DISRESPECT

By O. L. D. Timer

A young smartaleck boy was boarding at the dormitory while he was attending Polytechnic college at Fort Worth, and he thought he would pull a stunt, so he split one end of a match and placed a paper in it and wrote on it "Respect old age," and stuck it up in the butter. But before the faculty got through with him he fully realized he had shown disrespect. Now I like old butter and I don't show any disrespect for it until I find a hair that has turned gray and then respect ceases to be a virtue.

Time was when children respected their parents, but only the other day I heard a girl threaten to leave home if her parents didn't mind her and respect her. I can remember when the old folks were not afraid of the children, but now lots of parents are afraid to tell the young folks not to go to the show or to a dance for fear that they would throw a tantrum so violent that they would be compelled to acquiesce and then be disrespected and conquered by the tantrum thrower.

Disrespect and disregard generally start in the home and if not corrected by the parents leads to disrespect for the law, the government, honesty, truth, virtue, and eventually to disrespect for religion and the Bible and then you have disrespect developed to the nth power, and it generally terminates in a tragedy. Sometimes man inflicts the penalty for disrespect, sometimes nature inflicts the penalty, but the penalty of all penalties to be avoided is inflicted after we have enjoyed the pleasures of life for a season.

Disrespect for the human stomach is the most universally practiced form of all, and affects the female as well as the male of the species, and has about the same effect on the anatomy of both. Some folks seem to be under the impression that their stomachs were made for a dumping ground. This way of letting the nerves of taste has unbounded sway over the stomach is anatomical class legislation and shows rank disrespect for the stomach, and if the stomach throws a Boston tea party and says, "No taxation without representation," you can't blame it for retaliation if its only recourse.

When you go into a crowded court room where the air is already taxed to its limit to perform its proper function, and where there are women there for reasons beyond their control and the blood flows through their lungs as pure as the driven snow; then you light your cigarettes and cigars and add insult to injury by compelling them to breathe your second hand smoke, you are showing disrespect of the rankiest sort and allowing no recourse. I have seen the air so permeated with tobacco smoke that I would go into the men's lavatory in order to get a wholesome breath of air. To a person who never smoked, tobacco smoke is just as offensive as any other kind of smoke, or a little more offensive. Politeness is the cheapest thing on earth, and a man who will compel a woman to breathe his second hand smoke without recourse is absolutely and disrespectfully impolite.

The bootlegger and the gambler set shining examples of disrespect and disregard for the law, but the people who patronize, protect and uphold them are one or more grades below them, for the gambler and the bootlegger do get the price of bread and meat out of their nefarious and diabolical business, but the patron only gets degradation, misery, torture and pauperism. Disrespect and disregard for the law must be destroyed and respect and honor must be enthroned in the minds of our people before we can cut down our yearly crime budget of $12,000,000,000, and eliminate one of the major causes of this depression.

Now if I haven't expressed myself I will have to go by freight.

Tigers Lose Shamrock Game to Irishmen

The McLean Tigers lost the Shamrock game at that place Friday night, with a score of 13 to 6.

The game was for bi-sectional honors and was witnessed by one of the largest crowds seen at a Shamrock game.

Shamrock will now play Panhandle for district honors; however, at the time this is written, the Shamrock team has been challenged on account of an alleged ineligible player.

Shamrock played McLean to a 6 to 0 score earlier in the season, the first game to win in four years. Four years ago they played a 6 to 6 tie, the next year 14 to 0 in favor of McLean, the next year 28 to 0, and last year 52 to 0.

Wonder why they call it idle gossip? There's nothing busier.

Charity, unduly prolonged, destroys manhood. Nature never intended that we should get something for nothing.

The argument against prohibition was that the law was violated. So are the ten commandments and all other laws: maybe we had better repeal all of them.

McLean has a chance of being the first town in the Panhandle to have landscaped entrances on the highway, and the Lions Club is to be congratulated on taking up this matter.

We must call our readers' attention, again, to the fact that the editor's opinions are confined to this column. We have nothing to do with the opinions of our columnists and others who write for The News.

We are glad to publish others' opinions, but we take no credit or otherwise, from their expressions.

Today marks the beginning of the annual nation-wide Christmas seal campaign that is conducted by the 2,000 affiliated tuberculosis associations of the United States.

Although the death rate from this disease has been cut 50% the past few years, it is still something to be reckoned with and the income from the sale of seals is put to mighty good use.

Amarillo writers mentioned the lack of hospitality of their city toward visitors last week. This is something most any town could take to heart. We have all seen banquets and the like where even the members of the reception committee were more intent upon getting a seat at the speakers table than taking care of visitors. Most, if not all, of such things are the result of thoughtlessness, but at the same time it makes an impression on visitors that is sometimes hard to erase.

