OVERHEAD

By O. L. D. Timer

Overhead is a modern business word meaning cost of operating a business. When a man goes into business without considering the overhead, but just wants to set the woods afire, he generally burns out his own business. You have observed some folks go in business without counting the cost and they didn't seem to care any more than a high speed, reckless driver of a car, but just wanted to be going, and then some sudden emergency would come up and they would go out like Lottie's eye. A man's overhead reflects his judgment. For instance, you have seen people cut their overhead so low that they impaired their business efficiency like a man who feeds his team so lightly they can't get over his crop. The regulation of overhead is quite a science and few there be that have mastered it, and when you do find a person who has you will find a successful business man. It would really surprise lots of people to know what their overhead actually is, and it does not matter so much if you can pass the buck to someone else, but that is getting harder and harder to do. The chain stores and other big businesses are cutting their overhead to where it is almost approaching an infinity, and they are passing the saving on down to their customers. They employ the most efficient experts on overhead that can out most any private business man and the only way private business can successfully compete with them is to develop chain store efficiency in overhead and aggressive salesmanship.

Once three men went into a partnership business and did a money making business for a while, but one man had to pay for an expensive surgical operation and was permitted to draw on the company for the money, and the others drew a like amount. They established a rule that when one partner needed money he could get it from the company and the other partners would draw a like amount, and as a result the whole outfit was flat broke in less than a year.

You have heard of a person having a rich uncle, but Uncle Sam is everybody's rich uncle and the best natured and most liberal and free hearted old uncle imaginable. Any time the farmers or railroads or wage earners or any other class gets in trouble he opens up his purse and counts out plenty of money to carry them over, and he doesn't seem to begrudge them the money at all, but says Santa Claus will pay it all back some day. But Santa Claus was an old man when we were boys, and the depression has depleted his coffers and he is likely to suffer a nervous breakdown before he gets the job done. Statisticians say that crime is costing Uncle Sam $13,000,000,000 per annum, or around $100 per capita, or around $500 for the average family. Now this is an avoidable overhead just as sure as we are free moral agents. Crime includes anything that is a violation of the law, and a few things that are not violations. The bootleggers have gotten to be a higher overhead than they were before repeal and the repealists cried with a loud voice for revenue, but now they say too much revenue, which is the height of inconsistency. With the cost of crime at around $13,000,000,000, the auto business at $6,500,000,000 and the relief business at $7,000,000,000, which makes a total of $26,500,000,000, or around $200 per capita (and this does not include lots of other tomfoolery that the Americans indulge in) Uncle Sam has the most colossal and stupendous overhead ever recorded in the history of any nation. We Americans talked awfully about the foreign nations not paying their debts, but if this prodigality and unreasonably high overhead is not reduced and we don't wake up and repent in sackcloth and ash we will find ourselves in the same condition that we criticized the other boys for being in.

Overhead can exceed income during emergencies, or if it goes into the expansion of business, but no business is a state of stable equilibrium if the overhead continues to exceed the income. Too much overhead in business corresponds to too many bad habits in character, and if continued and not reduced will eventually result in bankruptcy in business and a pitifully

LARGE NUMBER IN VOCATIONAL DEPT.

By Dr. A. A. Tampke
The agriculture department at the high school has 60 students enrolled at opening and it is anticipated that there will be 65 or 70 before the organization is complete.

Projects carried on by students should show an increase in number and quality this year.

The latest calf projects added to the list are two Hereford calves to be fed out by Tom Jack Wade and Damon Wade, who are feeding calves secured from Lloyd and Cagle Hunt on shares. Other boys are urged to secure livestock projects within the next few weeks and join the ranks.

The crop exhibits for the Tri-state fair should be located and selected now, and every boy is urged to share in the club and general exhibits where substantial prizes are offered.

The local fat calf show will be comprised of only McLean trade territory calves next March, and it seems that fifteen or more calves will be fed.

