New Gas Company Sure of Contract Amarillo-Pampa Entertainers at Lions Club Banquet

Lions and Ladies are Entertained

Hallowe'en Spirit Prevails at Banquet

Celebrating the Hallowe'en season, McLean Lions and their ladies enjoyed one of the best affairs of its kind ever staged here, Tuesday evening, with entertainers present from Amarillo and Pampa.

The banquet was called to order by President G. C. Boswell, and after being led by the club song director, A. Landers, with the club pianist, Jesse J. Cobb, at the piano, Dr. H. A. Shaw of Amarillo was called upon for the invocation, and from then to the singing hour fun and frivolity reigned supreme.

Each Lion and guest was furnished with a paper hat suggestive of the season, and various kinds of noise makers were provided, as were serpentine streamers to add to the gaiety. Evan L. Sitter was program chairman, and he presented the various tests of the club, later turning the program over to T. A. Landers, who acted as toastmaster.

Mason King of the Amarillo News-Globe made an address and presented the Amarillo entertainers. Mike Hollander, director of the annual crippled children's fund show, of Amarillo gave several piano numbers. Dr. H. A. Shaw, musical director and assistant pastor of the First Christian Church of Amarillo, sang some approved numbers, assisted by Mr. Hollander at the piano. T. E. Johnson of the Amarillo News-Globe spoke, referring to Old Tack's alleged ill-fated voting, but hoped that it would not affect his candidacy for the Amarillo post office. Dr. Shaw also did a short talk.

District Attorney John Sturgeon, of the Lion of the Pampa club, made humorous talk and presented Misses Jackie Jones and Dorothy Doucette, who sang, and Mr. Sturgeon played the piano numbers and sang, playing his own accompaniment.

After expressions of appreciation to those present, the banquet was closed with Dr. Shaw singing "The Lord of a Perfect Day."

Among those present were: Messrs. Mesdames G. C. Boswell, Reuben R. Cook, Ralph Caldwell, Reep Landers, John W. Cooper, Cecil G. T. D. A. Davis, W. E. Bogan, S. Rice, Carl O. Greene, Evan L. Sitter, Jesse J. Cobb, T. A. Landers; Mrs. Claude Williams, A. A. Mumpke, Boyd Meador; Miss Margaret Glass, Mrs. J. B. Williams, of McLean; Messrs. and Mesdames John Reagan, Ralph R. Thomas, John B. Key, Misses Jackie Jones, Dorothy Doucette and Barbara Goodenough of Pampa; Dr. H. A. Shaw, Mason King, T. E. Johnson and Mike Hollander of Amarillo; James Ward of Sham-

Miss Hendricks Addresses Red Cross Chapter

Miss Ivy Hendricks, special field representative of the national Red Cross, was in McLean two days last week and addressed the local chapter in annual session Thursday evening.

Miss Hendricks said that a requisition had been sent in to the government for 1000 garments and 4000 yards of cloth for use in this community, and that up to Oct. 8, this year, chapters had ordered 31 million yards of cloth and 5,700,000 garments had been contracted for.

In discussing the free flour furnished by the national government, she said it has been distributed in five-sixths of the counties in the United States, and in 3,500,000 homes.

Miss Hendricks, in talking of the school nursing service, said that a nurse is needed this year more than formerly, as the evils of the depression are cropping out in undernourished children, school authorities reporting that there has been more illness among the children the past two months than in any other two years of school term. There are more cases of mal-nutrition and more underweight children than ever before.

Miss Hendricks said that the Red Cross sets the standard in nursing service all over the United States, no better trained nurses being found than the Red Cross nurses.

In speaking of disaster relief, the speaker said that there has been on the average a major disaster somewhere in the world every 3 1/2 days for the past five years, to which the national chapter has given assistance.

Miss Hendricks complimented the local chapter on the lively interest shown in Red Cross affairs, and promised every needed cooperation from the national chapter.

MRS. SANDERS WINS THIRD IN YARD CONTEST

Mrs. R. F. Sanders of McLean won third place in the yard improvement program sponsored by the women's home demonstration clubs of Gray county, with a score of 236 points.

Mrs. G. C. Springer, who lives in the eastern part of the county, won first with a score of 461; and Mrs. G. C. Andis of Jericho won second with 405 points.

Sanitation and neatness were stressed in the contest, and a possible score of 500 point could be made.

ELD. YEAKLEY TO PREACH FAREWELL SERMON SUN.

Eld. F. R. Yeakley will preach his farewell sermon at the Church of Christ Sunday, having tendered his resignation to the church.