The first Thanksgiving day was held for the purpose of giving thanks for the health of the colonists.

We have a great deal more to be thankful for today, even with a depression, than did our Pilgrim fathers, yet we do not as a whole celebrate the day in the original fashion.

The first Thanksgiving day was a community affair; now-a-days we leave it up to a few church members, and most of the observance is done Wednesday night, so that the day may be celebrated as a holiday.

Most of us would do well to stop and contemplate the things we have to be thankful for, several times during the year.

We like to pity ourselves going through the depression, but statistics show that the people of Texas spent $15,281,000 for amusements alone last year, only eight other states spending more. Texas had 1,257 amusement places listed, more than all other states with the exception of five. Our people spent $240,000 in dance halls last year. Add to this the money spent for booze, racing athletic events, cosmetics, tobacco, etc., and the sum would stagger the imagination of people living only a few decades ago.

So far, in many cases, the depression is making us do without the things we want, but not many of the things we need. Our forefathers would have thought they were in mighty good times if they could have enjoyed a fraction of the things that we consider as necessities today.

Now is the time of the year to order seed and nursery catalogues and plan your winter and spring plantings. State extension officials say to pull up weeds on your land, and if they have tiny, bead-like knots on the roots, do not plant trees on the land, for the knots are caused by tiny worms, too small to be seen with the naked eye, but will kill the trees.

Another caution is to not make the mistake of planting trees that are not adapted to the climate. This advice is for the man who wants to make every planting count; but for many of us who like to experiment, without regard to possible profits, there are a number of new things that may later prove adaptable to this county.

Proper planning does more than any other one thing connected with planting to insure pleasure and profit through the years, and a little time spent now in selecting and planning will save much time next spring.

She's DUMB!

It is dumb stupidity for any woman to have bad breath. It offends others—ruins you socially. The worst of it is you, yourself, never know when you have it. But you can be sure that you won't have it by gargling with Listerine. It instantly ends halitosis—improves mouth hygiene, and checks infection.

We Are Thankful

We are thankful for the blessings enjoyed today and for the promise of better things to come.

We are glad to live where we can call everyone neighbor and where sympathy and understanding abound.

There is no better place to live than in the small community where everyone knows everyone else, and despite our differences of opinion, which are but natural after all, we are glad to be friendly with everyone.

This paper stands for the better things of life for our own people, and we are glad that our lot is cast in this community, in this county, in this state, and in this grand old nation of ours. We would not swap communities with anyone on the face of the earth.

We extend thanks to all our readers, advertisers and friends who so generously help us in our battle for the right things for the community. May next Thanksgiving Day find us safely out of the depression and well on the way to prosperity—not too great a prosperity—but enough to let us face the world with confidence and courage.

DAILY THANKSGIVING

By Juanita Brooks
The Pilgrims of old set this day to give thanks to God for their weary way.
To praise and bless Him who had been so kind,
And to bring God nearer in their hearts and minds.

TIGERS LOSE TO IRISHMEN

The battling McLean Tigers were defeated in a hard fought battle on Denver Field at Shamrock on Nov. 23. The teams were evenly matched and the game was interesting from the starting whistle until the concluding one. The score of 13-6 was a surprise to many fans.

TIGERETTES USE SEMAPHORE SIGNALS

The Tigerettes used the Boy Scout semaphore signals in the between-the-half stunt at the game last Friday night. The pep squad was preceded onto the field by the McLean band. The Tigerettes marched onto the field in the formations of "M" and "S."

S. S. LESSON

By Rev. Cecil G. Goff
Pastor First Baptist Church

THE CHRISTIAN AS WITNESS

Lesson text, 1 Thessalonians 1:1-10. Golden text, Acts 1:8.

The last command of the Master, before He left this world to remain, until He returns again, at the right hand of God, was that we were to be witnesses for Him. The Master knew what it would take to win the world. It will take just the thing He commanded us to do—witness. It seems that Christianity of these latter days does not yet know the lesson concerning witnessing that Christ commanded, and that the business world has long since taken hold upon. The best advertising that any business concern can put out is the statement of a satisfied customer. What more is the witnessing for our Christian religion?

It is not at all difficult to find satisfied customers for almost anything on the market. One would naturally expect to find great numbers of satisfied customers for well made and legitimate products. Not only these, but for any product of trickery or valueless remedy there are numbers who are willing and ready for their names to be used as satisfied customers. And it is said that every satisfied customer means two new customers. But how often does one find satisfied Christians who are anxious that their names be used in the daily print in advertising the perfect and complete satisfaction that comes from true service of God?

