Rogers Week Observed in Gray County

Next week is Will Rogers week in Gray County, according to action by the county committee of Gilmore N. Nunn of Pampa.

Monday was Will Rogers day in county schools and was observed in the McLean schools with appropriate exercises.

Contributing to the Will Rogers memorial fund are assured that the money will be strictly accounted for with hundreds of community members donating their time for the occasion.

There will be no personal solicitations, but anyone desiring a part in the memory of the Great Humorist are requested to leave their donations with the McLean News at the American National Bank.

A. Landers, W. E. Bogan and Herman Adkins compose the local committee, and will also be glad to accept any money intended for the occasion and see that it reaches proper channels.

Wanted at McLean

Expansion of the business volume of McLean by many thousands of dollars annually is in prospect with the arrival here Monday of W. P. Covington, district manager of the Buick Motor Company, with headquarters in Amarillo.

Mr. Covington, the direct factory representative of one of the largest divisions of General Motors, came to McLean for the purpose of establishing a dealership here for the new Buick six and eight cylinder cars.

Mr. Covington is here to make contact with local business men who are in a position to capitalize on the facilities offered by a dealer franchise with his company. Dealerships in other cities the size of McLean, Mr. Covington said, are in many instances responsible for the sale of 25 cars a year. Such volume would mean a gross annual business of approximately $20,000, and would add to the operation of that magnitude to the business turnover of McLean.

He stated further that the reason his company is extending its dealer franchise to many dealers the size of McLean is because of the unusual profit possibilities offered by dealerships at the present.

When questioned as to the qualifications necessary to obtain a Buick dealer franchise, Mr. Covington said, "The ideal man, of course, is one who has had experience as a dealer and who has the relatively small amount of capital that is necessary to get going. But in many instances we have given the franchise to men who were sales managers for other dealers and even 'star salesmen' with satisfactory results. In other words, we have established connections with men totally inexperienced in the automobile business, but who wished to make a good investment."

"I am here to interview all interested local residents, either with or without money, with or without experience. I plan to be at the news office Friday, and am hopeful that before I leave a satisfactory arrangement can be made."

THANKSGIVING SERVICE

There will be a special Thanksgiving musical service at the First Baptist Church Sunday night. The music will consist of special numbers from the orchestra, Thanksgiving anthems by the choir, and solos by Mrs. Bob Thomas and Mrs. Cecil G. Goff.

Ex-governor Francis of Missouri once said the following about newspapers: "Each year the local paper gives $600 to $1000 in free lines to the community in which it is located. No other agent can or will do this. The editor in proportion to his means does more for his own town than any other ten men, and in all fairness he ought to be supported, not because you like him or admire his writings, but because the local paper is the best investment a community can make. Today the editors of the local papers do the most for the least money of any people on earth."—Missouri Press News.

Tigers Win at Clarendon with 33 to 0 Score

The McLean Tigers won from the Clarendon Broncs last Friday evening with a 33 to 0 score, being the first time to do this on the Clarendon field in several years.

Thirteen points were made in the first half, when the McLean substitutes were sent in for the third quarter, in which no scoring was done. In the fourth quarter the regulars were in again and moved the score to 27, when the second stringers were sent in to finish the game, scoring the other six points.

McLean and Shamrock fans outnumbered the locals, the total crowd present being estimated at about a thousand.

District Clash Football Teams Here Friday

Friday night will see the McLean Tiger and the Shamrock Irishmen clash on Tiger Field for district championship honors.

Both teams have an undefeated record for this season and will be in fine physical condition for the fray, with the exception of "Red" McCarty, Tiger center, who had a wrist injured in the Clarendon game. Shamrock has one player who has been recently ill with the flu, and one with a slightly injured ankle; however, it is expected that first string men on each team will start the battle.

Speculation has been rife as to choosing the place for the game and just what officials would be used, but school authorities went calmly about selecting the officials, and the game will be played as originally scheduled. Pampa offered their field and other assistance, but the offer was not needed.

J. R. Gilliam of Carey will be referee. Dick Dennard head lineman, and Bill Anderson umpire.

McLean and Shamrock are old rivals, and one thing to make the game more interesting this year is the fact that Shamrock's coach was coach here for a number of years past.

Coach Bill Allen of the Tigers is keeping his men at work in line with his usual plan of sending them in as a coordinating fighting unit that has proven so successful all season.

Reserved seat tickets are on sale at the City Drug Store for 25c each. Cars will be admitted to the west side of the field for 25c; however, cars must park well away from the wire, and no cars will be allowed at the end of the field.

General admission tickets may be secured from most any business house in McLean, and no 15c tickets will be sold at the gate.

NEW METHODIST PASTOR FOR LOCAL CHURCH

According to action by the annual conference of the Methodist Church Rev. J. H. Sharp of Stanton will be the new pastor for the local Methodist church for the ensuing year.

Rev. Sharp has held pastorates at Knox City, Aspermont, Sylvester and Childress. He and his wife have five children, three of whom will enter the McLean schools.

The new pastor is of a genial personality and says that he is here for service to his church and community, and will be glad to make the acquaintance of everyone, regardless of church affiliation.

Rev. N. U. Stout goes to Iraan, in Pecos county, in the New Mexico conference.

In a very interesting manner Mrs. A. R. McHaney listed a number of "Don'ts" for officers and members. Refreshments were served to one guest, Mrs. D. A. Davis; those on the program, and Mesdames C. H. Leeds, Wayland Floyd and Bob Thomas.

CHAMBERLAIN SPEAKS AT LIONS LUNCHEON

One of the most interesting talks heard at the local Lions Club was made Tuesday by Wm. Chamberlain, commissioner of Donley county and research worker for the West Texas State Teachers College Museum at Canyon.

The speaker told of his finds in the line of fossil remains in the Panhandle and gave an interesting description of how such remains are dug and preserved.

No bones are dug up as you would a tree stump or something, but must be uncovered a little at a time, carefully painting with thin shellac, about two coats, then covering with plaster cast, working under the bones the same way until all is covered, before attempting to lift from the ground.

Mr. Chamberlain was a guest of Lion Sitter, who introduced him.

RED CROSS ELECTION POSTPONED FROM NOV. 21

According to W. K. Wharton, chairman of the local Red Cross chapter, the annual election of officers scheduled for Nov. 21, has been postponed until after the roll call, ending on Thanksgiving Day.

Mr. Wharton says that the exact date will be announced in due time. The annual roll call under the direction of Roll Call Chairman Creed Bogan is making nice progress. Several teams are at work in town and the surrounding community, and it is hoped to exceed the quota set for this chapter by the closing date.

Practically all of the business district has been canvassed and all members now have the Red Cross flag in their windows.

STITCH AND CHAT CLUB WITH MRS. CALDWELL

MESSAGE OF HAGGAI AND ZECHARIAH

Text, Haggai 1:2-8; 2:8, 9; Zechariah 4:6-10. Golden text, "I said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord."

Sunday we studied concerning the return of Cyrus that those of the captives might return to the land which they desired to do so. It was commanded that these returning in the land should provide for their material possessions to assist in rebuilding the temple and establishing themselves in the land. In today's lesson we study the land of promise repopulated by some of the circumcisers which they lived and their work accomplished.

Do we have freedom of the press in our beloved "free" country? Yes and no. In many large cities the editors cannot voice their frank opinions in regard to certain matters, especially in regard to certain evils of politicians, vices in the cities and so on. The political "bosses" govern the press here and there. More courageous editors who have given their opinions in regard to some evils found out that they should have kept quiet when gangsters and racketeers had bombs thrown at their printing presses. They are often compelled to keep quiet instead of fighting evil and striving for civic righteousness.

It is true, the news should be censored in order to not contaminate young readers of newspapers. But this is not done as much as it should be. Just glance through almost any large newspaper of today. Few dailies print news only "that is fit to print." However, editors should not cater to politicians, vicious ones especially, and suppress the truth!

But there is more important news that a Christian dare not suppress, and that is the glad news, the Glad Tidings, the Gospel of our Master Jesus Christ. Scripture tells us: "And the Gospel must first be published among all nations." The Gospel must be broadcast by means of the radio, by means of the preacher's voice, by the voice of each individual Christian; it must be spread abroad, proclaimed and published by means of religious periodicals. It may also be proclaimed by means of the daily and weekly press. Why not? The editor has a right to grant space in his paper to responsible writers, true Biblical pastors especially, to proclaim the Glad Tidings, the Gospel of Jesus Christ, with direct applications to the life of today. That is a special service which the publishers render to their respective communities.