Eld. Yeakley came to the local church about six months ago, and the work has prospered to the extent of 20 new members during that time, nine of which came by baptism. The past few weeks have shown the largest attendance of the period, with the exception of during the summer meeting. The church has been giving a regular monthly offering to the Tipton Orphans Home, as well as sending about 60 pounds of cookies each month during Eld. Yeakley's ministry.

Lack of finances is forcing the congregation to accept Eld. Yeakley's resignation, and many people, both in the church and others, have expressed regret at Eld. and Mrs. Yeakley's leaving McLean.

The minister has not announced his plans for the future, but it is understood that he will not move for a few weeks, at least.

Red Cross Service to Community

The annual roll call of the American Red Cross, announced for Nov. 11 to 24, will find more than 3,000 chapters seeking memberships for support of regular and emergency activities through 1933.

During the present year the American Red Cross has rendered a great service to McLean and the surrounding communities. It is fitting that these services should be reviewed just before entering upon our annual roll call on Nov. 11.

Because of our earnest endeavors in the fall of 1931 to raise funds to procure a nursing service, and our subsequent loss of these funds in a bank failure, the American Red Cross gave the McLean chapter two months of free nursing service. Miss Ahlschier, an experienced nurse, was in our town and community for this period and worked with the schools, clubs and churches. She examined several hundred children for physical defects, and during the two months period 148 of these defects were corrected, and because of Miss Ahlschier's recommendations, doubtless other corrections have been made since her departure.

During the past six months 400 sacks of flour, donated by the American Red Cross, have been distributed by our Community Chest to the needy and distressed in McLean and our trade territory, and we are assured of further assistance during the coming winter in the way of both food and clothing.

In spite of all the service and aid received by us thus far this year, we have not contributed one penny to the support of the American Red Cross. They have been kind to us; they have shown us special consideration because of our financial difficulties. Should we not show our appreciation by responding generously when approached by our Red Cross representatives during our roll call period, Nov. 11 to 24? Our response must be generous if we are able to continue our nursing service in the spring of 1933.

In addition to the help given our people locally, the local chapter has summed up the national organization's relief activities during the past year as follows:

"To prevent suffering in this period of unemployment and general economic depression, the Red Cross has made widespread distribution of wheat, flour, clothing, medicine and other supplies. More than 2,200 chapters have participated in community unemployment relief problems.

"Approximately 15,000,000 persons, residing in every state in the union, have received flour through the Red Cross, while the clothing needs of tens of thousands of distressed families have been supplemented by the organization's present cloth and clothing distribution program. The task of converting government wheat and cotton into flour and garments was assigned to the Red Cross this year by Congress.

"After fifty-one years as the official national relief agency, the American Red Cross finds itself in 1932 carrying the largest peace-time load in its history," the chairman said.

Ninety-five disasters—in addition to unemployment—commanded the relief facilities of the organization during the last fiscal year, according to the local chapter official. That disaster played no favorites is revealed in a Red Cross report which shows 62 disasters visited the continental United States and 28 struck insular possessions during the fiscal year. Five foreign disasters were of sufficient severity to bring help from the American Red Cross.

Altogether, the agency extended assistance to 486,000 victims of disaster during the 12-month period. That figure does not include the millions reduced to dependency as a result of economic conditions.

"Since 1881, the date of its founding," the chapter head declared, "disaster relief has been outstanding among Red Cross activities, and a continuous state of preparedness has been maintained. Although it is sometimes necessary to issue a national call for disaster relief, the great bulk of relief work is supported—as are other regular Red Cross services—wholly by membership dues forthcoming during the membership campaign."

Final plans for an extensive campaign here are being completed this week and those directing the community-wide appeal have expressed the belief that the membership quota will be reached or exceeded in a comparatively brief period.

Greene Heads Red Cross for Coming Year

Carl O. Greene was elected chairman of the McLean chapter, the American Red Cross, at the annual meeting held last Thursday.

Mr. Greene served as vice chairman the past year under Reuben R. R. Cook as chairman, and Jesse J. Cobb was elected vice chairman for the ensuing year. All other officers were re-elected to their respective places, as follows: Boyd Mador, roll call chairman; Miss Frances Noel, secretary; G. C. Boswell, treasurer; Claude Williams, publicity; Mrs. Mary Sligar, nursing service; O. G. Stokely, disaster relief; T. J. Turner, home service; Mrs. Arthur Erwin, T. A. Landers, Dr. Batson, G. C. Boswell, Mrs. R. L. Appling, Mrs. Jim Back, Mrs. C. C. Bogan, and Miss Ruby M. Adams, directors.

