Armistice Day Program Tomorrow

Men Sponsor Street Decorations, Christmas Season

Christmas Lights on Main Street

Day Committee Appointed by Lions

Decorations of McLean's business district will be done for the season. If plans adopted by the Lions Club are carried out, they will be again sponsored by the club, in cooperation with the merchants, at the regular Tuesday, and Carl O. Greene, Cooper and Evan L. Sitter, assisted as decorations committee. Ralph A. Caldwell, T. A. and Jesse J. Cobb were appointed to solicit funds for the decorations.

Decorations were placed on store windows, as well as on colored lights and other decorations.

R. R. Cook, D. A. Davis and Meador were appointed a day committee, and asked to meet at the next meeting.

The committee voted to again sponsor the state tournament, with silver cups as prizes.

Meador reported activities of the Community Service Council, saying the Community Chest has been approved by the council, and that the picture show had netted $53.65. The council will give a minstrel show to be given in December, and it is expected that the entire winter's program will be financed in this manner, calling upon the merchants.

Boswell had on display pictures made by the vocational boys in Dr. Tampke's department of the high school, showing workmanship.

ED LADIES ORGANIZE STUDY CLUB

The club plans to meet every first Thursday of the month. The purpose of the club is "Prepare for the future." The chrysanthemum is chosen as the flower, and white and green chosen as the club colors.

The committee is planning a variety of programs, including study of art, literature and current events.

The constitutional amendments were favorable to McLean voters, with the exception of the centennial amendment which had 155 votes against, to 63 for.

A number of mutilated ballots were reported, as voters failed to draw a line through the minor parties in some cases. Only one name was written in for any office, C. S. Rice receiving one vote for county judge.

Entered as second class mail matter May 8, 1905, at the post office at McLean, Texas, under act of Congress

The first Armistice Day celebration in McLean was a wild and joyous one. Tomorrow's celebration will be more dignified. We slowly forget the high points of life, despite our attempts to re-live them.

Now that the election is over, maybe we can settle back and work our way out of the depression. It makes very little difference, after all, to the average man, which party is in power. The main thing is some kind of effort toward progress, which seemingly cannot be done during campaign years.

The cost of government is slowly mounting as misguided souls demand new services from the government. It is estimated that one day in four is spent by the average taxpayer in working for the government. This situation cannot continue indefinitely; there must be a stopping place to government expenditures, and much will be expected of the newly elected officers the coming two years.

Secretary Phillips of the Baptist State Sunday School Board, in a talk at the First Baptist Church of Amarillo, Sunday morning, talked of the wasted "man power" in the churches. This wasted power might apply to all lines of community service. If all could be enlisted to help the few who "carry on" there is no telling how great a community, or organization, might become.

The mayor in a nearby town issued a proclamation asking all business houses to close two hours for a football game last Friday. If closing rules can be enforced for football games, there can be no limit to what stores will be expected to close for. It strikes us that closings of this kind should be left to common agreement, as is done here. Owners and clerks who desire to attend games here do so, and those who do not care for the game feel free to pursue their usual vocations.

Mrs. Floyd Phillips and Mrs. C. J. Cash visited the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Meek, at Miami Saturday.

ASSEMBLY NOTES

In assembly we sang "The Eyes of Texas," "Howdy Do, Mr. McHaney," "My Grandfather's Clock," and "I'd Like to Be a Pal of Yours." Miss Turner read a scripture from the Bible. All students gave the salute to the flag. We sang "America" and "Star Spangled Banner." When the visitors came in we sang "Howdy Do." They were Mr. Boswell, Mr. Landers and Mr. Greene. After we sang "The Eyes of Texas," Mr. Greene made a talk on Safety. Mr. Landers talked to us, too.

The 4th, 5th and 6th grades marched over to the high school last Tuesday at 1:15 to hear Mrs. Dixon tell about the battle of Adobe Walls. We sat up in the balcony. Anna Dell Siglar led us while we sang the "Howdy Do" song to high school and Mrs. Dixon. We took notes on what Mrs. Dixon said. The Texas history students wrote a them on the battle of Adobe Walls. The best of them appears below.

INDIANS IN THE PANHANDLE

By Margaret Kennedy
In 1874 there were wild animals and fowls in the Panhandle, such as deer, wild turkey, antelope and bear.

