Cross School Nurse Speaks at Lions Luncheon

The need of transportation to Amarillo to the free clinic for a couple of local children was mentioned, as was the need for a community garden. Miss M. C. Davis reported $35 allotted McLean by the government for garden seed.

The transportation problem was left in the hands of the committee named last week, and the matter of the community garden was turned over to the better yards and gardens committee, with the addition of Lion M. C. Davis, local relief officer.

Commissioner W. W. Wilson was presented as a new member and B. P. Gray reinstated to membership. County Agent Ralph R. Thomas was recognized as a visitor.

Cotton Contracts Completed, Sent to Washington

The county and community committees for the Gray county cotton production control association met with the county agent in McLean Tuesday to make minor corrections in contracts, and attend to other final details before sending cotton contracts to Washington.

Two weeks ago the committee men were ordered by the state board of review to make reductions in the production of individual contracts of the county to make totals for the county meet the government figures. The county as a whole was very conservative in the acreage turned in and no cut in acreage was required. The board returned acceptance of the reductions made the latter part of last week. Gray county was one of the first counties in the Panhandle to receive final approval. Delay in sending the contracts to Washington was due to the neglect on the part of some of the producers and landowners in returning "Acceptance of Reductions" promptly.

The county committee decided Tuesday not to wait any longer for the return of acceptances but to send in all completed contracts to Washington and to put contracts on which no acceptance had been received on the delayed list to be sent in later.

The committees and the county agent were highly complimented by the board of review for the way the contracts were handled in the county.

The county committee is composed of J. S. Howard, chairman; R. M. Gibson and W. A. Back. Community committees are John W. Webster, J. R. Phillips and L. L. Palmer.

Gray county farmers will receive $13,000 in the first payment for the 4,297 acres rented to the government, with another payment of like amount coming in late summer. Most of this money will go into the McLean territory.

R. B. STOUT FOR SHERIFF

R. B. Stout, former deputy sheriff of Gray county, has handed The News the following announcement of his candidacy for sheriff of Gray county, subject to the action of the Democratic primary:

"To the voters of Gray County: "I take this method of announcing as candidate for sheriff. I do this because, first, I would like to serve you as sheriff, and secondly, because a great many people from different parts of the county have encouraged me to make the race.

"So that you may know who I am and what I stand for, I give you the following brief facts: I have been a resident of Pampa and McLean since 1930. I have been a railroad man and peace officer all of my life. I was formerly employed in Pampa by the Santa Fe Railway Co. and worked as a switchman and engine foreman before I began to work for Mr. Pipes as deputy sheriff. Before moving to Pampa I was employed by the Fort Worth and Denver Railway Co. of Amarillo in the transportation department and as trainman. I am a member of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, the majority of my life having been spent in railroad work. Your former sheriff, C. E. Pipes, appointed me as deputy sheriff on January 2, 1933, when he went into the sheriff's office, and I worked as county jailer until June 1, 1933 when Mr. Pipes transferred me to McLean to handle the sheriff's work on the south side of the county.

"If I am elected your sheriff, I promise to give you an honest and efficient administration. I will employ local men, that is, Gray county citizens, as my deputies, and I will endeavor to select only men of courage and character. I will try at all times to cooperate with all other law enforcing agencies in the county and out of it. It will be my constant aim to keep down petty jealousies that usually exist between law enforcing agencies. I promise you to spend my full time in the discharge of the duties of the office, always bearing in mind that the sheriff is but another public servant and is not in any sense of the word a ruler. I will do my best to create a better understanding between the public and the law enforcement agencies. They should be friends and not enemies. I expect, if elected, to secure and present evidence in all cases coming under my attention, in a fair, impartial, and as far as I am capable, intelligent manner, and with one idea in mind and that is to do my duty as the law provides it and to treat other people as I would have them treat me under the same circumstances.

"I hope to meet every voter in the county during the campaign, and personally solicit your support, but should I for any reason fail to meet any of the voters, I nevertheless earnestly solicit your support and ask you to make any investigation in regard to me that you care to make, either as to my ability as a peace officer or my standing as a man.

"Respectfully submitted,
"R. B. STOUT."

W. D. Biggers, secretary-manager of the McLean chamber of commerce, has been elected superintendent of the Sudan schools.

Men Arrested, Charged with Store Robbery

Former Deputy Sheriff R. B. Stout, now special city officer of McLean, with Sheriff John Porter of Wheeler county and Sheriff Bralshaw of Cheyenne, Okla., working on the Blakney Bros. and W. J. Ball store robberies at Alanreed, arrested Shorty Griffin at Shamrock Monday night and Alvin Webb here Tuesday night. The men were charged with being implicated in the Alanreed robberies and the theft of Geo. Colebank's car here.

According to Officer Stout, Griffin was arrested at his home in Shamrock about midnight, a search of the house revealing goods stolen from Blakney Bros. at the two robberies, and Griffin's wife was wearing some of the goods. Griffin handed an automatic pistol to his wife by the barrel, and she accidentally pulled the trigger, shooting him in the leg. He is now in a Shamrock hospital.

A third man under suspicion lives at Raden, Okla., where more of the stolen goods and the Colebank car were found. The car had another body on it with a new paint job, but was burned Saturday night, and another car, a 1933 Chevrolet coupe, was stolen at Raden, which was recovered by the officers.

The stolen goods from Blakney Bros. store have been positively identified according to Officer Stout, and action will be taken as soon as Griffin's wound heals sufficiently.

S. S. Lesson

By Rev. Cecil G. Goff
Pastor First Baptist Church

JESUS ACCLAIMED KING

Lesson text, Matt. 21:1-14. Golden text, Phil. 2:9.

