Gilstrap and Williams Are C-C Speakers

W. Gilstrap and J. M. Williams of Amarillo were the principal speakers at the regular monthly meeting of the chamber of commerce held today night.

Mr. Gilstrap presented Mr. Williams spoke in behalf of the West Texas chamber of commerce, saying that McLean's quota has been set at $100. An inquiry from the News Editor brought out the fact that this amount is much higher than that allotted to several other towns of the county, being one-third as much as Pampa's quota. After discussion, Mr. Williams intimated that this would be acceptable as McLean's quota.

A motion was carried to leave the matter of affiliation up to the board of directors, with the statement that O. Greene has been recommended as McLean director for another year. Mr. Gilstrap made a plea for McLean's support in Amarillo's claims for the convention next year.

The matter of the McClellan creek bridge in the oil field was brought up and discussion showed that the county is not in shape to build the bridge and that any money spent should be used to finish the McLean-Pampa road. A motion carried opposing the building of the bridge, and Commissioner W. W. Wilson was given authority to appoint a committee to represent the C. C. to lead the opposition to the measure.

Supt. C. A. Cryer reported progress being made in the rural school transportation problem. The point was made by Manager W. D. Biggers that there is some confusion in the minds of the people, some thinking that it is a consolidation problem, but it is only a transportation problem for high school purposes only.

Mr. Biggers reported progress in the oil well supply house matter.

Trade Extension Manager Jesse J. Cobb reported trade trips and announced a trip to Whitefish for Friday night of this week. Mr. Cobb also announced the opening day of the trade season Saturday, and suggested a trade trip to the Belco oil field.

Supt. Cryer made the statement that taxpayers in the McLean school district have paid only enough taxes this year to pay the teachers' salaries for one month.

The meeting was in charge of President Boyd Meador, and among others present were: M. D. Bentley, Arthur Erwin, E. J. Lander, Jesse J. Cobb, B. F. Gray, Gordon Wilson, C. S. Rice, C. L. Sudtho, W. W. Wilson, W. D. Biggers, W. E. Bogan, M. T. Wilkerson, Earl Stubbfield, H. W. Brooks, Witt Springer, C. S. Doolen, W. W. Boyd, T. N. Holloway, Ralph A. Caldwell, L. L. Rogers, A. T. Wilson, C. A. Cryer, T. W. Gilstrap, J. M. Williams and T. A. Landers.

Smith-Harlan Well Comes in for 220 per Hour

An initial flow of 220 barrels per hour was the record made by the Smith Brothers No. 1 Harlan oil well last Friday, later dropping to an estimated flow of around 175 barrels. This well widens the proven territory about one-half mile and is in the S. W. 1/4 of section 49, block 21, Wheeler county.

The bringing in of this well promises to connect the pay in the Travis-Back area in Gray county, with the Wheeler pay.

Some eight new locations were made in Wheeler county last week, and completing the Smith test will call for two direct offsets, the third offsetting lease being still open.

Kennedys in Golden Wedding Celebration

Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Kennedy celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last Tuesday with a banquet attended by several of their children and close relatives.

A radio program with request numbers dedicated to the honorees was enjoyed, and the day was very pleasantly spent by those fortunate enough to attend.

Mr. Kennedy was born near Camden, Ark., and while a small boy assisted his father in freighting lumber and flour between Arkansas and Texas points with ox and mule teams. He moved with his family to Caddo Mills, near Greenville, in Hunt county where he met and married Miss Mary A. Green, who was born in Georgia, moving to Texas with her family when a small child.

The Kennedys moved to West Texas in 1905 and have been engaged in stock raising and banking most of the time at Alameda and McLean.

Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy have six children and eight grandchildren, all living except one grandchild. Mr. Kennedy has a sister, Mrs. B. S. McKinney, of Mineral Wells.

The celebration was planned by the children and was a complete surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy. Mr. Kennedy says this is the first of their wedding anniversaries they have celebrated so far.

Among those present, besides the honorees, were: Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Kennedy and children of Wichita Falls; Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Kennedy and daughter and W. M. Kennedy of McLean; Mrs. Lola Wright and son of Wichita Falls; Mrs. B. S. McKinney of Mineral Wells; Mr. and Mrs. Ben Jackson and son, Nell, of McLean; Rev. and Mrs. S. T. Greenwood and sons of Alameda.

