"I Want to Know"

By D. A. Davis

Why am I still a pessimist in spite of all my trying to be optimistic? I've been waiting for a month for something optimistic to happen, and in fact I've been waiting for a year to see something that I could call optimistic, but all in the world I have been able to see is pessimism.

If anybody in the whole world has done anything but mistakes in the last five or six years, I simply and honestly for the life of me can't see it.

If anybody in the whole world has done anything that was really right, I wish some of you wise birds could tell me what it is or where it happened. If any of us are doing anything but just running around in circles, I wish somebody would honestly show me what it is. And if any of us are doing anything different to what we have been doing for the past five years, I wish you could just enlighten me a little. If we are all not doing exactly just what the wise birds have been saying that caused us to take a nose dive to the very bottom of depression, I wish some of you smart alecks would please enlighten me some more if we are not going right ahead and doing the very same things that we did before the depression. I just wish you would show me where I am wrong.

In fact we ain't "DOING" nothing; we are just talking, and talking and talking and not "DOING" a confounded thing, only that we've been doing all the time, and that is "DO the other fellow before he does you." Now honestly, folks, ain't I as right as two rabbits? Can you honestly see any change anywhere? And honestly, how, come clean, all of you and just admit it—ain't we still doing the very same things over and over again, and are we really getting anywhere? What are any of us doing to better conditions? Ain't we all still grasping for everything we can get? And ain't we still spending billions and billions of dollars foolishly while only a few millions are being spent wisely and for the common good? Just look at our crime wave, just look at our expensive court procedure. Just look at our reckless and foolish spending and grafting of public funds. Who is getting any benefits? I don't mean a mere sustenance, I mean BENEFITS. I mean are we getting anywhere, and if we are, who is getting it? How can conditions get any better when everybody is expecting the other fellow to do the job, and in that case, how is the job going to be done if we all, without a single exception, are looking for the OTHER FELLOW to do it? Come on, folks, I want to know something.

KILLING SONG BIRDS CARRIES HEAVY PENALTY

By Claude Williams, City Attorney

Attention has been called to the fact that numbers of local boys have been seen killing or shooting at song birds. Such acts are to be deplored on the part of our citizens and steps should be taken to preserve the life of these birds, as they constitute a valuable asset to this or any other community. Songbirds of the type of the mocking bird are extremely useful and their propagation should be encouraged.

Article 874 of the Revised Civil Statutes of Texas, Penal Code, provides as follows: "It shall be unlawful for any person in this state to kill, catch, wound, take, shoot at, or have in possession, living or dead, any wild bird other than a game bird. Any person violating any of the provisions of this article shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined in a sum not less than $10.00 and not more than $200.00."

Exception is made in the case of English sparrows, crows, ravens, vultures or buzzards, blackbirds, pelicans, roadrunners, hawks, jay birds, sparrow hawks, woodpeckers, and the horned owl, which birds are classed by law as being harmful. However, such useful birds as the mocking bird, dove, martin, robin, etc., should be protected. It is to be hoped that the citizens of McLean will cooperate in an effort to stop ruthless killing of our local bird life. It may also be said that the destroying of the nests and eggs of these birds is also an offense under the law and is subject to fine. The welfare of the community demands that we join in a crusade for the preservation of our useful birds.

GIRL SCOUT REPORT

Monday morning 25 girl scouts and their sponsors, Mrs. Tampke, Mrs. Wade and Miss Landers, motored to the McCracken ranch for a three-day camp.

Though the camp was broken up by rain and the girls did not get to stay as long as planned, the rain was appreciated, and the girls are planning another camping trip, with the hope that they will have better luck next time.

REASON

By O. L. D. Tiner

A reason is a base for action or a justification for assuming a certain viewpoint, or, in other words, an argument. You have seen people that had no sense of reason, speed, or propriety, but were eternally making excuses instead of reasoning things out and getting at the truth of the matter. I knew a man who let superstition get the better of his reason. He was driving down the street and a black cat ran across the street in front of him, and he said, "That means bad luck." After going another block or so I saw a block of wood in the road with a sharp nail in it, and just before he got to it he was interested in getting a chew of tobacco in his mouth and didn't see the nail, ran over it and punctured his tire, and then said, "I told you that cat meant bad luck." I wasted no sympathy on the man, but sympathized with the innocent cat.