In the lesson for today we begin the study of the crucifixion week. On the morning of the first day of the week, Jesus came with His disciples and possibly other followers to Bethpage, a little town less than two miles from the city of Jerusalem. From there he sent two of His disciples to a house where there was tied a donkey and a colt. His command was to untie the animal and bring it to Him without asking permission. If they were stopped they were simply to tell who wanted the animal. The disciples and others made a sort of saddle with their outer garments, and Jesus sat upon the animal and started His triumphal entry into the Holy City.

It seemed that the crowd was inspired over the matter and threw their garments in the way for Him to ride over, waved palms in the air and shouted out hosannas. They called Him the son of David and recognized Him as the Messiah. The multitude was great, and the noise loud and could not help attracting attention. The crowd gathered and surged with praise until the triumphal entry was accomplished. It is entirely probable that the throng was so great that the officers did not care to attempt to disperse it and that the temple officials and priests were afraid of it. Thus Christ entered His Holy City acclaimed as king.

When the king of the Jews entered the Holy City, He went immediately to His house, the temple. There He found the usual prevailing conditions. Once before, in the beginning of His ministry, He had been moved to righteous indignation and had cleansed the temple. Again as He viewed the conditions He was moved with that same righteous indignation. The temple was a house of prayer, and not a house of thievery and merchandising.

Jesus stood in the temple and saw in a glance what was taking place. He had just entered the city and passed through the streets, being heralded by a great throng of people as king. They were ready to go with Him to the temple or the judgment seat of Pilate, or wherever He might want to go. They were ready to assist Him in whatever He wanted to do. No doubt most of them thought that He would either set Himself up as high priest and take command over the religious worship of the Jews, or dethrone Pilate and gather an army for the purpose of defeating the Roman army of the land and other armies that might be sent from Rome or other parts of the nation. It is almost certain that the people who had followed Jesus into the city proclaiming Him king had no conception of the spiritual kingdom Jesus was about to set up. They had their minds riveted only on a material kingdom. There not only arose in His heart at the sight in the temple righteous indignation, but there was at His back a great throng of people.

It was not customary for the Roman officials to permit such noisy crowds to continue, but in this instance there were so many, they were so in earnest, and doing the will of God, so were not hindered. Again it is not customary for bankers or those who handle money, especially if that money is their own, to permit one man to scatter it around and drive them off without a struggle. There was no struggle there that day. Jesus had the power and authority. The money changers saw that in His face. He also had the backing of a great throng of people. The most of those people would have fought for Jesus that day. Several days later they were fighting against Him. How like us! When the sailing is smooth we are fighting hard for Jesus and righteousness. When it becomes difficult we are quiet. We let the matter rest in the hands of others, and keep quiet on the matter.

Tarbell says of the temple market: "The temple market arose from the desire to meet the necessities of the pilgrims from afar. Not only must they have money changed into Jewish coins, but they must secure birds and beasts for sacrifice which have been duly certified to be ritually clean. The temple market was a monopoly. It was, moreover, owned or leased by the sons of the high priest, Annas, as we have learned from Rabbinic literature, and they were noted for their greed and dishonesty. Said a Rabbi, 'They were themselves high priests, their sons treasurers, their sons-in-law assistant treasurers and their servants beat the people with sticks.' Business and religion were united. The business which was a monopoly was controlled by those who themselves profited by exorbitant charges. The temple had become the den of robbers."

It was this which Jesus attacked. He drove the robbers out, and made place for the people, that He might teach them concerning the coming kingdom in which they were so interested. It has been said by some that Jesus was always very kind, and never condemnatory in His ministry. Those who made the statement forgot to read the account of the cleansings of the temple or the epithets of Jesus against the scribes and Pharisees, and all others who insisted on living in sin. Jesus was the great champion of righteousness, even if He did have to die that men might be clothed in the righteousness of the Son of God, Jesus expects His houses to be kept clean and pure today, and for His people to worship Him in spirit and truth.

SERMONETTE

By Rev. Stephen M. Tuhy
Lutheran Pastor Oviedo, Fla.

Text: "Speak not evil of another, brethren."—James 4:11.

If a person is a real, honest, genuine Christian, he will live a Christian life. He will live what he believes. He will not speak evil of his brothers and sisters in the faith, neither of other people. He will not slander them and try to ruin their good name and reputation. He will not be a tale-bearer that revealeth secrets, but as a faithful friend he will conceal the matters insofar as they are not necessary to be revealed before the neighbors or in court.

If one of his fellow-men sins against him, he will not broadcast it over the radio, the press, and the "gossip" system, but he will act according to the Holy Scriptures. The directions are given in Matt. 18:15: "If thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone." If a fellow-Christian will not give heed to the admonition, then witnesses are to be taken. If he resists even then to square up the disagreement, then the church council, together with the pastor, are to take the matter in hand.

However, if a non-Christian offends a Christian and no success can be attained because the non-Christian will not recognize the Biblical principle which the Christian is following in regard to discipline, then it may be necessary to straighten the matter out in court. But a Christian will try very hard to settle peacefully and out of court. By coming to an agreement quickly, the Christian may gain his adversary and win him for Christ. A Christian will rather suffer persecution than to do harm to his fellowman.

A Christian will heed the commandment of God: "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor." Martin Luther explains this commandment thus: "We should fear and love God so that we may not deceitfully belie, betray, slander, nor defame our neighbor, but defend him, speak well of him, and put the best construction on everything." By putting the best construction on everything is meant: "Charitably covering our neighbor's faults and frailties, and explaining in his favor whatever admits of such explanation."