Two daughters, who were unable to be present, were Mrs. I. C. Mosely of Freestone, Calif. and Mrs. J. W. Slavin of Vacaville, Calif.

MONEY

By O. L. D. Tiner

There was a song going the rounds 35 or 40 years ago and the chorus began with these words: "If time was money I'd be a millionaire." That was when we had no cars, radios and airplanes, but just had the telegraph, telephones and tell a woman, and yet time was so plentiful as to bring out a song like that, but since we have all these time-savers now, it appears that we should sing "If time was money I'd be a billionaire or trillionaire." If you are a close observer you will readily see that a person can come nearer living without money than any time in the last half century, for you can see people without any visible means of support that seem to be enjoying everything that comes along, while others are working and worrying themselves into a premature grave and the strange part of it is that the person that is getting the necessities and some of the luxuries of life is cursing and abusing the man that worked and saved and is furnishing the government the money to feed him; or smiting the hand that feeds him. Money is the most important word of modern commercialism today, and people go farther to get a little money than 30 or 40 years ago, and lots of methods of getting money that were taboo then are perfectly all right to the modern mind. And people have studied psychology and have become almost uncanny in separating a fool or half smart man from his money. I heard a man say only last week that he did not blame the officers for accepting bribes and maybe they are about as honest about money matters as the people who elect them, but if that be the case it is one of the worst omens that people are losing their conscientious scruples and are discarding and will be asking for a repeal of the ten commandments and the golden rule, and demand that the eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth rule be reinstated and let dog eat dog and try the cave man's modus operandi for a season. The main function for money to perform was to facilitate the exchange of business, and the getting of money was not supposed to take the place of religion. One of the most modern mental diseases is dollar mark of the brain and it is almost incurable and generally leaves a nervous wreck as an aftermath. The Jew is such a man for money that he even has the streets of the New Jerusalem paved with gold.

If life was a thing That money could buy, The Jew would live, And the Irishman die.

According to Jesse J. Cobb, trade extension manager of the chamber of commerce, this week's trade trip will be made to Whitefish school Friday night.

A pie supper will be held in connection, and the Methodist negro play will be given, directed by D. A. Davis, and the band will furnish music.

THE STORY

Chapter 1.—Seeking death by throwing herself from the summit of Lone Mesa, to escape dishonor at the hands of a drunken desperado, Sonya Savarin allows herself to be rescued by her suddenly sobered and repentant attacker. The girl is a self-appointed physician to the Navajo Indians, living on an Arizona sheep ranch with her brother, Serge, his wife, Lila, and small daughter, Babs. For a year she has been engaged to Rodney Blake, wealthy New Yorker, but her heart is with the friendless Navajos and she evades a wedding.

Chapter 2.—Sonya goes to the hogan of Two Fingers to minister to his sick wife.

Sonya swung down and took off her saddlebags.

As she entered the hogan her lips set themselves in a sharp, unconscious line. Bad was right, she thought. There was the smell of death here. She would need to gird her loins today in all truth.

At first the dusky shadows hid the interior from her sight. Then as her eyes adjusted themselves, she set down her bags and knelt beside the first heap of skins and blankets which lay on the sandy floor.

There were three of these flat beds. In the farther one the two children still slept heavily. In this one Little Moon lay panting with fever, her big black eyes beautiful in the dim light.

"Courage, little mother," Sonya said in Navajo. "I am with you."

The Indian woman smiled, touched her hand with timid fingers.

She took the draught which the other gave her presently and watched her as she set about cooking oatmeal over the coals of the tiny fire.

This it was which had made Sonya the idol of these poor and silent people, this service of heart and hand which had saved them, literally, from death in many cases. She fought for what sanitation she could produce among them, taught them the importance of proper feeding in fevers, the superiority of mustard plasters over singsons in pneumonia, and labored generally like a mother with her children.

Now she bathed the hot brown body under the blankets, gave Little Moon the thinned cereal as a drink, waked and washed the children, fed them the rest of the oatmeal, ate two pieces of fried mutton and some crackers with Two Fingers, and stood for a while outside the hogan in the morning sunlight.

