Regular advertisers know the value of newspaper advertising; others can easily find out with a regular schedule in the home paper.

At least one business in McLean enjoys the distinction of having threatened competition averted on the plea that it has remained here through hard times and deserves to have a free field during better times. This action is to be commended and is an exception to the supposed common rule of cold-blooded business.

No interest is being shown in the city election to be held April 2nd. In times past interest has run high the last few days before election, which has not always been for the best interests of the voters. It has reached the place where mighty few men want to take on the responsibilities of small offices, but at the same time the welfare of the voters depends upon efficient management of city affairs.

The State Highway Commission, in cooperation with the Texas Centennial beautification plan, asks that citizens report any trees being cut on highways that are not directly in the roadway. The commission will, upon notification to the division engineer, discharge the person responsible for the destruction of the trees.

Property owners are also asked to cooperate in refusing to rent space for road signs. According to the centennial committee, "we do not wish to irritate the traveler by obstructing his view by ugly signs that he will not read."

McLean may be right at the beginning of something good, but there is no occasion to raise rents in the business district. A merchant must of necessity make a profit if he is to continue in business, and he cannot afford to pay too much rent, for rent eats into profits faster than most any other overhead charge.

High rents at one time in the past was one of the things that killed prosperity here, and a little cooperation from landlords can be appreciated at this time. After good times return, no merchant will object to paying more for his building, and should pay more as his income justifies.

State Highway Division Engineer W. J. Van London, of Amarillo, told a party of McLean citizens a few years ago that the curves in highway 66 in Gray county would take a traffic death and damage toll over a period of years, and that he did not favor paving the road until the curves were eliminated. Mr. Van London showed the delegation a blue print of a proposed route having only one curve between McLean and Alanreed, but the demand for paving was insistent, and as the roadway was ready for paving, it was done. Accidents like the one Tuesday night bring home the words of the engineer with great force.

Women Folks

By Floy Wynn

My Dear Women Folks: I must admit I was somewhat surprised Monday night when I met with the chamber of commerce here and heard those men, in their discussions of commercial interests for the town of McLean, speak so frankly of their manner of winning so-and-so by means of flirtations. It seems as if they expected to get results. Flirting seems to be an art—and surely an asset to men, too.

It, as you know, has down through the ages, been the woman's one vocation in life to learn and talk of the art and technique of flirtations and it never fails to be of vital importance at any kind of social gathering or community function. This is the "one aim" that is forever foremost in her ideas of how to pave her "highway to happiness," but as for men, well, they seldom admit such things, and certainly in front of the ladies—never, never.

It seems that the Panhandle is becoming famous for its editorial and human interest tributes to the well known sand and dust storms. Columnists and editors laud them as high as they actually do reach, and admit they even like 'em that way.

Well, I can't say that much for them, but of course, being a woman I wouldn't get much fun out of them. However, if this keeps up, I am going to make a motion that all society editors and lady newspaper reporters request a uniform and shingled hair, what a time, what a time we have keeping our permanents and finger waves, and skirts, too.

The two things we will have with us in the Panhandle always, they are sandstorms and black-eyed peas, and how they do go together on days like Monday, everytime we have a sandstorm we always think of the good old black-eyed peas.

Then here comes Mrs. Troy West and tells us of how, when she was a youngster, she and her brothers and sisters ran to the black-eyed pea patch when they saw a bad looking cloud coming. They had saved their lives so many times that these youngsters thought surely they would be safe among them in any kind of storm.

Talking about sand and, sometimes, mud, Mr. C. F. Weaver, who lives south of town several miles, says he believes the mud at his home is the stickiest mud anywhere, that is, outside of the house, but the minute he walks inside, off it falls like magic.

Of course, it would. What would mud want to stick to your feet for unless it meant to fall off on the floor in your house. Mr. Weaver can't tell me anything about how mud CAN fall off of men's feet. I have six brothers who, I know too well, were the champion mud trackers, and what is more, they never dreamed of having mud on their feet until they got inside of the house. Now, of course, Mr. Weaver, don't get it into your head I'm trying to say that you would forget in such a manner, but I am merely speaking of my own family, and maybe such things as that do, after all, run in families.