Some buffalo hunters came up in the Panhandle and built a post. There was a blacksmith shop and trading store. Very near these was a large fort. They had a horse corral in which the horses stayed. About three-quarters of a mile from here the ruins of the old adobe fort stands. We don't know when it was made, nor by whom. The post was near the place where Berger is now located.

The hunters wanted to live peacefully with the Indians. Twenty-eight men and one woman were at the post. They soon found that the Indians were near.

The Indians were angered when the white men took their lands. The Indians would scalp and murder anyone they could. Even this would not make the white men leave the Panhandle.

Mr. Dixon, the leader of the post, was going to move his group to the whites' side of the Canadian river. One night about two o'clock they heard a noise. Everyone jumped out of his bed and began looking around. They didn't see anything, but since it was near morning, they stayed up. About daybreak Mr. Dixon looked out over the prairie and thought he saw something moving. He turned back to his work and didn't pay any attention. When he looked again, he saw it was a band of Indians.

The men all rushed into the fort and closed the door. The Indians soon charged, and some were so bold as to jump off their horses and run up and beat on the door. There were only three white men killed that day. About 12 o'clock the Indians moved back from the fort a little, and by 2 o'clock the white men could get out of the fort to get their most treasured belongings.

The Indians didn't make war on this settlement again. Several days later some Indians appeared on the other side of the river. One of the men who was watching started to shoot at them, but stumbled and hit his head off and fell at his wife's feet. Mr. Dixon, the following day, shot at an Indian from a long distance. The Indian fell. After this the Indian fled saying, "White men shoot today—kill tomorrow."

The white men put up a pile of stones here to mark the spot. The distance from the stones to where Billy Dixon was standing was 1538 yards.

The battle of Adobe Walls is being compared now with the battle of San Jacinto. Some historians claim it is just as important a battle as the one where Houston captured Santa Anna and won Texas' independence from Mexico.

LUMBER IN THE MAKING

By Joe Billy Bogan
There are many things made out of wood. More than a million and a half car loads of lumber are used each day in the United States.

This means lots of beautiful trees to be cut down each day. They have learned to plant new ones in their places.

Making lumber in the United States is the most important and the oldest industry. The first saw mill was invented in 1633. The mill had to be located by a stream of water, so the water could turn the big wheels. Before cutting the tree, a woodman would go around and cut a notch out of the tree to show which way it was supposed to fall. The trees were cut down by a big saw that was run by two men, one on each end.

In the winter it is very easy to pull the logs over the ice. In the summer, when the snow melts, they float them down to the mill in the streams. In the south and northwest the logs are carried to the mills by railroads. When the logs get to the mill they are kept in a pond to keep them fresh and free from insects.

GIRLS' ATHLETICS

The high school girls were forced to forego volleyball practice the past week on account of extremely high winds.

The girls will begin playing basket ball as soon as more of the girls return from picking cotton. Coach Bowman thinks there is a big chance for a real team this year.

On Friday night, Nov. 11th, a series of short entertainments will be given by the different grades of the public school. The entertainment will be free and will serve in the form of a patriotic program. The following numbers will be given:

High school debate—Ralph Palmer, Harvey Craig, Artie Lee Smith and Joeldine Kiser.

Miss Lurline Bowman spent the week end in Canyon, where she attended the annual home coming activities of West Texas State Teachers College.

Gas was installed in the superintendent's office last Saturday by Mr. Palmer and Mr. Dillard. They believe the plumbing job to be one of the best they have done this year. It has all the marks of a couple of big wrenches.

Clean-up day was featured in the basement last Saturday. The old seats were properly stored, all old rubbish was removed and disposed of, the floor was repaired and the steps cleaned and oiled. The basement will now be used for athletic purposes.

The general science class is displaying much interest in the preparation and study of the elements found in air.

The P. T. A. will meet in regular session Thursday at 8 p. m. A special program has been arranged featuring John Hessey in a talk on some phase of modern education. His part of the entertainment will be illustrated by the use of a stereoscope. An evening of real entertainment has been arranged for the patrons of the school.

The business arithmetic graphs have taken a slight drop the last few days as a result of a few misplaced decimals.

GRADE SCHOOL NEWS

The 6th and 7th grades are making Thanksgiving turkeys and pumpkins, but they are not the kind that you eat. There is no use to come in and try to eat them.