O. well! is a common excuse as thin as modern women's clothes, that is so often offered in place of a reason. A man said to his wife, "You have made so many excuses that when you die the booger man will put you to making excuses that will fade away like Tantalus' cup of water in Grecian Mythology."

A sub-conscious self interest is the most common cause or reason for most people's actions. The dollar mark seems to be increasing in its reasoning power in modern psychology for people lend an attentive ear to it that years ago would have said "Get thee behind me, Satan." Only the other day I heard a man say "It doesn't matter what a man does just so he deals straight financially." If that isn't false philosophy and unsound reasoning developed to the nth power, and rank infidelity displayed in a blatantly complacent manner the Bible is false and all these things that we have been taught were wrong and would be punished for are merely a Sar' Claus tale.

The krite creation has no reasoning powers but goes by instinct, and some of us humans operate on the same principle to a great extent. Men like Henry Ford, John D. Rockefeller and Thomas Edison have reasoned things out and the rest of us have done things just because we wanted to, and look at the difference!

OIL ACTIVITIES

Five new locations were made in Gray county and four in Wheeler last week, among those in the McLean field being: Smith Bros. Refining Co.'s No. 2 Harlan, offsetting their own gusher brought in two weeks ago; Smith Bros. No. 1 Plummer; Texas Co.'s No. 1 Keller, near the town of Kellerville; Ohio Fuel Co.'s No. 1 D'Spain and Shell Petroleum Co.'s No. 1 D'Spain.

Gray county shows Skelly Co.'s No. 9 Webb and No. 10 Webb in sections 61 and 62, block 25.

The lack of pipeline facilities to the new field may temporarily halt production, but the Texas Co. is completing its six-inch line for the Lefors station to this field which is expected to materially relieve the situation.

Boyd Meador, C. O. Greene, W. D. Biggers and T. A. Landers represented the local chamber of commerce at the mass meeting called by Mayor Ross D. Rogers in Amarillo Monday night.

THE McLEAN LION

The following items were clipped from the current number of The McLean Lion, official publication of the McLean Lions Club:

Lion Bruce says some are dumb and others just look dumb so they can make a good trade.

Lion M. C. Davis says that many a man marries simply because he admires the good judgment the woman used in selecting him.

Lion Boyd—"I am a man of few words."

Tail Twister—"Yes, I am a married man, myself."

Lion Meador—"I just thought of a good joke."

Lion Williams—"Aw, get your mind off yourself."

Fortune Teller—"I warn you, a dark man is about to cross your path."

Lion Butler—"Better warn the dark man."

Lion Wilson—"My wife always has the last word."

Lion Cooper—"You're lucky. Mine never gets to it."

Lion Biggers—"Do you think you can make a good picture of my wife?"

Photographer—"My friend, I can make it so lifelike you'll jump every time you see it."

Dr. Batson—"The secret of health is the eating of onions."

Chaplain Goff—"Yes, but how are we to eat onions and keep it a secret?"

Mrs. T. A. Landers—"What made you so late tonight?"

The Boss Lion—"I wasn't doing anything, and I couldn't tell when I was through."

Lion Tamer—"What is the matter with Lion Bogan?"

Lion Cryer—"Oh, he got a shine this morning and then remembered he was wearing his son's shoes."

Lion Shannon—"My wife dreamed last night that she was married to a millionaire."

Lion Springer—"That's nothing; my wife even thinks that in the day time."

Mother—"Daughter, is Boyd Meador in his intentions?"

The Boss Lion—"Guess he must be. He's got a shine."

The Boss Lion—"How much I make, what kind of meals we have, and how you and father are to live with."

Lion Holloway—"It's wonderful what some insects can do. A grasshopper can jump 200 times its own length."

Lion McLaughlin—"That's nothing; I once saw a bumble bee raise a 200 pound man three feet off the ground."

Lion Caldwell was riding the train to Amarillo the other day. He said to the porter: "Which end of the car do I get off?"

The porter answered: "Either one, sir, both ends stop."

Lion Cobb—"You should have seen me foaming at the mouth the other morning."

Lion Gray—"Were you mad?"

Lion Cobb—"I sure was. I'd brushed my teeth with shaving cream."

Lion Bacon—"I'm sorry I ran over your hen. Would a dollar make it right?"

Farmer—"Well, better make it two. I have a rooster that is mighty fond of that hen and the shock might kill him, too."

"Hey, you!" bellowed an Amarillo policeman. "I've had my eye on you for a long time. What do you mean by following that lady around like a lost pup?"