It must be remembered that the editor is not responsible for any misstatement which may appear in any feature column. His opinions are confined to the editorial page. It must be admitted that editors of secular newspapers do not have to open up their columns to religious articles. But, if the readers desire them, are helped thereby, why shouldn't the readers have what they want?

As the years roll by, more publishers are taking the opportunity to supply their readers with religious articles. The readers do not have to read the articles or believe a single word they read. But—articles on Christianity by Christian writers are read by thousands of people—even in the daily and weekly press. The Word of God is powerful and does make effect even on the hardest of hearts.

In order to fight evil we must fight with God's sword, the Word of God. The press of today is a good means to this end. Christian editors and publishers who publish Christian literature are doing this country more good than all politicians and "brain trusts" put together. We take our hats off to them. The publisher of The McLean News is also to be congratulated for his sincerity and Christian zeal for publishing Christian literature in his secular but worthy weekly.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Bodine and little daughter, Barbara Gail, of Tucuman, N. M., visited the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Bodine, last week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Shirley and little daughter of Magic City visited the lady's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Carpenter, Saturday.

Mrs. Opal Loy and children returned to Oklahoma Friday after a visit with the lady's sister, Mrs. E. J. Windom.

by might, but by the spirit of God that we will win. Men go places and to things on power and might, but not for God. They may call them for Him, but the only things that can be done for Him are those accomplished by His spirit. Of such is the kingdom of heaven built. Let us watch and be up and doing lest we be deceived and be found with empty hands when the hour of accounting comes.

SYNOPSIS

Perilla Fairfax and Corey Malden are to be married the next day at Lovell Terrace, Long Island home of John Lovell, her stepfather. Gathered for the wedding party are Tony Gaskell, best man, a lawyer; Hilda Sheldon, maid of honor; and Pete Wilson and Bob Cates, friends of Malcolm Fairfax, Perilla's brother, ushers. Corey is very wealthy. He is thirty-eight and Perilla twenty-four, but it is a true love match. Everybody is busy, including Jane Lattimer, Mrs. Lovell's pretty and efficient social secretary. There is a dress rehearsal and Malcolm and Bob are sent to get the Tenney girls. When the party is breaking up, Malcolm complains of a headache. Tony produces some white tablets, and nearly every one takes one, including Corey. After the wedding Perilla tells her mother that Bob had repeated his threat that if she ever married anyone except him, he would kill her, the bridegroom or himself. Her mother insists Bob was only teasing her. In a Baltimore hotel room Corey tells Perilla, "You won't like my mother. She isn't lovable," then drops to the floor dead as he holds her in his arms. Alone, except for Boynton, the chauffeur, and Sarah, her maid, Perilla has Boynton telephone her father to come by plane with Malcolm.

"This is my room," and Perilla pointed to it, "and the adjoining one is—was, Mr. Malden's. As we stood up, he put his arms round me to say good night. I clasped my arms around his neck, and kissed him—I am assuming you want these details—and as we stood a moment I felt his body begin to sag, to slip down, and he slid, rather rapidly, to the floor. Naturally, his arms drew me along, and not understanding, I, too, fell to my knees. Then, I saw a strange look come over his face, and I felt sure he was ill. I jumped up and tried to raise him. I could not do so, and, frightened and shocked, I managed to ring for my maid, and that's all I could do, at the moment."

"Did you faint?"

"No, I didn't faint, but I almost lost command of my faculties."

"Answer this carefully, Mrs. Malden. Do you know of any reason, or any suggestion of any reason for your husband's sudden death?"

She looked at him, wonderingly.

"No, of course I do not. How could I?"

"Just brief, even terse answers, please. You know of no sort of weakness he had? Of heart, lungs—any organ?"

"I know of nothing of the sort."

"Do you, Boynton?" and the doctor turned to the man.

"No, sir. My master was sound in mind and limb. He was never ill. I'm sure he had no ailment of any sort."

"Then, if you will help me, we will put the body on the bed, and I will make some further examination which, I feel sure, will merely confirm my decision that he died from an unsuspected weakness of the heart."

The two raised the inert man, and carried him to his own bedroom, where Doctor Hornyb completed his work. He turned to Perilla, also facing Hughes.

"That is all I can do; I leave the matter in your hands. I will give you a certificate of death from natural causes. You are expecting your people, Mrs. Malden?"

"Yes, I hope to see my father and brother here this morning. Now, it seems to me, Doctor Hornyb, that the mother of my husband should be notified. Do you think it a good idea that you get in touch, by telephone, with their family physician? Then, let him break the news to Mrs. Malden."

"I think that a fine plan. I don't know his name, but I can get the nurse, or a secretary, perhaps, and find out. I will then report to you. And please do not hesitate to call on me for anything I can do to help you."

"Thank you, I may be glad to do so."

"Shall we leave the chauffeur in charge in Mr. Malden's room?" Hughes asked. "And may I send you up some breakfast, and will you take a little rest, then, until your father comes?"

"Yes, thank you. My father's name is John Lovell and my brother is Mr. Fairfax. Mr. Lovell is a stepfather to us two."

Hughes left, and Sarah took the helm. "I think you must dress, dearie," for Perilla had on a tea-gown, "there's no telling who will come next."

"Yes, Sarah, and order coffee and croissants and a bit of marmalade for both of us. I can't be left alone."

"No, my lamb, you shan't. And we'll let the chambermaid straighten up a bit. You step out on the balcony, meanwhile."

Out to the balcony Perilla went where the morning sun was just beginning to lighten the horizon. Calmly, quietly, she sat, in a big easy chair, half wondering what it all meant.

Yet, think coherently she could not; her brain seemed incapable of definite action. Now it seemed inevitable that Corey should step out through the French window, and quickly she knew she should never see him again.

Never see him again! No, no, that wasn't possible; that, of all things couldn't be!

CHAPTER III

Breakfast was brought. Mechanically Perilla ate a few bites, and sent it away.

Doctor Hornyb returned. "I made connections, finally," he said. "I talked to the nurse, and then to the doctor."

"Is Mrs. Malden ill?" asked Perilla.

"Always more or less ill, I fancy. Probably a hypochondriac. She wants to see you, but I feel rather as if she is not going to welcome you with open arms. Do you know her at all?"

"Only what I have heard of her. But she is my husband's mother."

"I didn't talk with her directly, but I was informed that the funeral services would be held at Malden Hall, and that her son would be buried in Richmond."

"Very well; that is for her to decide."

Mr. Hardywick, manager of the hotel, arrived then, and Perilla and Doctor Hornyb went to the living room to meet him. Just as the doctor was about to suggest calling in a mortician Mr. Lovell and Malcolm Fairfax arrived.

Perilla threw herself in Mr. Lovell's arms, at the same time drawing Malcolm to her. Only for a moment she gave way to her emotion and then, recovering her poise, she spoke in her usual tone, though her voice trembled.

"Just a moment," said John Lovell, "Perilla, dear, you must—must—must tell us just what happened."

"But I don't know, father. I mean I don't know what—what Corey did—I've not the least idea what caused his death."

"Have you, Doctor Hornyb?" Lovell went on.

"No, sir. It is a most curious case. There is no possible reason that the man should have died. I have made a most thorough examination, and find no hidden weakness, no unsuspected organic trouble, no flaw in an unusually fine constitution. I should have guaranteed Mr. Malden's life for years. I would be most glad of your further advice, Mr. Lovell. Of course, the family doctor in Richmond, who has doubtless known the subject a long time, will agree or disagree with my findings. I trust I shall be informed which. The case is exceedingly curious. I can find no reason whatever for death, and I am utterly at a loss to explain the circumstance."

"Is there, by any possibility, a chance for wrongdoing, for foul play?"

"Not the slightest! Mr. Malden was here alone with his wife, to all appearances as well as ever, when he simply fell to the floor, dying."

"Let me tell my people about it alone, won't you doctor? I'm sure you realize what it means to me to go over the details."