Euline Sherrod has finished a very interesting project on Africa, a booklet on Evangeline, and a Pilgrim project. You may know by this that she is a very diligent worker.

Our giant, Bad English, seems to be getting plenty of food from all sources. So all of you children be careful that you don't feed him too much, or he might grow so large that he would get you.

The 6th and 7th grades will have charge of the chapel program for Nov. 15th. It will be a patriotic program. Come and see it.

We have a 100% attendance again and hope that we may keep that record.

Faye Pettit made 100% in spelling last week.

We had as visitors last week, Mrs. Kiser and Mrs. Blakney. We hope that they will visit the school often.

The fourth and fifth grades were glad to have Mrs. S. T. Greenwood visit their room Tuesday afternoon.

AMERICA'S UNKNOWN SOLDIER

Summary of Reading Story
By Euline Sherrod

From the great number of unknown soldiers who died on the battle fields of France and lie there in military cemeteries, one was selected and brought home to America, to be honored by a distinguished burial.

Many countries that participated in the world war have their "graves of the unknown soldier." France has her undying flame burning at the grave of the soldier in the Arch of Triumph in Paris. Italy has a splendid tomb at the base of the Memorial to Victor Emmanuel in Rome. England has a mighty sarcophagus in London, and America has her unknown soldier grave of shining white marble within the shadow of the Capitol in the Arlington cemetery in Washington, D. C.

The dedication ceremonies were held on Nov. 11, 1921, the third anniversary of the signing of the Armistice that ended the war. President Harding made an address at the dedication, in which he said:

"The name of him whose body lies before us took flight with his imperishable soul. Some mother gave him in her love and tenderness, and with him her most cherished hopes. We do not know the eminence of his birth, but we do know the glory of his death. He died for his country, and greater devotion has no man than this.

"As we return this poor clay to its mother soil, garlanded by love and covered with the decoration that only nations can bestow, I can sense the prayers of our people, of all peoples, that this Armistice Day shall mark the beginning of a new and lasting era of peace on earth, good will among men. Let me join in that prayer."

Summary of Preceding Chapters

Paul Onslow, head of the delegation at the Inter-peace Conference at Geneva, and his daughter, Valerie, who loves Valerie, also at the house. Onslow has a resentment by voting for the universal peace which he considered dangerous to Sylvania. For his safety, Valerie calls for the Peace Palace in Geneva. As they are riding home, she is fired on. That evening, a scientist, Professor Bauer, tells Valerie that she is in danger. Valerie tells Krantz that she must choose between her father and her dangerous career.

CHAPTER 3

Dressed for dinner, Paul was still confused with the things in his life coming after so full of world-important things that he was shocked and stunned. Before him was the midnight of the Peace Conference where his fate would be decided. He took his tie from the closet. Automatically his hand adjusted it. The door opened and Paul's secretary, entered. "The Police Commissioner is here," she said. "The Commissioner is here?" Paul was surprised. "Protect you, sir. He's going to the palace with you tonight. He won't shoot at you again." "Suppose you sent for him." "I didn't," faltered Kellner. "Both Baron Strum and Valerie had called the official. You'll listen to him, Captain, you'll Oh, please—I pray you." "Smiling, turned to Kellner who was twitching with nervousness. Do you want to die?" he croaked, his voice barely audible. "To die? Certainly not," said his employer. "Life just before me today. It gave me everything to live for—even love." "I'll include you in my prayers," he promised. "That's all," he departed he made the final adjustments of his jacket. Behind him he heard Kellner moving about restlessly, muttering to himself. It was his impatient with the man. "That shooting in the car"

From the Fox picture, "Six Hours to Live"
"You're just a coward," Kellner," said Paul.

Afternoon unnerved me. I'm not. I don't want to die. I don't want to die." "I caught hold of him and shook him." "Kellner couldn't stop. "Once I saw my little brother cold-stiff," he gasped. "And the flowers covered me. I've smelled them ever since. I smell them now—here—in this room." "His sword disappeared. His eyes were full of pity. "Come on, Kellner," he urged. "You've been working too hard. Get some fresh air." He forced Krantz's hat and stick on him and pushed him to the door. "You'll be back feeling a new man." "In spite of Kellner's nervous protest, Paul gladly thrust him out. He walked back to his desk and looked at himself before him. His face was very grave. After a long pause he moved rapidly to the door of the Foreign Affairs office.