ELECTION NOTICE

STATE OF TEXAS,
COUNTY OF GRAY,
CITY OF McLEAN.

To the qualified voters of the City of McLean, Texas, take notice, that an election will be held on Tuesday, April 2nd, A. D. 1935, at the city secretary's office, in the City of McLean, Gray county, Texas, for the following purpose:

Electing a city mayor, two city aldermen, city secretary, and city marshal.

Every person who has attained the age of twenty-one years, who has resided in the State of Texas twelve months and within the corporate city limits of the City of McLean, Texas six months prior to the date of said election, and is a qualified voter under the laws of the state shall be entitled to a vote at said election.

No person shall be eligible to any of said offices unless he possess the requisites provided for voters at such election.

J. E. Kirby has been appointed to serve as presiding officer of said election, and he shall select two judges to assist him in holding the same. Said election shall be held in the manner prescribed for holding elections in other matters.

Witness my hand and seal of office the 14th day of February, A. D. 1935.
C. J. CASH, Mayor of the City of McLean, Texas.
(Seal) Attest: W. E. BOGAN,
City Secretary.

PIONEER WOMAN SAYS: "YOU HAVEN'T SEEN ANYTHING YET"

With all the baloney about the worst sandstorms "I ever saw" and the sentimental comments on the beauty of the dust in mid-air, and that sensational feeling as it goes from forty to eighty miles an hour, is nothing compared with the earlier day winds and duststorms, according to Mrs. J. W. Story, a pioneer McLean woman.

Mrs. Story gives a few low-downs on how the wind did blow in the yesterdays of other years. "Why, I remember," she said, "one Sunday back in 1903 that beat everything I have even seen or heard of since."

For two years Mrs. Story (who was Mrs. Cousins then) had lived in and near this part of the Panhandle, but in 1903 she moved here with her husband and three children. They lived in a little one room house, because, believe it or not, the only available rooms or apartments in those days that were for rent refused to let the Cousins family move in. Why? Because they had children! Well, after several months living in a one room shack in McLean, the Cousins decided to build, and in order to get the job done quick, thinking they could finish later, they built a three roomed house, just boxed, not stripped. "My," she said, "what a clean, neat and pretty home it made."

The next thing done to help the improvements and landscape beauty of the home was to burn the grass off around the house and in the pasture. Spring was expected to bring forth an abundance of more new grass.

So on this particular Sunday morning that we speak of, she decided to unfold the old counterpanes, get the table cloths out and spread on the dresser scarf, make things look like new and neat, as well as thrifty, was her aim.

So this was done, and off to Sunday school the family went, and lo and behold, during the morning mercy, how the wind did blow, but the family, still thinking little of it, rushed home in the afternoon anxious to get under the shelter of their tidy little home. But behold what a sight. The soot from the pasture had blown through the cracks of the brand new house and everything, counterpanes, dresser scarfs, and sheets looked all alike, a beautiful midnight black.

Mrs. Story said: "Now just try to imagine how terrible it was, and then you've not conceived the half of how it actually did look, and the feeling we had as we crawled into those smooty black beds; try to eat in such a place. Nothing doing! Well, the women now don't know what cleaning up is compared with what I had next day."

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. E. Cooke, Mrs. W. T. Wilson, Mrs. Davis of Oklahoma City, and S. D. Shelburne attended Mother-in-law Day in Amarillo Tuesday.

THE STORY

Mary Brown, daughter of David Brown, self-made multi-millionaire, obsessed with the idea that her personality is obscured by the fact that she is the child of the "rich David Brown," determines to make her way in life, discarding her father's wealth, and her own. She has a million dollars, legacy from her mother, which she insists her father invest in the "wildest dream" imaginable, and about which she must know nothing. She is a graduate of a college of engineering. Her father, secretly admiring her courage, humors her.

As "M" Brown Mary secures a job on the Paradise Valley project, near the village of Foggy Gulch. After a period of what seems to be the pinnacle of success, the "wild dream" peters out, and workers are notified that all activities must be suspended. Craig urges Mary to marry him at once, but she refuses, with visions of what he would do when he learned that she was the daughter of the "rich David Brown."