"It's the only way I can," pleaded Lion D. A. Davis, "she's my wife."

Lion Shannon—"Who really is boss at your house?"

Lion Secretary—"Well, ah—of course, my wife assumes charge of the house, the dog, cat and canary, but I can say pretty much what I please to the gold fish."

A lady who had only lived a short while in our community called upon Chaplain Goff with a distressing tale about her son, who was very ill in bed. "I will certainly call on him if he is so bad," said Rev. Goff. "But I don't remember ever having seen you in my church. Do you go often?"

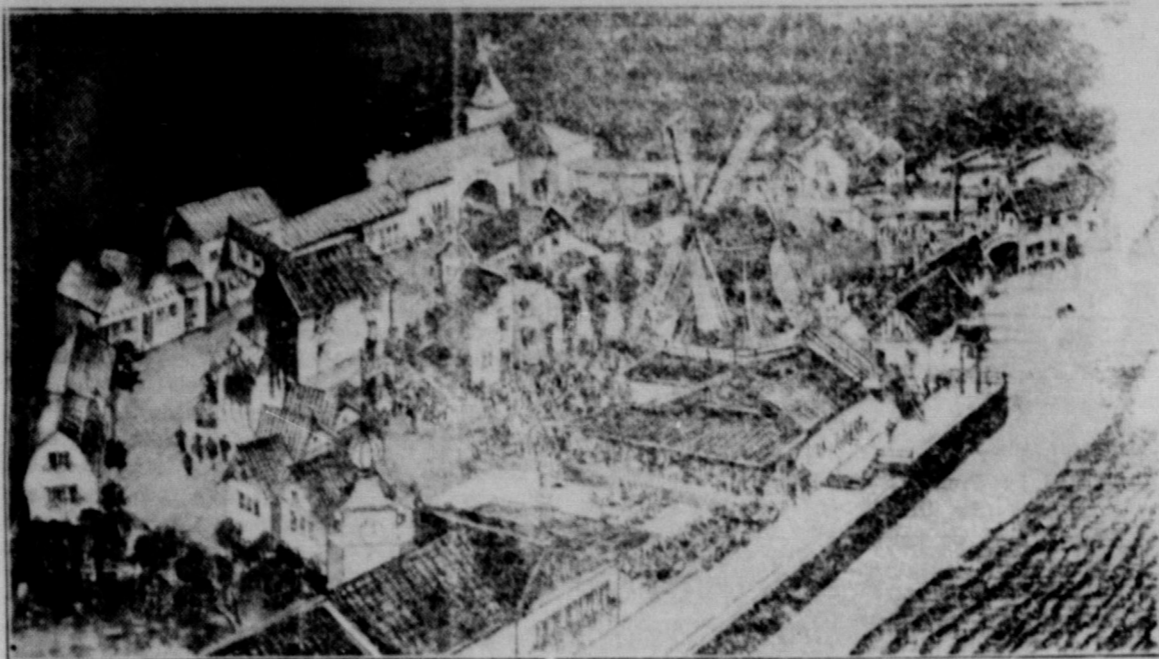

"No, sir," she replied, "we happen to be Methodist people."

Rev. Goff looked surprised. "Then why don't you send for Rev. Stout?" he asked.

"Well, we thought it would be best to call you," was the quick reply.

"You see, it's scarlet fever, a very contagious disease, that my son's got."

S. S. Lesson

By Rev. Cecil G. Goff
Pastor First Baptist Church

THE LAST JUDGMENT

Lesson text, Matt. 25:31-46. Golden Rule, 2 Cor. 5:9.

The lesson for today is again taken from the message given to the disciples and followers of Jesus on Tuesday before his crucifixion on the Mount near Bethany. Jesus gave that group, as He gives us, a view of the final judgment. He had told it before, but here He gives one of the most graphic pictures of it and in God's Word.

First, Jesus shall return. As He speaks, He has no hesitance in pronouncing that He will return for a final judgment. The Christian world is convinced concerning the certainty of the return of Jesus. If there are those who question his return they merely await the hour when to their surprise they will be convinced. The time set for the return is not given to us. We do not know and cannot know until Jesus comes. The attempt to set a time is a sin, along with other disobedient acts. We are commanded to watch, not set a time. No man knows when He shall come; the angels in heaven do not even know. The certain fact is that He is coming.