Honorable Sir:
With my final vote tonight I shall have served my beloved country for the last time. Will you kindly accept my resignation. Without pausing, he signed his name.

Downstairs, unaware of the historic document being composed above them, Doctor von Strum, Professor Bauer and the Police Commissioner were playing billiards. The officer had irritated Bauer by doubting his claims for his new discovery. "You policemen are all alike," retorted the scientist. "You don't believe science." "Go on, Otto," urged von Strum. "It's still your shot." "But the professor talked away. "Listen to me, Commissioner. In the sphere of modern science nothing is impossible. Everything exists. Fantastic things are there just below the surface, ready to be fished out. That's how I found my new ray. Tomorrow, you'll see for yourself. I can't fail, for already I've experimented with success on a guinea pig." "That's all right," said the Commissioner unimpressed. "But there's a far cry between pigs and people." "I'm not so sure," grunted Bauer as he bent to make his shot. Back from his unwilling walk Kellner went softly by the billiard room and up the stairs. The stroll had not quieted his nerves. They were keyed up like violin strings. He approached Paul's door and tapped softly. No answer. He repeated the knock. Silence. With hesitant hand he turned the knob. The door was unlocked. Cautiously he opened it. The room was in total darkness. No sound came from it. His fears increasing, he moved into the room, groped toward the familiar location of the lamp and turned it on. At first the glare dazzled him so that he did not see the overturned inkwell. Then following the ink stains on the carpet he saw that which stiffened him with horror. By a toppled chair lay Paul Onslow. There was no mistaking his stillness for a faint. With a hysterical scream Kellner rushed for the stairs. Soon the Commissioner, von Strum and Professor Bauer were standing beside the body. Reverently Ivan draped a silk dressing gown across the quiet form. Over his wrist the Commissioner slipped a thin rawhide noose and pulled it tight. "An ingenious weapon," he mused "silent—quick—certain." "It killed more than a man," said Ivan bitterly. "It killed a country." Von Strum fell back into a chair. "How can I tell Valerie," he mumbled. Then, "Go downstairs," he ordered Sturges. "Mention nothing of this to anyone—particularly the Baroness. And when M'sieur Krantz arrives—" "When did he leave here?" snapped the Commissioner. "An hour ago." Von Strum started. "Surely you don't suspect Karl. Why he and Paul were friends."

heard on the door. A woman's voice: "Paul, Paul dear." It was Valerie. (Continued next week)

Next Sunday's Lesson

MAKING A LIVING
By Rev. Cecil G. Goff

Golden text, Rom. 12:11. Lesson text Amos 5:11-15; Luke 19:16-23. The matter of making a living today has, in ordinary time, reached a perplexing state for those attempting to follow Christ-like principles, and, in these times of dire unemployment, many who have not found consolation in God's Word and promises have met destruction. There is no perplexing problem of life which confronts any man which Jesus did not meet, conquer and leave recorded instructions concerning, for our trials with the same problem. Our difficulty is that we are not sufficiently acquainted with Jesus' teachings to understand the relation between them and our modern difficulties.

Amos 5:11, 12. Capitalism as a principle is not condemned, but rather upheld in God's Word. But the perversion of capitalism is always condemned. The perversion of capitalism is always found, not in the misappropriation of private funds, but in the extortion of unfair gain from labor. God here promises that such unfair gain shall not be enjoyed by those who take it. It is constituted not only in unfair wage scale, but also in both extortionate prices for products and taxes by officers who take advantage of those who cannot protect themselves, and accept bribes. It is easy to accuse ancient men of such guilt, but the question of importance is, does it happen today, and who is guilty?

vv 13-15. For our own country with our form of government, responsibility falls on many shoulders. Even philanthropic capital is many times guilty of unfair gain from the masses of the people. Our governmental offices are fraught with politics rather than principles. Officers become so low as to take oath of office, swear to enforce our laws, and then enforce only those which illegality desires enforced. Official expense accounts are padded to excess. Bureaus unnecessarily employ thousands to no avail. And you and I go to the polls and vote politically or on grounds of personal feeling rather than prayerfully on grounds of Christ-like principles.

