Water Extension Work Progressing Toward Completion

The work of laying larger water mains begun some few days ago is progressing very nicely. Six cars of pipe has been unloaded, and while some coupling that were expected were not included in the shipment, it will occasion no delay, as work will be done in the outlying districts until the coupling arrives.

We are assured that the inconvenience caused by cutting the water supply off without warning will not occur again, and the work in the thicker settled part of town will be done in small sections and finished as they go. Any water cut off will be reported to the citizens affected in plenty of time to occasion no inconvenience.

No untoward accident has happened, and the work should be completed promptly within the time allotted.

TAMPKE WILL DO CAPONIZING FREE

Prof. A. A. Tampke has recently caponized cockerels from four different poultry flocks and reports that the loss by operating is less than one per cent. In some flocks there was no loss at all. The work is FREE, and the profits on capons are large. The cockerels when caponized gain 3 to 5 pounds above normal weight, bring 4 to 6 cents a're per pound, their meat remains tender, and capons often make excellent mothers for small chicks.

The best marketing time for capons is when they are 8 to 10 months old.

BAPTIST REVIVAL IN PROGRESS AT SKILLET

Rev. David H. Brynoff, pastor of the First Baptist church, is conducting a revival at the Skillet school house this week.

CHURCH OF THE NAZARENE

W. Hickman, Pastor

Last Sunday was a day of wonderful victory for our people. The glory of the Lord came on the morning service and hearts were made to rejoice.

Our revival campaign will start next Sunday, Aug. 25. The services will be held under a tabernacle one block west of the postoffice, and will be conducted by Rev. Mack Anderson of Hutchinson, Kans. We are praying and believing for an old-time revival of Holy Ghost religion when men and women, boys and girls can really get saved from a life of sin. We are longing to hear the shouts of new-born souls. Come and help us in the battle against sin. We covet the cooperation of the other pastors and their people. Come and bring your friends.

FIRE DESTROYS SMALL BUILDING TUESDAY

Fire destroyed a small vacant building on the A. T. Wilson block on railroad street Tuesday night.

The fire department made a run, but the fire had made too much headway, the building being small and most of the windows and doors open, to save the property.

Mr. Wilson suffered a similar loss on this block a few weeks ago.

The Old Home Town

by A. J. DUNLAP

I'm an old fashioned country town
And the cynical strangers sneer
At my shabby old buildings and barns
And my quaint rustic atmosphere.
But I know there are hearts that quicken,
There are eyes that are dimmed with tears
At the name of the Old Home Town,
With its memories of vanished years;
For their grandfathers staked my streets
And their fathers were boys of mine,
And the memories of sweethearts linger
In my roses and columbine.

AGRICULTURE BOYS MAY HAVE COURSE EXPLAINED

Prof. A. A. Tampke says that any boys wishing to enroll in vocational agriculture in school this year and wishing to have the nature of the course explained, may see him any time. He will offer 1 1/2 credit in 1st year agriculture, 1 1/2 in second year, and intends to offer 3rd year, which he hopes to affiliate for one more credit. The school now has three units of affiliation in agriculture and plans to get the fourth unit this year.

He also plans on training six teams this year, namely: livestock, dairy, poultry, shop, plant production, entomology, and perhaps goat judging.

The contests he expects to enter are: Texas Tech, Plainview Dairy Show, Goodwell, Okla. A & M, and Texas A & M.

There will be trophies, medals, ribbons, cash and scholarships to be won in the various contests.

COMMISSIONERS BUY WOOD FURNITURE

Gray county commissioners rejected the low bid for wood furniture for the new court house last Thursday, accepting the second high proposition that cost over $2,000 more.

Commissioner Lewis O. Cox voted against the purchase, but was outvoted by Commissioners Tom Kirby and J. R. White, Commissioner M. M. Newman being absent.

The furniture accepted will cost the county $16,030.09. The low bid was $13,880.57.

The steel fixtures were purchased at the same meeting, the low bidder being successful with a price of $12,419.

In commenting on the purchase of the more expensive wood furniture, Judge Duncan said the quality of the furniture purchased was superior to other lines offered.

PAMPA BOND ISSUES WIN

A big majority of votes was cast for the $238,000 bond issues at Pampa Tuesday, when 363 of Pampa's 800 qualified voters expressed their wishes at the polls.

The issue was for a $100,000 city hall, $85,000 for paving, $33,000 for a fire station and $20,000 for parks and playgrounds.

