GREENE CONGRATULATED

Abilene, June 16, 1934. Mr. C. O. Greene, President Lions Club, McLean, Texas. Dear Carl: I wish to congratulate you for being elected to the presidency of your club. It is an honor and one that you deserve, for you have been a very faithful worker in the club. You will enjoy presiding over the Lions of McLean, for you will find in that bunch a high class citizenship. I really doubt if there is a club anywhere that is more progressive and has done more work while working than the club at McLean. I do not think the club has failed to receive a mention in the Lions International Magazine for the past three years. To say the least, Greene, you are following a very able president, and that president followed an outstanding president, and that president followed one that has done much in the work of Lionism. Now, really, you know that you are going to have to gain some of the dignity that was displayed by me when I was president. I doubt seriously if you could attain the dignity of the present president. I wish to extend to you my congratulations and hopes for a pleasant year. With best wishes, I am, Yours very truly, G. C. BOSWELL, Dean, McMurry College.

WAR

By O. L. D. Timer

War followed as a business by any nation proves the statement that "They that take up the sword shall die by the sword." Consider the case of modern Germany, how she adopted the slogan of Deutschland uber alles, or Germany over all, and how she lost the world war and her colonies, and recently the German Reichland has suspended payments, which means that it stops paying private debts, let alone war debts. Very few wars are for the advancement of the human race. When a nation goes to war in self defense or to gain freedom, or goes to war to protect a weaker nation, it is perfectly justified, but a war for spoil, gain, expansion of power over other nations is always questionable, and civil wars are to be deplored as the French revolution and our own war between the states, and always leaves a very disagreeable aftermath. A civil war is like a man pulling a big drunk and breaking up the furniture and dishes and getting in jail.

McLEAN ROBBERS IN GUN BATTLE

The money spent in the world war would have made improvements in lands, houses and other helps to inhabitants of each nation participating, to a value that would be almost unbelievable. We danced, but the fiddler is still calling insistently for his pay, while the debtor nations are preparing for a bigger dance yet and peace loving people are hoping that the powers that be will prevent the impending catastrophe. How can cultured, educated, enlightened and professedly Christianized people have the gall and presumption to premeditatedly and with malice aforethought entertain any such preposterous intentions?

If the war propagandists' money is first confiscated and put into houses and bath tubs on small farms that don't create an excessive surplus, and the war propagandists are put in the front of the battle, the war question will be settled until the next crop of propagandists comes on, and the present generation will quit howling, "Down Eros; up Mars!" or down the god of peace and love and up the god of hate and war.

Like Ingersol over the grave of Napoleon, if I had been the cause of one-tenth of the strife and disunion, spite venom and malice, suffering, bloodshed and human misery that war has caused, I would not have the gall and presumption to even ask old Saint Peter to let me enter the Pearly Gates, but I would tuck my tail like a sheep-killing dog and plunge headlong into the regions of hell.

HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB

The Home Demonstration Club met at the home of Mrs. C. E. Hunt Wednesday. Miss Ruby M. Adams, county home demonstration agent, gave a demonstration on bread making.

"If one will use a piece of ducking on a rolling board and a size six white cotton ribbed sock on the rolling pin, the dough is less apt to stick and not nearly so much flour will be worked into the dough," said Miss Adams.

From the plain roll dough recipe were made knots, twists, clover leaves, crescents, braids, butter scotch rolls, parker house rolls, plain rolls, Swedish tea rings and cinnamon rolls.

Parker house rolls recipe: 1/2 cup scalded milk, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon fat, 1/4 to 1/2 compressed yeast cake, 1 cup flour. Knead dough quickly and lightly, turning one quarter way around every push for about ten minutes, adding a little flour until the dough has become smooth.

A covered dish luncheon was served at noon to the following members and visitors: Mesdames John B. Vannoy, W. R. Wise, A. E. Stafford, J. H. Wade, E. J. Gething, C. M. Eudy, Norman Johnston, C. T. O'Neal, Walter Smith, Leslie Jones, C. C. Dalton, J. C. Payne, N. H. Greer, A. A. Tampke, F. E. Hambricht; Miss Adams and Miss Clara Pearl Gatlin.

The club will meet the first Friday in July with Mrs. C. M. Eudy.