Chairman Greene, in assuming his office, complimented the members present, saying that it was the largest crowd ever to attend a local Red Cross meeting for the past several years. Mr. Greene promised his best efforts for the coming year and requested the support and cooperation of all in Red Cross work.

Retiring Chairman Cook made a statistical report of the past year's work, and Mrs. C. A. Strandberg, president of the Community Service Council, reported the government cloth requisition made for the needy at McLean.

Mrs. Mary Sligar reported school nursing needs, stating that a nurse's services are needed more this term than ever before.

Miss Ivy Hendricks, special field representative of the national chapter, was present and made an interesting address, a summary of which appears in another column.

Among those present were: Reuben R. R. Cook, Boyd Meador, Johnnie R. Back, O. G. Stokely, Jesse J. Cobb, Claude Williams, T. A. Landers, Carl O. Greene, G. C. Boswell, Mesdames C. A. Strandberg, Ed Dishman, A. B. Christian, Mary Sligar, O. E. Lochridge, Carl O. Greene, E. R. Adams; Misses Frances Noel, Pearl Simmons, Ruby Cook, Martha Glass and Ivy Hendricks.

Miss Carmen Ulm and mother of Amarillo visited in the Chas. Carpenter home last week end.

Mrs. Armstrong and son of Canute, Okla., visited in the S. L. Jones home Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Elms of Alameda visited in the D. A. Davis home Sunday.

Miss Otha Kesler of Canyon visited in the A. L. Hibler home last week end.

The association voted at the last meeting for the ladies to wear cotton dresses, which may be a good thing for the reason that it will assist the cotton farmer, and also that the meetings are not a "dress-up" affair.

We are expecting you to be with us at the meeting Thursday night, Lefors, at a recent night meeting, reported over 300 present. Surely we can do as well as Lefors. We feel that we should get the lesson that they have over there and go to these meetings.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Wilson and children of Pampa visited in McLean last week end.

S. A. Cousins, who is attending school at Lubbock, visited his mother, Sunday.

W. D. Biggers of Canyon spent the week end with home folks here.

Humphreys States Able to Install Plant

Writes Letter to Mayor Outlining Plans

According to a letter received by Mayor D. N. Massay from D. W. Humphreys, who was recently granted a gas franchise for the city of McLean, the new gas system is now practically a certainty. Mr. Humphreys states: "I am certain that I will be able to carry out my franchise contract with the city of McLean, save and except the time date, which will perhaps run over a few days."

"I have about concluded plans and financial arrangements to give a satisfactory set-up that the city will be proud of, and it has been my plan all the time not to start until I had the set-up on the plant all ready to go. We are going to put this line in and we are going to expect McLean to stay with us 100%, and we will lessen the burdens of everybody who uses gas, and yet be able to exist under our present plan and rates."

Mr. Humphreys says that he will use every available man in McLean and surrounding territory that can use a shovel and do manual labor.

The time set for having gas in the mains under the franchise agreement was Nov. 1, unless further time is granted by the council.

PARENT-TEACHER ASSOCIATION

If you patrons want to have a good time, come to the meeting Thursday night of the P. T. A. There has been a mighty good program prepared and the association needs you and you need it. We are interested in the work of the child. Its future is of supreme importance, and your assistance will mean much in its life.

There will be a spelling bee between Mrs. Harris' room and Miss Bailey's room. Now, these youngsters will get a thrill out of this, and you should be present to aid them in this work. The rooms will spell for about fifteen minutes. You have noted the program for the entire program in the paper, but I am calling your attention to this particular number.

It is the desire of the officials of the association and the members as well that these night meetings be along the line of social welfare and get-acquainted from the standpoint of parent and teacher. There will be refreshments served tonight.

The association voted at the last meeting for the ladies to wear cotton dresses, which may be a good thing for the reason that it will assist the cotton farmer, and also that the meetings are not a "dress-up" affair.

We are expecting you to be with us at the meeting Thursday night, Lefors, at a recent night meeting, reported over 300 present. Surely we can do as well as Lefors. We feel that we should get the lesson that they have over there and go to these meetings.

6A STUDIES SCIENCE—YES?

Members of the 6A reading class have been studying their new readers, "The Science of Things about Us." Below are some of the papers which summarize the articles they are enjoying:

Preserving Our Homes

By Runelle Grigsby
 We have always thought we paint our house to make it attractive. We do, but if it weren't for paint, the houses would decay and fall to pieces; the furniture would wear out; the iron would rust, and get holes in it.

All the paints are composed of a liquid called vehicle. Paints are used very much. Linseed oil is another vehicle made of crushed flaxseed. It is made thinner so it might be spread on with a brush.