There may come to individuals great gain by modern practices of misappropriation. And those guilty may get the privilege of spending and using it. But God has promised that in the long run it will be as bitter as gall. Luke 19:16-23. Jesus here is speaking in the home of Zaccheus, who had just accepted Christ as his Savior and vowed to do right by those to whom he had been unfair. Here in this parable Jesus does not condemn the capitalist, but likens him to God. A capitalist who is honest and does the right thing is a blessing to mankind. This capitalist in turn places his money in the hands of other men to capitalize on it thru recognized, honest channels. Two of the servants used that given to them by their master to bring to him returns and received reward from it. The third hid what the master had given him. He was not worthy of greater trust.

God has given to all men things of value. To many He has given money or the ability to make money. To others He has given literary genius. To others He has given executive ability. To others He has given the ability to grow sons and daughters who would serve and worship Him. All, no matter what it is, is a gift of God; a trust to be used in His service, and to bring to Him returns. Now the returns must be considered. When at the end, in the judgment, Jesus calls for His increase—what will be counted as increase for a faithful servant? There are many men who have made great fortunes, attained high honor, and women who have borne many children who will appear with their pounds, just as God gave them—no increase—hidden pounds—hidden in worldly wise service without respect for God, and therefore no increase. Then there will be many who never had a thousand dollars in their lives whose increase, blessing and reward will be because of financial faithfulness. They had little, but gave much of what they had to God. There will be those whose verse was never read by the teeming thousands, who will have reward because their efforts were for Christ. There will be those never heard of, aside from their own neighborhood, who will be rewarded on grounds of bravery—bravery for Christ. Many a mother never known by the world, whose children made no mark of fame, will be rewarded for faithful motherhood because of the faithful Christ-like training given to her children. Indeed, those who are faithful to God in small things will be trusted with greater.

TIGERS GAIN SIXTH VICTORY

The Tigers took the Wheeler Mustangs for a 26-0 victory last Friday afternoon. This game made the sixth consecutive victory for the Tigers. The score was made in the first half of the game. In the second half the second team replaced the first and held the score as it was in the first half. The second team promises one good ball player.

Coach Rush scouted the game between Shamrock and Memphis, so Supt. Boswell acted as coach during our game, which was dedicated to him. The chief trouble he had was to keep only eleven men on the field at one time.

The Tigers play the Mustangs at Wheeler next Friday afternoon.

CREDITS AND THEIR VALUE

In the McLean high school there are 34 affiliated credits. This is above the average for a school of this size. Free text books are ordered for about three-fourths of these courses. There are requirements by the state department of education for the following subjects for high school graduation: Four years of English, American history, and advanced civics. The other credits may be selected by the students, with the help of the teachers and parents. Sixteen credits are required for graduation, and fifteen of these must be affiliated for college entrance. The McLean high school is also affiliated with the Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges.

Some question has arisen as to how honor grades are accounted. Each grade has a value, as follows: C minus is 1, C is 2, C plus is 3, B minus is 4, B is 5, B plus is 6, A minus is 7, A is 8. Therefore, one may easily see that the student who takes the greatest number of subjects will have a chance for a higher average of points than will the student who only takes the required sixteen.

FOOTBALL BOYS GIVEN PARTY

On last Friday evening the members of the football team, as honor guests, with their friends and high school teachers, were entertained by Miss Elizabeth Kennedy, in the home of Mrs. Billingslea.

Tables were arranged throughout the house, and on each table was a miniature football gridiron. "Table football" was the game that was enjoyed for several hours. Small imitation footballs were used for tally cards, and these were used for the selection of partners. A football whistle was used to regulate the game. Much hilarity resulted from the line plunges, intercepted passes, etc.

Late in the evening dainty refreshments were served to about fifty guests. These consisted of hot chocolate and cookies, on which the word "T-I-G-E-R-S" was written.

Guests were: Football men: Ashby, Back, C. C. and C. W. Bogan, Brock, Boyles, Carpenter, L. C. and A. Christian, Crockett, Dowell, Greer, Ivey, Kinard, McCoy, Robinson, Switzer, Tolliver, West, Whitfield; Coach Rush and J. Billingslea; Misses Boswell, Charlie Marie and Oleta Back, Mary Alice and Louise Wilson, Hess, Avalee and Mary Emma Back, Young, Brooks, Carpenter, Harding, Pugh, Landers, McCracken, Scott, Glenn Kinard, McCarty, Turner, Ashby, Vannoy and Kennedy; Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Boswell and Genevieve, and Mrs. Billingslea.