"Certainly, my dear child. Forgive me for unnecessary references. Now, Mr. Lovell, do you not think we should summon the mortuary people?"

"It seems so to me, but am I the one to advise? Will not some of the family or relatives at Malden House come here?"

"I fancy not. Mr. Malden's mother is not able to leave her home, and there are no others in the family except servants. Mrs. Malden has expressed a tentative wish that we take the body of the late Mr. Malden there for burial. Yet we should not start without further notice."

"Telephone again," said Malcolm.

"I'll look after it, get directions and generally supervise."

"Yes, do, Malcolm," said Perilla. "We can't go unannounced, and we must go."

Hardywick, who had been talking to Boynton, came to the group in the sitting room. "I think," he said, "rather than to have Mr. Fairfax telephone Malden House, I would better do it. I have known the family for years. At any rate, suppose I begin the conversation."

"Oh, do, Mr. Hardywick," said Malcolm. "I only proposed it to be of assistance." These two went down stairs, leaving Perilla alone with her father and Sarah.

"Tell me in a few words, dear," Lovell said to his stepdaughter. "We must be ready to meet emergency calls, and we can talk further about it later on."

Briefly, but without omitting any important details, Perilla told just what had happened.

"Now, Perilla," said Mr. Lovell. "I wasn't going to say this to you, but I think I'd better. You listen, too, Sarah. You know and I know, Perilla, how much you and Corey loved each other. We all know, at home, how devoted you were. But the whole world doesn't know that. There may easily be people in the world, in Washington, even in this hotel, who are ready to think you were instrumental in killing your husband. Hush, dear, don't cry out. This is a thing you must face. It cannot be ignored or forgotten. Don't think about it now, don't worry, don't talk. When we can, we will discuss it, but not now. It may never be spoken of, yet again, I may. I know you understand."

"I do, dad, oh, I do. I thought of it at once, but we won't cross the bridge until we come to it."

"Good girl. Now here is Malcolm back. What news, boy?"

"Mr. Hardywick is a fine fellow. He fixed it all up, and we're to go on down to Richmond as soon as we are ready. But don't you think I'd better stay here? There'll be things to see to, I'm sure. Just as you say, though."

Malcolm looked doubtfully at his sister, and she guessed what he was thinking of.

"Out with it, Mal," she said, looking deeply thoughtful. "Are you afraid for me?"

"Afraid of what?"

"Afraid of anything. For, of course I was here alone with Corey—"

"Hush, not a word. But I do think I'd better stay here, and you two go on to Richmond, with Boynton and Sarah."

"Yes, that's the best," said Lovell.

"Perilla, do you know any of Corey's friends in Washington?"

"Two or three fine ones whom I met yesterday afternoon, or last night, that's about all. One, in particular, a Mr. Carmichael, is a fine man, and would do anything for us, but we don't want a lawyer, do we?"

"No, of course not," declared her brother. "Well, since you're urged to go, let's start."

"I'm afraid," moaned Perilla. "Can't I say I'm too sick to go?"

"No, indeed. Brace up, girl, everything will be all right. You two, and Sarah and Boynton will go in your car, Pril. The mortician people will look after things here—Pril, what did I tell Corey over?"

"Be quiet, Malcolm," and John Lovell glowered at him.

"No, father," Perilla said, quietly. "I must get used to it. My Corey is gone, and I must be brave and dignified, for his sake. Yes, Mal, you have arranged it just right. I mean, about your staying here. Suppose one of those nice men we saw yesterday should come over here, there ought to be some one here to meet him. I can't help thinking Mr. Carmichael will come. Then there may be messages from home. Of course, you must be here. We don't know what will be done as to the funeral, but I must do exactly as Corey's mother wants me to."

"You're a good many kinds of a brick, Phil," said her brother. "Better get off, then. The drive will take you some few hours, I'm thinking."

The mortician's men came, and no mention of this was made to Perilla, for nothing much could be done until Mrs. Malden, Senior, was consulted.

"I dread seeing her," Perilla said, as they started their drive. "I know she won't like me."

"Don't take it like that, Sis," and Malcolm, helping her in, smiled at her kindly. "Maybe you won't like her, either, but you can't help that. You have a part to carry through, and I'll warrant you'll do it just about all right."

Worn by the strain she had so long been under, Perilla's head nodded and a refreshing sleep brought to Malden House a calm, self-composed young woman, ready to meet whatever might be her fate or her experience.

The place was a typical old southern home, and had Perilla gone there with Corey, as she had expected, she would have felt all its charm and grandeur, and gloried in thinking she was to become one of the fine old family. But as they went up the long drive the beautiful flowers and foliage seemed to become more and more like a black forest.

As they mounted the steps of the Colonial porch, the great doors were swung open by two elderly menservants, who bowed stiffly.

"This way, if you please ma'am," and the older man, looking almost like Uncle Tom, ushered them into a pleasant reception room, looking out on some gardens.

The Place Was a Typical Old Southern Home.

The man disappeared, only to return in a moment, and bid them into another room. This was quite evidently Mrs. Malden's own sitting room, being a comfortable, luxurious type, and showing decorations and mementoes of the past.

In a large and rather formal chair, sat an elderly, sharp-featured woman, whose handsome face was deprived of beauty by the expression of ill-nature and unkindness that marred it. Ignoring John Lovell she stared at Perilla, and in a harsh, cold voice she said:

"So you're the girl who married my son!"

Surprised at this sort of reception, Perilla managed to control the resentment she felt, and said, quietly, "Yes, Mrs. Malden, I am, and I—"

A skinny, claw-like hand was shaken in her face, and the croaking voice went on:

"And murdered him."

John Lovell stepped forward in wrath.

"Come, Perilla, I will not let you be submitted to another speech like that!"

"You will not go, you will remain!" almost shrieked the old lady, but Lovell stood his ground.

"I will not stay to submit my daughter to another speech like that! A speech that I cannot stoop to reply to."

"I can, father, leave it to me. Did you love your son, Mrs. Malden?"

"Love him? Far more than you can guess or imagine."

"Then you cannot believe he would marry a girl who would murder him. If you loved him, as you say, you know his goodness and charm, you know his tenderness and gentle kindness. I, too, know all those things, and I know even more of his love and devotion than you do. But I know, too, that if you say such a thing as that anyone killed him, I know you are insane. Nobody in his right mind could think for a moment that anyone could kill Corey Malden, least of all anyone you loved him."

The old dame fairly quivered as she looked at her daughter-in-law.

"Yet he was killed," she said stormily. "My boy was sound and without weakness or blemish of any sort. The doctors said so, I, his mother, have all his life known of his strong, marvelous health. Now you come to me and tell me he is dead. You tell me he died suddenly, alone in a room with—with this woman—what can I think but that it was her deed?"

"Come, Perilla," Lovell said, again. "I cannot listen to this, nor let you listen. Say no more to Mrs. Malden, but come away. You are in danger here."

"Well said; she is in danger! Danger of being found out. Danger of having it known that she committed murder, danger that her black deed be fastened upon her!"

John Lovell took two strides forward and clasped his hand over the speaker's mouth.

"Peace, woman!" he cried. "Not another word from your lying tongue! I knew your son. I knew his fine character, his noble nature. But I did not know that his nobility was great enough to hide the fact that he had a shrew for a mother. How the poor lad has suffered all his life. I am sorry, Mrs. Malden, that my daughter and I have seen you, sorry that the memory of you must ever be a cloud on our recollection of Corey. We will go, now, never, I hope, to see you again."

"You will not go, sir. It is my custom to have all my family at a family funeral. Though I hate to see you disgracing the occasion, I must decree that you and your daughter, and your son, if he is available, all make your appearance at the service on Friday."

"You wish us to stay here till Friday?"

"I do. I command it. We need not meet, but you must be present."

"We agree to conform to your wishes, on the provision that we need not meet. May we now be shown to our rooms?"

"You may, Seymour!"

A woman in the uniform of a trained nurse came into the room. "Bid Dillon take these people to their rooms."

The nurse rang a bell, and a footman came, who escorted them from Mrs. Malden's presence.

He led them up a long flight of wide, shallow stairs, and opened a door into a large foyer, which, he said, led to Mrs. Malden's rooms.

Perilla was met by a pleasant-faced, rather pretty maid, who ushered her in, while Dillon went on with John Lovell.