Craig offers Mary a job as telephone operator, but she gives it up in favor of a man with a family, leaving a note for Craig. A month passes, and no word comes from him. Mary takes a job as assistant in an art shop. Craig secures funds and collects his old force to resume work on the project but does not send for Mary.

Neil Goodenough was at the apartment when she reached home.

"I waited for you, Mary," he said. "I thought surely you'd have one of these," drawing a letter from his pocket; "but Edna says you haven't mentioned it."

He spread it out on the table. Mary bent over it. She didn't dare pick it up—her hands trembled so. She kept them behind her.

Denny's large writing—like Denny frank and easy but firm. Thoroughbred. The message, like Denny breezy and optimistic and affectionate:

"We're off again, old scout! Chime yourself back down here. You were a regular guy to wait for me."

But—no summons to her! Denny would start his project again without asking her to come to him.

"You didn't hear, Mary?" Neil was asking.

"No."

"Well, come back with me, anyway. You know there'll be—"

But Mary interrupted him in a way that ended argument. "I'm through with Paradise Valley, Neil. But I'm glad for you. Give it my love?"

"It?" asked Neil, moved eyes searching her.

"It," Mary answered emphatically. And added, quickly, "We're going to miss you—so terribly!"

"I hope so." He was shaking hands with Edna Dale, as he spoke. Edna quickly withdrew her hand from his, saying good-by rather brusquely. But Mary impetuously threw her arms around Neil's neck and kissed him good-by. Then she wept a little on his coat pocket, while he patted her shoulder with a deal of understanding.

"Where is this Paradise Valley you and Neil are always raving about?" Edna asked.

"I used to think it was in Paradise. Now I know it's just a very earthly place—down the coast a ways in the mountains. Ever hear of it?"

"Only from you two," thoughtfully.

Life settled into rather a dull and empty routine. And then one evening Edna burst into the apartment quite stirred from her usual slight sardonic calm, her face tense and incredulous.

"Mary! Mary Brown!"

Mary sprang to her feet. "It's your old roommate? She's—"

"No. I had a letter from her today. She's coming back from the country. She's going to get well. She may be wanting her job, Mary. It's not Emma. It's—well, read this!" She pulled a letter from her pocket and thrust it into Mary's hand.

"Dear daughter Edna," Mary read, and looked up in shocked surprise.

Edna laughed. "You didn't know I had a father? I haven't had—for eight years. Read on. You don't know the half of it yet."

"I've been an old fool long enough. Come home and bring my grandson. How do I know that I have one, and where you are? When I asked young Goodenough about Mary Brown, he said she was living with a huncher of a girl named Edna Dale who had a little boy who was a ringer. But how do I know that boy's instincts are getting proper nourishment?

"I'm building a gymnasium after a plan Mary Brown gave me. Bring the boy down here where he can get enough play. Goodenough says he is made of the right kind of stuff and ought to have every opportunity. Well, why shouldn't he have? Answer me that!"

"You should have seen Goodenough when I told him your right name was Edna Johnson."

"Your father."

"HENRY JOHNSON."

Consternation had been overwhelming Mary. She looked up, half laughing half crying, into Edna's brilliant little beads of eyes. Those hauntingly familiar eyes—Hank Johnson's eyes, of course!

When she thought of the things she had said to Hank Johnson! A sudden wave of red overspread her face as she heard again his defensive "I don't like kids!" the angry retort he had flung at her, "How do you say it's their parents' fault?" the slashing of his gears; the forever-after thunderous silence upon the subject of gymnasia! How she had flayed him, unknowingly! But now—

"If we both hadn't been so tight-mouthed about our past we might have discovered who were both were before," Edna was saying. "But your Paradise Valley, while it sounded like country I knew—"

"It's the old James ranch," Mary said.