FLAME OF THE BORDER by VINGIE E. ROE...

COPYRIGHT DOUBLEDAY, DORAN & Co. Inc. W.N.U. SER.

THE STORY

Chapter 1.—Seeking death by throwing herself from the summit of Lone Mesa, to escape dishonor, Sonya Savarin allows herself to be rescued by her suddenly sobered and repentant attacker. The girl is a self-appointed physician to the Navajo Indians, living on an Arizona sheep ranch with her brother, Serge, his wife, Lila, and small daughter, Babs. For a year she has been engaged to Rodney Blake, wealthy New Yorker, but her heart is with the friendless Navajos and she evades a wedding.

Chapter 2.—Sonya pulls Little Moon wife of Two Fingers, a Navajo, through the crisis of an illness. Two Fingers is deeply grateful. Returning to her brother's ranch accompanied by Rodney Blake, Sonya befriends another Indian family. Blake leaves for New York, with Sonya's promise to join him in a year.

Chapter 3.—In the desert village, shopping, Sonya again meets the man whose advances she had repulsed on Lone Mesa. He tells her he bitterly regrets his action and has never had a minute's peace since that day. Sonya is affected, but unforgiving. At the home of a friend she hears rumors of a Border bandit, "El Capitan Diablo," who crucifies his double-crossers and has a dire reputation as a despoiler and murderer, vaguely connecting him with her attacker.

Chapter 4.—Sonya pays a visit to Little Moon and finds her well on her way to recovery. On her return she rides to the top of Lone Mesa. There she again comes upon the strange young man, but she no longer fears him.

"I know I've got no right even to speak to you," he said, "or to look at you after—that day up here, but if I was to be hung for it next second I couldn't help it. And I don't want to cause you another minute's trouble or unhappiness. If this here mesa's a favorite place of yours I'll never come here again. Don't stay away yourself. It's too sweet to be lost."

"But you'd lose it," Sonya said against her will.

"I'd lose my right hand if it would help," he said doggedly, looking down and fiddling with his latigo.

"H'm," said the girl through her nostrils, a sharp and cynical sound. "I would," he repeated, "an' all you've got to do is to set a mark to prove it. Is there anything—any single thing that a man can do to prove his word? Tell me, and I'll do it."

"Who is the bandit across the Border who crucifies his double-crossers?" cried Sonya like a shot and gasped at the sound of her own words. It seemed as if another person spoke them, so wholly unintentional had they been.

The man's eyes flashed up to hers, and once again they were wild as any hawk's, the black of the pupils spreading over the blue of the irises. Slowly the color drained from his face, leaving it ash white beneath its bronze, the lips pale as blue milk. "Good G—!" he said, and was silent.

The girl was silent, too, and for the first time she felt a flash of fear, as if she had set in motion sinister forces of which she knew nothing. They stared at each other for a moment aghast at this thing which had sprung up between them, stark and terrible, and then Sonya flicked her rein, moved in her saddle, recovering. She knew she had touched disaster too deep for a woman's hand, and she drew back instinctively.

"No," she said swiftly, "don't answer. I shouldn't have asked. And it's no proof, anyway. I don't want proof. What's past is past. I take your word."

The man wet his stiff lips.

"You do? Do you believe what I've been trying to tell you ever since that—day: that I could kill myself for what I did? Do you believe me?"

"Yes," said Sonya. "Not that it matters, but I do."

He took out a white handkerchief and wiped his face, which was sweating in the high cool wind. "No," he said unsteadily, "not that it matters—to you. But it does to me. Why, I don't know, but it does. More than anything has ever mattered in my whole d—d life—I beg your pardon?"

"Granted," said the girl. "Serge swears."

"Serge?" "My brother." "Well, it matters, and I've spent hours alone up here and other places wondering about it and why it does. I've known women all my life, in several countries, and never a one that stayed in my mind a week after I left her. I'm a bad lot, as I told you before, and it don't mean a great deal what I think, one way or another, only I ain't ever felt so sorry in all my days over anything. I was just wondering, when you rode around th' wall yonder."

Sonya regarded him steadily. "It does matter," she said, "what anyone thinks and does. No man lives to himself alone, as the Good Book says. To every man his place and a certain amount of influence. And to every man his responsibility, too, for that influence. You've got influence, somewhere for something."