Paint-making sounds like it would be easy, but it takes a great deal of skill. Some paints are made with water instead of oil and are called water paints. These paints are not water proof and cannot be left in the sun or be washed.

The King of Metals

By L. E. Flowers
 Without iron we would have to face the weather, the beasts and animals. Nearly everything we touch and use is in some form of iron. Our great bridges, railroad tracks, trains, skyscrapers, towers and tunnels are framed in steel or iron.

Long ago a man lit a fire and when the charcoal was burned down he found a little piece of metal. It was easily shaped while warm. Iron appears in so many odd forms that it seems more mysterious than any other metal we know.

The New Stone Age

By Billy D. Rice
 The people long ago learned to use stone for making tools and weapons. Later they made cement out of stone. This cement was invented in 1824 by an old Englishman. He mixed ashes, cement and water together and let it set till it formed a hard surface.

The making of cement began before 1824. The old Romans learned to make a very hard cement from volcanic ashes and lime. This was a hydraulic cement, but the modern man has learned to make a much better cement from limestone and clay. It is called concrete.

An Ancient Art in Our Kitchen

By Wanda Estes
 When we have looked at the enameled or "granite" cooking utensils in our kitchen we probably never knew that they were related to the most beautiful jewelry in the world, and the metal work made a long time ago. The enamel work is very old. It was used by the Romans, Greeks and Egyptians. It consists of covering metal or pottery with a glass-like mixture. When it is baked in a hot oven, it turns to a smooth glaze.

A long time ago the Egyptians and Assyrians built some of the most beautiful buildings in the world, and used enamel.

Enamel is quite neat in our kitchens. It cooks better meals than iron or tin. It is also useful in our bathrooms.

The utensils are generally cut and shaped by a powerful machine, into the shape wanted. The handles are put on separately from the basin and put together by another machine.

Boys and girls of the 5A English class have been studying "Good Manners and Right Conduct." Below are some themes which were written on "Cleanliness," the subject of last week's discussion:

Raymond, the Dirty Boy

By Billy West
 Once there was a boy who would not keep clean. He would not wash any time. His mother tried to make him, but he wouldn't.

One day he started to school and saw a mud puddle. He began to play. He got his hands and face dirty. When he got to school his teacher saw how dirty he was. She got some soap and water and washed him real hard.

When he went home he told his mother about it. She said, "I hope you do it all the time." He did. He was happy ever after.

Henry

By Ruth Ayer
 Henry was all dirty, and he would not comb his hair. He would come home so dirty that his mother would call him a negro. He would only laugh and walk away.

One day while he was at school he was reading a story out of "Good Manners and Right Conduct," just about like him. He thought he would take the same advice.

That evening he went to a barber shop and got in a bath tub. He scrubbed himself good, washed his hair and combed it. When he reached home his mother hardly knew him.

John

By Ernie Back
 John was very untidy. He never went to school clean, nor came home clean. He didn't wash his face, nor comb his hair.

One day he went to school, and all the other boys and girls were clean, but he was dirty. This made him go home.

When he got home he took a bath, combed his hair, brushed his teeth, and put on clean clothes, then went back to school. He was clean then, and very happy. "This is the biggest day in the world," said John. Guess what happened? They had a picnic! After that John was a clean boy.

Jack

By James Everett
 Jack was an untidy boy. His mother died, and he did not keep clean. Every one knew him.

He was walking down the walk and overheard someone talking about him. That very day he went home and scrubbed himself all over.

That night he went to the show. He heard some men say, "There is Jack. He took a bath and he is clean."

That night Jack said to himself, "I am going to keep clean. I feel a lot better. I am going to stay this way."

Tom

By Wynema Lamb
 Tom was very untidy. He did not like to keep himself clean. His mother tried to get him to wash before he went to school. His teacher tried to keep him from spilling the ink and getting mud on his feet, but he did not care.

One day he was very naughty. He did everything he could to look untidy. He started down the street with his face not washed, his hair uncombed, his shoes muddy, and laces untied. Whom did he see coming up the street, but little Netty Brown and her mother. Netty started to speak to him, but her mother said, "No, you must not speak or play with untidy children."

Tom was very much hurt at this remark. He turned and went back home. He took a bath, combed his hair, cleaned the mud off his shoes and tied his laces. He said to his mother, "I am going to keep tidy so Mrs. Brown won't care for Netty playing with me."

LINCOLN, THE MAN OF THE PEOPLE

By Charles Ashby

When nature saw the approach of the civil war, she made a man to meet the need of the people. He was a man of prophecy, and, with his seriousness, he always had a laugh. Lincoln was a red-blooded, patient, courageous man, who combined gladness, justice, loving-kindness and pity in all of his qualities; yet he was a man like unto a mountain.