Reaching the rooms allotted to him Lovell asked Dillon to step inside. The man seemed to do so. "Dillon," he said, "who is head of the house now?"

"Mrs. Malden, sir, but she always was. Even when Mr. Corey was alive he had nothing to say about anything."

"Did he resent this?"

"No, sir. He preferred it so. Mr. Corey was a clever man, sir. He knew things would go more smoothly if he let his mother take the helm. And he was here so seldom, it really made little difference."

"I'm sorry to say these things, Dillon, but I must ask certain questions, and there seems to be no one else to speak to just now. Is there—any, or—danger that during the night, say, Mrs. Malden might visit my daughter's room, and—and cause her any distress?"

"I hesitate to reply to that question, sir, but I feel I must advise you to have Mrs. Malden's own maid in the room with her. As to the housemaid, Marie, she is true blue and may be absolutely depended on. And now, Mr. Lovell, will you and your daughter prefer to have your meals with Mrs. Malden, the elder, or by yourselves?"

"I should much prefer to dine alone tonight, Dillon, but I think it wiser—the choice left to me?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then, tonight, I will dine with Mrs. Malden, the elder, but my daughter will not be with us. Make whatever arrangement is convenient for her dinner, and let her maid dine with her."

"Yes, sir," and the man looked satisfied.

"Then, that will do, Dillon, and send Boynton to me. He is valet as well as chauffeur."

The man left the room, and Lovell stood by the window, gazing at the beautiful gardens, though scarcely seeing them for his startled thoughts.

Dillon had practically warned him against letting Perilla spend the night without a companion. Well, Sarah was a host in herself when it came to caretaking. But what could happen? Surely that old witch would not attempt to strangle Perilla with those long, bony claws of hers.

But the strangest thing was Corey's lack of reference to his mother. As Lovell remembered, he had never heard Perilla's fiancée mention her, and he had wondered why. But it seemed of little importance, since they were going to see her and, as Lovell supposed, Perilla would be welcomed with open arms.

And doubtless she would have been, had the bridal pair gone to Malden house as they expected. But, granting the suddenness of the tragedy and the erratic mind of the old lady, was it so surprising that she took an antagonistic attitude toward Perilla? A different temperament would have welcomed the stricken young bride, and they would have mingled their tears; but this half-crazy invalid, who idolized her son, felt immediate rancor at the girl who had taken him from her, and now, as if she caught at the chance, accused her, in a frenzy of emotion, of killing him.

A light tap at the door aroused him, and at his bidding, Boynton came in. John Lovell looked at him, suddenly realizing that he knew little about this man.

"How long have you been with Mr. Malden, Boynton?" he asked, pleasantly enough, but watching him closely.

"Upward of four years, sir," Boynton replied, with a straight-forward look at his questioner.

"So long? Well, Boynton, you mustn't take it ill if I ask a few questions. This is all a grave matter—very grave. You were also valet to Mr. Malden?"

"When he wished it, sir. He was a man practically without a home. Of course, he lived here, but he was away more than at home. He kept a suite of rooms at his hotel in Philadelphia all the time, and that was his real home. But, if I may say this, after he became a friend of Miss Perilla, he spent much time in New York. When they became engaged he was willing, of course, to live wherever she wanted, and they bought the New York apartment. All this you know, sir."

"Yes, of course. Now, Boynton, answer this carefully and truthfully. You were with Mr. and Mrs. Malden all the way to Washington. Did you ever have the slightest reason to think that my daughter was not deeply in love with her husband, and he with her?"

Katydid Sings Death Song

The katydid's song is a tremendous rhapsody of life and death. For he has only a short time to live and he calls mightily for a mate, a voiceless female to perpetuate his species. When the notes trail off, it means that the katydid is dying and the ground is soon littered with wings and dismembered bodies. But eggs are left. Out of them larvae are hatched—slugs that drop to the ground, burrow down to nourishing rootlets and build underground cells. For 17 years (13 in the South) the katydid will live there in his tiny cell, living on the sap that flows in the rootlet, and then, properly winged, will crawl out to vault into the sun and sing again his song of love.

American Hawks as Hunters

According to the falconers the American hawks provide birds which are as suitable for hunting as any to be found in Europe. They are divided into two classes. Those in the first class are the true falcons, high-flying, long-winged birds which are considered the aristocrats among birds of prey. They include the prairie falcon, the pigeon hawk or merlin and the American duck or noble peregrine falcon. The latter nests in the highlands of the Hudson, where it builds its nest on the face of almost inaccessible cliffs.

Body of Caruso Lies in State; Embalmed in Italy
 Because his friends and admirers in his native Italy could not bear to think of the body of Enrico Caruso rotting away in the earth, they had him embalmed by a special process to serve it indefinitely. The corpse, the famous singer still lies in a covered casket in a mausoleum in Naples wrapped in an American cloth. Clothing on the body is changed every three years.

TIGERS TOO POWERFUL FOR CLARENDON BRONCHOS

With the second team playing a large portion of the time and scoring one of the five touchdowns made, the McLean Tigers completely out-lashed the Clarendon Broncos last Friday night in a conference game, and came home with a 33 to 0 victory.

At the opening of the game McLean received. Cunningham took the kickoff on his 5 yard line and returned it to the 30. After making two first downs, the Broncho line held and the Tigers were forced to kick. Clarendon was held for downs and kicked out on the 50. From this point the Tigers went for a touchdown with Stratton going over for the score. Stratton carried the ball around the left end for the extra point after kicking up a fumble as the attempted kick failed.

Cunningham went across the goal early in the second period, from the 11 yard line, to end the scoring for the first half. The half ended 13 to 0.

At the beginning of the second half practically an entire new team was sent in. There was no scoring done.

The first team was sent back in the fourth quarter and a scoring rampage followed. Cunningham ran 15 yards for a score, and a few minutes later Laswell went 20 yards for another. Stratton kicked both goals to put the score 27 to 0, so the entire first team was removed and sent to the showers.

The Bronchos seemed to have weakened and lost heart, and the second stringers had little difficulty going through for long gains. Following long gains by Braxton, Graham, Watson and Bogan, that had brought the ball up to the 5 yard line, Braxton went over for a score. Just before the game ended Watson broke through on a surprise play and ran 30 yards before being tackled by Clarendon secondary.

McLean made 13 first downs, gained 122 yards from scrimmage, completed the pass of seven times for 15 yards, returned punts and kickoff for 45 yards, punted four times for 90 yards scored 33 points, was tackled for 13 yards, and penalized 40 yards.

Clarendon gained 56 yards from scrimmage, completed 10 of 18 passes tried for 81 yards, returned punts and kickoffs for 10 yards, made 8 first downs, punted 4 times for 117 yards scored 0, was caught for 9 yards loss, and penalized 25 yards.

Cunningham was the best ground gainer of the evening. He carried the ball 10 times for a total gain of 105 yards. Stratton carried it 15 times for 83 yards.

The line-ups:
 McLean—Stratton, Graham, Christian, Cunningham, Finley, Kennedy, Dooke, McCarty, Chilton, King, Nicholson; subs.—Back, Watson, Bogan, Brawley, Braxton, Cupell, Overton, Wingo, Roth, Barnes, Chambers, Cash, Hess.

Referee, Gilliam; umpire, Penix; head lineman, Clark.

HIGH SCHOOL JUNIORS WIN FROM CANADIAN, 6-0

The high school junior football team went to Canadian last Thursday night, 23 strong, accompanied by their coach, Mr. McHaney, and Mr. Murdock, and won a second victory over the Canadian boys.

The Canadian team was primed for the game and was after revenge for the defeat handed them a week earlier but were unable to break through the McLean defense for enough yardage to put them across the goal.

At the beginning of the game McLean chose to receive. McCauley took the ball on his 20 yard and brought it back to the 40 before being brought down. From this point they drove down the field with the Canadian goal as their aim, making five first downs in succession to cross the touchdown line without losing the ball. Wilkerson carried the ball across from the 5 yard line for the marker on a first down play around his left end. The entire McLean backfield consisting of Moon, McCauley, Humphreys and Wilkerson, made substantial gains during the drive that caused them to be feared by the entire Canadian team during the remainder of the game.

Following the first quarter touchdown, the teams fought it out on about equal terms, each team making one dangerous threat during the second half.

