.

MAKING BOYS AND GIRLS INTO BETTER CITIZENS

"Congratulations, Bert. I understand that your boy has been made leader of the Boy Scout Troop. I'll bet he's proud."

"He is. The weekly is going to print an article about him. . . And speaking of the weekly, do you know it was largely responsible for the Boy Scout movement in this town many years ago."

"I am not surprised. The weekly has always been identified with every progressive movement that will make better citizens of our boys and girls. Right now, you know, they are arousing public interest in a municipal playground so that the youngsters need not play in the streets where they are in danger of automobiles."

"That is one of the biggest responsibilities and duties of the community newspaper—to be a leader in welfare work for the children of the town and country—and how well our weekly has lived up to this duty! There isn't a single commendable project that has come up that it hasn't taken the lead in endorsing. Playgrounds, band stand, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, 4-H Clubs—the weekly has worked tirelessly to keep folks awake to the needs of our future citizens!"

MINUTE ANTIQUE ROADS

By E. E. Duffy
 Equated highways, still quite unimproved, have no honored place in the modern transportation scheme. Commercial use of the highway is made to an extent that bewilders the imagination. Railroad companies now operate bus lines. Motor coaches and in some instances have replaced branch line steam transportation. The latest railroad to enter the region which is now maintaining schedules between several principal cities of Nebraska. A significant feature of this service is that it carries passengers. A fairly clear picture of the importance of the highway may be obtained from the railroad passenger business of 1928 which show the lowest in 20 years. One of the leading business attributes this falling chief is that of increased passenger car and the bus. Recently highways are being paved today in a measure not anticipated a dozen years ago. Unquestionably much of this traffic is over roads as old fashioned as the collars. Automobiles are not used to juggle over washboards, holes, or surfaces that wear out as well as tires and other motive equipment. Buying new highways, a company can best serve itself by ordering roads thoroughly in keeping with its current traffic needs, and even greater importance, its potential needs. There is no way of measuring tomorrow's requirements, but it can be truthfully stated that not a single community in this country has more well paved roads than it has good use for. The matter of road building has peculiarities. The criticism has leveled that those making commercial use of the highways should be heavily taxed for the construction and upkeep of the roads. Examination of state and local records reveals commercial car owners are paying their share, and some more than their share, of the expense. Commercial cars are being more than public servants. All too frequently heavy vehicles are unduly blamed for the excessive wear and tear of the public highway. For streets naturally deteriorate under heavy traffic and clearly the community must build substantial funds for this commercial travel. Roads should be built that are smooth, continuous and durable. By so doing transportation is means that the public is benefited and its cost is lowered.

MAKING FRIENDS
 Happiest business in the world is that of making friends; investment on the street pays for dividends. Life is more than stock and bonds; love than rate per cent; he who gives in friendship's name reap as he has spent.—Rotary.

ILLINOIS HOUSEWIVES OUTLAW WATER BUCKETS

"Running water in every farm and small town home" has been adopted as the slogan of the Illinois Home Bureau Federation for the year 1929, and for the years to follow. The Home Bureau and other cooperating agencies have taken over the task of helping every housewife in the state to realize her dream of running water at the turn of a faucet and are offering several prizes to those who make the greatest improvement in their water supply systems. The sponsors of this contest are placing special emphasis on a supply of a pure, healthful drinking water in the home—from some other source than the old, germ-catching water bucket "full of poetry and poison." They are also particularly anxious that running water be piped into every farm kitchen to relieve the daily burden of the housewife. The University of Illinois is cooperating with this project by offering help and advice to anyone in the state who wishes to install a water system or sewage disposal system.

AND THEN THE FIGHT WAS ON

Wife—"I notice that you cut an article on 'How to live to be a hundred' out of the magazine. Why did you do that?"
 Hubby—"I was afraid your mother might read it."

RUNNING WATER CHEAPER ON FARMS THAN IN CITY

Farm and small town homes can be supplied with running water under pressure at less cost than homes located in some of the larger cities. A home water system adapted for farm and small town use will provide running water at an average cost of 1 cent per 100 gallons, while residents of New York City, for example, pay 2 cents for 141 gallons of water. Since a good home water system lasts for many years and operates at small cost, the expense per day or per week of use amounts to very little. This low cost of running water in the farm home exists in spite of the fact that the water system is one piece of equipment which is used many times a day throughout the year, and which probably does more than any other modern convenience to lighten the work of the housewife and to eliminate the drudgery of homemaking.