Lincoln came from cabin to capitol with the ideal to preserve our nation. He worked with the state as he had worked splitting rails, his conscience testing every deed. So, when the civil war struck, he preserved the nation and held on through blame and did not falter at praise. Then, when he was killed, he died a victor in the hearts of the people.

The News editor acknowledges with thanks an invitation from the Amarillo Kiwanis Club for Monday's luncheon, and expresses regret for inability to attend.

There is no good reason why McLean merchants cannot have some kind of attraction for Christmas shoppers. This has been done in the past and could be done this year for little cost.

The merchant who has his printing done at home is practicing what he preaches, and has a right to the consideration of the home buyer. There is no way to build any community except by patronizing each other.

We must remind our correspondents that all news should be in our hands by Tuesday noon of each week to insure publication. Four letters reached us Wednesday afternoon of this week, making overtime work necessary. Please see that your letters are mailed early in the week.

And now even the utilities are making bargain sales. The North Plains Telephone Co. at Dumas, in a quarter page advertisement in their home paper, offers to install a telephone free of charge and give one month's rental free if two months' rental is paid in advance, meaning a saving of $4 over the usual charge.

No limit is proposed in the constitutional amendment to be voted upon next month, allowing the legislature to appropriate any amount for a state centennial celebration. It has been claimed that it will take five million dollars to stage the kind of celebration wanted by the promoters. Voters will do well to vote against this amendment.

The Texas Homeopathic Medical Association, in its 48th annual session at Dallas last week, condemned compulsory vaccination on 60 points, questioning its efficacy and criticizing the methods of vaccine makers in enlisting the support of various agencies, on humanitarian grounds, and of sponsoring laws to force the vaccination of school children. Inoculation against diphtheria was included in the report against vaccination.

Vaccination is all right for those who have faith in it, but certainly there should be no law compelling anyone to have injected into his system anything that no doctor can predict just what reaction will take place. The doctors in the state association are to be commended for their frank action in this matter.

The Pullington-for-governor movement has now reached such proportions that it is something for the Fergusons to reckon with. The cracking of the party whip is not having much effect, since it is known that the pledge has been violated so many times in the past. However, some comfort may be found, as the negroes are organizing to support the Fergusons, expecting to be admitted to future Democratic primaries as a reward.

When Mr. Ferguson bolted the party for the American party, he referred to those who insisted that voters keep the primary pledge as "bulldozing politicians," and urged voters to "go to the polls and vote as you please, regardless of whether or not you went into the Democratic primary." This is a good year to take Mr. Ferguson's advice, and from all appearances, thousands of voters will do that very thing.

THE STATE AMENDMENTS

Following are the amendments to the state constitution to be voted upon at the general election, Nov. 8. Clip them for reference:

1. Amendment to the state constitution providing that the permanent university fund shall be invested in bonds of the United States, the State of Texas, or counties of said state, or in school bonds of municipalities, or in bonds of any city of this state, or in bonds issued under and by virtue of the Federal farm loan act, approved by the president of the United States July 17, 1916, and amendments thereto.

2. Amendment to Section 13, Article 6, of the constitution of the State of Texas so as to provide for the right to redeem land sold at tax sale within two years from the date of the filing for record of the purchasers deed for less than double the amount of money paid for the land.

3. Amendment of the constitution of the State of Texas providing that the state, county, or defined subdivision thereof or any other municipal corporation may be barred from the collection of delinquent taxes after they have been due for a period of at least ten years.

4. Amendment permitting officers and enlisted men of the National Guard and the National Guard Reserve and officers of the Officers Reserve Corps of the United States and enlisted men of the organized reserves of the United States, and retired officers of the United States army, navy, and marine corps, and retired warrant officers, and retired enlisted men of the United States army, navy, and marine corps, to hold other offices or positions of honor, trust, or profit, under this state or the United States, and to vote at any election, general, special, or primary, in this state when otherwise qualified.

5. Amendment authorizing counties and cities bordering on the coast of the Gulf of Mexico by a vote of two-thirds majority of the resident property owners voting thereon, to levy and collect such tax for construction of sea walls, breakwaters, or sanitary purposes, as authorized by law, and authorizing the creation of a debt for such works, and the issuance of bonds in evidence thereof.

6. Amendment providing that only qualified electors owning taxable property in the state, county, district, political sub-division, city, town or village where the election is held and which has been duly rendered for taxation shall be qualified to vote at elections held for the purpose of issuing bonds or otherwise lending credit or expending money or assuming debt thereon.