Bill Webb, who had substituted for Humphreys at halfback, got loose for a long run and came very near getting away for a score a few minutes before the game was over.

Moon, who a week before had run for many long gains in the previous game, was a watched man and had the whole Canadian team on him every time he carried the ball. The field was a bit damp and the temperature low, but a nice sized crowd witnessed the game. The following boys made the trip. The first eleven named started the game: Floyd, Shelton, Wade, McCoy, Smith, Cupell, J. L. Jones, Moon, Humphreys, McCauley, Wilkerson, Gardner, Gossage, M. Jones, Webb, Galloway, McDonald, Whittenhan, Bogan, Gregory, Braxton.

Valuable Automobile Franchise now Open in McLean

Rare opportunity to share in the profits now being made by dealers for the Pontiac—General Motors' latest entry in the great low-price field

We wish to establish a Pontiac dealership in McLean immediately and invite inquiry from all interested persons. If you are prepared to invest a small amount of capital, you can start immediately to reap the big returns that have focused the eyes of the automotive industry on Pontiac dealers all over the country. Pontiac dealers in communities of this size are reporting twice as many sales as last year, and we are confident that a similar success can be duplicated in McLean by the right party.

The present Pontiac franchise consists of two lines of sixes and a line of eights. Pontiac list prices begin at $615 and enable the Pontiac dealer to compete in the low-price field where 90% of all cars are being sold at the present time. While previous automobile experience (either selling or as a dealer) is desirable, it is not essential, because the Pontiac Motor Company is prepared to render valuable advice and assistance in setting up and operating a dealership along the proper lines. Men who want to establish a permanent business of their own will recognize this as a real opportunity which should be investigated at once. Since this dealership will be established immediately, interested parties are invited to communicate with

Household Hints

By Jean Mueller

"Over the river and through the wood,
To have a first-rate play;
Hear the bells ring
Ting-a-ling-ding,
Hurrah for Thanksgiving Day."

With Thanksgiving approaching, our thoughts turn to turkey and cranberry sauce, pumpkin pies and mince meat pies, and candles.

We all love to prepare these feasts for the family reunions and special guests.

PUMPKIN PIE

- 1 cup pumpkin
 - 1 cup brown sugar
 - 1 1/2 cups hot milk
 - 2 eggs
 - 1/2 teaspoon ginger
 - Butter, salt and pepper to taste.
- Mix the brown sugar and the pumpkin together, working out all the lumps of sugar. Add the hot milk, stir and then add the eggs, ginger, butter, salt, and pepper. Bake in a moderate oven for three-quarters of an hour.

MINCE MEAT

- 8 pounds neck beef
- 8 pounds apples
- 3 packages seedless raisins
- 1 pound sultana raisins
- 3 packages currants
- 1 1/2 pounds brown sugar
- 1 pint molasses
- 2 quarts sweet cider
- 1 pint boiled cider
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 1 tablespoon pepper
- 1 tablespoon mace
- 1 tablespoon allspice

- 4 tablespoons cinnamon
 - 2 grated nutmegs
 - 1 teaspoon cloves
- Boil the neck beef for four hours. Let it stand over night in the broth. Pick out the nice meat and grind it through the next to the largest cutter. Use the broth from the meat. Grind the apples in the largest cutter. Do not cook. Mix all together and warm slowly until it is heated thoroughly. This will make over two gallons of mince meat.

CANDIED PEEL

Peel from 3 oranges or 2 lemons

- 1/2 cup water
 - 1 cup sugar
- Choose clear-skinned fruit. Remove the peel in quarters, and cut in strips. Put the peel in cold water and let come to a boil and cook for 30 minutes. Drain and put in the syrup and let it boil until it becomes transparent. Drain and roll in sugar.

A Law Every Mother Should Know and Observe Never Give Your Child An Unknown Remedy without Asking Your Doctor First

According to any doctor you ask, the only safe way is never to give your child a remedy you don't know all about, without asking him first.

When it comes to "milk of magnesia," that you know everywhere, for over 60 years, doctors have said "PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia for your child."

So—always say Phillips' when you buy. And, for your own peace of mind, see that your child gets this; the finest men know.

Shivering with Chills Burning with Fever Sure Relief for Malaria!

Don't try homemade treatments or newfangled remedies! Take that good old Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. Soon you will be yourself again, for Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic not only relieves the symptoms of Malaria, but destroys the infection itself.

The tasteless quinine in Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic kills the Malarial infection in the blood while the iron it contains builds up the blood to overcome the effects of the disease and fortify against further attack.

Rid Yourself of Kidney Poisons

DO you suffer burning, scanty or too frequent urination, backache, headache, dizziness, loss of energy, leg pains, swellings and puffiness under the eyes? Are you tired, nervous—feel all unstrung and don't know what is wrong?

Then give some thought to your kidneys. Be sure they function properly for functional kidney disorder permits excess waste to stay in the blood, and to poison and upset the whole system.

DOANS PILLS

EVERYDAY NEW YORK

BY O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK—Thoughts while strolling: If Galen Bogue and Gil Hoag swapped names nobody would notice it.

Ditto Homer Crof and Comer Hoy. Winter scene: A chestnut vendor against the library wall wearing a straw hat. Edward G. Robinson knows how to give a smile a sunburst effect.

Nino Martini sounds like skipping down the steps. They say Elbert Hubbard was first to call them movies. Add human jumping beans: Col. Joe Hartfield, Herbert B. Swope and Jules Glanzer, if Bud Kelland ever turned to newspaper paragraphing, he'd make a lot of us look silly.

More towns with windshield wiper names: Ishpeming, Mich., and Wenatchee, Wash. If they don't get that Hariman bank building fixed up I'll scream. Jaunty hat tilters: Leslie Howard, Will Hays and Clive Brook. A coffee brown derby or so here and there. Al Smith is entitled to all b. d. rights.

Study in ubiquity: Beth Leary. No other sound like that ringing crash of ten pins in a bowling alley. Clara Bell Walsh suggests a female Roman Senator. Bill Hearst is fattening up. Fritz Kreisler strolling out of the Park Lane. Wonder how he and Heifetz get along. Look alike: Bruce Barton and Jay Flippen. F. P. A. is a sucker for bright yellow ties.

The passing of the 82-year-old Brevoort leaves only the venerable Murray Hill as a reminder of a hotel hospitality that has been regimented into a numbered and ticketed efficiency. The Brevoort, until a few years ago, was thoroughly continental, even to a concierge on a tiny platform and an ascenseur self operated by push buttons. The manager peacocked the foyer like an operatic tenor bursting to sing, sporting an imperial, lapel flower, gray spats and distributing jack-knife bows to arrivals and to the departing. Every employee spoke French. The hotel comes down to make way for a nine-storied apartment house.

I had a note from Bonita the other day. The glamorous Bonita of the famous "Wine, Women and Song" show that toured the provinces year after year. Out in the tall grass, Bonita was our symbol of high life—the champagne, caviar and decollete whirl of New York, Paris and London. Like so many former trouperes, she is in Hollywood, playing character parts in the movies now and then, rocking contentedly on a bungalow porch and dreaming of days ago.

Too, the town has a Maxim's again. This time it's in the East 50's. The original Maxim's, of course, is still at the red fronted stand on that short broad sweep to the Madeline that is the rue Royale. And a ghost of former glory, New York's Maxim's of 20 years ago was in the West 30's, near Broadway, a night whirl spinning tinsel tarantara for wandering yokels. There was a legend its clientele included swarthy rascals who shipped ladies down to Rio. And wash room boys who provided "busts in the arm."

Sid Solomon's exit from the Casino in Central Park will end a widely headlined feud of long standing. The pale 160-pound restaurateur was long a thorn in the collective side of the park commission—a thorn they were unable to pluck. When he departed it was largely because doctors warned him hospitalization and a long rest were imperative. Sid belonged to that very intimate circle that called Jimmy Walker "Jim." A dazzling upshoot of the Walker fireworks.

The neatest theatrical fortune since the Kocusts began to eat falls to the astute Brock Pemberton. The year's run of his production, "Personal Appearance," is said to have netted considerably more than $100,000 for himself alone. Pemberton rarely goes off half cocked in his productions. His flops are few. He may go playless for three seasons in a row and when he gets going takes his time. Not even Helasco excels him in the art of casting.