CITY ASKED TO TAKE CHARGE OF CEMETERY

At the regular monthly meeting of the city council held last week, C. S. Rice and A. A. Callahan appeared before the body, representing the Cemetery Association, and asked that the city take over the care of the cemetery.

The fact was brought out that the cemetery belongs to the city and all deeds are signed by the city officials. Of late years it has been impossible to get enough interested citizens present at a cemetery meeting to elect officers for the association.

The cemetery needs care each year, and the association has no way of making money for this purpose, while if it was under the direct control of the city, provisions for upkeep could be made.

No action was taken by the council, the matter being held over until the next meeting.

CHAPTER X

"Fie, Sir Percy!"

Little Madeleine Desaze was very shy. She had been brought by her father to pay her respects to Monseigneur le Prince de Galles because mamma was too ill to accompany her.

"I don't remember much, monseigneur," Madeleine said shyly. "Mamma and I were too frightened to notice anything. There was so much shouting and fighting. It was terrible."

"Shall I tell you what happened little one?" his royal highness was pleased to say.

"Your highness, steaming punch is served in the yellow drawing room," a pleasant voice interposed, with the assurance of privilege.

"Fie, Sir Percy!" exclaimed pretty Lady Alicia Nugget, "would you spoil his highness' story?"

"Rather than that let good punch spoil with cooling, dear lady," Sir Percy retorted with a smile.

"Seize him and garrotte him," his highness broke in with a laugh, "as our gallant hero and his friends seized and garrotted a chief of section, whatever that may be, and his powerful friend from Paris."

"Seize him! Garrotte him!" cried many a pair of charmingly rouged lips.

The next moment Sir Percy Blake-ney, that prince of dandies, saw himself fettered by a number of lovely arms, while gay voices chirruping like birds cried, "The story, your highness, we entreat! He cannot interrupt now."

"I have the story from one who knows," his highness resumed with a smile, "and our little friend Madeleine shall hear it. It was thus. Our gallant Scarlet Pimpernel, in one of his naipiest disguises as a drover from Alincourt, did, with the aid of two of his followers, egg on a number of young louts into the belief that they were being cheated out of the reward due to them for the capture of the noted English adventurers in their district. Full of enthusiasm and excellent wine, they came on the chief of section, who, I imagine, answers to our chief constable of a county, together with a gentleman from Paris whom some of us have known in the past. Well, the young louts, eager for the fray, and always egged on by the drover from Alincourt, seized and garrotted those two worthy gentlemen and, throwing them into the cart, took 'less along with them. In the forest of Mesieres they came upon the diligence, in which were our little friend Madeleine and her parents. The vehicle was ostentatiously guarded by four troopers only, but our Scarlet Pimpernel and his friends had already ascertained that as a matter of fact there were half a dozen more men inside the coach, and that all were armed to the teeth. Altogether too many for three men to tackle; and since the chief motto of our band of heroes is never to attempt where they cannot succeed, stratagem had here to come to the aid of valor."

"And what did they do?" one of the ladies queried breathlessly.

"The drover from Alincourt, our gallant Scarlet Pimpernel," his highness replied, "brought the cart to a standstill about a quarter of a mile from the crest of the hill where the diligence had come to a halt prepared for an attack. Then he allowed the louts to rush the vehicle, and a general melee ensued. But he and his two followers in the meantime lifted the chief of section and his friend out of the cart and carried them up the road to a point from which their call for help would presently be heard. Here they left them in the ditch, but carefully took the gas from their mouths."

"Immediately the two worthy gentlemen started to shout. Nor could they be blamed, for their plight was indeed pitiable. At first there was so much din in the melee at the top of the hill that their cries could not be heard. And in the meanwhile one of our gallant heroes had crept up through the thicket to the crest of the hill. Then presently the fighting ceased. The enthusiastic captain of gendarmes heard the cries for help, accompanied by a good deal of shouting and clash of metal carried on by the Scarlet Pimpernel himself and his second follower. Now do you see what was the result of this maneuver?"

"No! No!" the ladies exclaimed. "And the men, no less enthusiastic and interested, cried, 'Will your highness proceed?'"

"The prisoners let out the secret that the chief of section and his friend were lying bound with ropes in a ditch, while one of our heroes—the one who had gone back to the scene of the fight and mingled with the crowd—was able to put in a word that no doubt those two great and worthy citizens were being attacked and murdered by the English spies. The English spies! You have no conception, ladies, what magic lies in those three words for every soldier of the republic. They mean hopes of promotion and of big monetary reward. In an instant the enthusiastic captain had called to some of his men to follow him, to go to the rescue of their chief of section, and incidentally to capture the Scarlet Pimpernel.

