A Thousand Yous

When you pick up your newspaper and glance over the advertising you quite unconsciously multiply yourself a thousand times.

In half or three-quarters of an hour you can, figuratively speaking, visit every progressive store in town. You virtually poke your head into every department store. You run into the florist's, the confectioner's, the oculist's, the leading grocers, banks, theatres, all the various places that supply the things that make this the twentieth century and life worth the living. Here is a greater choice in clothing, food, furniture, books, pictures, musical instruments, travel, entertainment, opportunities for investment, the service of public utility corporations than any monarch of old could command.

It would easily take a thousand yous, traveling hard all day, to find out for yourself what the advertisements tell you in a few minutes morning or evening.

Advertisements deserve your attention. They deserve your confidence. Without advertising, the prices you would have to pay for many of the necessities you now buy for small change would make a dollar look like a snowball on the kitchen range.

The Paper That's Read First

SAPPING THE TOWN'S LIFE

A printing salesman was calling on the business and professional men in Miami Monday. He probably got some orders; in fact, we know there are business men in Miami who refuse to patronize home industry, and so far as they are concerned, a newspaper is unnecessary to boost the town and community. The same parties also keep a "Monkey Ward" and "Sears Rare-back" catalog and are good customers of these chain companies who are sapping the life blood out of small towns and communities year after year.—Miami Chief.

THE HOME PAPER

If all the sheets from East to West, the local paper is the best. Deep is our love and deep our debt to Record, Sentinel and Gazette. When first I landed on this ball, a bit of flesh wrapped round a squall, it welcomed me with joy and pride. My life has never justified. It follows me my whole life through. With words all kind and mostly true; and even after I am hearsead, will tell my best and hide my worst.—Bob Adams, in Rude Rural Rhymes.

A SMALL BOY

A small boy went into a grocery store and asked for a box of matches. Presently he returned, saying: "Please, mother says these matches won't light." "Won't light!" cried the grocer. "Why, look here!" and he struck one on his trousers. The boy took the matches away but presently returned with them once more. "Please sir, mother says she hasn't time to come and scratch all her matches on your trousers."

WHEN DID THE ROBBERY OCCUR?

"When did the robbery occur?" the cross-examining lawyer asked the witness. "I think it was—" began the witness, when the lawyer interrupted him. "We don't care what you think, we want to know what you know," replied the lawyer. "Well, I guess I may as well get off the stand then," said the witness. "I can't talk without thinking; I'm no lawyer."

WHAT DID YOU HAVE FOR LUNCH?

First Tapper—"What did you have for lunch?" Second Planner—"Oh, I had a double milled milk with an egg." First Tapper—"Who was the egg?"

WOULD YOU CARE TO DONATE

Homewife—"Sure thing! You may take my husband."

A FROZEN TOWN

The old hen with an early brood wonders where the worms are hiding out. A newspaper often wonders where the worms are, too, and no matter how hard it scratches, worms won't appear out of ground that is frozen. Worms or no worms, the newspaper man has to dig up something with which to pay bills. People like newspaper publicity, but they don't want to pay for it. They want a good newspaper, but they don't want to aid the financial end of the deal. In other words, they don't want to furnish any worms. A town all frozen up is a poor place for a newspaper to do much profitable scratching.—Higgins News.

You can write it down in the book, according to Editor Hinkel in the Stillwater (Okla.) Gazette, that if it's a plan to raise taxes it is not likely to relieve the little man, despite the bombastic explanations made to show how "it will saddle her onto the big boys." Economy is the necessary item and reduced governmental expenses the road to it—both on national and state highways, so to speak. The schools have taken their cut, now smash some sacred cows in the forehead and rid us of some of this mounting governmental expense before you govern us to distraction.

A Clay Center (Kan.) business man whose total advertising bill during the month of December was $2.99, was complaining about business, according to the Dispatch, when a traveling man butted in with the remark that a merchant who did not spend more than that measly amount during a December had no right to complain about business; if he had sold anything at all he would have gotten more than he'd asked for.

Russell (Kan.) has five kinds of currency in circulation, as noted in the Record. There's the good old U. S. stuff, although it's mighty scarce; second, is the city scrip, that is more and more in evidence as time goes on; third, there are the Russell Record Merchandise Certificates, and a lot of them on duty; fourth, comes food checks; and fifth, "hot checks."

Families are paying up their bills now on reduced incomes by simply reducing expenses below their incomes, and the Perry (Okla.) Journal insists that governments will have to do the same thing.

Byrd—"You say someone has taken money from your pocket? Maybe it was your wife."

NO FEELING!

The old grad was showing the alma mater to his wife; and as they crossed the campus they met one of his old professors. The old grad introduced his wife, and the professor sought to pay his former student a compliment: "As I remember your husband, he was a man of rare gifts."