She felt wonderful herself, strong and high within as if she set her body against a wall and could not be hacked down. This was the gauge of the battle within her, that she knew, the deep determination to win in what she set herself to do, the passionate sympathy and pity which were like a steel blade in her.

She looked up at the high blue sky with its sailing, full white clouds, her mind an attitude of prayer, and turning lifted the blanket which was the door, and went in.

Two Fingers gathered the babies and made ready to depart, according to her request made a moment back. She wanted the day alone, clear visioned for the crisis, nothing within sight to distract her. The man looked down at the woman on the low bed, holding one child, leading the other, and the woman looked up.

They said nothing.

It might be their last look on earth, their eternal parting, for all they knew, yet there was no outcry, no sign of sorrow, nothing but that deep look. Perhaps nothing more was needed.

Then Two Fingers went away, and the women were alone in the hogan.

"We must meet the enemy," said Sonya, still in Navajo—there was a comfort in it, a strength, it seemed—"But we meet him together. I hold your hand tight to mine. We must both fight, very hard. The medicine will fight, too. It is a good fighter. But not for a moment must we fall or sink or stop fighting. You understand?"

The other nodded.

"It is good," said Sonya. And the day of battle began. Somewhere out in the sand and rocks of Chee wash Two Fingers would be praying to his ancient gods, sitting quietly, perhaps, watching the babies playing with sticks, building corrals for their pebble horses. He had some mutton jerky in the pouch at his belt. He would feed them with it at noon.

Two Fingers Would Be Praying to His Ancient Gods.

It was the way of life in the solitudes, the way of death, all chance, all waiting.

Sonya in the hogan worked tirelessly. Regularly she fed the woman the thin warm gruel. Regularly, monotonously, she bathed her from head to foot. Regularly she slipped her thermometer into the parched mouth, reading it anxiously. As steadily she gave her medicines. At noon she saw no sign of hope, but rather her heart chilled in her at the rising figures in the tiny tube. The crisis was coming. It would be here by mid-afternoon. Her mouth set a little harder, her black eyes were narrow between their dusky lashes. She squatted patiently by the heap of skins and blankets, her fingers on Little Moon's hot wrist.

So the hours passed—and the crisis came, a tense, panting hour, with the silver thread in the tube running up a ghastly record, and the patient dark head rolling at last in its unendurable suffering.

Sonya held the moving hands, bathed the drawn face.

"Hold tight—hold tight—steady—steady," she kept saying in Navajo, "hold tight, little mother."

And after a timeless space when she neither moved nor took her eyes from the other's features, there came a creeping stillness, a hush, a cessation of movement. The weary head dropped sideways, the thin loose hands became quiet. Sonya loosed them and reached for her stethoscope, her hypodermic filled and ready with its needle in a cup of sterile water. This was the crux, and she must not fail—for Two Fingers and the babies out in Chee wash somewhere.

She did not fail.

With the sun on the western rim of the austere desert, the Indian came up the wash with one child asleep in his shoulder, the other on his back.

Far off he saw Sonya standing at the hogan's door, and stopped a long moment to study with his eagle eyes, her pose, her manner.

She stood tall and straight, and one hand was laid high up on the bleached pole of the doorway, the other rested on her hip. Her head was up, too, and at the sight Two Fingers swung out in a swift dog trot.

"It is well, Blue South Woman," he said with conviction as he came to her, "you have saved her."

"It is well," said Sonya proudly, and smiled into his dark face.

Without another word he went into the hogan and looked down at Little Moon, sleeping heavily with a sweat upon her skin.

So the night came down, blue with its dark sky, silver with its stars, and Sonya lay down upon the second pile of skins and went to sleep with her hand on Little Moon's.

Two Fingers sat all night in the hogan's door, and none might know what was in his mind of gratitude and hope and silent joy.

Sonya was up by dawn, and Little Moon was awake, weak unto death, but peaceful. Sonya fed her and made a pot of the precious gruel and instructed the man in its giving, its protection from contamination.