I'm now one of the sour-visaged misanthropes carrying a cold drunch for the beam boys—the rosy fellows, all sweetness and light, who backslap all the film-flaming I've suffered has been by their ilk. The grumpiest, rudest person I know is the scowling small town banker who grudgingly took my cash and made the only absolutely safe investment I've ever had.

Member of my club: An excited Jay walker rebuked at 44th street screamed sack at the crossing cop. "You can't talk to me like I could be a citizen if you would!"

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

Will Rogers' Memorial.

SANTA MONICA.—Where I sit writing this, I can see his home across the canyon. There's still sunlight on the top, but the folds in the friendly hills are turning purple.

The most typical humorist since Mark Twain, the most beloved commoner since Abraham Lincoln, the most popular private citizen since Benjamin Franklin, his fame is an everlasting rock. Why, then, a monument of our fashioning to one who was a national institution whilst he lived, who became a national tradition almost before the breath left his body?

Nevertheless it is fitting that on his birthday this country should launch this memorial. For to help perpetuate the bright glory of that name is an obligation we owe to ourselves—a testimony of gratitude for a man amongst us who poured out so freely the precious gifts of sanity and sweetness, generosity and gallantry, a philosophy that was kindly, a wit that was salty but never was sour. You gave us so much, Bill, we're just figuring on paying a little something back on account.

Signs of Normalcy. WE MUST be headed for normalcy. I'm back on somebody's sucker list. As a charter member of the original mother lodge, I belong there. I'm a boob Ben Adhem whose name led all the rest.

Today I received, not a list of selected foreign bonds—that'll come later—but a prospectus about a gorgeous gold mining proposition with all the regular by-products guaranteed, such as quicksilver, lead, copper, molybdenum and, I think, amalgam fillings.

Sorry I can't invest in this new bonanza. But I'm saving up to go into an equally timely enterprise. It's a buggy-whip factory, and on the side we're going to turn out flintlock muskets for the United States army.

Selecting a Candidate. I'VE found out who the forgotten man is. It's any Republican officeholder above the grade of assistant state geologist who hasn't been proposed by self or friends for next year's Presidential nomination.

On every side, disinterested patriots feverishly suggest some deathless name that nobody outside the immediate family ever heard of and, lo, a national figure whose fame doesn't cover as much territory as a milk route is in the running. Almost anybody who can read and write appears to be eligible, especially if he lithographs well, and, if he has also the firm yet clinging handshake, his stock goes right up.

The concern is for a candidate only. When it comes to a platform, the Democrats can lend them one which has been used hardly any, if at all.

Return to Prohibition. ALL else aside, some of us contend there were two main underlying reasons why this country went "dry" the way it did go. One reason was brewers. The other was distillers.

If a person of dubious repute opened a saloon in a neighborhood already over-provided, where, in order to live, he must break the liquor laws, there was, too often, a type of brewer ready to put up for the license and a type of distiller to help out with the rest. Basically, it was the inarticulate resentment of orderly people against such practices which plunged us into the ghastly legislative error miscalled prohibition.

Now, with that mistake so nearly cured, one hears it directly charged that certain producers of alcoholic drinks are greedily back at the same old tricks.

Well, the next time the people of this country vote liquor out—and there'll be a next time, unless the sane men in the industry can curb the offenders within their own ranks—it'll be for keeps, no matter how deplorable the results in bootlegging and graft and crime and corruption.

You can tell a lunk-headed profiteer as far as you can see—but you can't tell him anything else.

Upholding the Constitution. SO HEATED is the controversy over the impertinent Constitution that professional politicians are all agog, many going out of one severe gog right into another, accompanied by chills, fever and high blood pressure.

Everywhere you look, you see disputants, all lathered up with excitement, who wouldn't recognize that immortal document if they ran into it sitting in the middle of the big road, laying eggs.

I am offering a suitable prize—namely, Grimm's Fairy Tales in words of one syllable—to the first national committeeman, Democratic or Republican, who can tell offhand whether the Constitution starts off, "When in the course of human events," or, "Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party."

Besides, I'd like to know myself. IRVIN S. COBB. © North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.—WNU Service.

IRON DOG GROWLS The use to which the phototube, popularly known as the electric eye, is put are literally numberless. One of the most peculiar is used by a practical-joker to give voice to an iron dog on his lawn. When a visitor approaches he is startled by growls, for on his approach he interrupts a beam of light focused on an electric eye and that sets off the vocal mechanism—a big, raucous buzzer.—Oil Power.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed. How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs is one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins. Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the system. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds. Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

"THERE'S a lot of good baking in that 10¢ can of Calumet," observes Mrs. Hickey. "It's worth more than a dime any day!" "Of course, with my big family I get the full-pound can—and it's only 25¢ now. As long as I bake, Calumet will be in my pantry!" "Grandfather Rommel, who was a baker for 40 years, says: 'Calumet takes the guesswork out of the job nowadays.'" "LOOK AT THE NEW CALUMET CAN! A simple twist... and the Easy-Opening Top lifts off. No delay, no spilling, no broken fingernails!" "WHAT makes Calumet so dependable? Why is it different from other baking powders? Calumet combines two distinct leavening actions. A quick action for the mixing bowl—set free by liquid. A slower action for the oven—set free by heat. This Double-Action produces perfect leavening." "All Calumet prices are lower! Calumet is now selling at the lowest prices in its history... The regular price of the Full-Pound Can is now only 25¢! And ask to see the new 10¢ can—a lot of good baking for a dime—with Calumet, the Double-Acting Baking Powder. A product of General Foods."

Fifty-two freshmen met at the gymnasium Tuesday of last week for a party. In addition to the students, eight room mothers and three teachers were present. New games were played and everyone enjoyed a frolicsome party. Prizes were awarded to the winners of several of the games. Delicious refreshments were served by the room mothers after the games, and everyone went away looking forward to the time when they could have another party.

CHAPEL

At the eleven o'clock hour Tuesday morning Bro. Goff had charge of the chapel program. A very interesting and entertaining program was given. Mrs. Goff, Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. Lochridge gave a vocal trio number. Willie Louelle Cobb gave two piano numbers, and Bro. Goff brought a very interesting message on "Looking at the Mud of Life or Looking at the Stars of Life."

HOME ECONOMICS CLUB MEETS

The Home Economics Club met Tuesday at the home of Mollita Turman. The house was called to order by the president and the roll called. The club voted to enlist four new members, Thelma Jo Gray, Runelle Grigsby, Charles Cunningham and Enid McMullen.

The club was divided into two groups and plans were made for an enrollment campaign in which the two sides will work against each other for the enrollment of the largest number of new members. When the contest is over, the losing side will entertain the winning side with a social. Other business was transacted and a short program followed.

A short talk on home economics for boys was given by Ermadel Floyd. A reading, "Opportunity," was given by Mabel Back, and a reading by Jessie Mae Lynch.

After the program, a social hour was enjoyed by the following girls: Margie Lochridge, Enid McMullen, Wilda Joyce McMullen, Jessie Mae Lynch, Mabel Back, Charles Cunningham, Runelle Grigsby, Dorothy Sitter, Georgia Colebank, Thelma Jo Gray, Ermadel Floyd, Mollita Turman, and the sponsor, Miss Mallow.

The Road to Better Health

By Dr. Robert Ambrose Elliott

LEG DISEASES

It would take a very big book to hold all that could be written about leg diseases. Leg eruptions and leg swelling usually occur at the same time, and these conditions indicate very poor blood circulation. The veins fail to do their part in conveying the impure blood back into the general circulation.

Leg Circulation "Up-hill"

Venous circulation in the legs is an entirely "up-hill" process. The only place in the human body where valves are found in the veins, is in the legs. These valves are just like other mechanical valves—they are apt to get out of order. When they do, the law of gravity functions here, and the venous blood seeks its lowest level. The tissues become infiltrated with this impure blood, and being inactive, it causes congestion and swelling. The impurities cause the eruptions. With this unhealthy condition obtaining, it is very easy to create an open sore on the leg, by simply bumping up against some obstruction sufficient to break the skin.