"Home. I ran away, Mary. With Jack Dale, a traveling salesman. He was no good. Left me before Dickie was born. But I was glad enough, even by that time, to divorce him. But—imagine! You telling my father why girls leave home. For that's what you must have done when you talked gymnasia to him. That is why I left. Because life was so drab in that little town. Not a thing to do. The only diversions, vice. And father always so afraid I'd get into mischief that he—well, he sort of hoarded me. He way folks think he does his money. And—I kicked over the traces. And then he disowned me."

"Will your father ever forgive me?" Mary asked.

"Heavens, girl, isn't a gymnasium forgiveness enough? But you couldn't have read the postscript."

Mary read it now:

"Tell the girl-engineer to come down and get you started with the rollers you teach in a gymnasium, but not to bring along any new hifalutin notions about how I should spend my money, because I won't do it."

"He really isn't miserly, Mary," Edna said wistfully.

"He's a darling, Edna. I've had a weakness for him from the moment I put my foot in Foggy Gulch. And—her eyes misted—"I know another man whose charity is surreptitious."

"Come home with me, Mary."

But Mary shook her head. "Later," she promised.

The following evening she saw mother and son off at the ferry.

"And I'll see Neil again!" Dickie cried exuberantly. "Neil—and a grand pa, all at once! Boy! I hope there'll be a pony, too!"

CHAPTER 14

Young Man in an Art Shop

The office of the small art shop just off Marekt street was only a tiny cubicle of blue and silver, and so the stormy conversation inevitably drifted outside—to the obvious distress of a young man who had advanced warily among tapestries, prints and objects of art, to ask for chintzes for a mountain lodge.

At a window across the shop a girl with her back to salesman and customer registered something more acute than distress. Rebellion, her clenched fists beat out in a hot little tattoo upon the window, as a sob came audibly from the office.

"But—that wasn't the understanding!" a woman's voice protested. "I was to have a leave of absence long enough for my operation—and I come back to find my place filled! You can't do that!" I have hospital bills!

I was turned out of my unpaid rental! I have to have my job back!"

The girl at the window opened the clenched fist, threw out her hands in a final gesture of resignation, and strode doggedly to the office.

"Mr. Ward!" she spoke calmly enough. "I couldn't help overhearing. Please give Miss Throat her position again. I retire in her favor."

"I happen to be the person hiring and retiring, Miss Brown. I must think of the good of the shop."

"Mr. Ward," protestingly, "Miss Throat knows her stock more intimately than I do my abe's. I have resigned."

"Not so fast, little one. Not long ago you came in here with a thin dime to your name. I advanced you a week's salary."

"Oh, I'm sorry!" said Miss Throat. "I didn't know—"

"Don't be disturbed," wearily. "I really do not need money. I'm working here under—false pretenses. Let me have my hat and coat, please. I'll be going."

"Not Long Ago You Came in Here With a Thin Dime to Your Name"

"Then Miss Throat will be going right along with you."

"But—I can't! I've no place to go! Not even a room!"

"Go here," Miss Brown scribbled an address upon a scratch pad. "I won't be needing the room any longer. The rent is paid for a week. And, Miss Throat," casually, "would you consider being manager of this shop?"

"Why do you ask such an impossible question as that?"

"Come back here tomorrow noon to take that position. I assure you of it."

"But what—how—"

"Bats in the belfry," explained Mr. Ward. "There has been something funny about her—but she attracts trade."

"Your services will be dispensed with at the same time, Mr. Ward. For—the good of the shop—"

"Quit your kidding, girlie, and go out and sell vases."

"I'm buying the shop, Mr. Ward. Please be out of here by noon tomorrow."

"Yeah! People who live on Telegraph hill are quite given to buying expensive little art shops. Besides, it isn't for sale, you insolent little sweetie."

WHEN YOU TAKE A LAXATIVE

... use a spoon

It isn't what brand of laxative you take that's so important—it's the form. A liquid laxative can be taken in any required amount. If only a little is needed, you need never take a bit too much.

Doctors favor the easily measured liquid laxatives. Instead of any form that does not encourage variation from the fixed dose. A fixed dose may be an overdose for you—or your child.

Always remember this one thing about constipation: the secret of any real relief is reduced dosage.