7. Amendment to the constitution of the State of Texas exempting three thousand dollars ($3,000) of the assessed taxable value of all residence homesteads from state taxes.

8. Amendment to the constitution of the State of Texas combining into one office of assessor and collector of taxes, the offices of assessor and tax collector.

9. Amendment to the constitution providing that the legislature may authorize a Texas centennial commemorating the heroic period of early Texas history, and celebrating a century of our independence and progress; to prescribe times, places, manner thereof, and making an appropriation therefor.

E. F. A'S. ENTERTAIN

Monday night the E. F. A. boys of McLean high school entertained the home economic girls with an ice cream supper at the home of Dr. and Mrs. A. A. Tampke, serving ten gallons of home made ice cream. The boys furnished the milk, eggs, sugar and ice, and made the cream themselves.

P. T. A. COUNTY COUNCIL MEET

By Mrs. Mary Sligar
The County Council of Parent-Teacher Associations met last Saturday at Laketon. The delegates arrived around eleven o'clock. At 11:30 the president, Mrs. Murfee of Pampa, called a meeting of the executive board.

At 12:30 luncheon, consisting of everything good to eat, was served. Soon after luncheon, the program opened with the singing of America. This was followed by a reading by a pupil of the Laketon school, Supt. G. C. Boswell of McLean then spoke on Publicity. He prefaced his remarks by saying that all businesses which depend on the public for support are very careful to keep the public informed as to their business activities. Continuing, he emphasized the importance of keeping the public informed on school business, by close cooperation between the school and the local press, thereby preventing many misunderstandings. This talk was followed by a group of songs by Supt. Fisher of Pampa, accompanied by Mrs. Fisher. These were well rendered and greatly appreciated.

Mr. Graves of Lefors then spoke on The Parent-Teacher Association—An Asset or a Liability. He treated his subject from the standpoint of his own experiences with various organizations, and concluded by giving a list of objectives which would insure helpfulness.

Representatives from the following schools responded to roll call: Sam Houston, Woodrow Wilson, Horace Mann, Baker, junior high, and high school, all of Pampa; Lefors, Laketon, Back and McLean.

The business session opened with the reading of the minutes, and the treasurer's report. The following committee chairmen made reports: Mrs. O. E. Lochridge, McLean, program; Mrs. Ogden, Lefors, publicity; Mrs. R. L. Appling, McLean, extension; G. C. Boswell, McLean, education; Mr. Selby, Pampa, health; Mr. Patrick, Pampa, recreation. A short period of fun and music under the able leadership of Mr. Patrick, was then enjoyed, after which the recommendations of the executive committee were read and approved.

The air in the room was tense. From the speaker of the radio poured a strong, dominating voice, arguing, in the pauses there was silence—the interpretative comment of the announcer. Then the hollow roar of a crowd, angry, menacing, rolled into the silent room.

Before the beautifully carved machine sat the Baroness Valerie von Sturm and Karl Kranz. They were members of the aristocracy of Sylvaria, a small principality located in a central position among the great European powers, and had come to Geneva with the deputation from their land to attend the International Peace Conference.

Through the long days of conference upon ways and means to achieve world-wide disarmament there had been much wrangling, but steady progress had been made toward an understanding. So clear were the issues that a vote could be taken. Now on the last day of the convocation ballot was being cast. The strong virile voice that flowed from the radio was that of Captain Paul Onslow, head of the Sylvanian delegation, explaining his vote against peace.

Silence in the room for a moment. The lovely young Baroness sat utterly still, her long white fingers clasped in her lap. Her large, lustrous eyes were troubled as she raised them to Karl who leaned, smoking, against the radio. Then the excited voice of the announcer:

"Sylvaria's vote means the treaty is defeated—for a unanimous vote is needed." Smothering his words came the ominous growl of the multitude. "Just listen to that crowd outside," commented the announcer. "Captain Onslow will need all his courage to face it."

With a swift movement, Valerie snapped off the radio. She rose. Karl was surprised.

"Let's keep it on, Valerie."

"No," agitatedly. "I'm afraid for him."

"When a man fights the world," Karl smiled, "he doesn't look for a Sunday school picnic."

"I know, but he's in real danger now." Her hand sought the bell rope all day because you're patriotic." Sturges, the butler, had entered softly in response to Valerie's ring. She turned to him.

"Tell my chauffeur I'm going with him to the Palace."

When Sturges had departed Karl voiced his alarm.

"You're not calling for Paul today, are you?"

"Of course."

"But you shouldn't. It's dangerous. Public feeling is against him. It's not safe for you to be with him."

"It's safer for him."

"I see." He looked for a long moment at her strained face. "Valerie, you do care for me, don't you?"