"And something's changing in you," the girl went on, "there's been a change in you since—since the first time I saw you. In your face, in your speech. You're using more g's on the end of your words, for one thing, and your eyes are different."

"If they weren't when I look at you, I'd be lower than I am, and that's plenty low."

"Granted again," said Sonya calmly and watched the slow tide of red that swept up over his pale cheeks. "But the very fact of change outwardly argues change inwardly. I'd trust you now a considerable way."

He drew a long breath of fragrant smoke and, turning away, looked out over the spread of desert shimmering under the early afternoon sun.

When he turned back to her Sonya was shocked at the look on his handsome face, a sunken look, haggard, as if some cruel vise of the spirit had suddenly been set upon it. He smiled for the first time in her experience of him, and something leaped in Sonya's heart like a captive bird struggling to be free.

"Miss Savarin," he said, "that's the sweetest and the cruellest thing you ever said in your life. It's a dangerous thing, too—for me. Yet, I'm glad you said it. It'll be something—something to remember among worse memories. And now I'll be getting along. Please come here whenever you want to. Lone Mesa is yours from now on."

He swung into his saddle, and the girl put out quick hand and caught his sleeve.

"No," she said, "why should you give it up? There's something here for you, something good. I know. It's your eyes when you look out yonder, a peace and a healing, and I want you to have that. You need it. It—it's something of the—of the soul, if you see what I mean."

Gravely he looked at her, shook his head wonderingly.

"My G—d!" he said softly. "What a woman you are! I didn't know there was one like you outside of th' story books! Are you by any chance, a lady preacher?"

"No," said Sonya, "of course not. I'm a physician. But I'm a woman first, and I can see when a heart's sick as well as a body. You're sick in your soul, your character, or I miss my guess—and I usually don't do that."

"No," he said, "you haven't now. But it doesn't matter in this case. It's too late for medicine—even yours."

"It's not," said Sonya, and was astonished at the passion of her tone; it's never too late. Not till one's last heartbeat—only then."

"What are you tryin' to do?" he asked her gently, smiling into her eyes again—"change th' spots of th' leopard? Be careful. There's no more treacherous beast alive. An' I'm telling you true, Miss Savarin. I'm a leopard at heart, cruel and fierce, and not fit for you to speak to like this, straight out, man to man."

I don't deserve it. If you knew what an' who I am you'd turn your horse an' ride for that down trail like all possessed, and you'd be right."

"Maybe I do know—a little," Sonya flashed, "but I'm not afraid. I'm never afraid of anything."

"No. You're like a white angel in armor," he said gravely. "You haven't any need to fear. Even I could not hurt you when I wanted to. You're safe—anywhere—any time. Th' devil himself couldn't hurt you."

"Will you remember what I say—that it's never too late to change?" "I'll remember," he said politely. "an' thanks. Now, good-by, and good luck always, Miss Savarin."

"Good-by," said Sonya, "and the same to you."

He carried his hat in hand as he whirled the horse around the corner of the ancient stone house, and did not look back, and Sonya listened to the shod hoofs striking into the defile that led down the face of the sheer cliff.

She sat stiffly quiet in her saddle and was conscious of a strange tumult within her spirit. What had she done, talking here in this high solitude with this mysterious rider whose inner self was black with unnamed sins—whose very presence in the land was a menace and a portent of disaster? For she knew past all doubting that this was the Blue-eyed One of whom the Servant spoke in his vague parables, that henchman of Beelzebub who went before trouble. And she who owed him hatred, who had vowed to take her pound of flesh from him because of what he had tried to do that day at the mesa's rim! She had talked with him, earnestly, and without scorn!

The next day she went to see Little Moon and refused the bundle of sheep pelts which Two Fingers offered her, along with the gorgeous finished blanket which the woman laid across her knees.

Sonya stroked the latter with appreciative fingers, but shook her head, smiling.

"What I did for you," she told them in Navajo, "was a giving—a service to my people. You are my people. I have chosen the Navajos before the Great Spirit. Let it be. It is well."

After a long silence Two Fingers said, "It is well. And we and all the Navajos around her are your little people, under your feet. A soft blanket to keep your heels from the stones."