Give the bowels only as much help as may be needed, and less help as the need grows less. You will find Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin an excellent aid in regulating the bowels. It contains senna and cascara (natural laxatives) and it will clear-up any bilious, sluggish condition without upset. Delightful taste, and pleasant action. Your druggist has it.

SENIOR REPORT

A new picture decorates the "Hall of Fame" this week. Across the top is written "Seniors of 1935." The new senior picture is hanging in the hall, much to the pleasure of the seniors, just facing the main entrance. It is different from the other pictures because the formation by the small pictures spells McLEAN. The background is the gold school color, and orchid, the senior color, livens it up. Very earnestly and sincerely, the senior class has taken up the question of a trip to Carlsbad Caverns. It has not been definitely decided at the trip will be undertaken because of the expense. The class is filled at the prospect.

F. F. A. ACTIVITIES

The F. F. A. dairy and livestock teams had a full program last week in judging at Groom, Tulla and Amarillo.

and livestock at Groom. Dairy team members were Kid McCoy, Bill Webb, and T. B. Masterson. Team members in livestock were Verne Harris, Cecil Jones and Arthur Ledbetter. At Tulla the livestock team was first in judging horses and second in total score. Plainview, a "dark horse" team, defeated them. In dairy the team was first in Holsteins, fourth in Guernseys and fourth in total score, being defeated by Post.

At Amarillo the McLean livestock team was first in sheep and third in total score, being close behind Sayre and Tulla.

McLean boys showed calves in the Groom and Amarillo shows.

The competition in the judging contests was very keen. There were 12 schools from Texas and Oklahoma. Mr. Tampke met with a Tri-state fair committee at Amarillo to work out plans for larger premiums for F. F. A. booths in 1935.

NERVOUS

By A. T. Wilson

Occasionally you hear a woman say, "I am so nervous I could scream," and sometimes she does scream, and a woman who allows herself to get in that condition is likely at any time to cast discretion to the winds and use some sailor or oil field teamster language, and a person cannot rest or relax while around femininity of that type for fear of a sudden outbreak. Now women are not the only ones that behave unseemly when their nerves are shot to pieces, for you have seen masculine demons swearing and brandishing knives, and either of these types of humanity is a deplorable spectacle. Some folks are inherently nervous and others develop a case of nerves. Most any person can control his nerves when he wishes to, but sometimes he doesn't wish to. You have seen people fly off the handle and spend more nervous energy in five minutes than it would take to do a good day's work with the nerves under good control. Experts say that when man or beast becomes nervous, highly excited or angry that the process of digestion stops and will not start up again until the nerves are calmed. I just heard two men get so nervous and excited over a religious argument that they won't be able to concentrate their minds on their business (if they have any) and neither knew what he was talking about, and it didn't amount to anything to either of them. I have seen people blow about being nervous when they should have been ashamed of the capers they cut. And again you have seen folks attribute their nervousness to some act of another person or animal, and go to untold pains to prove they had an alibi, when they were as guilty of actions that brought it on as they man who was stoned to death for picking up sticks on the Sabbath.

What gets a man's goat and really makes him nervous is doing something that he should not have done and not doing something that he should by all means have done. This is the most universal cause of nervousness and all other causes are trifling in comparison.

You have heard men give as a cause for crazy actions "It was just my awful temper" when it was simply a case of weak nerves brought on by malicious indiscretion and abuse of the nervous system.

It takes good solid food and sane actions to develop real nerve, but the modern way of fast living is harder on the nervous system than on any other part of the anatomy, and the fact that so many people are whipping up their nerves with liquor, coffee, tobacco, narcotics, and other stimulants, is the best evidence of weak nerves. The stimulation of the nerves also stimulates the heart, and as a result heart failure is on the increase. About the most nervous and pitiful person in the world is a man who is used to stimulants, that is placed where he can't get them and then he finds out how little natural nerve he has. You hear people tell how nery a certain criminal is, but it is just deseperation and recklessness. Daniel had more nerve than any half dozen of our modern criminals, and most of them lose their nerve before they croak.

Uncle Sam has been a mighty nery man, but he shows signs of incipient palsy every time he signs a new stack of tax free bonds, and inasmuch as a red rag will make a bull nervous, the red ink on Uncle Sam's unbalanced budget is beginning to make him nervous and affect his eyesight.