"You'd better go to the trading post, Two Fingers," she told him, "and get some more oatmeal—a big package. Take the children with you. She will be all right. She needs rest now, no worry, and much gruel. Also, presently, mutton broth. I go today to my own place—to sleep—and I will come back. Her life is yours now. See that you keep it by doing as I tell you."

To Little Moon she said, "I go now—to rest—but I will come again. Drink the gruel as I have given it to you, a little at a time, and sleep much—sleep all you can. So you will walk in the sun again."

Then she was outside the hogan, pulling on her gloves, her saddle bags at her feet, waiting for Two Fingers to bring her horse.

He put the bags in place, and over the saddle his eyes were on her gravely.

"There was a Blue Woman of the South once," he said in Navajo, "whose son, being a son of the Sun god, too, delivered the Navajos from under the earth. She was all goodness—the Turquoise Woman. She makes her hogan in your heart."

To save her life, Sonya, who knew the legends of these people, could not help the tears that sprang to her eyes. It was because she was a little tired, maybe a bit unstrung with the recent ordeal—but Two Fingers was telling her that she had delivered him and his. Before she could reply a sound struck on the stillness, the track of a horse's hoof against the stone, and she looked quickly down the wash.

TO THE THIRD EDITION

Some books are good enough to warrant several editions. If such are lost, humanity suffers loss. A greater portion of the books published are scarcely worth the reading and are promptly forgotten. Some lives are good enough to imitate and if the virtues they portray are forgotten, men will be the poorer for that loss. The average person living the ordinary life will not be remembered by the next generation. Their lives are not worth remembering.

There is one man who was thought worthy to live in the lives of others. He was not great as some count greatness. He was a man of the country. His name was Elijah. He was a man who, in a nation of idolaters, cried out for the religion that was true. In a crowd immoral, he preached purity of life. At the risk of "prestige," popularity, and even his life, he lived true to his convictions. He was probably considered "narrow-minded" in his day, but his life was deep enough to have some purpose.

One of the choice epigrams to be hurled at our enemies is the charge of narrow-mindedness. Every man who has convictions and dares to live true to them is sometimes referred to in this manner. It is not the convictions we have that make us narrow, but the way we act toward those convictions. It is all right to have opinions and to live by them,

But this old crusader lived by the law of God and not by peculiar opinions of his own, and he taught men to live that way. The Lord thought so much of him that when He called him away He answered the prayer of his disciple, Elisha, and gave him a double portion of the grand spirit that had animated Elijah. And when someone was wanted who must be "more than a prophet" to introduce Christ to the world He was to save, a man of that same spirit that had been in Elijah and later in Elisha, was chosen for the task. John the Baptist was the third edition of Elijah. How poor the world would be without that spirit.

THE SUNNY SIDE OF LIFE

SERMONETTE

By Rev. Stephen M. Tuhy
 Lutheran Pastor Oviedo, Fla.

Text: "But sanctify the Lord God in your heart; and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear."—1 Peter 3:15.

A true Christian is conscious of the fact that his body is a temple, a "mortal dwelling place of the Holy Spirit." He knows that his body belongs to God his Creator, and therefore, he keeps it clean and saved by the grace of God in order that the Spirit of God, the Holy Ghost may dwell in it and guide him in leading a chaste and decent life in word as well as deed. St. Paul comforted the Corinthian Christians of this fact: "Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?"—1 Cor. 6:19.

By having our hearts as a sanctuary for Christ to dwell in we will ever be safe. We will diligently study the Holy Scriptures daily and thus equip ourselves with a powerful weapon, the Word of God, which serves in the capacity of a spiritual sword. The Word of God is the "power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth."

Therefore, each consecrated Christian will gladly go to church and hear the Holy Scriptures explained and applied to practical, every-day life. A true Christian will avail himself of the opportunity to attend Sunday school or a Bible class on Sundays or during the week, in order to strengthen his own faith and also to gain much knowledge of the Word of God so that he may be "ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh..." He will be properly equipped with true knowledge in order to do personal mission work, personal evangelization. He must be ready to give an answer to people that want to know of Christ the Savior of the world from sin, and also to people that doubt and waver that are unstable in matters of the salvation of their souls.

The apostle Peter under the inspiration of the Holy Ghost directs us to do this "with meekness and fear." We are to be humble and subject to God's will and with the proper awe, respect and admiration of our Lord are to give testimony to the hope of salvation and eternal life that is in our hearts.