A Christian will forgive and forget; he will not bear a grudge or carry on a feud. He at all times will be charitable, remembering the words of Scripture: "Charity shall cover the multitude of sins."—1 Peter 4:8. Also 1 Cor. 13:7, "Charity believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things."

Are YOU a Christian in name only or are you a true, genuine Christian who lives what he has learned from his Lord Jesus by means of the Holy Bible? If not, it is not too late. Amend your life today beg for forgiveness of your sins, and ask the Lord Jesus to guide you daily and give you strength through His Holy Spirit to help you in leading a decent, practical, Christian life.

COACH RUSH LEAVES

Spirits of disappointment and gloom prevailed the high school Tuesday morning when announcement was made that Coach Rush is to leave McLean high school. He has been elected as coach of Lefors high school and has signed a two year contract with that school at a much higher salary than he has been offered in McLean.

Coach Rush has been most successful in his work with the McLean Tigers. His teams have been defeated few times, and have been scored on very little. His work as coach and teacher has been excellent, and he has gained the love and admiration of pupils, teachers and people of the town. The entire high school, although grieving for our loss, extends highest hopes for success of Mr. Rush as coach, even though it is the hope that the Tigers will be able to successfully defeat his team at Lefors.

HOME ECONOMICS

The State Homemaking Rally was attended last week by Miss Vannoy, Marie Landers and Duella Mann. After attending a lovely party at the home of Bobbie Lynch, they left here at 12 o'clock Tuesday night and arrived in Austin Thursday morning at 5 o'clock after changing trains in El Reno, Fort Worth and Waco. Marie entered three contests and Duella entered two, but in competition with one thousand girls from all parts of the state, neither was successful in any of the contests. The contestants were shown through the beautiful new home economics building and were entertained with a tea which had unusually dainty refreshments. After this, private cars with drivers were provided to show them the interesting places of Austin. The bluebonnet fields afforded quite an expanse of beauty which was almost unbelievable to people from the Panhandle of Texas.

The state hospital, as the insane asylum is called, was very interesting and different from other things which the girls had seen. They were taken by a guide through the women's quarters and work shop. The things that the patients made were lovely and it was hard to believe that people who are mentally deficient could make such things as beautiful quilts, woven rugs, chairs, swings, and many other things. They also visited the school for the blind, and it, too, proved to be an interesting visit. As some of the patients were only partially blind, they played ball some of them skated, while others were seen reading books with raised type. The capitol was another place of interest and it proved to be even more interesting when the girls attempted to climb to the top of the dome on tiny spiral steps. In fact, they have scarcely regained their balance since then. The grounds around the capitol and the parks in the city were a confusion of color with roses, sweet peas and poppies blooming everywhere, with large trees well placed.

The banquet given for the contestants was on a roof garden of one of the hotels. It was decorated with thousands of roses, with bluebonnets as plate favors. The program was filled with clever speeches, and an orchestra furnished Hawaiian music. It was rather crowded, however, for Austin had planned for only five hundred girls, and twice that number were in attendance.

The State Home Economics Club meeting was well attended, and many good ideas for having a lively club were advanced. The question at issue was whether or not the name should be changed to Future Homemakers of America. It was finally decided that another year should pass before any change was made.

Saturday the girls paraded in their contest dresses up Congress Avenue to the capitol, where "The Eyes of Texas" was sung. From there the contestants went out to the State University to hear the results of the contests.

While in Fort Worth the girls went through most of the large departments and heard the "Chuck Wagon Gang" broadcast from station WBAP, which is located on the 22nd story of the Blackstone Hotel. They also went to the largest church in town which proved to be Methodist.

The trip was very interesting as well as instructive, and the girls who went brought back new ideas which will more than likely prove beneficial to the other girls as well as themselves.

P. T. A.

The P. T. A. met in regular session last Thursday night. An interesting program was in charge of the junior and senior classes. In the absence of the president, Mrs. J. W. Butler, Vice President Elizabeth Kennedy presided.

Campbell; secretary, Lillian Abbott; treasurer, Mrs. Harris King; and the following committee chairmen: social, Mrs. T. A. Massay; membership, Mrs. H. E. Franks; health, Mrs. John Harris. The publicity chairman has not been appointed.

Announcement of the district meeting to be held in Shamrock May 3, 4 and 5 was made. It is hoped that as many as possible will attend this meeting.

The following program was given: Talk, Texas Songs, Mozelle Glenn, "Texas My Texas," junior and senior girls. Talk, Our Potential Criminals, Claude Williams. Talk, Miss Cockrell, Red Cross nurse. One act play, "Company Cake," Marlene Riddle, Juanita Brooks, Leona Wood, Bathus Woodward, Annie Belle Kinard and Grace Reneau.

GULF WINS MORE "HILL TESTS" THAN 32 GASOLINES COMBINED

A BORROWED FORD tests 12 competing gasolines on Muldrough Hill, near West Point, Ky., to see which gas can pull the car and 3500-lb. load farthest up hill in high gear.

Will your car have more power on any one gasoline? HERE'S YOUR ANSWER..

Gulf tested a total of 33 gasolines on famous American hills—12 hills in localities from Massachusetts to Georgia—and here is what they found...

The power of different gasolines varies widely! And of all 33 gasolines, Gulf is uniformly best. 7 out of 12 times, it propelled a car and load up mountain grades farther than any other gasoline tested!

It won more hill tests than 32 other gasolines combined! Prove it! Drive into a Gulf station, fill up, and test the power of That Good Gulf for yourself!

HOW 33 GASOLINES RANKED (IN ALL TESTS TO DATE)

Table with columns for TEST, WINNER, 1st PLACE, 2nd PLACE, 3rd PLACE, 4th PLACE, 5th PLACE, 6th PLACE, 7th PLACE, 8th PLACE, 9th PLACE, 10th PLACE, 11th PLACE, 12th PLACE. Rows 1-12 show test results for various gasolines.