REACHES TO GENTILES

Text, Acts 10:34-48. Golden Rule, 10:34, 35: "God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation that feareth Him and worketh righteousness, is accepted of Him." In the lesson for this week we have a very beautiful story of the sermon and winning of the first Gentiles by Peter. He was in Joppa. He had one to the house top to pray while he waited for food to be prepared. He fell asleep and there came a vision before him. He was hungry and there appeared a great sheet with many kinds of animals in it. The command was to kill and eat. There were Jewish restrictions against Peter killing the meat he ate, as well as upon the animals killed. Peter refused and branded such action as "unclean and common." The answer was that Peter was to call nothing "common or unclean" which God had cleansed. This took place three times. Peter awoke and could not understand its meaning. On the previous day God had sent an angel to a devout man in Caesarea. Cornelius and his household were devout, honored God, were liberal in their giving, and desirous to find the way of life. God instructed him to send for Peter, who did not even believe that a Gentile could be saved. Cornelius sent for him. When Peter entered the house of Cornelius he made the explanation that he did so knowing the unlawfulness of the deed, yet recognizing that God had forbidden him to call any man "common or unclean." Then after Cornelius had related his experience Peter spoke those far reaching words, "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons." Peter then began to preach. Then he uttered the words, "... that through the name whosoever believeth in Him shall receive remission of sins." The Holy Ghost fell upon all those present. The power of the Spirit was upon the Gentiles as well as the Jews. The Gentiles all confessed and manifested the eternal power of the Holy Spirit. Peter found himself in an entirely new position. Baptism was the next thing in order. Under no other circumstances could Peter have been led to such a position. But God had led him here and there was no turning back. Indeed God was then and is now no respecter of persons. Peter faced a very different problem that day than we face today. He was filled with a power of the newly received Holy Spirit. He was one of a comparatively small group in Jerusalem who had almost all of historical Christian experience before them to be lived out through the ages. Today we are nineteen centuries removed from the scene of this week's Sunday school lesson. Those, nineteen hundred years to Peter, had he thought it would be that long before Jesus was to return, were bright with hope and anticipation. To those of us who look back over their historical record we are forced to close our eyes as we realize the shameful horrors and failures that have been wrought out in the name of Christianity. Peter did not realize it, but the breaking down that day at Caesarea of his inherited generations of prejudice was the opening of a mighty gate into a highway of spiritual growth and success. But how soon it was again closed. For many years it was open on the part of Christians, and closed on the part of the world and its rulers. This brought about severe persecution which the Christians stood bravely and gloriously. But then came the day when the tables were turned. Prejudice again took hold of Christianity. There is nothing so deadly as the darkness of prejudice. It has so bound the minds and hearts of the existing Christian world that at times there has actually been a struggle for existence on the part of true Christian principles. And it looks as though that struggle may still continue to exist today. God says that it takes messengers to carry the Word and that we are to send those messengers. And after nineteen centuries there are a billion people in the world, one third its population, who have never heard the Gospel of Christ nor read His Word. Statistics show that one out of every three of the earth's population who claims to be a Christian is averaging one-sixteenth of one per cent of his income to help spread the Gospel of Christ beyond his own door step. We need to learn the lesson Peter learned that day in Caesarea. God is interested in the souls of men. Souls are colorless—they are spiritual—they are eternal. God made them, Christ Jesus, the devil is clutching them. God knows what men will not admit—that any soul, regardless of the color of the body it wears, is worth more on the eternal scales than any life, regardless of its fame, popularity or attainments. Until Christianity comes to this position, it is far from Christ-likeness. Not everyone that cries Lord will in any wise enter into the Kingdom, but rather the one who performs the will of the Father. The ascendancy of the death rate over the birth rate of the white race will soon end our proud ceremonialism. A people of another color will take our place as the carriers of the banner of Christ. God will not object when He chose a people to be His own, into which His Son was to be incarnated. He did not pick a people of fair skin. Let us lay prejudice aside and learn the lesson with Peter—God is no respecter of persons. His premises are to those who do His bidding.