RESULTS COUNT

W. L. Campbell believes in advertising, having run small notices in our classified column from time to time with the desired results, but he thought he was handing us a hard one week before last when he advertised for a lost gold coin, but the little advertisement brought in the coin and the finder refused to accept a dollar reward.

Last week B. F. Gray, manager of the Foxworth-Galbraith Lbr. Co., asked us if we thought we could sell a gas range for him, and we told him that nobody ever caught fish without using bait. A little 5-word ad sold the range the next day after the paper was published.

Your advertisement in the home paper will get results for you. The cost is small.

Boswell Speaks School Program Opening Session

Former superintendent of the McLean schools, G. C. Boswell, who is now dean of McMurry College at Abilene, was the principal speaker at the opening of the McLean high school Monday morning.

Mr. Boswell paid a tribute to the high rating of the McLean schools, stating that no school in the Panhandle exceeds it.

The speaker gave a short history of the growth of education in this country, beginning with the establishment of the first high school some 100 years ago. The first high school in Texas was established only 50 years ago.

Mr. Boswell said some nice things about The McLean News, among them being the fact that no paper gives any more favorable publicity to its local schools than does The News.

Former State Representative Thurman Adkins spoke for the local chamber of commerce, and Rev. W. A. Erwin, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church and chairman of the local Ministerial Alliance, spoke of the need of spiritual education to round out a perfect life.

T. A. Landers, zone chairman of Lions International, brought greetings from the Lions Clubs.

Rev. N. U. Stout, pastor of the First Methodist Church, talked on the need of the students for church life and the need of the church for young life.

Rev. Cecil G. Goff, pastor of the First Baptist Church, addressed the assembly on the desire of the churches to be of service in building Christian character.

Mrs. C. A. Cryer spoke, outlining the work of the P. T. A.

Supt. C. A. Cryer made the closing address in which he stressed the need of a purpose in life.

Rev. Erwin led the singing of America with Miss Dorothy Jean St. Clair at the piano. Misses Willie Louelle Cobb and Anna Dell Sligar played piano duet, Rev. Stout led the prayer and Rev. Goff pronounced the benediction.

All ex students, new students, the senior class, faculty, visitors, patrons, former teachers and students present were recognized by Supt. Cryer and given an ovation.

Principal John Harding made the class announcement, and the pep squad gave a few numbers.

I Want to Know

By D. A. Davis

Why don't some automobile company put out a car that will buck like a pitching horse every time our wives get in it and start to drive off?

One of the ladies wants to know why some of us men stand around all spraddled out on the streets with our hands on our hips so the ladies can't pass, and why do some of our tobacco chewers try their best to spit on the sidewalk just as some lady passes so the amber will splatter all over her silk hose? And if a man wants to cuss, why don't he get out in the country so the ladies and our children won't hear him?

Folks, Dean Boswell of McMurry College at Abilene is a smart man. He tells me the easier you hit a golf ball the further it will go, and the harder you hit it the less distance you get. What I want to know is who is fool enough to believe such bunk. And another thing I want to know (folks, now sure enough this is one time I am really serious), was old Grover really trying to learn me something, or was he just kidding me? I sure am up a tree all right, because his argument to some extent is true, because I have found out from experience that some times you can draw back and strike a golf ball with all your might and the blooming thing won't go more than ten feet away, and again you can just give it an easy gentle tap and the blankety blank thing will sail clean over the green and light kerplunk right into the trap. Folks, I hate like smoke to believe Dean Boswell was kidding, because I honestly believe he tries to get serious once in a while and tell the truth, and he really means to learn us illiterate folks some sense; and as much confidence as I have in him as a great man of deep thought and abundant learning, if I had never played golf and did not know a thing about the game, naturally I would have resented such a statement and no doubt would have socked him on the jaw for trying to insult my intellect. But folks, being as I have experienced the very thing myself I simply don't know whether from a man that really wants me to accept the statement as the truth know something, or accept it as a joke.