There are millions of nominal Christians who would tell one, upon being questioned, that they are satisfied with their particular beliefs about God and Jesus Christ. But they never volunteer to tell any one. If a neighbor gets the influenza, a bad corn, or a peculiar ache about the body, there are dozens of helpful friends with dozens of remedies which they know or think will give relief. There are uncounted remedies for the physical ills of life. But when a heart is heavy with spiritual ills, when the mind is troubled with the perplexing problems of life, how seldom it is that one opens his heart to point out the complete satisfaction that abounds there through the love and service of the Master. Christians will very often witness for the patent medicines on the market and be extremely silent about the Christ who has done so much for the world and possibly for them.

How peculiar men are. If continual witness was necessary as proof of one's relationship with God, most of us would be in mighty poor standing, especially if that witness had to equal our recommendations for things of material value.
In writing to the church at Thessalonica, Paul commends them highly for their witnessing for Christ. There are three things to be especially noticed in the lesson text. First, Paul says that the Gospel of Christ took hold of them not in word only, but in power and in the Holy Ghost.

There is a secret that is often missed when one is considering the establishment of a right relationship between himself and God. There are too many men today who count themselves Christians who have taken to themselves the commands of Christ in word only. Jesus told Nicodemus that he must be born again, that he must be born of the Spirit the same as he had been born of the flesh. Jesus offered no substitutes as a pathway to God. There is only one. It comes with power, and by the Holy Spirit. The writer recently pointed out to a man the surrender necessary to become a Christian. His answer was, "A man sure would have to be born again to do that." He was not far from understanding. Becoming a follower of Christ is more than a matter of words, more than a matter of self will.

The second thing is that the Thessalonian Christians gave up their idols. The Master once said that a man could not serve God and Mammon at the same time. He would unquestionably serve one or the other. If a man is going to hold to the idol of his worldly possessions by thinking more of his money, his property, his family, his business, his pleasure than of Christ, he is not surrendered to Christ. By their fruits shall ye know them. When the world realizes that its relationship with God is more important than its relationship with men, salvation and prosperity are near at hand. The rich young ruler thought more of his treasure than he did of following Christ, and he went away sorrowing. The world and many nominal Christians are going away sorrowing because they are not willing to surrender all to Christ.

Third, because of the complete and spiritual surrender of the Thessalonian Christians they were examples to men throughout a great territory. Only a surrendered Christian can testify as a satisfied follower of Christ. This is true because only the true followers of the Master receive His blessing of serene satisfaction. Again, it is only such Christians that live close enough to God to have the desire and inspiration to recommend Him as the final remedy for all spiritual and many material and physical ills. Christianity would be well recommended to the world if Christians would give it an equal place with their recommendations of the material remedies that have benefited them. The medicine that does not cure, the auto that does not run, the horse that will not work, the stove that will not heat, the Christian that will not witness—are useless.

WARNING AGAINST GRAFTERS

As usual along about this time of the year, worthless schemes of all kinds are brought to the towns of the Panhandle by petty grafters—and some not so petty. Merchants and professional men of this section seem strangely accessible on advertising and premium schemes, in spite of the fact that they have been stung time and again. Just a little variation in the old plan and they fall for it again.

Never before have we needed to conserve our resources and spend our money only in legitimate channels of advertising, as this fall and in the year to come.

Turn down the grafter hard. It will save you money and help to break him from his "taking" ways. —Clarendon News.

THE STORY

Chapter 1.—Mary, daughter of David Brown, self-made multi-millionaire...

Chapter 2. As "M. Brown," Mary applies for a position as engineer with the Paradise Valley project...

Chapter 3. Alighting from the train Mary is left at a way station, penniless, her purse, which she had laid down, having disappeared...

He turned toward her his face of the dreamer. "Miss Brown! That was the vision! Now tell me. Those mules down there, their shoulders sore from the yank of the harness as they broke up virgin ground—are they real? The survey party laying out the headquarters house on that knoll; the force of engineers overflowing that old ranch house; you beside me on this mountain-top—all real?

"It Did That to Me, Too," Said Denis Craig Simply.

"They seem convincing enough proof," Mary said wistfully, "that dreams do come true."

He smiled. "Come! Shall we go down?" Craig held out his hand. "Here's a short cut, but a steep one. Let's make a run for the bottom."

Hand in hand they race down the last fifty feet, laughing, stumbling, all but falling, until they landed abruptly by the side of Mary's waiting taxi man.

A last glimpse of his dizzying smile, and Mary was whirled away abruptly by Hank Johnson.

"So you've fallen for the slicker too!"