Household Hints

By Betty Webster

During this season there are many, many housewives who long for new meatless dishes. Recently I have learned of a number of appetizing fish and vegetable preparations and hope that they will solve many a problem. Codfish, the old standby, when creamed and served with a baked potato and a hard cooked egg, makes a satisfying course for luncheon or supper.

A frozen chicken salad may be made with salmon or tuna fish and molded in the shape of a fish. Spaghetti with cheese and tomato sauce; sardine and hard cooked egg been added, decorated with pimientos and allowed to stand until firm; oyster stew; scalloped oysters; fried oysters; tuna fish croquettes; potato pancakes; corn fritters—all these are palatable and not difficult to prepare.

DO YOU KNOW THAT:

1. Petroleum ointment will remove mildew from leather?
2. Clothes ought to be hung out of doors, if possible, after being washed, because the air gives them new life and freshness?
3. Sunshine is the best bleaching agent for linens?
4. All need for greasing the griddle will be eliminated, time will be saved, and there will be no smoke if two tablespoons of shortening are melted and added to the griddle cake batter?
5. A piece of artgum rubbed over soiled white kid gloves will often save the expense of a trip to the cleaners?

PORCUPINE TOMATOES

Select firm tomatoes, plunge into boiling water for a few minutes and remove the skins. Remove the pulp and fill with a mixture of cottage cheese, a little chopped onion, salt, pepper and paprika to taste. Slice blanched almonds lengthwise into strips and stick into tomatoes. Top with whipped cream or a creamy salad dressing.

every day. The mind of a man that led to a means of preventing the death of a million children from diphtheria is as much a miracle as telling one man, "Thy son liveth!" We do things—thousands of them—today, that would have been regarded as miracles in Judea, and witchcraft in Salem. They are simply the intelligent use of the means at hand. Could someone who lived a few hundred years ago return to the earth and witness a surgical operation involving the anesthetizing of the patient, opening the abdomen and exposing its contents, removing certain diseased parts, followed by closure of the incision, he would doubtless consider the surgeon as some sort of supernatural being performing a miracle. In the latter half of his opinion he would be more or less correct—it is a miracle to equip the mind of man with the wisdom necessary to the performance of such an operation.

Miracles Imply Activity

Miracles are happening all about us. Perhaps it is because they are more common than formerly that they are not recognized as such. The miracle is not in the thing done, but in the fact that we are able to do it. Miracles, however, imply activity, not inaction. They are a cause, not an assumption, now. Nature provides only the good things we enjoy. The evils man made, himself. Our life is what we or those before us and around us make it. In every phase of human uplift and betterment the advances made were the work, not of the mass of humanity, but of a few individuals. That cut of the mass there could emerge one possessing more genius, more courage, more initiative than the combined millions of the mass—that is a miracle!

Text: "And they which fell among thorns are they which, when they have heard, go forth, and are choked with cares and riches and pleasures of this life, and bring no fruit to perfection."—Luke 8:14.

THORNS OF MADNESS

Through His ministers God sows His Holy Word in the soil of human hearts. One type of listeners hear the Word of God preached to them and quietly form the desire to live up to the admonitions which were given them. But as they leave the church they slowly forget the application of the sermons; they fail to put that knowledge into practice. Thoughts of the sermons are cast aside for seemingly more important things—according to their sense of values. They delve deeply into the worries of the world. They are "choked with cares."

because of worries, cares, riches and sinful, over-dosed worldly pleasures? Or do you apply the teachings of the Bible to your everyday life? Do you link service with Christian knowledge? Fervent, honest prayer directed to the throne of grace is the key to Christian knowledge and Christian service. Do you make daily use of this key to counteract the numerous thorns of madness? God grant that each one apply the Biblical truths to his daily, weary life and receive strength and blessing through daily, personal prayer. Amen.