"And that was the immediate outcome of the clever stratagem. The captain divided his forces. Three he took with him, two were left to bring the prisoners along, another had been sent as courier with a message. Three only were left to guard the diligence. The gallant Scarlet Pimpernel had made a clever calculation. Already by a small ruse he had rid himself of the cart. Under cover of the darkness his two equally gallant followers had crept underneath the vehicle, while he waited in the thicket for the right time to strike.

"I leave you to guess the rest. The three remaining soldiers taken unawares, the horses unsaddled, the diligence finally driven down the hill by our hero, while inside the coach his two followers were doing their best to assure little Madeleine and her parents that all was well. Soon they abandoned the cumbersome diligence and took to the road. That part of the story is perhaps less exciting though no less heroic. The Scarlet Pimpernel has nineteen followers: it was their task to be on the road, to aid the fugitives with disguises, to help in the great task of reaching the coast in safety.

"And that, ladies and gentlemen, is the story," his highness concluded, rising. "Let us go and drink some of my friend Blakeney's excellent punch. But after we have drunk our toast for the king, let us raise our glasses to our national hero, the Scarlet Pimpernel."

With a courtly bow and a smile he offered his arm to Marguerite Blakeney who, with a glistening tear in her beautiful eyes, gave his highness a glance of gratitude.

"Are you coming, Blakeney?" the prince said with a merry laugh. "You must drink our toast, too, remember. To the gallant Scarlet Pimpernel!"

All the ladies laughed, partly with glee, but also with excitement. Then with one accord they cried, "Come and drink, Sir Percy, to the gallant Scarlet Pimpernel!"

"I'll come, dear ladies," Sir Percy said with a sigh, "since his highness commands, but you'll forgive me if I cannot drink to that damned, elusive shadow."

Laughing still, the ladies cried, "Fie, Sir Percy! Jealous again?"

And little Madeleine, with her great childish gaze fixed upon the handsome English gentleman, cried in her piping little voice "Fie, Sir Percy!"

[THE END.]

Next week the opening chapter of "Ginger Ella," a new novel by the author of "Prudence of the Parsonage" will appear on this page. The new story is full of pep, zip and sparkle—a finely pleasing and cheerful story.

PIGMY CANDIDATES

As long as we have the primary system—and we do not wish to abolish it—there will probably be no way to keep the pigmies from running for office. Every time we have a governor's election a lot of little fellows who are hardly known outside the home bailwick and who have done little to command recognition even there jump up and announce as candidates for governor. Some of them do so with a flippancy that would amaze the most flippant flapper on her way to a wild party. Others announce with a solemn mien that would do credit to a supreme court judge, seemingly oblivious to the fact, which is patent to everybody else, that they have no more qualifications for the position than a poodle dog would have for the presidency of a bulldog convention. It would be ludicrous if it did not tend to cheapen and to belittle the serious and important business of running for the governorship of a great state. We wish there were some way of keeping Fido and the poodle dogs out.—Lynn County News.

FUNNY WOMEN

Some fellows are always trying to take all the pleasure out of the lives of the fair sex by making light of their peculiarities, as they are termed. A cartoonist lately tried his hand on this in the way of dress, or undress as he terms it. As he sees the matter, and he claims to be a close observer, she will sit around the parlor with a dress on short enough to show at least three or four inches of naked hide between where the stocking—if any—and where other feminine wearing apparel starts, but she is dressed up. She will lie out on the beaches with two-thirds of her anatomy exposed, but hat's regular, too. She appears at the opera or dance with her spinal column exposed from end to end, as well as a lot of her womanly chest—still in prime form. But, says the critic, she won't let her most intimate male companions see her in her pajamas, which means a fur collar reaching from her pink little ears to her insteps—'cause she ain't dressed. They're funny that way, says the cartoonist.—Brownfield Herald.

W. C. Cheney has returned from a trip to his old home in Illinois. Mr. Cheney says the highways and roads in that state are nearly all paved, all work being done by the state highway department. Mr. Cheney attended a family reunion at Benton, Ark., en route home.