"That's about right," snapped the loving spouse, "he hasn't given me one since we were married."—Wampus

Mrs. Bosco—"That woman sings with a great deal of feeling, it seems to me."

Mr. Bosco—"Well, I hope she isn't feeling as bad as it sounds to me."

Cohen—"Good morning, Mr. Bloom, what makes you so sad?" Bloom—"My brother is very sick." Cohen—"Oh, is he?" Bloom—"No, Ikey."

Native—"Well, what do you think of our little city?" Visitor—"I'll tell you, brother, this is the first cemetery I ever saw with lights."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

It is extraordinary that Mrs. Jenks can never see any faults in her children," observed Mrs. Smith. "Mothers never can," remarked her husband. "What an absurd idea, James! So like a man, I'm sure I should see faults in our children at once—if they had any."

Editors are people who have to cut down 5,000 words to go into a column; and the writers of the words never can understand.

ANGER IS TOO EXPENSIVE

Augustine Birrell says truthfully that "few men can afford to be angry." Anger is no ornament to any man and it is usually a positive disfigurement. In business it is often well-nigh suicidal, and the man who allows his temper to interfere with his business dealings will find that one of the most costly indulgences. When we are angry, we say things which we have no right to say, and things for which we are sorry, a few minutes afterward. Only the man who can keep cool has a right to expect any place of importance in the business world. Let others rage as they may, the man who can keep cool has a distinct advantage, even in dollars and cents. Bad temper is deadly in its effect on reputation. Men hesitate to follow the man who cannot control himself when under fire, and the man who can speak temperately when all about him have lost their heads is certain to win the profound respect of his fellows. Anger is too costly for a politician; it is too expensive for a preacher; it is too great a risk for the home. The cost in friendships of this vice is terrific. There are thousands of sincere friendships broken up probably every day by the fact that men and women "get mad" and say what they do not mean, but for which they are too proud to apologize. If a man wants to keep a bear or a wildcat in the house, he may, but he had better not presume to indulge in the costly luxury of retaining a bad temper.—Lone Star.

MY SECOND GRADE

They all came up to whisper— They had to tell me now: "I have a baby sister." "My daddy sold the cow." "My brother's got a date tonight." "My sister lost her job." "My cousin makes fifteen a week." "My puppy's name is Bob." They tell me all their secrets; They call a spade a spade. For, you see, I am their teacher, And they, my second grade. —Bonnie Estill, Wharton.

THE REASON

It was a sunshiny Sunday morning and Pat had brought his shaving tools out on the porch. Mrs. McGinnis looked over the fence. "Sure, Mrs. Murphy, does your old man shave on the outside?" "And what's bothering you?" asked Mrs. Murphy. "Did you think he was fur-lined?" Joe Burke read in the Sand Springs (Okla.) Leader where he was running for mayor. He immediately started out with one thing in mind, "whip everybody connected with the paper." On the way he encountered a friend who had also read the Leader and congratulated him. "Well, if the people feel that way about me, that's different." When he reached the Leader office several hours later, he was all smiles and instead of fighting, purchased some supplies and confessed he knew now that the people of Sand Springs read and had confidence in the good judgment rendered in the columns of the Leader. "What make of car do you drive?" "R. F. D.—rescued from the dump."

ALL EXPLAINED

The minister called at the home on Sunday afternoon, and Willie answered the bell. "Pa ain't home," he answered. "He went over to the golf club." The minister's brow darkened. Willie hastened to explain. "Pa ain't gonna play any golf, he's gonna play a little stud game."

A TRICK IN IT

The villagers, listening to a band, understood everything on the trombone, so they asked opinion of the oldest settler watched the player a while and claimed: "Don't notice him, it's a trick in it; he ain't really playing it." L. D. Harding, of the Pryor Republic, makes this candid mission: "I am expected to do a column each week, but sometimes feel like the average merchant, he gets tired and wants to quit advertising and that makes more dope to fill the paper; merchant's business falls off and reader who depends on the ad bargains as they appear in the has to go to a neighboring town buy, where the merchants don't take a vacation." It takes educated brains to get wealth. The illiterate is economical and unproductive but himself and for society. On the most illiterate states with a to the production of wealth, and how the balance tips in favor literacy.—Charles McKenney, Fayette.