HOME ECONOMICS REPORT

The V. H. E. Club met last Thursday. The house was called to order and the minutes read. The program was turned over to the chairman of the program committee, Oleta Holloway. A report on "How Home Economics Has Helped Me" was given by Avalee Back. Another was given by Juanita Coleman on "Home Economics for Indians." Last, Oleta Holloway gave a report on "A Princess Takes Home Economics." Old and new business was discussed, and the club decided to meet again on the third Thursday of this month.

The third year class has succeeded in securing some white rats with which to experiment. We intend to feed one an excellent diet, one a diet lacking in vitamin A, another a typical American diet, and the other one a very poor diet consisting of coffee and candy.

NATIONAL EDUCATION WEEK

The first program for education week, which is sponsored by the National Education Association, the American Legion and the P. T. A., was attended by a large crowd Monday evening. A very interesting program was given.

ASSEMBLY NOTES

Wednesday morning, Rev. Cecil G. Goff brought a most practical message to the high school assembly. He urged the young people to think, to strive to uphold morality, and to meet the financial crisis of our nation. He said that it is true that we do not have Indians to fight or a frontier to explore, but there is always work to be done for those who can do it.

On November 8, the Freshman class had charge of the assembly program. "Texas Heroes" was the subject. The introduction, given by Lewis Tolliver, was:

"Our Texas heroes, determined, dauntless, energetic and ever consecrated to noble purposes, are an inspiration in character study. It is our purpose in presenting these stories to create within your minds a love for our great characters and to stimulate a desire to study carefully and thoughtfully the wonderful history of our great state. Our Texas history, with its sacrifices and remarkable achievements, offers splendid opportunity for the spirited teaching of patriotism.

"May we, the pupils of Texas schools, become loyal, devoted citizens. May each do his part in keeping bright and ever brighter our Lone Star. There are many Texas heroes, but we have time to discuss only three."

The following program was given: The Father of Texas—Katherine Patterson.

The Hero of the Alamo—Lavada Quarles.

Piano duet—Helen Boswell and Juanita Carpenter.

The Hero of San Jacinto—Lois Stockton.

Texas—Charles Finley.

WANTED—TWO NAMES

McLean high school has lately had two new additions—and who could find a little pair more in love with each other? But the sad part about it is that they have no names—and what could be sadder than to be in school and have no name? So to relieve the embarrassment of the situation, 50c is being offered for the two best names. Anyone is eligible to enter. You must submit two names or one group, or you may submit as many as six names or three groups.

Several names have already been suggested, such as Frankie and Johnnie, Joe and Mollie, Bill and Minnie, but we were not able to decide on which of these to use, so let us have your suggestions.

And now perhaps you are wondering just what kind of characters these are. They have been attending all science classes, but will change their course today to the commercial class. They are very attentive in class, but do very little reciting. The young lady of the pair is just thirteen inches long, very kind, gentle and lovable, while the gentleman is somewhat stubborn, crabbed, and hard to get along with. He has reached the length of sixteen inches. They fall in the Phylum, chordata; subphylum, vertebrata; class, reptilia; order, crocodylia, and family alligator. And thus we have two baby alligators, terribly in need of names. Phone or mail your suggestions to John Harding.

AGRICULTURE REPORT

The meat judging team is working every night, preparing themselves for the national judging contest to be held at Kansas City next week. Lavelle Christian, Erwin Browning, Clyde Andrews and Bert Carpenter are those who were fortunate enough to win the trip. They will leave here Friday night, Nov. 11, and return Nov. 17.

Perk up Your Appetite for Coffee

Have you been shifting from coffee to coffee lately looking for a brand that really satisfied? Perhaps trouble is not in the coffee but in your old coffee pot. A new Electric Percolator will solve your problem. It will get the most out of whatever brand you use—each drop of water with just the right flavor and fragrance—revive your taste for good coffee.

It's so convenient, too, to have the percolator right at the table. Through the glass top you can see when the brew is right. It saves all those steps to the kitchen and it makes certain that your coffee will be piping hot just when you want to serve it.