ON CLEVELAND stopped the roadster at the gate of an estate that sat by the wayside. Cousin Phyllis," said "turning lovely green eyes on the middle-aged relative, "here is the Cleveland homestead, and it is awfully lonesome to me!" Phyllis squeaked dismayfully. "Marion—let us go and find Brown and then look for Sam to clear up the yard." Phyllis started the car and they drove down the street and stopped at the house where Letty Brown lived. Phyllis alighted and went to about Letty herself. Presently she came back with a stout, comfortable-looking woman who greeted her with indulgent affection. Phyllis climbed into the rumble seat with her belongings, she smiled. She sat there proudly as the roadster went along and at a small, mean house with shutters. "Sam, ma'am, he's left town," said Letty. "When?" gasped Phyllis. "Guess, ma'am. It was drearily about a month ago." "What artist? What right had he to rent it?" "Adams, ma'am, I think his name is—a real nice, harmless man. He lives in the little east wing and eats at the inn. Spends a lot of time out on the bay—jest goes the back gate and gets into his and off he goes paintin'." "That did Judge Lanis think about asking Marion Cleveland." "I reckon de judge don't think much more about yearbly things, ma'am. He went to glory about a month ago." "Then the roadster drew up at the gate. Phyllis entered the great dusky hall. Marion threw open the doors in large rooms where a green glow shined, for all the window shutters were tightly closed. "You go and raise all the window shades and open the shutters and the windows," commanded Miss Phyllis. When Letty had departed from her window job, Miss Phyllis gently grasped Marion's arm and opened in her ear. "Did you hear 'und upstairs?" Marion nodded. "A cautious sound like someone was there who had no right to be there! Suppose we find painter, Mr. Adams, first." When they went outside and looked at the outer door of the two wing, and the door opened revealed a young man in a paint smock, with a pipe between his lips. He smiled pleasantly. "Are you Mr. Adams?" inquired Miss Phyllis, and that being settled, she led Sam down on the steps and told how Sam Willis had abused her. When she had told the whole story, Mr. Adams shook his head helplessly. "I am sorry, Miss Cleveland, but I thought it queer that such a character as Willis should be in charge of this fine old place, he gave me what appeared to be a good receipt for the rent, and not so long ago suddenly appeared one night and asked for another month. So you see, I have paid the rent up to the first of October. Of course, if you consider it an intrusion, I will pack and go over to the inn tonight. I hope that you will let me stay, but see, I am painting your old place on the bay, and it is getting along pretty well." Just at that moment they heard Letty's voice lifted in shrill screeches from the front of the house, and Adams brushing hastily past them, hurried to the front yard. "Yes, sah!" sobbed Letty hysterically. "I was opening this here shutters when suddenly I turned my eye and I see the front door open, slow—slow-like and then I see an old man and a nose—white man's nose—and then I yelled and he dodged back in." "Be calm, Letty, no harm will come of you. Just some tramp, I suppose." When he suddenly darted away to the back yard and the women heard masculine voices in argument. Presently Mr. Adams returned and in his strong fingers was the shirt collar of Samuel Willis, who looked fiercer than ever, and very much ashamed. "Just caught him sneaking out of the back door, Miss Cleveland," he said to Cousin Phyllis. "Sam is awfully ashamed of himself, but I can certainly tempt him to rent the east wing to me and pocket two months' rent. He has been hiding in the attic over your summer kitchen, coming over to Benavertown nights for good time and to buy supplies, and now coming back here to hide. He won't spend all the sixty dollars yet, will you, Sam?" Sam shamefacedly paid most of the sixty dollars to Miss Phyllis and quickly cleared up the whole place in immaculate order. When the first of October came, John Adams was so much in love with Marion that he confessed it to Phyllis. "I guess it is mutual, John," smiled Miss Phyllis. "and we certainly need a man around the place." So he married Marion and they are still there.

LET 'EM SAY YOU'RE CRAZY: WHADDA YOU CARE?

"Since 1902," writes Dwight C. Rose, "savings banks and insurance companies have in the aggregate probably suffered greater loss through unsuccessful speculation on the trend of interest rates than through any other form of investment or speculation." In other words, the financial wise-acs were 100 per cent off their trolleys twenty-seven years ago. Every 15 years or so some new scientific truth appears and upsets half the accepted scientific truths, which drives the scientists cuckoo and gets their goat besides. And ever so often somebody discovers that for two centuries school teaching has made less progress than tobacco chewing, and the schoolmarm goes wild when you remind them of it. It just seems that everybody's more or less half-cracked, immature, unbalanced, provincial, one-sided, stupid, stolid, humdrum, prey, flat and stale, heavy in the head. We all aughed out loud at the old Thorne and Simplex typesetting machines, and in turn at the linotype and monotype. We all used to give advertising the ha-ha. (We were so darned smart ourselves). Think of pulling a carriage without a horse—ha-ha! Think of a flying machine—hee-hee! So, when somebody tells us we're "all crazy let's be broadminded. Let's answer, "Well, you can't hurt our feelings."—"Spinal Columns."