Second, it is certain that Christ is coming to judge all mankind. As Strong says, that final judgment is not to ascertain the characters of men, but "the manifestation of character, and the assignment of outward conditions corresponding to it." God will reward men as He already knows them to be. Jesus according to John 5:22 is to be the final judge. And He is to judge over all who are living and have lived, as is shown by John 5:28, 29, "The end cometh in which all that are in the tombs shall hear His voice and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; they that have done evil unto the resurrection of judgment." All men shall be judged. Daniel Webster said, when asked what was the greatest thought he ever had, that it was the sense of his personal accountability to God. God knows the truth of that statement better than any man does and gives a hint of its meaning when He says in Philippians 2:10, 11, "in the name of Jesus every knee shall bow, of things in heaven, of things in earth, and things under the earth, and that every tongue shall confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."

Third, men shall be judged according to their relationship with God. All mankind shall be divided into two groups. This will be done with the all seeing precision of God. There will be no errors made on the part of the attending angels as they carry out the command of the great Judge. To the one group He applies the term sheep. This term through the New Testament represents the followers of Jesus. Here the term refers to that great multitude which has followed Jesus, surrendered to Him, been born again by the regenerative power of God which Jesus told Nicodemus was all necessary. These are the sheep, those to be rewarded with eternal life. Their gathering by the angels (by whom we suppose it will be done) is a result of their relationship with God, through Jesus. Jesus pronounces upon them their reward for service which He names. There can be no question concerning the fact that this group of "re-born" souls, for Jesus Himself said that only such could ever enter the Kingdom of God. It is the natural thing that such a multitude of blood-washed souls should have committed the deeds of kindness referred to by the Master. His command to a blood-bought soul was that he keep His commandments, according to our love for Him. He also states that we may be known as His followers or of the world by the works we do. Faith and works are another and child, respectively. In John 4:21 we are told that the man who loves God will know how to love his brother or neighbor. The love of God in a man's heart inspires him to deeds of kindness and service to his fellow men.

Again Jesus is not talking here of the things men have done with a studied intention to bring themselves the praise of God or to lay up treasures in heaven. Men do not forget their bank accounts. Men who do deeds of kindness for such intended purpose remember them. The things Jesus is talking about are the things people do not remember. Jesus is talking about that thoughtful, loving, compassionate, sacrificing attitude of life which comes as a result of our love for the Master. It mellow our lives to the point that we do things of service because of a love of humanity and a desire of service of which we are unconscious. Such an attitude of life can only be instilled in one way, and that by the blood and love of Jesus. The world knows nothing of it, flesh is not acquainted with it, the devil abhors it; but it is the life of one who loves God.

Those who did not know God in free pardon of their sin, likewise did not know wherein they had failed. There had been no love of God in their lives to bring them to a consciousness of the need of a suffering world. It is my humble judgment that there will be many in that group who have spent at least part of their lives selfishly doing things solely for the reward that might come to them. That group has never experienced the joy and love of sacrificing for God and the Savior.

To the one group will be given the rewards of the eternal life which is theirs by birth. To the other will likewise be given that which they deserve, eternal punishment. Hell is a horrible word. But as Dr. L. R. Scarborough says, "There is a hell 'early told of in the Divine Book. There are 264 chapters, I think, in the N. T. In 234 times, nearly one verse for every chapter in the N. T. alone. God says there is a place of eternal punishment. If life's road 26 miles long had on it 234 sign boards saying, 'This road leads to hell,' I think I would go another road."

"A cherry tree in every yard" program sponsored by a patriotic organization in Ochiltree county in cooperation with Guy R. Sheets, county agent, has resulted in the planting of 1500 Montgomery cherry trees by more than 200 people. A local dealer, guaranteed against loss by prominent citizens, secured such an attractive price from a reliable nursery man that the trees sold rapidly. The idea of the move is to promote beauty of landscape as well as develop a supply of fruit.

FARMERS AND EDITORS

Whatever else National Recovery may have inspired, it has two miracles already to its credit.

For the first time farmers cooperate and editors and printers work together.

The millennium may be a long time off, but right now we are just a little closer to it.

There is no agricultural nor industrial problem that cannot be solved by men and women working together.

And when farmers and editors prosper you can bet your bottom dollar that many a banker and merchant feels the full effect of it.—Lefors News.