"It is very well," the girl said gravely, and knew he spoke the truth. There was to come a day when she would have ample and tragic proof of that, but was just as well that she could not see ahead.

Every once in a while we hear someone say that such and such a code has been voided, but a letter from Hugh S. Johnson of the NRA says all such rumors are false. All codes are in effect and price provisions must be complied with. Any man who asks you to sell for less than code price is asking you to risk the penalties of the law.

Those who are inclined to be pessimistic over conditions here should take a trip through the northern Panhandle, New Mexico and southern Colorado, and see the trying conditions a two year drouth brings.

In Colorado nothing has been raised in two years, and no crops could be planted this year. Farmers and stockmen are depending upon Russian thistles for stock feed, and the drouth has cut them so short that they must have rain soon if they are to exist much longer.

A rain would be too late to plant a crop, but would make a crop of thistles, and stock can be wintered on either thistle silage or hay.

In some places water wells are drying up to add to the seriousness of the situation. Relief agencies could get a liberal education in drouth stricken conditions by visiting the sections named.

Several Shamrock citizens have stated that there is less drunkenness in their town than ever before. If this is a fact, Wheeler county citizens should visit some wide-open towns and compare conditions before casting a vote for legalized liquor selling.

The old argument that taxes from beer joints will add to the county's finances does not work out so well in actual practice, and there is more bootlegging under legalized beer than before.

If it was just an argument between those who want to drink and those who do not, it would be different, but the whole community is affected by drinking, and the easier it is made to secure alcoholic drinks the more trouble to the whole citizenship. However, we doubt the wisdom of arguments of any kind on this particular question, as everyone has his mind made up and will doubtless vote his own convictions or prejudices in the matter, as has always been done.

Text: "What therefore God hath joined together let not man put asunder"—Matt. 19:6.

MARRIAGE—A LIFE-LONG UNION

Is the holy estate of matrimony merely a result of an evolution of social custom? Let us go to the supreme authority, the Bible, and find a definite answer to this query. In Genesis 2:24 we read: "Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh." Here we have direct Scriptural evidence of the institution of marriage by God. Woman was created to be a help-mate of man as well as the mother of his children. The words: "They shall be one flesh" refer to the sacred union which is permitted and which takes place between man and woman in holy wedlock.

The purpose of marriage is given in Psalm 128:3 as follows: "Thy wife shall be as a fruitful vine by the side of thine house; thy children like olive plants round about thy table." Marriage, then, has been instituted by God Himself and is not a result of an evolution in social customs, as many scoffers and infidels try to teach us.

Marriage is something to be desired, yet very serious. It is to be considered a holy estate and not a habit—as many examples to today reveal, or a temporary legal family arrangement—as many "modern" and immoral high-lights of society try to impress upon the general public. Marriage is a life-long union. It should not be torn apart. Scripture teaches us "What therefore God hath joined together let not man put asunder."

A recent dispatch of the Associated Press informs us of a judge who has been married for 42 years, and who within 13 years of his legal practice has granted 38,000 divorces. He has persuaded 2,700 couples to "reconcile their differences." This veteran of matrimony who has had a wonderful opportunity to study modern nature favored marriage thus: "Nearly half the domestic tragedies resulting in divorce could be prevented at the very outset if the parties had a sincere appreciation of the sacredness of the undertaking and the attendant responsibilities of marriage."

Such testimony of an official who is daily connected in the turmoil of divorce bears a lot of weight. There is no way of attaining marital happiness in this world except by adhering to the directions of God as He has revealed them in His Holy written Word. Sanctity of marriage must be upheld in our country if we are to progress. The homes are pillars of our society and nation. Broken homes lead to a broken and corrupt nation. Good Christian homes are the best pillars of our country. Marriage remains a life-long union in a good God-fearing, Christian home.

S. S. Lesson

By Rev. Cecil G. Goff
Pastor First Baptist Church

OF HIS KINGDOM THERE SHALL BE NO END

Lesson text, Golden texts for the quarter. Golden text, Luke 1:33
The lessons for the past two quarters have given us a somewhat continued story of the life of Christ as portrayed through the Gospel of Matthew. We have studied from His forerunner through His ascension. It is the most marvelous story of any life ever lived because it was lived by the Son of God dwelling in the flesh. Christ was tempted in all points as we are, and yet in each chose the righteousness which was part of Him and turned His back on the evil presented in the temptation. It is a story of the ages and has no equal. In the beginning of the story the author stated that the Holy Child was to be named Jesus from their sins. The life of Jesus is because He would save His people the story of how He executed God's great eternal plan of grace and salvation.