"Certainly."

"But not as you once did. Oh, I'm not blind. You've been different ever since Paul came to this house. The glamor of his personality has swept you off your feet."

"I thought you were his friend."

"I am—but also in love with you. You can't disappoint me now. You have to marry me."

"I don't know my own mind," she temporized. "You'd want me to be sure, wouldn't you?"

"Of course."

"Then be a little patient." He smiled into her eyes. "That's better. And now I must run along."

On the lower floor near the stairway was the laboratory of her father, Baron von Sturm, though an aristocrat, was was not a militaristic junkie. He was a scientist of international repute. When Valerie told him of her intention he begged her to reconsider; yet his fondness was such that he could not restrain her when she insisted.

As the great car purrrd through the city, the Baroness was surprised to find the streets deserted. However, as she neared the Peace Palace, she noticed groups assembling, gathering for some demonstration. Finally rounding a corner she saw a mob approaching. The leader carried a rude banner. It bore a skull and crossbones under which was printed "Onslow."

Directing the driver to keep to the curb, Valerie alighted when the car drew abreast of the standard bearer. White with fury she tore the banner from its staff and flung it into the face of the man who had carried it.

The mob stood silently waiting to see what its leader would do. For a thought, murder leaped in his eyes. Then he controlled himself. With mock politeness he held open the car door for Valerie and sneered:

"The pretty lady doesn't like my paper doll—but wait! Wait till we hang up Onslow's real carcass!"

Frightened, Valerie sank back into ward him. Reporters questioned him. He passed them with a curt word, oblivious to the menacing temper of the mob which made his secretary Kellner tremble and pale.

An old woman sprang at Onslow, her fingers reaching for his eyes.

"War! You want war!" she screamed. "You killed my son!"

Guards dragged her away. Outwardly calm, Onslow passed through the crowd which watched him undecided, but dangerous.

A block from the Palace, a very pretty girl came up. Although inattentive, Onslow sized her up as a woman of the town. As she passed she smiled provocatively. He drew away. When a policeman who saw the incident took her in charge, Onslow made no move in her behalf. Lost in thought he walked on. Suddenly he felt a tug at his coat. He looked down. A little girl was standing there beside him in Swiss country dress. She had a basket of flowers from which she offered him a bouquet of camellias.

"Won't you please, sir? They're just five centimes."

"I have nothing that small," he smiled.

"I'll trust you—until tomorrow."

"Splendid," he replied, "that's a bargain."

He took the flowers from her confiding fingers, as a car slid up to the curb beside him. Valerie smiled from the shadowy interior as he entered.

"I'm sorry I kept you waiting," he apologized.

"I didn't mind," replied Valerie. She took his flowers. "How lovely." Then, smiling, "Is thoughtfulness one of your virtues?"

He rose to her humor. "Occasionally. This time it was thrust upon me."

Then it came, the sharp, startling report of a pistol shot. Valerie screamed. Dragging her with him, Onslow crouched on the floor as a bullet shattered the limousine's rear glass.

HOW MUCH EXERCISE?

By Dr. William J. Scholes

How much must one exercise in order to be healthy? Much that is written and preached on this subject would lead us to believe that the enjoyment of good health depends largely on systematic exercise.

It is generally accepted that a moderate amount of exercise is healthful. It improves the circulation, and favors the nutrition of the tissues and the elimination of waste from the body. An amount of exercise that aims to build up a powerful muscular system is of doubtful health value. Some even believe that it may be harmful. And anyway, powerful muscles do not necessarily mean good health or the possession of any unusual power to resist disease. A big biceps gives no immunity against small-pox, typhoid fever or pneumonia.

What kind and how much exercise one takes should be regulated according to the age, occupation and the condition of such vital organs as the heart, arteries and kidneys. And, of course, one's tastes play an important part in the matter.

Many of the sports that are suitable to childhood and youth would be harmful during middle or old age. Exercise may be beneficial to the man who sits at a desk all day. But it would probably add nothing to the health of the farmer or the man engaged in manual labor. A little too much exercise may result, either directly or indirectly, in the death of the person with a diseased heart.

Walking, swimming, golf, horseback riding, tennis, dancing, calisthenics, boxing, wrestling, gymnasium work, football, baseball, handball, polo, skating, offer a wide range of choice. There are sports suitable to all ages and conditions. Some people get enough exercise through their work.

Select your exercise according to your individual requirements. If you are doubtful as to what is suitable Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Lehman and exercise for you, consult your doctor. little son, George, of Geary, Okla. Then exercise for health rather visited Mrs. C. A. Strandberg Sunthan for a "superb muscular develop-day."