A great hot wave swept Mary's cheeks. How little it had taken to sweep away her defenses! Still—

"Slicker?" A little resentment would show in her voice. "Why do you call him that?"

"Don't you call it slick—the way he's putting over his game?"

"It's none of my business! I'm here as an engineer."

Hank Johnson chuckled. "He stood on one of the mountain-tops, that young feller did, and looked about him, and dreamed this dream of his. So they say." Hank chuckled again. "With just five hundred dollars in the pocket of them classy riding ants of his." "Five hundred dollars." "Five hundred dollars. He makes his boasts that he's putting over a ten-million-dollar project with five hundred dollars."

"But that's only good business!" "Ain't no land 'round here worth a hundred dollars an acre."

Mary was silent during the rest of the ride. He mind was busy arguing the case for and against Denis Craig promoter. A crook, or a philanthropist of sorts? A dreamer or hard-headed business man? Why should she worry? Engineers had to do with the development of a project, not with its ultimate destiny.

They came to the little town. "You say there is no hotel?" Mary came back to earth to ask.

"None." "Nor rooming house? Perhaps some one would take a boarder?" "None. Don't know of no one."

But he stopped the car before a wretched-looking unpainted house. "Go in here. Miss Leigh can help you if anyone can. She helps every one. Makes it her business—lookin' out for folks. One of the engineers' wives."

"In—here?" Mary couldn't keep the dismay out of her voice. The unpainted fence, the weed-grown yard, the wretched house.

"Ain't many houses like mine in town." Johnson set Mary's baggage down by the dilapidated gate.

"How you goin' to get back and 'orth to work?" "I'll have to see," soberly. "How much do I owe you, Mr. Johnson?"

He lumbered into his car. "I'll send my bill." He started the engine, released his brakes. "Taint nothin'," he flung back at her as he rolled down the hill. "And I'll take you back and forth. But I'll charge you plenty."

Mary looked down at the bill he had refused; looked at his departing car; smiled suddenly, wisely, but with a flooding of her eyes. A person whose god was money? No. This was the sort of person Hank Johnson was. Something about him inconspicuously reminded her of her father: his surreptitious charity. It would be.

She climbed up the rough slope into the yard. Before she reached the house the door was flung open hospitably. A young woman stood in the doorway, surrounded by stepping stones of children.

A gay and gallant young woman with a biting voice and a laugh that ran down into the brown depths of her eyes like sunshine into a pool.

"Good morning!" she called. "Are you somebody's wife?" "No," Mary laughed with instant friendliness for this girl. "I'm somebody myself—if by somebody you mean one of these 'hifalutin' engineers'."

"You!" Two outstretched hands pulled Mary inside the house. "You—an engineer! This is the most romantic thing I know! You're going to work here?"

"I wish I knew!" Mary made a grimace. "I wasn't exactly popular with the chief. I think he's planning to make quick work of me."

"Don—my husband—will help you. And you'll adore him! Don," laughing, preening herself, "is the embodiment of all the heroic things you think of when you hear the word engineer. You know—service—full blue—progress. Those are the things he thinks in. Money—pouf!"

"I know I shall adore him," Mary prophesied promptly. "And I almost adore Hank Johnson for piloting me to you."

"He needs someone to love him," June grinned. "Maybe that would make him human. Worth three hundred thousand, and never spending a cent on anyone but himself! And if ever there was a town in need of a public-hearted citizen, Pogy Gulch is it! It isn't so bad for the grown-ups. But the poor children! Mediocre schools—the three R's and no play. If some one could pry the affluent citizen loose from enough for even a swimming hole, it would be to rejoice."

Mary's eyes glistened. "Be rather fun to try, wouldn't it?" But she was to call it by a different name upon a later day.

Without obviously looking at it, she was conscious of the wretched house. And here was this woman beside her, blooming like a rose in an alley. Evidently money was not her god, either.

"Don't be upset by my house," laughed June Leigh. "It's the worst in town really, the only one left when we came. Besides, all our money has gone into babies instead of over-stuffed furniture. But we're pleased with our investment, aren't we, Junior, and Kay and Nancy, as she presented the stepping-stones—adding nice images of herself."

"And in here, neglected all alone, God love him! is our baby, Jimmie."

She led the way to an adjoining room where six cots were lined up like hospital beds. Jimmie, a curly-headed sprite of two, sat in the family bathtub, industriously baling himself out by spooning the water from it to the floor.

"I won't stay to bother you," said Mary. "Mr. Johnson said perhaps you would know of some place where I could get a room."

"Of course I do, though I can't think just now where it is. I will later. In the meantime, you're having lunch with us."