One of the greatest lessons to be gained from the life of the Master is that of unselfishness. True unselfishness is born of God and found only in true heart-felt Christianity. In the first place unselfishness is the heart of God's grace as shown through His salvation. He did not have to provide a plan of salvation for man. Man sinned of His own accord and against the warning of God. Man had no right to expect God to create a road by which he might return into fellowship with God.

There was only one way for God to create such a road and that was for Him to bear the punishment due to mankind for its sin against His righteousness. There was no justice in God's doing this thing. Justice lay in the other direction. Nevertheless God proposed to do the thing. This thing God planned was beyond the pale of human understanding. Not only was it beyond any demands of justice, and beyond the pale of human understanding, but it was of such magnitude that it tried the very power of God Himself. To accomplish the completion of God's plan of salvation was a greater feat than the creation of all material beings. It overstepped justice and entered the realm of grace and mercy. Man must walk over the road paved with the grace of God to come into fellowship with Him.

The act of making the grace of God effective toward man was the exemplification of eternal unselfishness on the part of God. It demanded that He give His only begotten Son to come to earth and suffer to pay the penalty for the sins of men. God made that sacrifice. Jesus made that sacrifice. And it was made willingly through love for His created beings that had erred and become unfit to fellowship Him. God's first law is unselfishness.

Not only did the plan of salvation for men portray the great unselfishness of God, but Jesus in His life and ministry here on earth lived and taught the beauties of it. His ministry was given over to unselfish occupation. One of His answers as proof of His identity was that the poor had the Gospel preached to them. He went without food when the woman at the well needed the power of God in her life. He raised the dead of the poor, and fed the multitude when the people were hungry. His own condition, body interests and comfort were never given the slightest place in His ministry. He lay Himself down as a lamb for the slaughter in His wandering ministry, even as He did when the time for the cross came. He withheld nothing of Himself from the service of humanity. In His own statement He came to minister and not to be ministered unto. The cross is His final act of unparalleled sacrifice.

The unselfishness as exemplified on the part of the Holy Trinity in creating the plan of salvation and portrayed in the life and ministry of Jesus is an example for us. It is impossible for mankind to be as unselfish as God, and yet His example is a spiritual ideal toward which all men have reason to approach. And here is the point of contact. Unselfishness is born of God. The world in its natural elements of unrighteousness and God rejection knows nothing of God's unselfishness. Jesus said that men must be born again if they ever expected to abide with Him. And it is in that process of one's personal and spiritual experience with God through Jesus Christ and His great sacrifice that there is born in the heart of men something of an understanding of it and the ability to grow in the path upon which God sets our feet. The grace and the love of God will develop and strengthen this quality of spiritual righteousness as well as others as men are willing to surrender their lives to Him for His direction and guidance.

It is difficult for man to even comprehend true unselfishness. And yet it can be built into the character of a man by the spiritual powers of God. The world has many mistaken ideas of unselfishness. Men have difficulty in getting self out of the road, but it must be done to attain the true thing. As Paul says we see through a glass darkly now, but the day will come in the final judgment and eternal future when we shall see clearly and many acts of nominal unselfishness will be uncovered in their true light. Many acts which had been unnoticed by men will be found pure gold. "Lord, when saw we Thee an hungered and fed Thee?"

MY BEDROOM

By Mildred Blakney, Alanreed, winner of third place in the county contest for club girls.

During one of our club meetings Miss Ruby M. Adams, our county home demonstration agent, told us about the bedroom demonstration and the contest for all club girls. To have a bedroom of my own was one of my greatest desires. At once I saw that our agent's plan would fit into my plan. I went home and explained it all to my mother. She was glad for me to be a demonstrator, as she was once a living room demonstrator.