Treatment of Leg Sores

When this occurs, there are two things that one can do. Either go to bed and stay there until the sore completely heals, or wear the following bandage which is much in the nature of a leg cast. Tear up an old bed sheet into strips not over three inches wide. Sew two of these strips together, making one long strip 14 feet or more long. Roll it into a bandage roll. Wash the leg and sore with soap and water or sterilized oil, and wipe dry. Now, take the bandage roll, and start at the toes and wind it on evenly and smoothly around the foot and ankle. Avoid wrinkles, keep foot straight out and perpendicular to the leg shaft. Cover entire foot and heel; do not leave any exposed skin surface, and keep winding the bandage on with an even pressure right up the leg, and stop at the knee. You may reinforce the bandage with short pieces of adhesive tape, or you may paint the entire bandage with a thin starch or flour water mixture. Or, if you wish, you can get what is known as Unnas' Paste from your druggist and apply it over the bandage in the same way. Change this dressing twice a week while swelling prevails, or if the sore (if you have one) is running, apply the dressing early in the morning before the leg has a chance to swell. With this dressing, you can walk and work, and be as active as you please, and it will soon overcome your leg trouble.

News advertising pays.

ADVENTURERS' CLUB

Hello, Everybody!

"Death's Messenger"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter.

PUT on your shudder bumpers, fellow adventurers. Here's a yarn so weird and terrifying that you half expect old Doctor Fu Manchu to come walking into the picture.

You might look for something of this sort to happen in Oriental fiction, but to a South Boston housewife and her children in their own home. But take my word for it, boys and girls, it did happen—happened to Mrs. Kathryn V. Shine of South Boston.

And here she is to tell us all about it. The Shine family had just finished their evening meal one evening last August, when the doorbell rang. Kathryn Shine opened the door and was confronted by an old man who asked her if she had any chores he might do to earn a night's lodging.

And when Kathryn told him she didn't have any chores, his face took on a pained, disappointed expression that she told him she'd see if she couldn't put him up for the night.

It Was a Queer Old Duck They Sheltered.

Kathryn asked her husband about it, and he told her to do whatever she thought best. So Kathryn asked the old man in and prepared him a hot meal, which he thanked her almost too profusely.

After the dinner dishes were cleared away they all went into the living room to listen to the radio. The old man, by this time, seemed to have made himself pretty much at home.

He even took off his shoes—a thing that Kathryn didn't like very much. She said nothing for the old fellow was obviously tired.

As the evening wore on it developed that the old man was something of a religious crank. He talked ramblingly and incoherently on religious subjects, and took especial interest in the youngest of Kathryn's seven children, a fair-haired little boy.

The old fellow kept repeating over and over again that he was "marked for God."

In fact, he said it so often that Kathryn began to be disturbed by it, and drawing her husband aside told him to lock the man in his room when he went to bed that night.

Along about 11 o'clock, Kathryn had to leave. She had a job that occupied her from midnight until morning, and it was time to start for it.

Kathryn Gets an Unusual Score.

As she was leaving, she picked up a card she saw lying on the kitchen table. She didn't look at it then—didn't think of it until after she had arrived at the place where she worked.

When she did look at it, though, she almost screamed aloud. For crudely printed on one side of the card were the words, "Messenger of Death."

Back to her mind, then, came the queer old man's repeated assertion that her youngest child had been marked for God. She had to get back home—immediately—to protect her baby from this mad fanatic. But how to do it?

That was the question. There was no telephone in her house. The street cars weren't running at that time of the night, and she had no money with which to hire a taxi.

The only thing left to her was make the long journey afoot. She started out on a dead run, only slowing to a walk when she was too winded to run another step.

She had gone but a few blocks when more trouble arose to add itself to her already crushing burden. As she was nearing Columbus Circle, two rough-looking men in a sports, baby blue roadster, drew up and accosted her.

She thought she was going to have trouble with them at first, and asked them not to bother her. But one of the men looked at her sharply and said: "Look here—you're in a jam, ain't you? Well, get in here and we'll take you wherever YOU want to go."

Kathryn still didn't like the looks of the men, but she just HAD to get home. She climbed in the car and it started off. Hurriedly, she told the men what it was that was worrying her, and to her dismay saw one of them pat his chest where the bulge of an automatic showed under his armpit.

"Lady," he said, "if that guy has done anything to your baby, you won't need to call no police. We'll take care of him, pronto."

This Anti-Climax Was Almost Too Much.

It was just too much for Kathryn—first, the life of her baby in danger, and now to be thrown in with a pair of gangsters who threatened to turn her house into a shambles.

When they arrived at her home she pleaded with them to wait outside while she went in to see if everything was all right. They agreed. With her heart in her mouth, Kathryn hurried into the house. To her intense relief, the baby was sleeping peacefully in his crib—the old man safely in bed in his room.

Kathryn locked him in, and resolved that she wouldn't leave the house until he was safely on his way the next morning.

She went outside then—to find the gangsters that everything was all right, and added that she hoped God would bless them for the good turn they had done her. Both the thugs looked sort of stunned when she said that. Finally one of them smiled a bit out of one side of his mouth and said:

"Lady, it's a long time since anybody asked God to bless us. But thanks, anyway. Maybe we'll be needing it before the night's over."

"And," says Kathryn, "maybe they did, too. Because the next day I read of the holdup of a big Rhode Island bank, committed by two men who got away in a baby blue sport roadster."

Locksmiths' Art Shown in Rouen Museum Exhibit

An unusual museum is situated in this ancient capital of Normandy, writes a Rouen, France, United Press correspondent. It is a museum containing specimens of the art of the iron worker and locksmith through the ages.

The collection was started with the acquisition of a few curious keys by a native of Rouen, Jean Louis Le Secq, and then became a life passion with him and with his son, Henri, who continued the work after his father's death.

The museum includes primitive surgical instruments, strong boxes with complicated locks, ancient iron work signs and numerous religious relics. One of the latter is an elaborate crosier, or manger, surmounted by a crown which hung on a chain from the roof of a church. On it are the words:

"This was given by Charles Le Jeune and Marie Briault, his wife, both of this said parish, and for whom a Te Deum shall be chanted every Sunday as long as the crosier shall last, 1743."

Three large cases at the museum contain only English keys of all varieties, including one which bears the royal monogram and the words "Horse Guards."

Much of the collection in the museum dates back to the early days when every worker belonged to a trade guild, and before he could become a master of his craft he had to produce a masterpiece. Because of this, many of the exhibits are of particular interest from the standpoint of art and ingenuity.

Evening Silhouette Goes Classic

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AS THE exquisite and lovely evening gowns which our creators of fashion have designed for the coming winter social season, go on parade, one is forcibly reminded of art and sculpture, of the paintings of old masters or of figures in classic drapes and pleats sculptured in marble or colorfully frescoed ancient palaces and cathedrals of ancient Rome.

It is in these new fashions for formal occasions which are to grace opera and ballroom and smart functions galore, as if Italian saints were descending from old master paintings, in flowing robes of rich velvets that are griddled and jeweled in dazzling splendor. Then again it would seem as if Greek goddesses were stepping down from their marble pedestals in garments that are draped and pleated along sculptural lines of grace and beauty. And again oriental princesses clad in harem-shirted costumes with softly draped and richly jeweled blouses seem to have come to life in an array of gorgeous splendor. Verily "art in dress" holds sway this season.

The soft crepes, the supple superb velvets, the tissue-like, glamorous gold and silver cloths, the diaphanous chiffons and dainty silk sheers, all lend themselves beguilingly to the present movement in costume design which calls for floating scarfs, huge wing sleeves, and fluttering side pleatings that go all the way around the skirt or are captured in cascades of exceeding grace.

At all times in these classic gowns the feeling of simplicity is maintained, even though a resplendent note be sounded in richly jeweled girdles or golden sandals or sumptuous costume jewelry. See the group of evening gowns that are herewith illustrated and be convinced that the very latest after-dark fashions are playing up sophisticated yet classic simplicity to the nth degree of perfection.

The eye-impelling gown to the left which so unmistakably bespeaks inspiration of the Italian renaissance is a Jeanne Lanvin creation. This glamorous robe is of magenta crepe, its rich beautiful tone matching up to the dark vibrant coloring in old master paintings. It is full, falling in generous folds starting from massed shirrings. The wide girdle and arm-lets are of enamel gold kid. The rich magenta coloring of this dress speaks eloquently of the present color trend, which stresses the rarely beautiful dark reds and purples and green that have come down to us through the ages via Italian art.