Lunch was a haphazard, merry meal. Life in this house, Mary gathered, was a merry haphazard life. Where a better illustration that money wasn't everything? Bromide? Stock consolidation of the poor? Why, money wasn't anything here! Yet Mary never had felt so happily entertained where covers were laid in pompous dining rooms with candelabra and shining silver, sparkling glass and fragile china, as she did at this table with its oilcloth lunch sets, odds and ends of china, meager silver, and plain food.

"Run down, Kay," said June after lunch, "and tell all the girls to come up for the afternoon. We'll have a party for Miss Brown." And shortly little groups of engineers' wives were making their way up the dusty street.

They greeted Mary warmly. She was one of them instantly. A great sense of satisfaction swept her. She was more than realizing her dreams. She was starting at the bottom, but not in isolation and loneliness. She would be with people of identical deals.

She studied the girls interestedly amid the chatter. Lucretia Dorsey, wife of the engineer to whom Mary was to report tomorrow. Lucretia, as methodical and orderly and efficient as June Leigh was the opposite, the stay of them all. Mary gathered, Claribel Moore, vital, fun-loving product of the Hawaiian islands, as young as Mary, wedded to a fledgling engineer, playing at house-keeping and calling it a "gogeous lahk!" Helen Rich, older, the easy-going wife of the horticulture expert, speaking casually of "when we lose our jobs."

"One of the exigencies of the profession, Hill says," Lucretia explained. "Projects are always being fished—or petering out."

"And—with a plunger at the helm of the one!" "What do you all think of Mr. Craig?" Mary probed.

"A dreamer!" "A golden-voiced crook!" "A slicker!" "A business man. Watch him swing this thing!"

"A da'hn good sport! We should worry about his ethics. He's the life of the party!" "He's an idealist," June Leigh contributed the final word, "who has the courage of his convictions. Some day you'll all eat your scoffing words." Someone laughed at her. "He has about as much chance of ever putting his house in order as you have, June!"

"Speaking of houses," said Mary, "reminds me that I must find a roof to cover my head before night."

They discussed possibilities while they had tea.

"Well," Mary set down her cup decisively. "It resolves itself into this. There is one vacant room for rent in town. I'll take it."

Next week—Starting at the bottom.

News Review
Current Events
over the World

By Edward W. Pickard

SOBER minded American citizens find it difficult to take seriously the fantastic story that Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler told to the congressional committee investigating un-American activities. This retired officer of marines charges that there is a plot, engineered by Wall Street men, to seize the government of the United States and set up a Fascist dictatorship, and the chairman of the committee, Representative John W. McCormack of New York, considered the tale of enough portent to warrant the calling of witnesses of prove or disprove it. General Butler made his story public through the columns of the New York Evening Post, as the proceedings of the committee are conducting in private.

If Butler is to be believed, he was approached by Gerald P. MacGuire, bond salesman in the stock exchange firm of Grayson M. P. Murphy and company, and urged to accept the leadership of a soldier organization of half a million men "which would assemble—probably a year from now—in Washington, and that within a few days it could take over the functions of the government." MacGuire, according to the general, thought the overturn of the government might be accomplished peacefully and suggested that "we might even go along with Roosevelt and do with him what Mussolini did with the king of Italy."

Butler's story continued: "He told me he believed that at least half of the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars would follow me."

MacGuire explained to me that they had two other candidates for the position of "Man on the White Horse." He said that if I did not accept an offer would be made to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff of the United States army, and that the third choice would be Hanford MacNider, former commander of the American Legion.

"So far as I know, neither Gen. MacArthur nor MacNider has been approached. Their names were merely mentioned as 'alternates.'"

The general said he was offered considerable sums "for expenses" which he did not accept. He said MacGuire intimated that among the backers of the plan was Mr. Murphy and Col. Robert S. Clark, a wealthy New Yorker with offices in the Stock Exchange building; and he added that later Col. Clark offered him money to go to the American Legion in Chicago last year and make a speech for retention of the gold standard, which speech MacGuire had previously given Butler.

Clark, at present in France, admitted he had asked Butler "to use his influence in favor of sound money and against inflation," but strongly denied that he had sponsored a Fascist movement. He declared he would take action for libel against any person accusing him in such a connection.

Murphy and other Wall Street men said the story was absolutely false and unutterably ridiculous, and MacGuire, after being heard by the McCormack committee, said: "It's a joke—about it. The matter is made out of about it. The matter is made out of whole cloth. I deny the story completely."

SO FAR as the great steel industry is concerned, it appears that the industrial truce asked by President Roosevelt cannot be arranged, and the prospect of a strike of the steel workers is growing.