A SIX COSTS LESS TO RUN

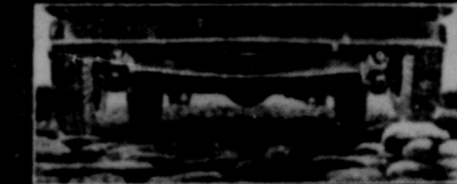

CHEVROLET OVERHEAD VALVE SIX

is the most economical car in the world

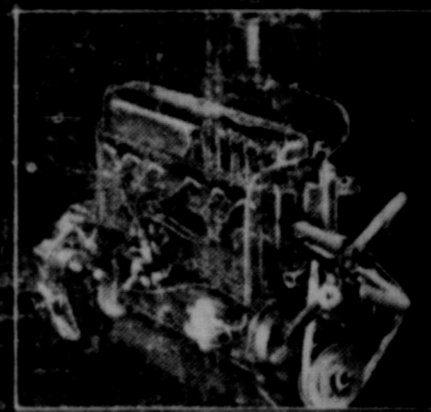

Engineering facts prove it. Experience in building nearly ten million cars confirms it. And the record of over 3,000,000 Chevrolet Six owners removes any shadow of doubt about it: The only way to get real economy in a low-priced car is to insist on SIX cylinders and OVERHEAD valves.

SIX cylinders—no more!—because extra cylinders mean extra cost for gas, oil, upkeep and parts. OVERHEAD valves—nothing else!—for the same good reason that airplanes use them. And speedboats. And racing cars. They get the MOST power out of the LEAST gas. That's why overhead valves are the choice of leaders—and champions.

Advertising attracts new business, and it stays where it is well treated.

If you grant no favors to others, you can hardly expect favors for yourself.

Advertising in the home paper is not an expense, but a necessary investment for success.

A quarter dropped in the church collection plate makes more noise than a dollar bill.

No man has any right to complain of his lot if he allows others to do his thinking for him.

Men like to say that woman is God's greatest creation; then why blame her for demanding to be treated as such?

No man ever made a success at anything, but that he had his imitators and defamers, regardless of his merit.

The swing back to prohibition seems to be definitely under way. There has been little trouble to win against the wets in recent local option elections over the state.

Collingsworth county published the regular quarterly statement of receipts and disbursements, as the law directs, last week. These statements should be of interest to taxpayers in every county, and we are glad to see that more county officials are obeying the law in this respect.

Traffic and other law violators are having an easy time in McLean now, as the town has no paid city marshal.

That there is a need for a marshal devoting his full time to the job is evident. It might be a paying proposition for the city council to consider paying a small salary and arrange for the marshal to share in fees and licenses so that a man might give his time to the town.

The killing of song birds should not be tolerated anywhere, and more so in our section than anywhere, due to the scarcity of birds here. Boys with air guns and 22 rifles are the chief offenders, and in most if not all of the cases they would stop if the matter is properly presented to them, without recourse to law.

Several complaints have been registered here on song bird killing, and it is high time to stop the practice.

A traveling salesman had to put up for the night in a small Western town and he complained bitterly at the filthy roller towel that hung in the wash-room of the only hotel. "Don't you know that roller towels have been prohibited in this state for more than three years?" he asked the proprietor.

"I know that," answered the hotel man, "but that towel was put there before that law was passed."

"But, Tommy," said his mother, "didn't your conscience tell you you were doing wrong?"

"Yes," said Tommy, "but I've learned not to believe everything I hear."

Hubby—"That panhandler you gave a dime to was a fraud. You ought not to encourage such people."

"I was to have everything after the payment of his just debts."

"I'm generous. What did he leave?"

DO YOU WANT TO BE POPULAR? HOME TOWN WEEKLY IS YOUR BEST FRIEND

Do you want to be popular, or more popular than you are? There is no easier or surer way than this: Make it a point to remember the nice things you have heard said of anyone you know, and repeat them to him or her.

No matter how big or how important the man or woman, a genuine compliment always gives pleasure. You like to hear pleasant things about yourself; why not confer that pleasure on others by repeating the compliments you hear concerning them?

This world needs more pleasant reports and fewer biting criticisms. Life has hard roads aplenty and discouragements not a few. If you can make sad experience less painful by saving or repeating a kind word, why not do it? How much better that would be than to repeat only the disagreeable things one hears.—Lawrence Co. News.

For real pleasure, for live news of folks who think more of you than any friends you've ever had, for honest, unbiased opinions, for shrewd comments of the day's news, and of politics, for interesting stories of the lives, and events in the lives of the people you know best, read your Home Town Newspaper.