MOTHER

By Dorcas Williamson
 Mother sacrifices for me
 More than I can ever repay.
 And I owe what I shall be
 To what she does for me today.

A mother's love is much greater Than any love you'll ever find;
 Never go away and leave her,
 For she'll be always loving and kind.

She's the greatest of companions,
 Talks of things we love to hear.
 She means more than all the mansions;
 She's the kindest loving dear.

The proceeds from 1½ acres of sweet potatoes paid the farming expenses of J. H. Gonzales in Jim Hogg county last year, the county agent says. He harvested 465 bushels which sold for 50¢ per bushel, and had several hundred pounds of culls left for pig feed.

AN APOLOGY

Due to an oversight, the announcement of the recital given by pupils of Mrs. Willie Boyett and Mrs. C. A. Cryer Tuesday evening, was omitted from last week's paper.

Sunday is Mothers Day and our churches will be filled with people who are glad to honor their mothers, but mother's religious is an every day affair and she would be better pleased to see her children in church
 every Sunday of the year.

The News editor voted against the idea of contests for the Panhandle Press Association last year for reasons given at the time, and the fact that so few entered (only one in some contests), seems to prove that we were right in our contention.

Several oil workers have stated that they cannot trade conveniently at McLean on account of early closing hours. By the time they reach town, after their days' work, the places of business are closed. This is a matter that might bear looking into, for McLean is the logical trading place for hundreds of oil people, if they can be served adequately.

That the Texas Weekly editor was right in his contention that the cotton reduction plan was more than a land problem is now admitted by the administration. It has been discovered that the plan is now curtailing farm labor, and in many cases tenants have been evicted.

We were a long time getting in the shape we are in cotton sections, and it may take a long time to work out of it.

During 1932 state and local governments in Texas expended 15 times as much money as the Federal government collected in income taxes.

The outstanding debt of local units of government in this state is 51 million dollars more than the combined capital, surplus and undivided profits of all the 4,176 national banks located in Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas.

Taxes are not only consuming the profits of all business, but are now consuming capital as well. It is time for tax spenders to be careful of the people's money, and taxpayers must come to think of the tax problem as a personal one and demand published statements of how their money is being spent.

Dr. Yates, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Amarillo, spoke Sunday morning on "Happiness vs. Pleasure," stating that happiness is from within and pleasure from without. Happiness is a state of mind, while pleasure comes from an appeal to one or more of the five senses. Happiness has no regrets, while pleasure many times requires regrets from its indulgence.

Many people think that happiness comes from the ownership of material things, but not so. Some inmates of insane asylums are happy in the delusion that they are great, and a faded shawl means a robe of royalty to them.

Regardless of facts, perhaps,
 most of us will continue to pursue the spectre of pleasure and fail to take the happiness of the simple life that lies within our grasp.

One-third of the taxes you pay are to make up the difference of those who do not pay.
 In other words, if your taxes amount to $60 annually, you pay $40 tax and $20 to help carry your delinquent neighbors
 along, according to the Texas Tax Journal.

The delinquent tax problem has now assumed alarming proportions when it is remembered that many people are not in position to pay anything now, while others who are able to pay take the attitude that they should not have to support the government alone. Some are advocating cancelling all delinquent taxes and beginning anew with a strong collection policy, but this will in all probability never be done, and would not solve the problem equitably anyway.

Perhaps the best way would be to begin forcing collection of current taxes and worry along with the old delinquents, when would slowly cut the balance down.

Have you noticed that no matter where you are visiting,
 some one is pretty sure to suggest driving around and see the pretty yards and gardens in his town?

It is natural for citizens to be proud of pretty yards and gardens, and the citizens who strive to beautify their places are in this respect public benefactors. You can have fine furniture and things like that and keep them strictly for your own use and enjoyment, but a pretty yard and garden affords pleasure to every passerby.

It is so easy to have pretty yards and gardens that more people should become interested in beautifying their homes. Most of the expense is in the labor expended and most of us need the exercise anyway. A pretty yard can be had for $1 worth of flower seeds, up to more permanent plantings costing more.