In behalf of the United States Steel Corporation, a proposal was made to the American Federation of Labor that recognition of that organization would be granted but that no contract would be made. This proposal, it was said, would be agreed to by 85% of the steel industry.

The labor spokesmen, led by William Green, president of the A. F. of L., rejected the tender on the ground that it was hedged about in such a way to permit collective bargaining with minority groups or company unions, and that the employers were still unwilling to accept the principle of majority rule as set forth in the national labor relations board's decision in the Houde case.

If a rupture come the Federation of Labor may find the federal government rather unsympathetic. Mr. Green's influence in the White House has been waning noticeably and he has had no personal contacts with the President for some time.

New Yorkers with offices in skyscrapers were gladdened by the news that a threatened strike of elevator operators had been averted and an agreement, drafted by Mayor La Guardia's board of arbitration, had been signed by representatives of the real estate interests and the union. The union withdrew its demand for a closed shop; and standards of wages and hours in various types of buildings will be worked out by a committee of three arbiters, with the union recognized as the bargaining agent for the employees.

BY ORDER of the national labor relations board there will be held soon a great workers' election which will determine whether organized labor shall dominate the country's rubber industry.

The board decreed that the Firestone Tire and Rubber company and the B. F. Goodrich company of Akron, Ohio, must allow their employees to vote on the question of whether they want a company union or an American Federation of Labor union to represent them in collective bargaining under the NRA.

Twenty-one thousand workers, the largest number ever polled by the labor board on an NRA question, will participate in the election. In addition another 13,000 workers of the Good-year Rubber company may ballot on the same question. The Godyear angle of the case has not yet been passed upon by the board.

But the Firestone and Goodrich companies have opposed the election now ordered, maintaining that conditions in their plants are satisfactory, and that electioneering in rival unions would only disturb the peace among the workers.

PHILADELPHIA lawyers are traditionally supposed to be able to unravel the worst of tangles, so President Roosevelt has picked one to be chairman of the national labor relations board. He is Francis Biddle, of the famous family of that name, and he succeeds Lloyd K. Garrison, who retired from the chairmanship to resume his duties as dean of the law school of the University of Wisconsin, from which he was called.

Francis Biddle has been engaged in law practice as a member of the Philadelphia firm of Barnes, Biddle, and Meyers. He served from 1922 to 1925 as assistant district attorney for the eastern district of Pennsylvania. In his new post his task will be the settlement of labor disputes arising out of the recovery act, especially those involving collective bargaining.

FRANCE is worried by the admitted fact that Germany has developed a military air fleet of considerable size, composed of modern pursuit and bombing planes, and Gen. Victor Denain, French minister of air, estimates that by January the reich will have from 1,500 to 1,000 of these machines, swifter and better than those possessed by France. Consequently he has asked the chamber of deputies for about $230,000,000 to finance a program for recovering the ground lost by French aviation. The task is already under way, $32,500,000 having been spent out of an appropriation for modernization.

HUGH R. WILSON, American ambassador to Switzerland, laid before the disarmament conference in Geneva a proposal by the United States for international control of arms traffic and full publicity to prevent secret arming of nations. The proposal was well received by the delegates, and it will be studied by committees in January.

By the American plan each government would license its manufacturers of munitions for five year periods. No reserve stocks would be allowed and manufacturers would be required to present bona fide orders before receiving a license. Details of war vessels built for other nations would have to be reported. Reports of licenses and orders would be turned over to a central committee at Geneva and made a matter of public record. A permanent commission, including a member from each signatory nation, would be empowered to investigate transactions.

NOTABLES of the Catholic church gathered in Chicago from all parts of the world to take part in the silver jubilee of Cardinal Mundelein, who was consecrated a bishop 25 years ago. The pope sent his personal greetings and his blessing.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is reveling in baths and rest at Warm Springs, G., but he is not neglecting the nation's business, keeping in close touch with Washington and receiving many official visitors. At his first press conference there he announced with glad smiles that he would again "lend his birthday," January 30, to the national committee that arranges birthday balls all over the country for the benefit of infantile paralysis sufferers.

COMPTROLLER GENERAL J. R. McCarl has thrown a monkeywrench into part of the machinery of Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins. Turning down a check from Hopkins to the officials of the District of Columbia which was to have started work on a housing development, Mr. McCarl held that the federal emergency relief act, providing for the granting of funds for various relief purposes, could not apply the acquisition of real estate and the construction of homes. This type of activity, he said, would be of a permanent and not an emergency nature, and the act was adopted to meet emergencies.

The FERA already has under way a program of "rehabilitating" 80,000 farm families in homes and on land to be sold to them by the government.