Friend—"You give your clerks two weeks vacation every year, don't you?" Employer—"Yes, but they take a month."

Friend—"How do they do it?" Employer—"Besides the two weeks in their own vacation they take two weeks when I go on mine."

Ginger Ella

by Ethel Hueston

AN attractive girl, a girl of heart and soul is the subject of this latest tale by Ethel Hueston. Her brain works like lightning and the fact that it does not always work in a straight line makes her even more enchanting. Like the earlier works of this authoress, the setting is a parsonage in the sweet, green, hilly farm country of Iowa.

New Homes out of Old Homes

THROUGHOUT America there are countless substantial frame houses built years ago whose value has shrunk chiefly because they lack modern arrangements and do not conform to present-day architectural beauty.

What shall be done with these sturdy old dwellings—junk them? Sell them for "a song"? Abandon the value of fine old trees? Sacrifice all sentimental attachments?

Certainly not! If the old house is built of wood, easily and economically you can modernize it and make it again valuable, beautiful and livable.

Furthermore, modernizing can be done to fit the purse or income—the first year perhaps a new porch and new dormers to relieve a plain roof; later new floors, enlarged rooms, an added wing. These and other changes can be made easily and at reasonable cost.

We are prepared to supply you with good lumber and other building materials to mix with the time-seasoned wood of the old house; oak flooring—doors and windows of easily workable California White Pine.

We will be glad to submit estimates without obligation

A man builds a fine house to live in, giving employment to many people and improving the community, which is a source of expense to the owner, yet we tax him for his improvement each year thereafter. The single taxers may have something in their favor after all.

A smile on the face is worth a lot more than one sent by mail, and that is where the local merchant has the advantage of the mail order houses. If the merchant would spend 30 minutes each week, in the exclusion of everything else, in planning his advertisement for the home paper, the catalog houses would not bother him much.

Several states have found that it pays to have highway funds handled by the state department without help from the county, and while we sometimes like to boast of spending the money by home folks, it would seem that more connected roadways could be accomplished by the state disbursement of funds.

The United States Forestry Division is urging all vacationists to be careful of fire. Over 40 million dollars of fire loss each year is attributed to the carelessness of cigarette smokers, not including forest fires or grain fires; however, it is known that 20,000 forest fires were started by smokers in 1927. Familiarity leads to carelessness, but the money involved should cause smokers to think of consequences, at least while on vacations in the national forests.

Towns have found that one good way to attract the farmer's trade is to have plenty of parking space for cars. An Illinois town tore down a group of old buildings under the direction of the city officials and business men to make a spacious parking space, and their rural trade has more than doubled. Where towns can afford it, getting the cars off the streets on paved parking spaces has paid big returns, but regardless of local conditions, the more spaces to park the better the invitation to trade.

"Five hundred dollars for that old worn-out flivver of yours! Impossible! Who'd ever pay that?"

"The auto school. They wanted it for the students to practice on, and it certainly had everything that could be wrong with a car."

Eloise—"Just think of it! A few turns of the knob and you get China!"
Aloysius—"Yes, just think of it! A few turns of a knob and you get 20 years!"

Dr. Fultz (filling in birth certificate)—"Let's see, this is the 10th, isn't it?"

Mrs. Bell—"Oh, my, no—only the third."

Margy—"What a wonderful cook you have. I wish I had one like that."

Stella—"It's the one you discharged last week, dearie. I told her you were lunching with me."

TO MUSIC PATRONS

I shall begin my fall class Monday, Sept. 2, and extend a welcome to all former students as well as to the new.

Beginning with this term, I am asking that you pay in advance or make other satisfactory arrangements, so I may know what to depend upon. In case of absence, the money will be either refunded or applied on bill for the following month. I shall follow the same reward plan this year that we used last year—a gold pin for perfect attendance and average grade of 95 for 10 months; a silver pin for grade of 90 to 95.

Prices the same as last year: $7.50 per month (4 weeks) for two private lessons and one class lesson each week; $5 per month for one private lesson and one class lesson. Class lesson for beginners, where there are only two in class, $5.00 each; for 3 or 4 in class, $4.00 each. Have decided to use the Visuola again this year.