Miss Jewel McGowen, who recently won a cash prize in a short story writing contest sponsored by the Southern Memorial Association, has received a nice graduation gift from the Association. This was quite a surprise to Miss McGowen, and shows remarkable thoughtfulness upon the part of the officers of the Association.

NOT SO CHARITABLE

A man in a small town who was a conscientious churchgoer was called on by another woman of the same church an hour or so before church time. She found her seated in a small back room putting the finishing touches on a new dress which she wished to wear that morning. "What are you holed up in this back room for?" asked the caller. "Don't you suppose God can see you sewing in here?"
 "Yes, I do," smiled the worker, "but He won't make half the talk about it that the neighbors would if they saw me."

HELPING TO BUILD TEXAS

The Censorship Committee of the Gainesville Retail Merchants Association last year saved Gainesville merchants $5,500 by "turning down" worthless or fraudulent advertising schemes. A $5 fine is levied against members patronizing schemes not sanctioned by the censors. Of 31 advertising "schemes" submitted, only three were recommended to members.

Petroleum and natural gas represent the most important mineral resources of Texas, but granite, marble, graphite, gold, silver, copper, iron, ichthyol, lead, zinc, tin, quicksilver (mercury), sulphur, borax, gypsum and mica are found in either the Central Mineral or the Trans-Pecos region, while coal and lignite are produced in many parts of the state. Potash and other valuable minerals are known to exist in Texas, but have not been developed. Asphalt, carbon black, celestite, cement, clays, including several deposits of kaolin, Fuller's earth, gas, natural gasoline, guano, limestone and lime, maganese—all are produced in Texas.

The Texas public road system comprises about 180,000 miles, of which nearly 20,000 miles are known as "improved." State and Federal highways total 9,645 miles and there are about 10,000 miles of gravel, sand-clay or other "improved roads."

The new livestock coliseum, now under construction at the State Fair grounds in Dallas, will be one of the largest buildings of its kind in America, having an arena space of 100 by 168 feet, and a seating capacity of six thousand.

More than 200 bands from various sections of the state are expected to be entered in the $10,000 band contest to be held during the 1929 State Fair of Texas, according to officers of the Texas Band Teachers Association.

One-third of the commercial spinach crop of the United States is grown in Texas, most of it in the Rio Grande Valley.

Although relatively a new crop, Texas now ranks third in citrus fruit production in quantity and first in quality.

Texas ranks second in value of exports with raw cotton first in value of its exports.

THE PHILLY-LOO BIRD

These editor of the Publishers Auxiliary, a trade paper put out by the Western Newspaper Union, wants to know something of the habits and life of the Philly-loo bird. We never saw one, but from those who have we learn that the Philly-loo bird is a frequenter of golf courses, and lives in the south in winter and any place where a golf course is used in summer. To the average golfer the bird is invisible, which accounts for the fact that few people have seen one.

If a golf player makes a hole in a certain number of strokes by playing perfect golf he is said to "par" the hole. If he makes that hole in one stroke under par he shoots a "birdie." If he shoots it in two under par he has shot an "eagle." And if he makes it in three shots under par he has shot a "dodo." And only those golfers who have shot a "dodo" or have made a hole in one shot, are able to see the Philly-loo bird. It is invisible to all others.

The Philly-loo bird's chief article of diet is lost golf balls. If you drive a ball right down the center of the fairway, and are unable to find it, you may be pretty sure that Philly-loo bird has gobbled it up. When you lose a ball in the rough, or in a ditch, it is a pretty good bet that the Philly-loo bird has nabbed it. And the strangest thing about the matter is that as soon as the golf ball is swallowed by the bird, the ball becomes invisible. And this invisibility of the bird makes it extremely hard to capture or kill, as only a few people can see it.

The only method used so far in killing this bird with any degree of certainty is to use specially prepared balls as bait. You take some red and white striped stick candy and dissolve it in hot water, making striped paint. Paint the golf balls with this striped paint and when the Philly-loo bird swallows the ball the paint will still be visible so you can locate the bird.

To kill it, the best way is to cut out a section from the heart of a tornado, where the air pressure is motion. Armed with this section of rarified atmosphere you get as close as possible to the bird and throw the rare atmosphere all over him. Then the bird just flies to pieces and the ball drops at your feet.—Clafin (Kans.) Clarion.

Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Wallace of Lelia Lake and Mrs. N. E. Gambrell of Fort Worth visited the ladies' sister, Mrs. Annie Wilkins, the first of the week.