EACH OF THE BRANDS of gasoline tested is indicated on the chart by a letter, A to Z6. Note that Gulf gas was uniformly best! Other high-ranking gasolines varied widely in different tests.

CRIMINALS AND PARDONS

Criminals should be kept where they won't have a chance to do any more harm. When a criminal goes to prison he should serve his time and then be under the eye of the law until he is either reformed thoroughly or dead. When a man gets out of prison and goes right back to his old job of breaking the law, he is a menace to society. As a rule there is little honor among criminals and the honor system is used as a means of men securing clemency that is afterward abused. Pardons should be few and far between. And a governor should be mighty certain that executive charity was not being overworked and the pardon racket worked by cunning crooks. And furthermore, politics should be kept out of our prison system. If men and women are criminal at heart a sojourn in the pen will do little for them except to keep them from harming others, and at that the criminal often finds ways and means of proving that iron bars do not make prisons safe nor the country free from the menace of crime.—Higgins News.

The governor continues to pardon them out just about as fast as the courts can put them in. One branch of the government pitted against the other. Sometimes we think the courts or the pardoning power of the governor should be suspended. At least they should get together on the matter and quit squandering the people's money. A lot of these Texas thugs never get to the pen after being sentenced by the court and lots more of them go in the front door, get a meal, a night's lodging, and march out as free men the next morning right after a second good feed Truly, something is rotten—somewhere, some how!—Jayton Chronicle.

THE HAND BILL NUISANCE

A nation wide drive against the distribution of hand bills is being made by citizens who do not wish to have their lawns littered up with all kinds of waste paper. Not more than 50% of the hand bills distributed are ever picked up by those for whom they were intended. The balance go to make the town unsightly, and to cause extra trouble and expense for those who would keep their premises tidy. Uncle Sam maintains an efficient postal system for the purpose of reaching the people of the community. This system should be used by these seeking to reach the people. The largest advertisers have long ago found that the newspaper was the most successful and most efficient medium in which to reach the buying public. Messages in the newspapers are welcomed into the homes. Hand bills littering up the lawns are not welcomed by the home owners.—Canyon News.

POETIC INJUSTICE

To live in a house by the side of the road,
As the poet said in his song,
And be a friend to man was a dream
That he had cherished long.
So he bought him a house by the side
Of the road
Where he hoped to dwell serene,
But he choked in the dust of speeding cars
And the fumes of gasoline.

Since 1930 nearly four million people have been injured and a quarter million people killed in automobile accidents. Yet we see people breaking simple traffic rules every day.

It has been said that there is nothing so certain as change, and the older one grows the less he likes change, yet he must adjust himself to changing conditions, or be left far behind in any line of life.

When telephones were first introduced conservative dealers refused to install them. When a telephone was installed, the doctor would not have much chance to make a living today without a telephone.

Several firms in McLean order stamped envelopes printed by The News. This insures envelopes with printing to match their stationery and gives them one day service, as compared to the usual long wait and uncertain printing.

Texas voters who come from Oklahoma and other states where they use a cross mark on their ballots are sometimes confused with our system of marking out the names not wanted. Several ballots are mutilated each year in McLean by voters who are not familiar with the Texas system.

One can buy printing from peddlers, as you can goods in most any line, but you take the risk of getting something you do not want and you are contributing to payrolls in other cities that do McLean no good. Regardless of whether you buy printing or groceries, buying in McLean contributes to the growth of your community while buying of peddlers contributes only to the growth of competing communities.

To supply my family of five for one year with fresh and canned vegetables I plan to get a yield of at least 2912 pounds of produce which means, roughly, 2912 feet of garden rows," says Mrs. C. P. Coutts, farm and ranch food supply demonstrator of Hopkins Club in discussing her garden plans with Miss Ruby M. Adams, county home agent.