FLAME OF THE BORDER by VINGIE E. ROE....

Copyright Doubleday, Doran & Co. Inc. W.N.V. SERVICE

THE STORY

Chapter 1.—Seeking death by throwing herself from the summit of Lone Mesa to escape dishonor at the hands of a drunken desperado, Sonya Savarin allows herself to be rescued by her suddenly sobered and repentant attacker. The girl is a self-appointed physician to the Navajo Indians, living on an Arizona sheep ranch with her brother, Serge, his wife, Lila, and small daughter, Babs. For a year she has been engaged to Rodney Blake, wealthy New Yorker, but her heart is with the friendless Navajos and she evades a wedding.

Chapter 2.—Sonya pulls Little Moon, wife of Two Fingers, a Navajo, through the crisis of an illness. Two Fingers is deeply grateful. Returning to her brother's ranch accompanied by Rodney Blake, Sonya meets a strange procession.

Sonya pulled Darkness in beside the rig, which stopped at her approach.

"Why, Mr. Satter!" she said, "what does this mean?"

"It means that these d-d Navajos are resisting an officer," the man said harshly, "and's likely to get 'em into trouble when I report it. You know what they are to handle, Miss Savarin, especially these wild ones."

"Why, surely I know, but isn't this a little rough? You taking the children to school?"

"Yes, they should 'a' been there last fall. Term's almost over. But they kept 'em hid out so good we never could find 'em. Didn't think they had but two, and here's three."

Sonya had dismounted. She went around behind the light wagon and spoke in Navajo.

"Tell me thy heart. I am thy sister," she said.

The woman glanced at her, her shaking arms around the youngest child, which had scuttled to her breast the minute the rig stopped.

The man came up and faced her, searching her face with troubled eyes. Instantly Sonya was this mother, this father, in their clouded misunderstanding, seeing their little ones torn from their grasp. Whatever it was that shone in her face, the man saw it trusted her at once, knew her for herself, having heard of her though he had never seen her.

He knew the hopelessness of the situation, realized their helplessness, where the woman did not.

"They go," he said, panting, "and she will not give up."

Sonya laid her arm around the heaving shoulders of the wailing woman. She looked up at the man on the seat.

"Mr. Satter," she said, "don't you think you could leave them one? Just this little one, the baby? You know it's hard to give them up—any of them—and this is so little. Couldn't you? Please, Mr. Satter? Just for me? I'll go before the superintendent and make it right if you will. I think I can. Won't you please let them have the baby?"

There was in Sonya's voice all the guile of womankind since Eve, a coaxing quality that had wrought on the hearts of men since she was born. Her long black eyes pleaded gravely. Satter moved on his seat, flected his whip, looked at her and down at his boots.

"Well," he said, "I was sent to get 'em."

"But only two. You didn't even know there were three," she coaxed. "Come on—let me give them back the baby."

"Oh, well—" he said reluctantly.

Instantly the girl reached in and pulled the baby clear of the wagon, the mother with it. It was not really a baby, being a fair-sized youngster, but the least of the three. With her arms across the two she pushed them away from the wagon. Then she began speaking rapidly in Navajo.

It was the white man's law, which was above tribal law, she told them, that the children go to the schools where they would learn the white man's ways, where they would be fed and clothed. They would become wise and above their station at the present time, being better for the knowledge they would get. And she, the mother, would have them back soon for a visit, hearing all about what they had learned and eaten in the meantime. The littlest one she could keep now, provided she would go back to her hogan in peace. If not, it too, would go.

Would she listen to the white man's law? Would she take her one child instead of losing three—for a little time only?

The man spoke, and the woman with her tragic eyes on the little scared faces in the wagon's tail, hugging her baby, nodded.

"O. K. Mr. Satter," Sonya said guardedly.

Satter struck his near horse, and the buckboard bounced away.

Turning in stark and tragic resignation, the two bedraggled figures moved off toward the canyon's mouth, the woman's eyes still strained back across her shoulder where her children were disappearing in the distance. The tall man looked back at Sonya, and his eyes spoke—like Two Fingers' had.

Blinded by tears, the girl climbed back to her saddle. She had forgotten Rodney Blake entirely. It was not until they were well out on the desert's floor that she remembered him.

"Rod," she said then, "do you see now why I cannot leave them? There is so much to do for them. They need me so!"

"Yes," he said coldly, "I see."