Prices were never cheaper for plants, and any nursery or greenhouse in this section can suggest plants suitable for this climate that will make anyone's home a credit to the owner and the community.

Open saloons and race track gambling seem to have made no change under prohibition, and state and local prohibition laws seem just as hard to enforce as formerly, and now we hear advocates of a national lottery as a solution of tax problems.

It seems strange that these age-old things, so long outlawed should be seriously considered in these times, but we seem definitely committed to a program of extreme liberalism, and who can predict the end?

Merchants near large race tracks are complaining of loss of business. This should occasion no surprise, for any business that does not render a community service hurts all other business.

A national lottery will work
 the same as horse races and the regular saloon, for regular business will loose enough to more than offset the promised saving in taxes.

Maybe we should throw everything wide open and let those credulous people who believe in nebulous promises experience enough of this problem that we can finally have an aroused public opinion and banish all things that work against humanity's best interests from our community to stay.

"MANY REPEALISTS DISGUSTED"

Representative-at-large John J.
 Cochran of Missouri, recognized as a wet congressman, discussing the FACA and the alleged high prices of hard liquor, in the House, made this extraordinary statement:

"Many citizens who clamored for the repeal of the 18th amendment are thoroughly disgusted, and if they had it to do over again they would not spend their time and money, because they realize that they simply have made a small group rich overnight."

Are you wearing yourself out doing work that electrical servants could do just as well—or better? Perhaps you're not using your electrical household equipment enough because you haven't enough electrical outlets to make it convenient. Without sufficient outlets you and your electrical helpers are being unreasonably handicapped!

Let an electrician call and go over your home with you. He will accurately estimate the requirements of each room for you and the cost of installations—with-wonder how you ever got along without this added convenience. Electric outlets are still reasonably

Pastor First Baptist Church

CHRISTIANITY AND PATRIOTISM

Lesson text Matt. 22:15-22; 34-40.
Golden text, Matt. 22:37-39.

Jesus taught in the temple on Monday and Tuesday. The incidents of the lesson for today took place in the temple Tuesday as Jesus taught the people. Naturally after the affront Jesus had given the rulers of the temple, the high in the circles of Judaism, by His cleansing of the temple, there was a great conflict concerning Him and His presence in the temple. It was up to the leaders of legal Judaism to do something about it. But it was not the logical thing to simply go in and run a knife between His ribs. That was unlawful both by the Jewish and the Roman law. Besides, there were too many people who thought Jesus was a great prophet about to set up a great Jewish kingdom.

Therefore, it was up to the mortal enemies of Jesus to find some way to condemn Him in the eyes of the people and the law. They set about it with all their powers. If Jesus could have been caught in His teaching in a way as to divide the people, the leaders would have had an egering wedge, and so there was where they began. The quickest death was for Jesus to antagonize the Roman authorities. Therefore, a question was framed so that no matter which way He answered it He would have laid Himself liable to the law, Roman or Jewish. He was asked as to the paying of tax to Caesar. The Jews believed it wrong, but were in a position where they could not help themselves. If Jesus said it was right the people would be turned against Him, if He said it was wrong the Romans would consider the answer treason.

Jesus' answer was, be a good citizen, pay your taxes, but serve God. Jesus was a good citizen. He observed the law of the Romans and Jews as rightly interpreted. He paid tax. In fact, God used the commands of a Roman emperor to bring the mother of Jesus out of Nazareth into Bethlehem that He might be born according to prophecy. We are commanded to recognize the government of the world and abide by their dictates as best we can and serve God. The service to God comes first in God's way of thinking, and should in the thinking and living of every child of God. This is made very plain in the second answer of Jesus as given in today's lesson. The love and service of God in our lives is to be first in our hearts, in our souls, and in our minds. The second thing is that we love our neighbor as ourselves. The treatment of our neighbors is the basis of all government. God's plan is that we serve Him even though our being good citizens of whatever country we may be living in. We are citizens of two kingdoms—the earthly kingdom and the heavenly kingdom.