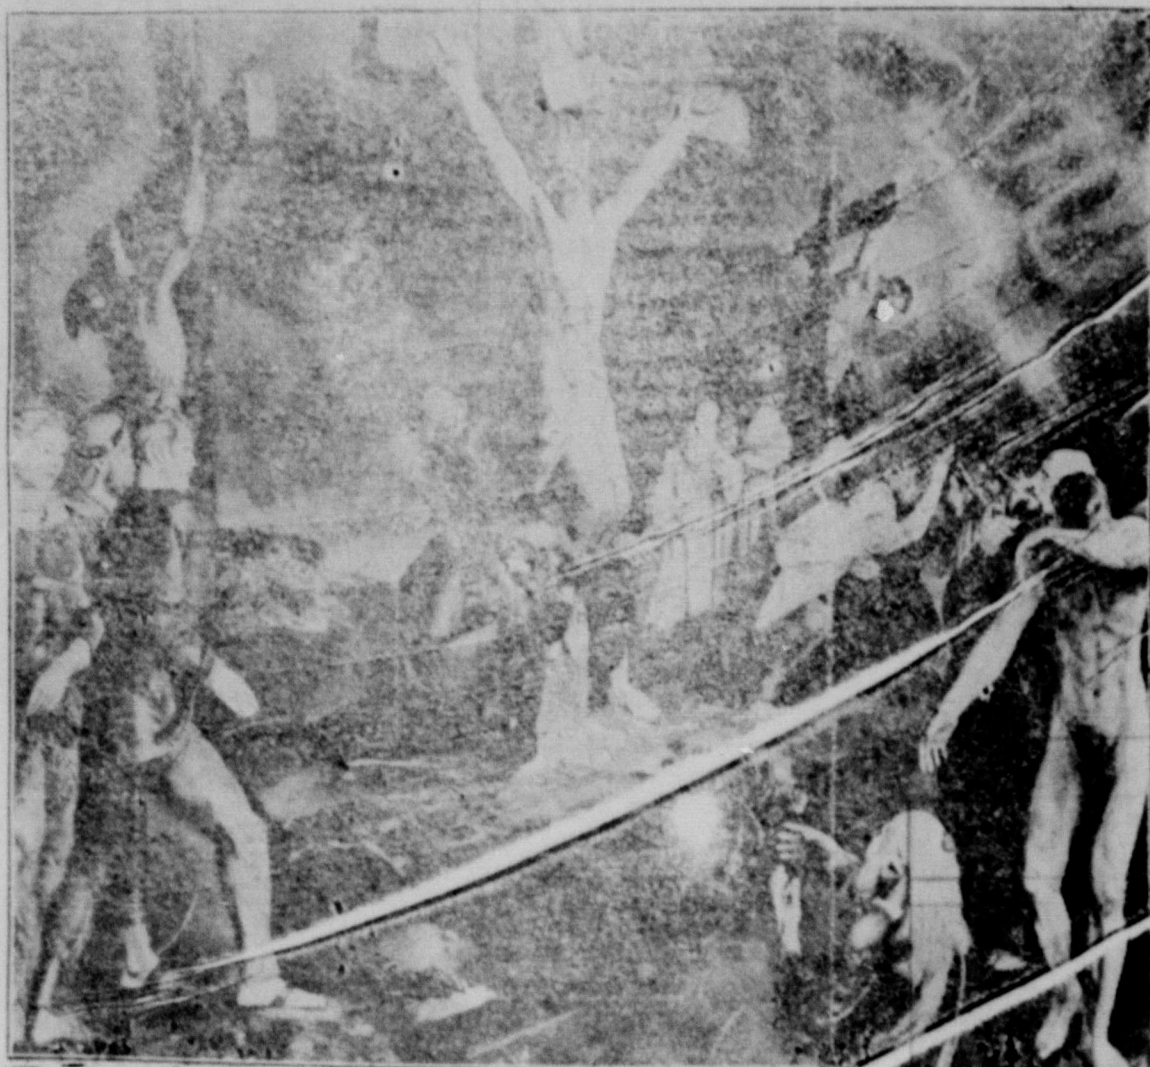

To get the right amount of the different kinds of vegetables, Mrs. Coutts will plant, if not already done, 728 feet of row for each of these four classes: leafy or green, starchy, "other" vegetables and garden fruits.

The leafy vegetables to be used are mustard, spinach (including New Zealand which is a drought resisting green), lettuce, Swiss chard, cabbage, English peas. The starchy vegetables include potatoes, corn, parsnips. Other vegetables include turnips, beets, carrots, radishes, onions, cucumbers, squash. Garden fruits are tomatoes, melons, rhubarb.

From this large variety Mrs. Coutts will be able to give her family an abundance of fresh vegetables and fill her pantry for winter use. She irrigates her garden.

Bellows gained wide recognition for his paintings of American life and scenes.

CRIME

By O. L. D. Time

When you remember a crime you make a suggestion. Crime includes everything from the slightest misdemeanor to wholesale robberies, thefts and killings. Some statisticians have recently compiled a statement of the cost of crime, which places it at $12,930,000,000, or in round numbers $130 per capita. As to what they heard their calculations on, I do not know, but those figures seem unreasonably high to an uninformed person. If these figures are correct, we are in a worse fix than the pessimist predicted, and by way of explaining the meaning of a pessimist I will say that a pessimist is a person who has had dealings with an optimist. Can it be possible that we are spending three times as much on crime as we are on education? This estimate cut half would be enough to unbalance our financial budget. When a nation can't enforce its laws and repeal them, it reminds me of the man who said to his dog, "Get out of this house." But the dog went under the bed, and he said, "Get under the bed, then." When Uncle Sam tells his Dillingers and Barrows to get out, they just go under the bed. Nothing happens without a cause, but the cause of crime is like the cause of cancer, it has not been fully discovered yet, and until the causes of crime are found out and eliminated, crime will continue to increase until civilization will be hanging by a thread. It seems that we are raising up and educating criminals faster than we are killing them off. I once knew a man to go over his field hoeing the big weeds, when he should have been plowing up the millions of little ones just coming up, and probably we are trying to kill big criminals while we have lots more small ones just coming through the ground.

Even as I write this I can see a number of boys just the age to learn fast, prowling around in a box car. It will be a miracle if one of them is ever an asset to his country. Idleness is bound to be one of the main causes of crime in boys and girls, and even in women and men. For wisdom indeed do you find a real industrious steady worker charged with any crime. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, and since our social system is so poisoned up with crime it is going to take tons and tons of cure to purge society. The best antidote for crime there ever was is now, and ever shall be, is the ten commandments followed up with the sermon on the mount, and until society is willing to take these antidotes, crime will continue to stalk around in the land.

Living on a small income became fashionable during depression. Now that the plans for recovery are progressing, there is still a need for the sound plan of utilizing for home use the products that we can produce on our farms and leases," stated Mrs. Fred C. Fisher, farm and ranch food as she showed her carefully planned and planted garden on an oil lease south of Pampa.

The garden plot, even though it is located on a gradual slope on one of the typical oil field hills, has a four to six inch terrace around the lower side to help hold the water until a sufficient amount seeps into the soil that has been deeply spaded. This custom was followed last year and there was a heavy yield in spite of the drought.

Mrs. Fisher plans to produce enough beans, greens, carrots, radishes, lettuce, onions, cucumbers, squash, etc., for her family of eight from the small plot by irrigating and careful cultivation, and utilizing every part of the plot until freezing this coming fall.