There was something in his tone which caused the conversation to languish, and they rode for miles through the early day without speech. Then Sonya stirred in her saddle and looked at Blake.

"Did you say you are leaving the day after tomorrow, Rod?" she asked.

"I did, but I might as well have kept the information for all the impression it made."

"Oh no, dear, I'm just so—so full of troubles you, know, I didn't mean to seem careless. You know I didn't."

"I wish to heaven I did, Sonya!" the man said passionately. "Well, remember the rest of the things I said—particularly that no man or anything shall get you from me, that I mean to have you for my own if it's the last thing I ever do in life. Just remember that, my girl."

A flush came into Sonya's face.

"I suppose I should be flattered," she said sharply, "but I am not. There is something about this attitude of yours, Rod, that angers me—a seeming of command that goes down hard with me. One's life is his own, marriage or no marriage, to a certain extent, you know. I'm not the type of woman who can be completely absorbed."

"Forgive me," said Blake quickly. "Perhaps I do seem dictatorial, but my excuse must be that ancient one which covers a multitude of sins—great love."

"I wonder," said Sonya.

They rode together into the ranch yard and for the next thirty-six hours she devoted herself as much as possible to this man who loomed so large on the horizon of her life, a little sorry for the rift between them, searching her heart for sympathy with his cause, wondering if she had been careless of his comfort or his happiness. But, search as she would, the face of Little Moon came before his, the eyes of Two Fingers drifted across his eyes, the soft guttural blurred his clipped speech in her ears.

Sonya made a hurried trip next day to Chee Wash and found the woman much better.

"So," she told her happily, smoothing the gaunt young cheek, "we make the good fight together. All is well, little mother."

And Two Fingers smiled his slow smile, and the young doctor rode away.

Sonya spent that last evening in the patio with Rodney Blake, alone under the stars, swinging in the fringed hammock, her hand between his palms, his low voice in her ears, speaking of the future. Serge and Lila, sensing the strain between them, had retired early. And Sonya put her arms about Rod's neck, kissed him, and took his kisses, and felt happy.

It was late when they separated in the living room, tiptoeing in like a pair of sixteen-year-olds, laughing in whispers, and early when they all gathered again for breakfast. It was quite a drive down to the little town where Rod would take the train for New York, and Sonya, who was driving him, wanted an early start.

The last moments on a station platform are always filled with strange emotions, forebodings, and vague fears, tinged with the sadness of parting, and Sonya was genuinely "close to tears" as she watched the handsome Rod about his ticket-buying, his trunk-checking. For one panicky moment she wished she were going with him, a marriage certificate in her bag. Then she shook herself indignantly, ran with him down the platform beside the slowing train, kissed him fervently, watched him go away across the desert.

There was a little list in her dark eyes, but she was surprised and a bit dismayed at the odd feeling of lightness, of freedom, which came over her.

"Ingrate!" she told herself, "you don't deserve a good man's love. I begin to suspect you're a spinster, selfish and lazy, and due to take on fat in wads some day as punishment!"

ONLY GOOD MAN IN THE WORLD

Much in our natures to combat the evils of the day in we live. There are two evils. Some time ago there was in a national publication a long article about the moral decay of the nation. The author of the first article was "They are dead for Hell." The author of the second article was "They are not." He saw the evil of the present day. The other wrote subject "They Are Not." He only the good of the youngsters whom he wrote. Had all the been taken from both sides, conclusion reached fair to all. In the case, I think we have decided we are living in not much better and not worse than a thousand other nations have seen.

Good people are sometimes dragged over the worldliness of without cause. It is true that and evil are badly mixed here wrong often taking the ascendancy but that is not unusual in the of the race. Lowell, who not a pessimist, once remarked, "Forever on the scaffold, wrong on the throne." All progress made against opposition. That not excuse the opposition, but is the way our world is. No is lost until its champions quit. There is always victory for the when her friends will pay the of victory, and there is always surprising number of followers a true leader is found. "Ye not resisted unto blood..."

Elijah was a much discouraged once. He ran away and hid because he thought there was no for the cause of the Lord. Many other good man has done the same. Elijah really thought he was only good man alive and that a coward of him. The Lord hid him from his hiding because worse things were the more needed men were in society.

In the middle ages they decided a man to be good had to run and live by himself. That is made the dark ages really —Are you going to study singing as you intended?"

—No, I gave up the idea when teacher convinced me it would be three years of hard work to be able to sing as well as I thought I was already."