The allegiance of an individual is first to God. Such a man makes a better earthly citizen than the one who does not place his duties to God first. We are told in His Holy Word that if a man loves God, he will know how to love his fellowmen. If a man has learned how to serve his Maker and Savior well, he will have no trouble in serving his country well. The great difficulty today is that the popular thing is to neither serve God nor our country. Millions of men never think about serving God or obeying His commands, but their minds are set on tax and law evasion of one kind or another. The number of men who do not respect the law that protects them is astounding.

Investigations have been made and the results have shown that mighty few criminals even pretend to adhere to any religion at all. True service of God and law violation do not run hand in hand. Rather, consecrated service of the Master and good citizenship are work mates. It is difficult for a man to continually violate the laws of the land without at the same time violate the laws of God. Most all law evasions are for selfish interests and to make the income of individuals or corporations greater at the expense of the smaller industry or the public. It does not take one with great spiritual perception to see that men in such business have brought themselves under the condemnation of God by violating His laws against covetousness, theft and other sins. If men could only realize the significance of the question when Jesus asked what could a man be profited if he gained the whole world and lost his own soul. It looks as though much of the business world today is interested in gaining as much of the world as they can, regardless of the souls of men.

If a man opens his place of business on Sunday, he usually has some excuse for defense, which, when it is given, satisfies most of the few who care not whether he desecrates God's day or not. A corporation operates its business on Sunday just the same as any other day. There is little or nothing said or done about it because we cannot place our finger on the man who is responsible. The men we know who are connected with the corporation can only say that they are under orders. But someone is responsible. No one may take the responsibility here, but God will know where to place it in the judgment. Men who do not make good citizens do not please God, for they are not rendering unto Caesar what belongs to him. There is one safe rule. Love God with all your heart, soul and mind, and you will know how to love men and be a good citizen.

FLAME of the BORDER

A vivid Western tale of romance and border intrigue which will appear in this paper... Do not fail to read it.

VINGIE E. ROE

(Mrs. Raymond C. Lawton), author of this thrilling story which has its setting on the borderline between Arizona and Old Mexico, knows her West from a lifetime spent in that land which still holds much of the romance of the earlier frontier days. She was born in Kansas but has lived at various points in the West and Southwest and now resides at Napa, Calif.

Among the western stories, in addition to "Flame of the Border," which have placed her in the front rank of present-day fiction writers, are "Nameless River," "Primal Lure" and "Heart of Night Wind."

This author has never written a better story than "Flame of the Border." Read it as it is published serially in these columns.

Wise and Otherwise

"Papa, when you see a cow ain't you 'fraid?" "Of course not, Evelyn." "When you see a great big worm ain't you afraid?" "No, of course not."

Doctor—"Mrs. Layton, I would advise you to take frequent baths in salt water, get plenty of fresh air and be sure and dress in clothing that is suitable."

A Western stockman, who had mortgaged his cattle to the local bank, was called in by the banker and told that the note was due and must be paid the following day.

"Now, dear, you positively must forget business when you go out with me into society," remarked the wife of a preoccupied physician.

"Why," answered his good wife "you start to feel the pulse of everybody you shake hands with."

Wife—"Percival, do you love me?" Percival—"Of course. Why bring that up?"

Percival—"Well, here's my check-book. You can glance over the stubs and see where the money's gone."

Gofus—"How did you get that big sore spot on your forehead, Rufus?" Rufus—"I bit myself."

Gofus—"Oh, you can't kid me. How could you bite yourself on the forehead?"

Rufus—"Well, I had to stand on a chair to reach."

Stranger—"What sort of a case is being tried?" Court Clerk—"A woman is accused of shooting her husband."

Stranger—"Is the defendant beautiful?" Clerk—"I wouldn't want to say; the jury's verdict will settle that."

When you get into a tight place and everything goes against you, till it seems as though you could not hold on a minute longer, never give up then, for that is just the place and time that the tide will turn.—Harriet Beecher Stowe.

Caller—"And what is dear little Henry going to be when he grows up?"

Mother—"I'm not sure, but from the looks of the wallpaper and everything else he touches, I think he'll be a fingerprint expert."

Poet—"Don't you think there is a great deal of hidden meaning in my poem on 'The Whyness of the Where?'"

Editor—"Yes, indeed—and well hidden, too."

"Did your wife scold you when you got home last night?"