THE FAITHFUL FEW

When the meeting's called to order
And you look about the room,
You are sure to see some faces
That from out the shadows loom.
They are always at the meeting
And will stay until it's through.
The ones that I refer to,
Are the always faithful few.

They fill the many offices
And are always on the spot,
No matter what the weather,
Be it cold or be it hot.
It may be dark and rainy,
Still they are tried and true.
The ones that you rely on
Are the always faithful few.

There are lots of worthy members
Who will come when in the mood.
When everything's convenient,
They will do a little good.
They're a factor in the meeting,
And aer necessary, too,
But the ones who never fail us
Are the always faithful few.

If it were not for the faithful,
Whose shoulder at the wheel
Keeps the institution moving
Without a halt or reel;
What would be the fate of meetings
Where we claim so much to do?
They surely would be failures
If we lacked the faithful few.
—Alice Marks in Daughters of America Magazine.

CONTRAST

It's failures makes the victory sweet,
For care and joy are kith and kin.
Who's never had to take defeat
Knows not how good it is to win.

The rough road oft is hard to face,
But only they appreciate
The level miles, unknown to care,
Who've had the rough to navigate.

Men weary of the cloudless sky,
They need the darkness and the rain,
The dreary days to look on high,
And greet the sun with smiles again.

If there were never tears to shed
And never burdens hard to bear,
Though round us roses blossomed red,
We'd pass them by and cease to care.

So stand to failure and the blow
And keep the faith when grief appears.

For out of care shall glory grow,
The sweetest smiles are moist with tears.

—Edgar A. Guest.

Only through the weekly newspaper can folks find out what their friends and neighbors are doing.

WHAT ARE THE NEIGHBORS DOING?

"Hello, Burt. You look tired. Had a hard day?"
"Yes, Joe, pretty busy today. Not only that, but everyone dropped in to the store to congratulate me on the new arrival. Kept me on the jump."

"That's right: I saw the piece about it in the paper. The editor wrote quite an article about it, didn't he?"

"As soon as one of these 'Personals' gets in the paper, nearly everyone in the community knows about it. Fact is, they make interesting newsy stories and folks look for them. People want to know what their neighbors are doing, and reading the paper is the only way to find out. The first thing I do when I get home on Thursdays is to read the paper through."

"Jim Preston, that drummer from the city, was in to see me today. He knows a lot of people here; he picked up the paper from my desk and enjoyed reading all the news bits about them. He told me, rather enviously, that he wished the metropolitan papers could do a stunt like that. They carry feature articles by their foreign correspondents, but not a word about a man's next-door-neighbor."

"A lot of folks here take the city papers, but when they have read the Big League stories and the latest about Lindbergh and Mussolini, they're through. But you can bet they read the weekly thoroughly. Especially the women. They are the ones who are interested in local news, possibly more than we are."

"Yes, and that is why advertising in our paper pays. The women folks do the buying now-a-days, and they don't miss a thing—news or advertising. I buy space regularly."

THE MATTER OF DRESS

As summer heat has taught us things. We have more respect for the sagacity of the feminine sex. Our first vote was cast about the same time that women were asked the franchise, we have never thought much about the matter. We had the old frost-beards deplore the times—prate of the days when women were women—and stay-at-home tending their young and eating three meals per diem over a stove.

But our hat comes off to the ladies. Stand one hundred per cent on conviction that they have plenty of sense—common or otherwise—especially at this season of the year.

On the matter of clothes. Place a sweet young thing's raiment on scales and the beam will tip at one and a half pounds. Place the total with which this editor is vested—wool, straw, leather and cotton—on the scales, and the weight will be slightly under ten pounds. Ask anybody if the difference between one and one-half and nine and one-half pounds don't make a whale of a difference when the thermometer reads 104 in the shade.

Why should man shrivel and drip with perspiration these hot summer days? The answer is easy—because of custom. But does woman pay any attention to custom? Years ago custom decreed voluminous skirts, numerous petticoats, high neck bands, a modern Eve does not care a fig for custom. She goes clad in backless, sleeveless, sheer creations, two-piece undergarments, chiffon hose. But in the head of the household, the reins of business, the ruler of the world, sticks to custom, the traditions of his fathers, and shrivels in a sweat.

Of course man might not appear to his best advantage in a pair of track pants, sleeveless, low neck shirt, a straw hat and a smile—but by the records he would be cooler.—Collingsworth Standard.