DEAD MAN TALKS

"He, being dead, yet speaketh." That is the amazing statement made about a man of long ago. Somebody has truly remarked that it is "not all of life to live, nor all of death to die."

I believe in the immortality of thought and action. Our lives are not our own. They do not even belong to the age in which we live. They are things of all time. The words of men long since asleep are familiar to our ears. Lincoln made a short address at Gettysburg, and who in America has not heard those words? Jesus wrote nothing in permanent form that we know about, but we know what He said; His words are household words. Even Sherman's classic sayings live on.

And so it goes. We do not, cannot live to ourselves alone. The man who wastes his life preaches the gospel of waste to all who know him. The man of upright habits preaches the gospel of righteousness. You can't go to the devil alone. You say a word and it rests in the mind of your hearer. It becomes a part of him, and through him you influence others. Houses decay, trees fall, governments crumble, and ocean beds become mountains, but when you are dead your life will express itself in others. Your voice, resonant on the lips of others, will continue to preach the principles by which you lived. And even to the judgment seat your "works will follow you."

The biggest service you can render to the world and the Lord is to live a life true to the Bible. The most eloquent sentence you ever uttered will live no longer than the simple deeds that make up your life. The man who does things he would not have others do is a contradiction. We are preachers all. What is your sermon? Can you say as did another, "Be ye followers of me"? Choice is our inalienable right and inescapable duty.

A BATH BELIEVED DANGEROUS

Bathing was not considered as essential at one time as it is now. In fact, lots of our ancestors were considerably shocked when the bathtub was first introduced to this country. In Boston and other parts of New England a bath was believed to be so dangerous that a doctor's prescription would not give it. Virginia imposed a state tax on bathtubs some 85 years ago, and Philadelphia once prohibited the use of a tub for bathing purposes.—Pathfinder.

The teacher had given the pupils some home work problems in arithmetic. One of them was as follows: "If it takes five men working eight hours a day to do a certain job, how long would it take eight men working 10 hours a day to do it?"

One boy brought a protest the next day from his father who declared that he would not let his boy have anything to do with a job on which the men worked over six hours a day.

Though English measures also are recognized in the statutes of Texas, land surveys generally are recorded in the Spanish measures used in the early day grants, in terms of the vara, which is 33 1/3 inches.

Mrs. C. E. Bogan returned Saturday from a visit in Oklahoma.

LAME OF THE BORDER

By VINGIE E. ROE

THE STORY

Chapter 1.—Seeking death by throwing himself from the summit of Lone Mesa to escape dishonor at the hands of a drunken desperado, Sonya suddenly sobered and repentant. The girl is a self-appointed physician to the Navajo Indians living on an Arizona sheep ranch with her brother, Serge, his wife, Lila, and small daughter, Babs. A year she has been engaged to Tony Blake, wealthy New Yorker, but her heart is with the friendless Indians and she evades a wedding.

When she finished dressing and went out to where Lila, dark Serge's haired, golden wife, put the evening meal on the table for the evening meal. They were a family foil for each other. Sonya, her sister-in-law, one so tall and dark and vital, full-lipped, full brow above her dusky eyes, sincere in her movements, the other thin and fragile as a flower, a fair skin to look at, to know. They were as a hand in its glove, these two.

The tight conspiracy against the man, Serge sometimes told them jokingly, meaning himself. But it was a conspiracy of love and loyalty that dear service which only engenders, and he knew it. It served him well, for things had been very easy on the ranch in the sagebrush country where Serge Sarin ran his flocks of sheep, and women can hold up the hands of men when the waters of circumstances become too deep. These two waded with him, leaning in against his shoulders. Frail Lila had nursed his child, too, and Sonya had nursed by its deliverance. That had been three years back, and he knew in his heart that if it hadn't been for their strong courage he'd have given up. But he had been ashamed to quit, and times were better now. The flocks had become herds. He had Indians with them in camps all over the sage.

"Hello, Sonya," said Lila. "How's Two Fingers' wife?"
"Bad," said Sonya. "I'm afraid I'm going to lose her. She's a sweet thing, too, pretty and young. Two babies. The patience of these Indians is pathetic. She whispered to me that if she had to go away, why sorrow? It was the common lot."

"If she dies," said Lila, "what will become of the babies?"
"Two Fingers has a sister over in Lone Ruins. Maybe she'd take them. I hate to see them go into the school. They're so little and so wild—the baby quail. They need a woman's love, not a routine."

Lila sighed and looked at Babs through the open door.
"The world is hard on children—and women," she said, "and only a man's love redeems it."
"And here comes one of the cruelties now," said Sonya, nodding her black head toward the northern side. "Serge."

A little later he came in from the back patio, scrubbed and shining, his long clothes brushed free of the day's sand and dust, his dark face tanned by sand and wind.

A handsome man was Serge Sarin, taller than Sonya, showing his Indian blood in the bold contours of his face, the fire in his black eyes, the slowness of his movements. He kissed Lila with a long kiss, smiled at Sonya.
"Whew!" he said. "Sure is good to be home."

Bodney Blake came in, his hands in the pockets of his plus-fours.
"This is the darndest family," he explained, grinning. "Here am I, a guest under its roof, and I've added my thumbs all day, waiting for it to see I'm around."

"Now, Rod!" said Lila, "is that all? Haven't Babs and I paid you the attention possible?"
"Babs! The young autocrat! She's got most of the time and ignored the rest. You've done pretty well, considering the thousand things I've done about the house today, as for these others, well, I know you'd be highly affected by their indifference. Some day I'm going to be, no kidding."