Housewife (to tramp)—"Well, do you want a meal bad enough to work for it?"

Tramp—"No, mum. I'm just plain hungry, mum—not desperate."

Every individual is entitled to work, rest and recreation. Life is balanced when all three factors are controlled.

Observation

Speaking of the powers of Observation, look at this one:

A Glasgow professor, in order to emphasize the value of observation, prepared a little cupful of kerosene, mustard and castor oil, and calling the attention of his class to it, dipped a finger into the atrocious mixture and then sucked his finger. He next passed the mixture around to the students, who all did the same, with the most dire results. When the cup returned, and he observed the faces of his students, he remarked:

"Gentlemen, I am afraid that you did not use your powers of observation. The finger that I put into the cup was not the same one that I stuck into my mouth."

People, especially advertisers, are woefully prone to fail to observe obvious facts. They fail to observe that certain newspapers, like The McLean News, have a select circulation among people that matter; that their interests are considered in making up the editorial contents of the paper—without featuring crime news or scandal; that, finally, these people—these discriminating subscribers to The News—have or control the greater part of the purchasing power of this region.

Before you place your advertising, ask The News for proof of its efficiency as a salesman.

BERRY CHILD DIES

Funeral services were held Saturday at the family residence near Alanreed, for Bertie Faye, 4 days old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Berry. The Thomas Funeral Home was in charge of arrangements.

INCLUDING THE CHILLUN

At a revival meeting converts were coming forward by the dozen. A negro came striding down the aisle and dropped to his knees. He was barefooted and two enormous feet stuck up behind him.

In a moment the revivalist started up the aisle, kneeling here and there beside the converts. The nearsighted old man peered earnestly at the negro, patted him on the shoulder and murmured: "Bless you, brother." Then kneeling beside him and putting a hand on each heel, he said, "And bless these two, dear little boys."

ALL DEPENDS

Allittle man was ushered into the witness box. After the usual preliminaries, the magistrate told him to tell the court what happened.

The man began in rambling narrative and finally ended up with: "And then my wife hit me on the head with an oak leaf."

"Well, that couldn't hurt you, surely," said the magistrate.

"Oh, couldn't it?" replied the little man, with feeling. "It was the oak leaf from the dining table."

ETHIOPIAN ENERGY

First negro—"Gosh! Sam's done wiggled his feet twice today. What's de matter wid him?"

Second Ditto—"Well, he's one of dese niggers that don't believe in layin' around all day doin' nothin'."

Miss Ethlyn Cockrell and the T. A. Landers family visited the Bruce Nursery at Alanreed Sunday afternoon.

Science at Fair

For Free Concerts at New Fair

In this great lagoon amphitheater, Swift and Company will present the Chicago Symphony orchestra in ten weeks of free daily concerts starting July 1 in the new World's Fair. This is not one of many new free features which will make the visitor's dollar buy more this summer. The Fair opens in Chicago May 26.

HIS FEE

The teacher heard a child crying and rushed out to the playground to find the cause of the disturbance.

"What is the trouble?" she asked of little Jimmy, who stood calmly by, eating an orange.

"Billy took Fred's orange," explained the witness.

"And where is the orange?" asked the teacher.

"Oh, I have that," replied Jimmy. "You see, I am the lawyer."

BACK TO SLAVERY

"I want man to do odd jobs around the house, run errands, one who never answers back, and is always ready to do my bidding," explained a lady to an applicant for a job in the household.

QUITE A DIFFERENCE

Jimmy—"What's de best way to catch a girl to swim?"

Johnny—"Well, yer want to take her gently down to de water, put yer arm around her waist, an—"

Jimmy—"Aw, cut it out! It's my sister."

Johnny—"Oh, just push her off de dock."

Spring redecorating fever has hit the new World's Fair with the start of balmy weather in Chicago. Together new colors are to be featured. The Fair opens May 26.

5 Six-Footers... and not a cramp in a Carload!

FIVE big men can relax in utter comfort on the deep cushions of the Ford V-8. Wide seats keep elbows out of ribs. Ample leg room keeps legs from being cramped.

Why? Because Ford measures roominess in terms of usable body room. Not in terms of the distance between bumpers, which means nothing when you come to analyze it.

The Ford V-8's very engine construction gives you more body room, as the diagram explains. Cylinders are "doubled-up" saving space, not strung along in a line to waste it.

If you buy any car at any price, drive the Ford V-8.