Want to Know

By D. A. Davis

here I am groveling in the sackcloth and ashes. I began to think I was some "punkin," but when comes Cleve Well and puts me down in the dumps by saying a lot of things about me that ain't true. The first thing he says about me is that I am "small." Knowing Cleve Well to be highly educated, I take it that he knows that small is, and being as my education is very limited I have to depend on my trusty dictionary, and there is what I find: Small—smaller, smallest; little in quantity or degree, inconsiderable; of little worth or ability, not large or extended in dimensions; "NARROW MINDED," "MEAN;" the slender part of anything. I want to know who would ever put me in this class except Cleve Well. He also says I am rather "stooped," and right here is where I challenge Cleve's intellect because I do not find the word "stooped" in the new international dictionary, and as Cleve is a university man I beg of him to explain where he got the word "stooped." However, I do find the word "stoop" and I am taking or granted that "stooped" means the same thing, and here is the meaning of the word "stoop:" To bend the body downward and forward; descend from rank or dignity; submit; descend; weep down on prey; inclination downward and forward; descent from dignity; condescension; fall of a bird upon its prey; stairway; veranda or porch with seats; a flagon. And folks, know you all know I am not connected with any of these explanations of the word "stoop" so you see old Cleve don't know his onions about me being small or stooped. I'll admit I'm almost baldheaded and am proud of it, because Old Tack says all good columnists are baldheaded and have big ears and cannot make a speech because they work their brain instead of their mouth, and most of the brilliant minds are of the bald-headed type. I'll also admit I am not exactly an optimist nor a pessimist because I would not be either an optimist or a pessimist for anything. George Washington, the father of our country, said, "A fool never changes his mind but a wise man does." And I not only would like to be president of the chamber of commerce, but I AM president of the senior chamber of commerce, which is the only organization in McLean that is amounting to anything. I also like a good cigar and smoke them instead of a cob pipe, and when Cleve lived in McLean I gave him more cigars than any other man he associated with, and when I go to church I go up in the choir and sing, while Cleve sat on the back seat and went to sleep. I'll admit I can't play golf very well; neither can Cleve, but when I used to play with him I would start out with a pocket full of tees and a bag full of balls, while Cleve would start out with one tee and one ball, but by the time we got around I would wind up with one ball and one tee and Cleve would have a bag full of balls and his pockets full of tees, which looked to me like he was a poor golfer but a good collector of obsolete golf balls and tees. And Judge Rice went broke furnishing him chewing tobacco.

But folks, there is one thing that Cleve is good at and that is making speeches. He can talk for hours and hours and say nothing that amounts to very much and his speeches are generally the same thing. The only difference is that he hollers louder in different places to make it sound different. Not long ago he made a great speech and wanted it to be a great success. His oration was long and passionate and he wished it to end with a warning. He could have couched his warning in the old proverb about locking the stable door after the horse had been stolen, but that was too commonplace. He wanted something original. He thought of something better, then he shouted: "DON'T! I beg of you—don't wait till the house takes fire before you summon the firemen."

This, folks, is a partial description of Cleve Well as I know him, and if any of you all want to know more about him I will grant you a personal interview at any time.

And now a word about you all parking down town and at the churches. I noticed quite an improvement last Saturday evening, only just a few "jay parkers." And at the churches the parking was just about perfect, which is most gratifying. Folks, it sure looks nice to look down a row of parked cars and see them all correctly parked. It reminds me of a well kept yard, while "jay parking" reminds me of a junk yard.

S. Supt. Cryer last Saturday night a 35 which is one under par, and Roy Campbell shot a 33. I can't play golf but my buddies can. All the boys have accepted these two scores as correct, except Old Brindle.

The New TRACTOR DEVELOPMENT Everybody's Talking About

● If you haven't seen this sensational new feature in the Case all-purpose tractor for 1935 — stop in and get the low-down on the conveniences it provides for raising or lowering implements. It's the last word in simplicity.

We also want every farmer around here to see the new "easy on-easy off" MOTOR-LIFT implements. Each implement is built as a complete unit and is firmly mounted directly on tractor, forming a compact, sturdy and easily operated outfit.

Come and see for yourself. The Case for 1935 is the most modern all-purpose tractor that money will buy.

This tractor may be seen in actual operation on the L. R. Bush farm, SE corner McLean, Saturday afternoon.