MORE and more it becomes evident that President Roosevelt intends to pursue a middle of the road policy in his efforts for national recovery, and that in the overwhelmingly Democratic next congress there will be no one faction strong enough to dictate to him. The Chief Executive and the business leaders of the country are gradually coming together, and if and when they will reach an accord on methods it will be found that a good many of the more radical ideas of the brain trusters will have been discarded. The best minds in industry and finance are no longer standing back and merely criticizing. They are taking an active part in planning for the welfare of the nation. Herewith are summarized some of the important new developments in this direction:

President Henry I. Harriman of the United States chamber of commerce, in pursuance of a resolution adopted by the board of directors, has appointed a committee of six men, headed by Silas Strawn of Chicago, to cooperate with other business and agricultural associations in drafting plans for the recovery of business. The board of the chamber endorsed the continuation of relief and housing, but signified that business is still opposed to the unbalanced budget, further reduction of working hours as embodied in the movement for a 30-hour week, new and unprecedented outlays for public works, continuance of the NRA, the doctrine of majority rule in collective bargaining, and unemployment insurance.

Through the National Association of Manufacturers, invitations were sent to every manufacturer in the United States to attend a national industrial conference in New York on December 3 to draft "constructive recommendations" for presentation to President Roosevelt. Among those signing the call for this meeting was John J. Raskob, former chairman of the Democratic party. Included in the questions the industrialists will try to answer are:

What in the future should be the relation of government to business? How is this gigantic problem to be met to relieve distress and at the same time not plunge the nation into bankruptcy or threaten its credit?

How is the new flow of private capital into legitimate investment to be stimulated?

What new moves to curtail unemployment are practical and feasible? In a petition addressed to the President and congress the National Economy league has presented a definite program for balancing the federal budget in the coming fiscal year, holding that only by balancing the budget can sustained national recovery be accomplished. The petition proposes heavy reductions in government expenditures and additional taxes totaling $935,000,000.

DONALD R. RICHBERG, executive director of the national emergency council and now perhaps the President's chief adviser, addressing the Associated Grocers of America, at their convention in New York, proposed the creation of a new federal body combining functions of the NRA and the federal trade commission, to define and regulate concentrated trade action in the "twilight zone" under the anti-trust laws.

Discussing the program for permanent NRA legislation, he reiterated his opposition to control of prices and production. He said the fixing of minimum wages and minimum hours had demonstrated its soundness for eliminating the worst forms of unfair competition in treatment of employees, and that admittedly dishonest business practices should be proscribed.

Text: "It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord, and to sing praises unto thy name, O most High."—Psalm 92:11.

GRATITUDE FOR GOD'S BLESSINGS

In his testimony to one of the impressive preachers of his day, Dr. Martin Luther told of a little robin that lived in the trees near his own home. He said: "I put his crumbs upon my window-sill, especially at night. He hops onto the window-sill when he wants his supper, and takes as much as he desires for his need. Hence he always hops to a little ledge nearby and lifts his voice to God, and sings his carol of praise and gratitude, tucks his little head under his wing, and goes to sleep, and leaves tomorrow to look after itself. He is the best preacher that I have heard on earth."

Although this little feathered songster could not utter a single word, its theme was gratitude for the blessing it received. It sang its praise of thankfulness. This bird teaches a very important lesson to others. It reminds each one that receives the blessings of God to be grateful. To give thanks "Gratitude is the memory of the heart." "Gratitude is strictly a virtue, and ingratitude is a base and repulsive vice."

We can we imagine God's displeasure when His creatures do not show appreciation for His heavenly gifts. Because some of us received more blessings five years ago does not mean that we have no reason at this time to "give thanks unto the Lord, and to sing praise."

The economic situation could be worse than it is. The critical problems are solved by no means. Our federal government is paying farmers for crops they do not raise, for plowing-under corn and cotton and reducing the hog supply, while in Russia men that interfered with the growing of crops in order to get rich were placed on trial. No doubt they will face a firing squad—as Arthur Brisbane suggests.

We have a lot of knowledge and possess power for thinking, and yet to what end? The problems staring us in the face are beyond us. Our country as a whole has been ungrateful during the fat and prosperous years. Now, during the lean and depressing years we feel it very much. We must take our punishment. Yet, woe unto us, if we have to take it full-strength! God will avert the plague of depression if we repent of our sins and thank Him for His mercies and benefits. We must keep up our courage and remain loyal to Him in these dark days.