WHAT MUST A YOUNG GIRL KNOW BEFORE MARRIAGE? There is a true story told of an ingenious Budapest bookseller, who—faced with hard times—advertised that he had for sale a volume of information indispensable to a young girl contemplating matrimony. He said that in this book would be found—not what every young girl is told before marriage—but what she will find it indispensable to know. Thousands sent their mail-orders. Then—complaints began to pour in. Finally an outraged man brought the bookseller into court. He stated that he had sent for one of these compendia of indispensable information . . . and that he received by mail a 19th Century Cook-book, "Lazy Little Lulu Learns Cookery." He wanted the bookseller found guilty of obtaining money under false pretenses. . . . But the judge acquitted him, saying that he was in thorough accord with the bookseller's view that a knowledge of cooking was of primary importance to the prospective bride. The modern newspaper could be advertised truthfully in very much the same way. The most indispensable knowledge to a young wife is knowing where and what to buy . . . how to get the most for her money . . . how—on a limited budget—to keep her home fresh, new, attractive . . . how to dress herself and her children inexpensively, yet in the very latest styles . . . how to serve on her table foods of the most dependable quality. In other words—the advertising that appears in your local newspaper contains information of real value . . . news! Announcements of the latest and best in the shopping world. This is indispensable information to every woman, especially to those with families. It helps them run their homes successfully. Surely that is what every woman must know. ESSAY ELIMINATION

The try-outs for the essay contest were held. The two essays which follow had for first place in the senior division and were written respectively by Louise Wilson and Orren Kuykendall.

Some Causes of Crime in Our Country

The two most important causes of crime in our country, as well as in other countries, are environment and inheritance. Of the two, I think environment is the greater.

Inheritance is not as great a cause for crime as environment. One has heard people say "He's a natural born criminal. It's in his blood to kill."

In the United States the law can be evaded more easily than in most countries. Some people commit crime because they have the idea that they can escape the law.

Some Causes of Crime in Our Country

Crime, the greatest evil of the world today, is directly, or indirectly, caused by hundreds of different means. The white-faced, trembling first offender or the grim, hardened, evil-faced veteran are, in the eyes of the law and justice, criminals, doomed to the dungeon, or to the last sad journey which ends in the death chair.

Each had an equal chance, you might say, but did they? Perhaps one child when but a baby had everything a small baby could desire. Clean, beautiful food, warmth, comfort and shelter are not all the things an infant desires.

The boy raised in the slums, early in his life learned by some noble art or example, some kind word or deed, that a noble helpful life is far more desirable than a life of crime.

Some great injustice, some bitter disillusion, some great heart-break or tragedy can turn a man into as bitter a criminal monster as the vilest man from the slums.

Whiskey and dope can send a man to the lowest depths of hellish crime. How easy it is for a man to take his first drink when his "friends" are begging him to be "social."

Look into the heart of a man sitting in the death cell. His mind is filled with the injustice of it all. He looks back to those younger days when he played with other boys.

EDITOR SPEAKS IN CHAPEL

On Wednesday morning, Mr. T. A. Landers, editor of The McLean News, spoke to the high school assembly concerning the International Lions Club essay contest.

Lionism was born in the heart of Melvin Jones, of Chicago, in 1914. International and national clubs were conceived in his mind, but it was three years before he saw definite results of his dream.

All Lions Clubs are controlled by a code of ethics, which involves the motto of the club. Lions Clubs are organized to build good citizens.

HUGUENOTS IN FLORIDA

The French attempted to colonize Florida, many miles north of the St. Johns river, at a place named Port Royal. Two ideas led to the founding of this colony.

So the band of Huguenots were sent to America. Most of them had never learned to work. For a while they lived upon the food the neighboring Indians gave them.

Two years later Coligny sent out a second colony. They settled on the St. Johns river and called it Fort Caroline. They had constant quarrels among themselves, and as they didn't work, they were soon in the same shape that the earlier colony was.

He told them of the destruction of Fort Caroline. Then, at a signal, the helpless Huguenots were killed.

To look today upon quiet St. Augustine, any one wouldn't imagine that our oldest town had such a terrible beginning.

5B REPORT

Only four boys made the honor roll in our room this six weeks. The fifth grade welcomes a new pupil this week. Clay Johnson comes from Alanreed.

We are sorry that Laura Ellen Kunkel cannot be in school because of a sprained ankle.

At last the pictures for picture memory have come and we are studying hard. Of course we want to win at the league meet.

TAKING CARE OF THE BABY

By Margaret Kennedy
It isn't any fun to take care of babies. I know from past experiences. Once I took care of my sister's baby for a month.

I had to play dolls from morning till night. I didn't like to do this as I am too old to play dolls. When I would try to read, the baby would start asking questions and wanting to see the pictures in the book.

When she wanted a drink she wouldn't drink out of the plain cups. She had to have one of the cups out of mother's tea set. I always had to wash it afterward.

She would not let me dress her, but wanted mother to do so. Mother then told me to dress her. She didn't seem to realize that the baby would not let me.

When she went to bed, she wouldn't let me turn out the light. If I wanted to study or look for anything in the room she was in, she told me to get out. I didn't have a very good time taking care of the baby.

Jones went back to Smith and said: "Nigger, you sold me a blind mule." "Naw," replied Smith, "dat mule ain't blind—he just don't give a damn!"
If your car shimmyies and wanders and weaves like that mule, bring it to us. We are experts on steering gear, wheel alignment, excess tire wear.