Our problem was which room would become mine, as I had always slept in the room with my mother and daddy. Mother said I might have the junk room. The room was very old and didn't have much paper on the wall. The woodwork was a dark brown and the floor was once painted brown, but the paint was all worn off. This made it look very bad. My baby bed was in there. It was painted white, but the paint was worn badly. The size of the room is 9 1/2 feet by 7 2/3 feet. The window is 2 5/12 feet by 5 1/6 feet. The door is 2 1/2 feet by 6 1/2 feet.

I took some old paper that was left over from the kitchen and papered the room. I took the border that was left over from the living room and put around the room. They matched fairly well.

The way I made my dressing table is like this: I took two orange crates and nailed two four-inch strips on the back and front of each crate. Then I took some white wall paper that I had on hand and papered the boxes. I found an old board that had a knot-hole and quite a few cracks in it. I filled these cracks and the knot-hole with crack filler. Then I sandpapered the board until it was smooth. I took the board and nailed it on the boxes. I left 16 inches in between the boxes. This was done so you could put your feet under the dressing table. I put flat paint and then ivory enamel on this board. I exchanged some sugar sacks for unbleached domestic to make the curtains. Then I took some dye that we had on hand and dyed some sugar sacks rose pink. This made a very beautiful trimming. I put the curtains up with rods. I used one end of my dressing table for bathing facilities which include a towel, bath rag, pitcher, pan, and soap. On the other side I keep toilet articles such as comb, brush, hand mirror, perfume, powder puff, beads, bracelets, rings and purses. On top I used my vanity set that I embroidered when I was six years old. I exchanged a small mirror for one that is 20 1/2 inches by 14 inches, which I hung above my dressing table. I took an old cane bottom chair and knocked it together.

The top of the stool is woven out of cord. I took this stool and revarnished it. I used this in front of my dressing table.

For my closet I used one and a half orange crates. Then I took some white wall paper that we had on hand and papered the boxes. I nailed them crosswise on the wall. I put the crates as high off the floor as I am tall. This was done so I could conveniently reach them. In the spaces I keep hats and such. For the hangers I fixed two rods crosswise that give me plenty of room for my clothes. For my shoe rack I took the end of an orange crate and sawed it half in two. I tore up an onion crate and used the longer sticks to nail to the ends. I nailed the ends 5 1/2 inches apart. I painted them with the same color paint and enamel that I used on my dressing table. I took some of the domestic and made the curtains. I trimmed them in the pink sugar sacks. I put the curtains up with rods.

When I looked for a bed, I saw an old couch. I took this couch and fixed it up. I used this couch for my bed. I doubled two quilts and put them on the couch. Then I made my sheet out of domestic and trimmed it in the sugar sacks. The couch is 6 2/3 feet long.

For my study table I took an old table out of the kitchen. We used to wash dishes on. It was one of those old fashioned center tables. It had been varnished, but it had all worn off. I sawed the legs off and put them on straight. I put some strips on the legs to make it more steady. I took some walnut stain and stained it. Then I used some clear varnish. I put a board underneath the table for my books. I took a chair which was used in the dining room. I nailed this chair together. This I used for my chair for by study table. I bought a blotter pad at the News office. I used this on top of my study table. I also bought a paper basket.

I took an old flower stand and filled the cracks with crack filler. I used the two ends of an orange crate for the top. I used the same paint and enamel on this that I used on my shoe rack. I put a large fern on this and set it in front of the window.

I took a curtain that we had on hand and put it over my window. I made pink tie-backs. I painted all of the woodwork, including the ceiling, ivory. I painted the floor an oak leaf tan.

I used my rocker that I had when I was small. I made a pink cushion for it. I also used my small cedar chest to put my underwear, socks, belts and handkerchiefs.

My expenses were: Paint, 67c; turpentine, 35c; turpentine and linseed oil, 35c; domestic, 49c; paper basket, 15c; pan, 17c; blotter, 5c; total, $2.23.

Improvements made were: Papered walls, made study table, made closet, made dressing table, painted woodwork, painted floor, made curtains, made shoe rack, made cushion, made bedspread, bought waste basket, fixed for bathing facilities, varnished chair for study table, refinished stool for dressing table, dirty clothes bag, dirty handkerchief bag, mirror for dressing table, refinished flower stand, bought blotter for study table, refinished rocking chair.

Gifts were: pillow, pitcher, dirty handkerchief bag.