"Yeah, like h—ll you will," said Serge. "Come here, Babs, and sit on daddy's lap for supper."

It was a pleasant meal that followed, and later the small group sat in the big patio watching the twilight march across the mysterious land in unspeakable beauty.

Sonya, resting her head against the long chair's back, sighed in sheer ecstasy of appreciation.

"Tired, dear?" asked Rod tenderly. Sonya moved and looked at him.

"Tired? Why, no, I'm not tired now," she said.

"Then why the sigh?"
"Oh, I don't know. Just—just drinking in—all this, I guess."

She waved her hands apart, and the gesture compassed the whole lone country with simple eloquence.

The man, smoking, watched her with speculative eyes in which there was a glint of hardness. This country and its problems—they menaced his hope, and he was beginning to hate them with a deep and abiding hatred.

Serge was talking about the bands of his sheep on Bad Land Levels, and Lila was asking this and that question at intervals, and presently Sonya, watching the great stars come out upon the blue heavens, lost the purpose of their words. She was thinking of the woman in the lowly hogan beyond Chee wash, and the dark-faced man who loved her in his silent fashion, and her heart was sad and heavy with her fears for them.

And then, superimposed upon their pathetic tragedy, she saw again the sky beyond Lone Mesa's rim and the wild fair face of a man sobering in bewilderment and anguish. She stirred in her chair, and Rod Blake touched her hand.

"Eh?" she said, startled.

CHAPTER 2

Sonya Gets a New Name

By early dawn Sonya was up and dressed, her saddlebags replenished with such remedies as she might need for her battle with Old Man Death in the hogan beyond Chee wash. Darkness, full fed and watered, waited patiently in the patio. She stood in the dim kitchen with a cup of coffee in one hand, a hastily made sandwich in the other, and talked lowly to Lila.

"It's going to be a hard day, old dear," she said, "and I may not get back tonight. If I don't, don't worry. I'll be with Two Fingers and the babies and poor Little Moon. If she seems to be going, I'll not leave her."
"No," said Lila, "of course not. I know. What shall I tell Rod when he gets up?"

"He knows I'm going—I told him last night—but not that I might stay over. Tell him again how it is with Little Moon and—mention the babies."
"They're just dirty little Navajos to him."

"They're tragic babies to him, just the same," said Sonya sharply, "and he will have to see it. Well, so long. I'm off."

She set down her empty cup, pulled on her gloves, and went softly out.

She hugged Darkness' nose, which nudged her breast after a little, rite that was common between them, and went up his tall side and into her old saddle with the easy grace of a working cow hand.

Far to the south and west Sonya could see Lone Mesa. She loved the great tableland. Times without number she had climbed its steep trail on Darkness, to ride its three-by-five mile top, to sit in the sun beside its ancient pueblo walls with their rotting ladders to stand on its sharp-cut rim and scan the lone world below. Until yesterday nothing had ever disturbed her, nothing disputed her right of way—until yesterday.

At the thought her face flushed red with anger at the man who had ridden her down to the mesa's edge and pulled her from her saddle, his handsome face aflame with rapine. She felt the blood burn along her cheeks. It was resentment she felt, as for these others, well, I know you'd be highly affected by their anyone or anything should interfere with her freedom and her right to it. Her dark eyes were hot with it, her soft mouth set in a prim line. But the look she gave the mesa as she rode along beneath it was neither fearful nor resigned. It was a look of promise, as if some stubborn thing within her would take her to its lonely heights more often than usual now.

The gun came up as she and Darkness entered the broad mouth of Chee wash with its red sandstone walls, and a little later they came in sight of the hogan of Two Fingers. A round, low habitation of a single room, laid up of flat stones, one above the other, like flakes of prehistoric loam, it faced the east, as all hogans must. From its central rise a thin thread of smoke ascended. Something caught at Sonya's heart—it was so stark and poor a home, its people so helpless. Two Fingers met her beside the water hole. He was a man of around thirty, weathered like dark leather, his patient face as native to the land as Lone Mesa itself, and there was about him a simple dignity, as there was about the poorest of these Indians. He wore a blue flannel shirt, corduroy pants held by a silver-studded belt, and his hair was long and bound in two neat braes on the back of his head. Though he spoke fair English and had a sizeable band of sheep, his manner of wearing his hair stamped him as a "wild buck," one of those who had not yet become entirely civilized. For one thing, Two Fingers did not drink, and for another, he still worshiped his ancient gods. Sonya liked him.

Now she said, "Hello, Two Fingers. How is she this morning?"
"Bad," he said briefly, and reached for Darkness' rein.

A Ford V-8 "delivered" price is the total cost to you—no extras

THE Ford V-8 for 1934 is the most economical car that Ford has ever built. It gives you even more miles per gallon of gasoline than last year's money-saving model. . . . Tungsten steel exhaust valve-seat inserts make valve grinding virtually unnecessary for the life of the car. Aluminum-alloy pistons minimize carbon formation. . . .

Brakes need relining less frequently because of the great braking surface per pound of weight. And Ford springs—which give free action for all four wheels—seldom require lubricating.

In addition, Ford parts cost from 17% to 59% less than parts for any car selling at near the price. And the record shows that Ford gives you greater "trade-in" value than any other car. . . . Before you buy any car at any price see and drive the Ford V-8 for 1934.

THE EDITOR SPEAKS

This issue of the News is Volume 9, number 1.

Our first eight years in Esteline have been rather checkered. For five years we enjoyed a reasonable amount of prosperity, three of which might be termed extra good years. The last three have been unusually hard on the home town paper, because of the fact that the small town merchant, in about 75% of the cases, starts his economy by cutting out his advertising schedule.