HE BARELY ESCAPED

"I hadn't quite figured on taking my vacation at this time," said Skinspelse to a stranger in the smoker, as the train slid out of the station. "But I'm taking it just the same. Invariably these mornings I have to get the kid out of bed so he can do the various chores of the day before the sun gets so blamed hot. So this morning early I went into Jimmie's room and applied the flat of my hand to him where it would do the most good."

"There," I said, upon returning to my own bedroom. "I guess that will wake Jimmie all right. I went to his room, turned back the bedclothes and gave him a good spanking!"

"What?" shrieked my wife. "Jimmie stayed with the Jones boys last night and I put mother in his room!"

"So I left the house early, and here I am on my vacation."

POULTRY FLOCK PAYS

Roby.—A return in one month of 70¢ per hen from 51 hens properly fed and cared for has been obtained by Mrs. Bennie Kidd, owner of one of the nine Fisher county home demonstration poultry flocks. A neighbor received but eight cents per hen from a flock of 50 that gets no feed except that around the stacks. Mrs. Kidd's hens laid an average of more than 16 eggs, while the other flock laid half that number. A net profit above feed cost of more than 30 cents per hen was made by another poultry demonstrator, Mrs. Muriel Cunningham, who had a flock of 166 birds.

MERCHANTS GYPED

We had a fellow in the office this week, seeking the endorsement of the chamber of commerce to an advertising scheme that was "GYP" advertising of the rankiest sort. We refused to endorse his proposition, but were informed by him that he would sell it without our approval, and we guess he did. If business men would refuse to waste money on out of town promoters, they would soon cease their visit, but when one of them puts a thing over, he passes the word on to others.—Sec. C. of C. in Brownfield Herald.

CHILDREN CAN EXPLAIN

A brother and sister, six and four years of age, respectively, spent a considerable part of each day playing together. One day their father found them sitting in little red chairs, rocking their dolls. He inquired of them what it was they were playing, and they replied, "Mothers," explaining further that they were both "widows."

"How can that be?" asked the father.

"Oh," they said, "we're married to dead men."—Pathfinder.

San Antonio.—After deducting for feed, mortality, and depreciation of stock, a net profit of $5.39 for each of 40 home raised White Leghorn pullets has been made in eight months' time by Herbert Rittman, Bear 4-H Club boy. Entering his flock in the third annual farm flock contest here, Herbert closely followed the instructions of Paul Cunyus, assistant county agent, as to feeding and housing and management. His flock averaged 73% production through this period ending June 30th, and the eggs were sold for an average of 39.9 cents per dozen. One year ago this young poultryman made a net profit of $3.50 per bird from a flock of 100 Barred Rocks.

A Disturbed Decision

By A. W. PEACH

SOMETIMES it seems as if into our moments of supreme happiness fate dropped a regret or disaster that immediately comes pretty near to dissolving that happiness. So it seemed to Richard Marsh as he read and re-read the letter upon his desk.

The preceding evening he had gone to the little cottage at the end of the broad street where Avery Wells lived with her pleasant-faced mother, and there, in the homelike quiet of the cottage living room, he had looked into Avery's dark eyes and asked the question as bravely as he could, which she had answered in a whisper.

He had spent most of the night dreaming in his room, building castles. He loved the village, and the village people treated him. His future did not promise glory and gold, but it did promise happiness with Avery to share it with him. And now, from beyond the grave, Brinner had reached with bitter ingenuity to wreck a dream he could not share.

Marsh turned to the letter. It was from a law firm in Philadelphia. It said in precise phrases that Edgar Brinner had died, that in his will a bequest of $100,000 was made to Miss Avery Wells.

He knew that as far as he was concerned two things were plain; he could not marry Avery if she accepted this money bequeathed to her by his old and bitter rival; yet that sum of money meant for her and her mother independence and comfort, the relief of worry, after long years of severe and frugal living.

One thing he was sure of; if Avery knew how he felt, she would not accept the bequest. Marsh reasoned, "I cannot ask her to give the fortune over, and Brinner knew I would not. Funny, how a dead man in his grave can tangle up the living."

Under the stress of his suffering memories, his thinking became a bit hazy, but he came to a decision. He heard the jingling sleighbells, the hearty greetings as men came into the post office below him; faint as they were they were clear enough to make him think of the wholesome, friendly life of his village. With the thought came his decision. A friend in a northern city had written to him, repentedly to join him where opportunity was wide and money ready. He would go, refuse to assume charge of the fund and shut the door quietly but firmly in his little house of dreams.