THE CHRISTIAN AND LAW OBSERVANCE

By Rev. Cecil G. Goff

Golden text, Gal. 6:7. Lesson text, Rom. 13:1-7; Gal. 6:7-10.

v. 1. Just shortly before the writing of this epistle by Paul, Claudius had ordered all Jews out of Rome. Yet God directs Paul to write that all Christians are to be in subjection to the government. God has ordained that there should be governments and national powers to rule over men. Such powers cannot exist or be maintained unless the people being ruled by them are submissive to their power.

God has not said that those in authority of constituted governmental power would not use such power selfishly and unjustly. That has often happened—as well as many times ignorantly. That, however, does not give the people the right to rebel. Only those in authority are responsible for its misuse. And, likewise, men and women are responsible for their conduct under the laws of a country. This would not preclude a people's taking legitimate steps for a better, more just, and more representative form of government.

v. 2. All governmental power is necessarily by the direct or permissive will of God. Such powers are for the purpose of law enforcement. To fail to walk in accordance with that power is to break its laws and thus to bring punishment from it.

v. 3. Those who keep the law have no fear of the law. It is those who break the law who need fear punishment. Laws may be harsh and unjust, but the Christian's duty is to obey them and then make legitimate protest. Of course, there can be imagined laws that might be put into effect which one could not comply with and not deny his Lord. Such was the case in the days of early Christianity. Many of the Christians died rather than deny their Savior.

For the ordinary country and its laws—let the Christian obey. To break a law and suffer punishment is no credit here or hereafter. The one who suffers punishment for a crime he has committed is the one who will receive the necessary strength from above. Paul says in 1 Cor. 6:7: "Why not rather be wronged why not rather be defrauded?" than to go to law about a matter. There is reward for obedience of law, but punishment for breaking the law.

v. 4. God has ordained that the officers of the law shall be His ministers "to thee for good." Many officers have been, through the years and are now, evil, selfish and non-Christian—unworthy to be God's ministers. But they punish evil. And when sincere and unjust, they bring their own condemnation and undoing.

v. 5. Man must obey the law not merely for the sake of avoiding punishment, but because his own conscience demands obedience. The greatest wielder of punishment in time or eternity is a guilty conscience. If a man's conscience will not permit him to obey a law, that same conscience ought to enable him to accept his punishment graciously. But in our land today there is no law to which a rightly instructed conscience could fail to comply. There are many to which we might rightly protest and attempt to change—but there are none to force us to in any way deny our Lord.

v. 6. God also demands that we pay taxes exacted by the government. Here is a place where a man needs to obey and then use his whole force in legitimate protest. Taxes are necessary, but when all forms of national and state governments have built up such systems as to make the tax burdens unbearable it is time for taxpayers to make the right kind of protest. To fail to pay this year might be a matter of inability rather than law violation, and within itself a legitimate protest. But to refuse to pay would be law violation. For to refuse means that payment is possible.

v. 7. Tribute, custom, fear and honor are to be rendered to officials. Such should be rendered to all officials, from city to national. It seems to be a common thing to heap scorn and reviling upon many of our officials. No good thing can be found to say for them by many. Such wholesale condemnation is unscriptural—condemned by God's word and unchristian. Those officials who were the people's choice. God says to render honor where honor is due—and let Jesus interpret that for us. He knew the unworthiness of Caesar, yet He did not proclaim it, but said to render unto him what was due him. (Luke 20:22). Jesus went further and submitted to unjust condemnation in one of Caesar's courts, without comment.

Gal. 6:7, 8. A man reaps what he sows. In 2 Cor. 9:6 we are told that scanty sowing will bring scanty harvest, and that bountiful sowing will bring a bountiful harvest. We usually think of the sowing as referring to the evil an unsaved man sows. But here Paul brings it back to the door of the saved man who is not willing to do much in the service of God.

Every man determines the harvest by the seed he is willing to plant. The seed of suffering and sacrifice seem costly sometimes, but the harvest from such sowing is bountiful joy, satisfaction, glory and peace.

v. 9, 10. The sowing is an everyday matter as the reaping is. Too many of us get tired sowing the expensive seed of service, and become "weary in well doing." But God's command is that the doing of good be our continual activity each day. He commands that we do good to all, but especially to those of the household of faith. He does not mean that one should be more honest or truthful to a Christian than to a lost man. From that standpoint, there is to be no difference. But Christians have a stronger brotherly love than one who is lost. Spiritual brotherhood is the strongest tie among men. We as Christians have not learned that lesson yet, but it is ours to learn, and it is a seed that will yield a great harvest.