Hammered silver cloth fashions the adorable gown centered in the group. The glittering fabric falls with exquisite grace from the gathered waist-line and is draped in a paron lamé. The wide belt worked in multi-colored jewels is a climaxing touch of artistry. Silver sandals are worn. The graceful wrap which this silver-gowned lady has in her hand is of royal blue velvet. It is fashioned with a surplice that ties at the back.

To the right in the picture, sculptor-like draping distinguishes a Grecian gown of classic beauty and simplicity. Shown gray silk that looks like wool is edged with embroidered beads worked in coral, gold and turquoise beads.

Style notes which tune in to the classic trend tell of low-shouldered Grecian sandals such as the smart Parisienne makes delight in wearing. The sari scarf is another item of interest. It is of tissue metal-soft weaves and sometimes it is richly embroidered with sparkling sequins.

METAL CLOTH

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Glittering silk lame makes this long-sleeved dinner gown. It is typical of the trend toward elegant fabric that is fashioned with utmost simplicity. The influence of the Far East is traced in the tall turban also fashioned of silk lame and the long-streamered sash in a vivid hue, that falls in a cluster of fine side pleats to the hemline of the skirt. Note the new low-heeled sandals.

FUR BLOUSE IS NEW WRINKLE IN STYLE

The fur blouse is a new wrinkle in the fashion picture.

They're used fur for everything else this season, from coat sleeves to hats, and now the fur blouse emerges as a swish necessary for the velvet cocktail fall suit.

It's done in white galyak, with a black velvet ascot and belt. The blouse is a brief peplum style, with short sleeves and a yoke.

Matching it is a white galyak top-coat, with breast pockets and a belt, and a little Cossack turban of matching fur.

Nothing could be more effective for those in-between occasions when you can't wear formal evening clothes, but still want a slightly dressy costume.

The fur vest, of black galyak, also is seen with some of the season's newest suits. It's effective with suits in the new renaissance tones of wine and green, with matching black accessories.

And if you want to do the thing in brown, you may have a matching muff of galyak.

Small fur ascots, styled to match the fur turbans and muffs of the season, are seen about town.

Elaborate Trimmings Now Feature Shoes for Evening

The trend in evening shoes is toward elaborate effects, according to a recent report from Paris. They not only show original shapes and graceful straps, inspired by Greek sandals, but are made of unusual materials.

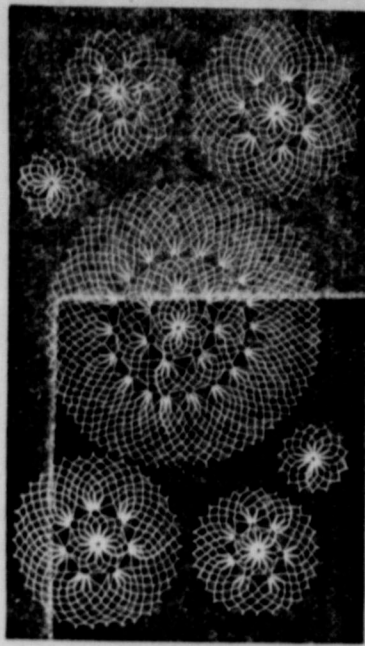

One house is showing Salome shoes in a glass-like acetate fabric from Colombia.

Velvets Hold Sway

For dresses, coats, suits and hats noncrushable velvets will hold sway in all forms.

World Wheat Supply Is Cut 330,000,000 Bushels

This year's world wheat supply will be about 330,000,000 bushels less than in 1934-35, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics report on world wheat prospects.

Production is estimated at about 2,430,000,000 bushels and the world carryover outside of Russia at 800,000,000 bushels, or a total of about 4,230,000,000 bushels. Production last year was 3,450,000,000 bushels and carryover 1,100,000,000 bushels, or a total of about 4,550,000,000 bushels. The short crops this year will reduce world carryover by the end of this season to between 400,000,000 and 500,000,000 bushels, or not much more than normal world carryover prior to 1928.

Profit and Loss

There is a material difference between "results" and "consequences."

IT WORKED FOR ME

Women should take only liquid laxatives

MORE people could feel fine, be fit and regular, if they would only follow the rule of doctors and hospitals in relieving constipation.

Never take any laxative that is harsh in action. Or one, the dose of which can't be exactly measured. Doctors know the danger if this rule is violated. They use liquid laxatives, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all.

Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why it should be a liquid like Syrup Pepsin.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if it doesn't give you absolute relief, if it isn't a joy and comfort in the way it overcomes biliousness due to constipation, your money back.

Beware Coughs from common colds That Hang On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with anything less than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble to aid nature to soothe and heal the inflamed membranes as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, your druggist is authorized to guarantee Creomulsion and to refund your money if you are not satisfied with results from the very first bottle. Get Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

BEAT SHAMROCK, BEAT SHAMROCK, BEAT SHAMROCK!

By Mack

The cry "Beat Shamrock!" that has been on the tongues and ringing in the ears of every McLean inhabitant, is to become a reality tomorrow evening on Tiger Field.

The game starts at 7:30 and promises to be the most thrilling and hard fought game ever to be witnessed on Tiger Field.

A McLean fan's vision of the game runs as follows: Shamrock kicks. Stratton takes the ball on his 10 yard line, advances it to the Irishmen's 40. Christian goes through the through the left side of his line for 5 yards and a first down. Stratton is brought down on the 12 yard line and Cunningham goes over. Stratton kicks goal for extra point.

Shamrock receives and is downed on the 15 yard line. A line play fails to gain. The kick is blocked by the entire McLean line and Kennedy falls on the ball on the 8 yard line. Stratton goes over for the second touchdown during the first three minutes of play. And so the game continues through the 60 minutes of playing time and the final score is 42 to 0.

A Shamrock fan's vision runs quite the contrary. He sees the fleet feet of McIntyre carrying the ball 60 and 80 yards for score after score. Never, in the history of football has a class B game attracted so much attention or created so much excitement. People have allowed their imagination to run riot and some have imagined things and told them as truths.

Both teams are reported to be in excellent condition and will be prepared to put their full strength into the game.

Both coaches have been working behind closed gates practically all week and are apt to have a flock of deceptive plays to let loose.

Preparation has been made to seat two thousand spectators, and standing room is provided for an equal number. Everyone is hoping for fair and warmer weather.

The bands and pep squads have worked all year with this game in view, and have some picturesque stunts for between halves.

McLEAN BOY ON AMARILLO TEAM

Amarillo, Nov. 20.—A McLean boy is "going places" with the Amarillo College Badger football team, junior college champions of Texas last year and the year preceding.

George McCarty, who starred with the 1934 McLean Tiger squad, has become one of the mainstays of the Badger force this season. McCarty is one of the sturdy freshman recruits who in recent games have spectacularly made good in carrying on when injuries and illness riddled the roster.

Alternating at left end with Jim Bassett, hard-blocking end formerly of the Amarillo Golden Sandstorm McCarty found himself forced three weeks ago to play the position alone. Bassett fell ill, and McCarty was left to carry on unrelieved. "George came through in great style," Coach Winfield Nicklaus of the Badgers declared. "McCarty plays a good end, and breaks through for a lot of tackles. He looked fine in the Wayland game and in the scrap with Lubbock Tech's Picadors. He is fast, and charges low. He shows good training, and has certainly proven to be a valuable man to us." This is McCarty's first year of college football. He is one of four "survivors" from a field of a dozen candidates for the end position on the Badger squad.

V-8 LEADERSHIP

ON OCTOBER 31 of last year, Henry Ford announced his intention to build a million Ford V-8s in 1935. We are pleased to report that this goal was reached in exactly ten months instead of a full year.

One million cars and trucks is an impressive total. But figures by themselves mean nothing. It is what they represent that counts. Selling a V-8 at a low price has brought a new kind of automobile within reach of the people. Producing it has provided steady work for hundreds of thousands of men in the Ford plants, in associated industries and on the farm.

These million Ford V-8 cars and trucks have helped to make things better all around. In the first ten months of 1935 the Ford Motor Company paid out in the United States alone, $140,119,326.00 in wages and $523,111,389.00 for materials.