A week passed. He did not see Avery, and pleaded as an excuse that he was very busy. He was—in the grievous business of slowly sundering all ties that bound him to the home of his boyhood and his manhood.

Sometimes he was doubtful of the wisdom of his purpose, at times when his great longing for Avery broke through the barriers his judgment had set, at times when the dream castles loomed so brightly on the hills that they seemed almost real. But ever and anon he returned once more to his decision.

Then came the incident that clinched the matter. A friend had come in, his voice a thrill with the news. "Dick, what do you think? Brinner has left Avery $100,000! What makes you start? The news? I should think it would. And, say, Avery is going to accept it!"

"I stopped in to get her to sing at the church fair, and she told me about it—said she would. She was happy as a lark over it." His friend's face grew sober. "I suppose this will make a little difference with you, but not serious."

"Serious?" Marsh laughed bitterly, his mind whirling at the thought of her acceptance. He had hoped in a dim way she would refuse the money. "Serious? No, except I'm going to leave the village for good!"

The realization dawning upon him that he had given himself away under the strain, he swore his friend to silence, and he heard him pounding down the stairs, muttering as he went.

He turned to his desk. Dusk came down over the village.

He did not hear Avery until she stood beside him.

Then she spoke, and the office seemed filled with pleasant music. "Dear, Ted swore to keep his word to you, but he came to me; said he would keep no such fool promise as he made you. I think I know all that is wrong. They wrote me of the money, as Brinner told them to, that you were to have charge of it. You want me to have it for what you think is mother's happiness and mine, and you won't come to me if I do take it. You see, I know. Why, I couldn't take it. I couldn't be happy with it. I love you, the village and the ones I have known from girlhood. I couldn't touch a penny of it, because I knew how he got it. You see—"

He rose to his feet trembling. "But you accepted it!"

Her white teeth gleamed a bit in a smile. "For others! I'm going to turn every cent of it over to that hospital for crippled kiddies; you know, the one we visited. That visit nearly broke my heart—seeing them. I'm going to make his money forget its black past. Oh, my dear, I simply must have you! I simply must! Take me and say—"

The door opened slightly, and Ted stuck his head in, gasped at what he saw and with the utmost skill softly, limberly, gently closed it.

THE FS HAVE IT

A huge man bursting with anger crashed into the editor's office and shouted, "My name is John J. O'Rourke. Yesterday your paper printed an article about me, calling me a thief, a robber, a blackleg, a drunken sot, a cheat, a murderer and a lot of other things. Are you the man who wrote that article?"

"I am," admitted the editor faintly as he prepared to make his escape.

"Well," roared the big man. "I'm here to tell you that my middle letter is 'I' and not 'J,' and if you can't print my name correctly I wish you would please leave it out."

A DEAD ONE

St. Peter was interviewing the fair damsel at the pearly gate. "Did you, while on earth," he asked, "indulge in necking, petting, smoking, drinking or gambling?"

"Never!" she retorted, emphatically.

"Then why haven't you reported sooner?" said St. Peter. "You've been dead a long time!"

Wille—"Mamma says to tell you she sent me for two cans of pineapple and a bottle of whipping cream. She's too busy to find the change."

Grocer—"You tell mamma I sent you for two quarters, a dime and a nickel. I'm too busy to find my credit book."

May—"I had a premonition something dreadful was going to happen to me."

June—"And did it?"

May—"I'll say it has! My husband has got a month's leave of absence and he's going to spend it at the beach with me."

Youth—"I want to marry your daughter."

Old Man—"Um—and what are your prospects?"

Youth—"Great if you don't butt in."

"I heard a new story the other day. I wonder if I've told it to you?"

"Is it funny?"

"Yes."

"Then you haven't."

THAT'S DIFFERENT!

"Help, help! I'm drowning!" cried the venturesome miss at the beach.

"Were all married men," shouted Mr. Vascaugh.

"Never mind, then," replied the disappointed art. "I'll get to shore myself."

AND HOW!

When grandma was a lass of flapper age you bet there'd been an awful family row.

"I she'd done things the modern maidens do, and since she missed them then she uses 'em now!"

THE REASON

"What are you going out with Helen for? She wouldn't be good for anything."

"Well, that's the reason."

People who magnify the faults of others are always the last to see their own.

Conservative estimate is that Texas' wealth is increasing at the rate of more than $1,000,000 a day.