"No. For once I was in luck. The people next door were having a spat and she was so busy listening that she forgot all about me."

Fond Mother—"David, I'm shocked to hear you use such language. Did you learn it at school?"

David—"Learn it at school? No. Why, it's me that teaches the other boys, mother."

Photographer (to woman sitter)—"Look pleasant, please."

Sitter—"I get the idea."

Photographer (click, click)—"Now you can resume your natural expression."

"I understand that that movie hero just escaped divorce by a hair."

"Yes, he found it on his coat sleeve and took it off before his wife could see it."

Mr. Peck—"I was a fool when I married you."

Mrs. Peck—"I knew that, but I thought you would improve. However, now I realize my mistake."

Lawyer (trying to badger witness)—"And where did you see him milking your cow?"

Witness—"A little back of center."

OUT OF THE MOUTHS OF BABES

Sunday School Teacher—"Willie, can you quote something from the Bible to show that a man should not have two wives?"

Willie—"Yes; 'No man can serve two masters.'"

1st lawyer—"What about that big estate that old Skinner left?"

2nd ditto—"I understand the heirs got together and settled things themselves so the lawyers got little or nothing."

1st—"What is the world coming to?"

"Is Mose Podmore a good shot?" "Yes, we were out one day practicing with our rifles, and he hit the bullseye the first time."

"That sure was fine shooting."

"Yes, but he had to pay a farmer $40 for killing the bull."

Spending without planning is a disorderly sort of way to go through life. Frequently it deprives you of necessities, comforts and recreation.

Engineer—"Hi, there! Get off the track, you idiot! What do you mean by standing in front of a locomotive?"

Man—"Oh, I just had my life insured and I wanted to see whether the company is reliable."

Mother—"David, those little playmates of yours look rather tough. I hope none of them use bad language."

David—"Oh, some of 'em try to, mother, but they ain't very good at it."

A leading paper in Italy comes out with a denunciation of the housefly. Who says the press under a dictator loses its aggressiveness?—Detroit News.

Regmaid—"What a perfect night it is! See how brilliant the stars are. What do they remind you of, darling?"

Isabel—"I know, mother, but somebody had to let grandma in."

"What was it?"

"A useful book called 'What to Do Before the Doctor Comes.'"

"I suppose you and your wife got out a good deal."

"No, we are paying such high rent that we stay in all the time in order to get the full value of our money."

Bank Teller—"Sorry, madam, but your account is already overdrawn."

Madam—"Well, what of it? Can't I do as I please with my own account?"

"Do you think it is possible for a man to love two girls at the same time?"

"Not if they know about it."

Mrs. Talkmore—"I was outspoken in my sentiments at the club today."

Mr. T—"I can't believe it. Who outspoken you?"

Colored Minister—"Mah, tex' di mornin' am, 'Ye shall know de truth and de truth shall make you all feel lak thutty cents."

Tom—"Did Mill Fall catch anything when he went fishing?"

CHANGE ALWAYS

We of the twentieth century find it difficult to understand people who in generations past have bumped their heads fighting what was inevitable.

That they opposed railroads because trains displaced stagecoaches is still remembered, but it is not so well known that back in the seventeenth century they fought stagecoaches. One Englishman of the period mourned in this key:

"These coaches and caravans are one of the greatest mischiefs that hath happened to the kingdom. They prevent the breed of good horses and destroy those that are bred. They effeminate His Majesty's subjects who, having used themselves to travel in coaches, will possess no skill in horsemanship and become incapable of serving their country on horseback in time of war."

In spite of all such laments, stagecoaches came, had their day, and in turn gave way to a score of modern means of transportation. What will be next?—Rotarian Magazine.

HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

"When a woman goes shopping she must feel like Alice in wonderland, as there is such an array of commodities on the market," said Miss Ruby M. Adams to the McLean Home Demonstration Club, meeting with Mrs. W. R. Wise Friday. "The shelves are filled with beautiful materials from just two types of fibers, animal and vegetable. From the vegetable kingdom come cotton and linen. Ink applied to a sample of pure linen will spread quickly. Wool and silk are animal fibers and when burned give off an odor of ammonia," Miss Adams continued.

"What I consider the leak in my clothing budget" was the roll call answer.
