Trade Extension Is Subject of C. of C. Discussion

The need of trade extension and the subject of present payrolls was discussed at the regular meeting of the Chamber of Commerce held Tuesday night, with President Reuben R. Cook in charge.

It is the time to advertise and to keep McLean on the map, on one hand, and to keep the Chamber of Commerce on the map, on the other hand, Mr. Cobb spoke of the need upon his part of the Chamber of Commerce to keep people interested in the community. "It is really worth the money and we must all work together for the good of the community," said Mr. Cobb. "It is now the time to advertise and work to hold our own in the community."

Banker Cook Complimented by Loan Office

Reuben R. R. Cook of the American National Bank has been complimented by Owen W. Sherrill, regional manager of the crop production loan office at Dallas, for his work at McLean. An extract from Mr. Sherrill's letter follows:

"Mr. Cook, I want to take this opportunity of expressing deeply my appreciation for your individual efforts and service which you have rendered the farmers of your territory. Having contacted and known you through this service, I realize that knowing people who mean as much as you do to your section gives one a stronger determination to carry on and continue hard work and service as the opportunities present themselves, and I want you to know again that when the writer can serve you, it will be ever his personal pleasure."

The letter was in response to Mr. Cook's recommending that the loan office be transferred to Pampa on account of an extension of time for wheat loans, due to the fact that there are no wheat farmers in this end of the county.

Mr. Cook, as chairman of the loan committee, passed on over 60 applications for loans the past two months with some $4,000 allowed cotton farmers, and about ten applications amounting to $2,000 for wheat farmers.

BRIEFS

By A P ANGELLO

Prices are booming since we are off the gold standard. On the standard a poor man can't get hold of a dollar—off the standard his dollars aren't worth anything. So Mr. Poor Man gets it from both sides.

Texas will vote on beer, and in the mean while beer dotes upon Texas. Who can guess how Texas will vote?

Both China and Japan are shouting, "We are winning!"

Apparently more satisfaction than publicity came out of President Roosevelt's world economic conference. The world waits to see possible results.

President's Day may have been profitable for President Roosevelt but not so for President Cerro of Peru. While P. D. R. was being honored, Cerro was assassinated.

Iowa farmers are turning things upside down. It took them a long time to come to life, but when they did they were working over time.

If you can't sell your property for what it is worth, there can be no foreclosure in Texas for a year. And what will bring what it's worth today? Good-bye foreclosures "for a spell."

Ghandi is going on another fast. Such will power is most profitable in these depressing times. If the world acted on as high ideals as Mr. Ghandi there would be more fasting and a better world.

W. W. Shadid left the first of the week for a few days' visit with relatives at Gladewater.

JESUS FACES THE CROSS Mark 10:32-45

By Rev. Cecil G. Goff

The time of the crucifixion was very near at hand. Jesus had already left Galilee for the last time. He took His journey toward Jerusalem through Perea, as we saw in the last lesson. When His work was completed on that last journey through Perea, He set Himself toward the appointed place. The time of the passover was at hand, which meant that in a very few days the time of the crucifixion would also be at hand. And Jesus had a ministry to complete in Jerusalem before He went to the cross. Therefore, He started for Jerusalem.

Jesus was no doubt absorbed in the agony of His own thought concerning the coming sacrifice. He momentarily forgot those who were with Him and quickened His pace, evidently, for the Word says that He was walking ahead of them. And as they followed they were first amazed, then the amazement grew into fear. This is the only time it is ever even mentioned that the disciples were afraid of the Master. But Jesus was picturing in His own mind, no doubt, an advanced conception of the agony of Golgotha. There was sufficient response in His body to cause an outward showing of the inward agony. No wonder the disciples feared. But Jesus laid that anticipation aside shortly and again took His disciples into His confidence. He told them that in Jerusalem He should be condemned, crucified, and rise again. The disciples were unable to comprehend the meaning of what Jesus told them. And straightway two of them asked Him if He would grant them a desire. And that desire was that they might set on each side of Him when He came into His glory. Seemingly they had no understanding as to what must take place, and the agony that must be suffered before the Master would come into His glory. The teaching of Jesus upon these matters had failed to reach the understanding of the disciples. Jesus asked if they were able to drink the same cup that He was to drink, and they thought that they were. Jesus knew that they should both taste persecution for His sake, but that it would not have anything of the significance or agony that Jesus' death would have. But the selfish request was not to be granted. Honor in the Kingdom of God is not granted arbitrarily, but rather is won by the service of a follower of the Master. The other ten disciples of course heard the request. It sounded selfish to them, and it was. But the ten became angry at the two. The anger was, of course, from as selfish hearts as the request had been. There was very little difference. Jesus then took His twelve grown children and gave them a lesson in Christian, or better said, Christ-like, greatness. In the world, in politics, in army, in business, among officials, in common every day laboring, the man who has the advantage is the man with the authority. The man who lacks the advantage must serve the other man, must do his bidding, must accept his thinking. The wealthy and the powerful "lord it over" the rest of the people. Just this very thing the disciples were seeking to do. They had followed Him, and when He came into power they felt that they had an advantage, and wanted to make sure of it so that no one else would get in ahead of them. But that law of selfishness is not serviceable in the Kingdom of God. If a man becomes great in God's sight, he becomes so by service, and remains so by service. The man who would be greatest and would be first in God's Kingdom must be minister and servant to the greatest number of mankind. Jesus did not come to be ministered unto, but to minister. He is our example, and therefore it is our business not expect to be ministered to, but to minister to mankind in the name of Jesus who indeed has ministered more to one of us than all of us might minister to Him and to mankind through ten thousand life-times. This is a principle which most of us Christians need to learn. Most of us, like the disciples, are still attempting to bring over into the spiritual world the old selfish, worldly idea of standing, and of power. In our churches oft times the man with the money, and the standing in the world, has more influence and power in directing the activities of the church than the devout Christian without money or worldly standing. We stand in need of higher spiritual conceptions of worship and service, and less regard for our personal wishes that have not been tempered by the flaming spirit of our Savior. Billy Bray, preaching to a large number of miners, told a story of two mines. One was good pay, the other not. A worker from the poor pay mine presented himself for pay one Saturday night at the good pay mine. He was quickly dismissed with the remark that if he wanted pay there, he would have to work there. Friends, we must serve Christ His way here as He has commanded us, if we expect to share in His pay roll of glory hereafter.