Fortunately, however, a few firms stood by their own businesses and their home paper as well, and made it possible for the News to come out each Thursday, through trying times as well as good times. As far as we know there is not a business firm in Esteline that would not speak a good word for the News.

We have only one business firm in Esteline that has supported the News advertising columns continuously since the store was established about six years ago. The Palace Drug Store has the distinction of being the store to have a message to the people of this community and surrounding sections in every issue of the News. This firm has enjoyed good years, and through all the all the testing time of the past three years has kept just a little ahead of the average store. Now the Palace Drug is located in a new building recently purchased, and a visit to their place of business will convince anyone that a prettier store cannot be found even in much larger towns.

Other business firms in town, with few exceptions, have been loyal to the News, many of them patronizing the home paper for a number of years without a break in their advertising schedule. Others have come in at regular intervals to help the community paper as well as promote business for their firms.

Along with the everyday grind of publishing a newspaper has brought a lot of pleasant associations with the business men of the town. Certainly no newspaper man ever had a more friendly group of men to deal with.

Among our rural readers we have gained some real friends who are for us 100%.

A newspaper man, like most any other line of business, never reaches his ideal of what his paper should be. We have not in the publishing of the News, but the coming years will see improvements in line with the prosperity of the community.

A few times we have been discouraged and even considered moving to a field in another state where the business men ALL believed in advertising and supporting their home printer but we found things not quite so ideal as represented. Then you know how it is, a man gets acclimated to a town and it's hard to break ties and move, even if you do know that more money can be made in other parts of the country. Being satisfied with our lot is an art within itself and one to be desired.

A man in the newspaper business develops a philosophy of life which makes him over-ride his personal feelings many times to give his readers the kind of a newspaper that will be appreciated in every home.

Times come when the editor would like to "cut loose" and publish a yellow sheet of public scandal and roast some of his enemies until they "were done," and some of his friends until they were awakened from their state of lethargy and become of some benefit to the community in which they live. Those are pipe dreams for the country editor, however, and always pass along with any ill feeling that may linger for a few hours because of some irate subscriber or would-be ill-treated individual that has a certain amount of spleen to unload and picks the editor to dump their ugly disposition upon. Friends have far overbalanced any unpleasant relations we have had during our stay in Esteline. We believe we know the people of this town as well as the average citizen, and in the main they are friendly people, inclined to gossip and to know too much about their neighbors' business, but nevertheless wishing the other fellow no particular harm, and when occasion demands Esteline and surrounding communities can get together almost as one man to put over a community project. We have seen that happen more than one time in the past. What has been done can be done again by the same people when they are so determined.

We are facing the new year for the News with the belief that it will be much better in every way than the year just closed. Times are taking a turn back toward normalcy and before many months this section is due for relief from the struggle of the past few years. Anyway, them's our sentiments, as we start our ninth year in Esteline.—Estelline News.

GASTRITIS

There is one thing today that we all must possess, if we buy it or borrow or steal. We may live without hope, we can do without soap, but we must have an automobile. We may live in a shack by the side of the road or a mansion that's ten stories high; we may have an income twelve figures in length, or perhaps we are just getting by; but regardless of whether we're rolling in wealth, or driving a mortgage on wheels, we may have a little, we may have a lot, but we must have our automobiles.

Now it may be a limousine smothered in plush or a car that's a poor grade of tin, it may have 12-cylinder velvety power or it may run just now-and-again, it may be the latest of engineers' dreams or just one of the old model T's it may have the foot-shift for all of its gears or it may have the latest in knees. It may be the last word in stream-line design or its hood may be garnished with holes; perhaps it should be with the rest of the junk, but it's all right as long as it rolls. We may pilot a Lincoln, a small Chevrolet or just a tin can on four wheels, but regardless of shape or appearance or size, we must have our automobiles.

There once was a time in the long, long ago, when old Dobbin was hitched to the shay to transport the family down to the store, and the trip took most of the day. The family loaded its butter and eggs, while the kids took a seat on the hay, and they'd jog off to town for their weekly "hinchin", while they traded their produce away. Then mother and kids traded gossip with friends and saw all the stocks in the stores, while on took his seat with the crackerbox corps. Then they went home in time for the chores. Now mother leaves dishes piled up in the sink and gives the tin Henry a crank, while father keeps working around at the barn or waters the stock at the tank. Mother chug-chugs to town with five gallons of cream and her groceries buys with the check. She chug-chugs back home in a few minutes' time and soon she has dinner on deck.

It's not like it was just a few years ago before this new era of speed, when we rambled along at a leisurely pace and could take all the time that we'd need. We seemed in those days to accomplish as much as since we can motor and fly. We took our sweet time when we went anywhere—k wasn't "hello and good-by." It is true we can now cover twice as much ground as we did in the days forer the war, and our gasoline complex saves us lots of time—but I wish you would tell me what for—Alcoyd (Mich.) Herald.

MOST PERPLEXING

"How's your new cook?" asked Jones' neighbor.

"Quite satisfactory," said Jones. "We've only one complaint to make about her."

"And what is that?" asked the neighbor.

"It's most annoying," explained Mr. Jones. "We can never tell whether she is singing because she is happy at her work, or whether she has burnt herself and is in pain."

Chicago. — Recalling this time last year, buildings are again springing mushroom-like along Chicago's lake front, this time to make ready a new Fair for the opening May 26. Approximately 100 buildings from A Century of Progress 1933 have been torn down and new ones are rising to take their places. Large buildings are being constructed even on pilings in the lagoons, so anxious are many new exhibitors to participate in the Fair this year. A major part of the construction is along the new street of "foreign villages", where the Midway was last summer, and along the new Northern Island Midway.