Here is a splendid example of loyalty and gratitude to the Lord, the most High. The "Lutheran Witness" quotes the Rev. F. T. Eggert of Aberdeen, S. Dakota, in part: "For the second successive year we have not harvested a bushel of grain. There is no corn, not even a straw stack. Practically all livestock had to be sold. Most of the herds were mortgaged, and the farmers received nothing from the sale. Hogs and poultry have been reduced to the minimum. It is a dreary outlook. But at the last meeting the congregation passed the following resolution: 'That every member contribute at least 15% of his hog-allotment check for the Church Extension Fund. As soon as the checks come from the government, Synod will receive a part of the money.'"

A wonderful example indeed! We are not only to sing praises unto the Lord when we have a surplus but also when we are in need. After all, what have we deserved from the Lord? What single blessing have we sinners deserved from the most high God? Let us thank the Lord for all His benefits, let us be grateful for His blessings on this day of Thanksgiving as well as each day of each year. "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits." Ps. 103:2. "Blessed be the Lord, Who daily loadeth us with benefits, even the God of our salvation." Ps. 68:19. Let each one thank the Lord, sing praise unto Him and say together with other Christians: "We have thought of Thy lovingkindness, O God, in the midst of Thy Temple." Ps. 48:9. Amen.

"UNIVERSITY OF THE PEOPLE"

Members of the Missouri Press Association, holding their annual convention last fall, experienced an innovation in "addresses." They heard a speaker whose words are always welcome to an editorial gathering, but they did not see the speaker.

From his sick-bed in Columbia, Dr. Walter Williams spoke into the mouth-piece of a telephone and in the Hotel Statler in St. Louis a group of more than 300 publishers and their friends heard his voice come out of a loud speaker and assure them that, having completed his work as president of their state university, he was looking forward to the time when he could return to his old position as dean of the school of journalism and be in closer touch with "the most fascinating of all occupations." Then he continued:

"If I had my 'druthers,' as Mark Twain said, I would 'druther' be a devil in a newspaper office than removed from any journalistic activity, to sit in the seats of the mighty.

"How tremendous is the power and responsibility of the journalist in these 'writ-changing days, whether he dwell in the tall towers of the city or in the none-the-less useful rural field.

"We lift our eyes to a new horizon every time we lift our eyes. More than any other occupation, it is the work of journalism to make clear the horizon and to bring forth its glories and possibilities for weal to all the people.

"The good journalist is chronicler, commentator and crusader. He tells the truth. Facts to him are sacred things. He comments as a high-minded judge upon the bench. Only the scales of justice, free from weight of prejudice, sway his decisions. He makes righteousness readable and also he seeks, as attorney for all the people, to make righteousness, right living, the more abundant life, obtainable by all people everywhere.

"It is a noble succession upon which today's Missouri journalists enter, a succession which includes names revered by us all. To carry on requires courage and conscience, right-education and unselfish ambition, the gift of the spirit, to become beacons of light and hope to the under-privileged everywhere. The newspaper is the university of the people. That it may be directed to the highest and noblest uses is your privilege and mine."

Beyond lifting from the text of that brief talk one phrase for the title of this editorial, further comment, it seems to us is superfluous. As always, when Missouri's "beloved dean" speaks, his words are a clarion call and an inspiration to those who like him, find journalism the "most fascinating of all occupations."—Publishers' Auxiliary.

THE MINISTER'S DUTY

As a minister and a good citizen it is not only expected of me, but is considered my duty as a loyal citizen to patronize home industry by purchasing the necessary things of life from local firms who pay our taxes, support our schools, and build our community, yet, this same merchant or business firm who frowns upon me if I patronize the mail order houses sits comfortably and complacently in his easy chair, at home, turns on the radio, and gets his chained religion from the same mail order house in some far away city. The only difference between that man and the man who orders his goods from the mail order houses is that the latter pays for what he gets while the other gets his for nothing at the expense of an institution, the church, "without which no town could prosper."

As one who believes in a square deal, I appeal to the people of Monahans to support the church of your choice and do not teach your children to get their religion from Mail Order Radio houses. Play square with your preachers and your churches and prove your appreciation of this indispensable institution.—Gus Ramage minister Christian Church, in Monahans News.

"Now listen here!" said the quiet little man. "One of these days I'm going to start in and tell you a few things."

"You may as well begin right now," answered his wife, "and tell me why you called me 'baby' in your sleep last night."

A crowd had been watching the flea circus intently—especially the antics of one finely trained little fellow.

"Did you train that flea yourself?" asked one of the curious.

"Oh, yes," replied his owner. "In fact I raised him from a pup."

"Did you make any money on your tobacco crop this year?" a neighbor asked.

"Yes," replied Farmer Cuotrop. "I made just enough to keep my boy Josh in cigarettes."

Miss Dorothy Jean St. Clair, who is attending Amarillo Junior College, is home for the Thanksgiving holidays.