Labor: All labor was voluntarily done by uncle, aunt, mother, two club girls, three friends, and I.

The hired political "worker" who comes into your home just before election and advises you how to cast your vote is quite as likely to influence you against as for the particular party or person or issue he has been paid to advocate. You didn't know such a worker, you didn't invite him to your home and he has no credentials showing mutuality of interests. You only know that for hire he is imposing on your time and that his opinion isn't worth a great deal or it wouldn't be so cheaply peddled around.—J. H. McDewitt in the Du-rango Herald-Democrat.

The modern newspaper, large or small, is "contact man" for its community outside its field of publication. Every worthwhile citizen should be as anxious as the publisher himself to make each newspaper truly representative.—Western Publisher.

GETTING HELP

We have often wondered why it is when a person gets into trouble, his house burns down or he loses everything he has by some great calamity, that he will run to the home town merchant for help. Perhaps he has never traded with local business men, but ordered his supplies from the mail order houses or gone to some other point to trade. Does such a one deserve the help of the home town merchant? We are not saying that he doesn't, but in the face of these conditions, it does look hard for the home merchant to turn him down. Think about this when you are trading in some other town or city or supporting the mail order concerns. They wouldn't help you for one penny. What they want is your money.—Wolfe City Sun.

DOES IT PAY?

"I don't think it pays to advertise," says a certain store-keeper. We agree with him to a limited extent. There are times when it certainly does not pay to advertise. When a merchant has refrained from advertising for so long the buying public considers him a back number and a dead one, all of the advertising in creation won't bring him back to commercial life again. These are days of hustle, and few buyers waste their time on statutory or tombstones.—Turkey Enterprise.

Service — Quality — Satisfaction

The World's First-Choice Tires
Now GUARANTEED for 12 Months Against All Road Hazards

Here is our unqualified proof of confidence in the superior quality you get in Goodyear Tires today:

Anyone who buys Goodyear All-weather or Goodyear Pathfinder Tires now receives a sweeping guarantee against all road hazards for one year.

You also get a Lifetime guarantee on these tires against any and all defects in materials and workmanship.

It's no problem for Goodyear to offer this guarantee—and make good on it—because Goodyear Tires today are the greatest tires we have ever built.

It may not be so easy for others to make this same guarantee—but we predict from experience that many will try to imitate it, so we give you this friendly warning: Remember, as we have said before—"There are no

HERE'S HOW THE SIMPLE CLEAN-CUT GOODYEAR GUARANTEE WORKS

You go to any Goodyear dealer and buy a tire, at the regular price. He gives you our guarantee. If for any reason that tire does not deliver a full 12 months of service, you take it back and get your adjustment, paying only for the months of service actually received. That means a new tire at one-twelfth the regular price if the tire you buy runs only a month—a new tire at one-sixth the regular price if the first tire runs two months—a new tire at half price if the first tire runs six months. Goodyear tires are so serviceable you'll probably never need to fall back on this guarantee, but if by any hazard you ever do need to, you'll find Goodyear there to make good. This protection extends to Goodyear all-weather and Pathfinder tires wherever you buy them.

miles in a bottle of ink"—no manufacturer can repair with a pen what he has failed to accomplish in his factory.

The simple reason why Goodyear can guarantee 12 months of service is that Goodyear builds a lot more than 12 months of service into the tires themselves.

Because motorists have learned that no other tire-maker rivals Goodyear quality, "more people ride on Goodyear Tires than any other kind."

Don't be misled by vague or general claims or half-hearted promises. The Goodyear guarantee is direct, simple, clean-cut—given for just one purpose; to make doubly sure you get the satisfaction you're entitled to, when you buy the finest tires that ever wore the greatest name in rubber.

The relief office here as elsewhere is supposed to be fore people who cannot get anything to eat otherwise. A clerk told us the past week that he waited on a person recently who was not satisfied with the kind of food called for in the order. They ordered a substitute that cost more money and pulled a ten dollar bill to pay the difference. Another party told us of a fellow that had been getting supplies at the relief office, that sold the government several hundred dollars worth of plowup acreage last year, and made 12 bales of cotton. He also had a four horse team on the roads most of the winter. On the other hand there are families that will suffer before they will apply for charity.—Terry County Herald.