He tells me without hesitating that I ain't got no sense and that I am as crazy as ever, and I have got about eight hundred people and three preachers to prove my statement. And he did not mince words when he said it, either. And that's all right. I am willing to leave it up to you folks as to which of us is the smartest, and I am not worrying a bit as to the verdict. But what's got me all up in the air, all hot and bothered and completely bumfuzzed is whether to accept his theory as true of accept it as just another theory of another one of our brain trusters.

I want to know if you school teachers won't help me out on this deal. You know I've promised not to say a single thing about any of you this year, and looks to me like you would be willing to help me solve this deep and perplexing problem, and if possible I would like to have it as your debating subject this year, namely, "Resolved that the easier you hit a golf ball the further it will go, and the harder you hit a golf ball the less distance you will get." Come on, teachers, let's get down to work and try to learn something this coming school term. Let's either prove that Dean Boswell's theory is true or it is just some more of his bunk.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Wilson and son, Gordon; Mrs. Donald Beall and son and Mrs. Chas. E. Cooke visited Mrs. Wilson's sister, Mrs. G. T. Mitchell, at Meadow last week end.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. West and Mrs. Harriet Sink went to Pampa Sunday, Mrs. West undergoing an operation.

Mrs. L. V. Lonsdale and children left Tuesday for their home at Los Angeles, Calif.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Carter of Oklahoma City visited the lady's mother, Mrs. L. W. Wilson, last week end.

Eld. W. H. Ayer returned last week from Golden, where he had been conducting a revival meeting.

FLAME OF THE BORDER by VINGIE E. ROE...
 W.N.V. SERVICE

THE STORY

Chapter 1.—Seeking death by throwing herself from the summit of Lone Mesa, to escape dishonor at the hands of a drunken desperado, Sonya Savarin allows herself to be rescued by her suddenly sobered and repentant attacker. The girl is a self-appointed physician to the Navajo Indians, living on an Arizona sheep ranch with her brother, Serge, his wife, Lila, and small daughter, Babs. For a year she has been engaged to Rodney Blake, wealthy New Yorker, but her heart is with the friendless Navajos and she evades a wedding.

Chapter 2.—Sonya pulls Little Moon, wife of Two Fingers, a Navajo, through the crisis of an illness. Two Fingers is deeply grateful. Returning to her brother's ranch accompanied by Rodney Blake, Sonya befriends another Indian family. Blake leaves for New York, with Sonya's promise to join him in a year.

Chapter 3.—In the desert village, shopping, Sonya again meets the man whose advances she had repulsed on Lone Mesa. He tells her he bitterly regrets his action and has never had a minute's peace since that day. Sonya is affected, but unforgiving. At the home of a friend she hears rumors of a Border bandit, "El Capitan Diablo," who crucifies his double-crossers and has a dire reputation as a despoiler and murderer, vaguely connecting him with her attacker.

Chapter 4.—Sonya pays a visit to Little Moon and finds her well on her way to recovery. On her return she rides to the top of Lone Mesa. There she again comes upon the strange young man, but she no longer fears him. When he reiterates his sorrow over his misconduct she indicates forgiveness and assures him a man can always change for the better.

Chapter 5.—Befriending the wife of Hosteen Nez, a Navajo, she adds him to her circle of devoted friends. In the desert she again meets the man of Lone Mesa. An airplane suddenly appeared, and warning Sonya to get out of sight and stay there, the stranger goes to the plane and transfers something to his saddlebags, after which he rides away. At a neighborhood dance she meets the mysterious stranger of the Mesa and demands that he tell her his name. Finally he confides to her that his right name is Starr Stone, that his mother believes him dead, and that he goes by a different name in this region. He departs at the command of a tall, fierce Mexican, with whom he is mysteriously associated.

Chapter 6.—Sonya, with a feeling of shame, realizes she is falling in love with a man whom she can only class as a renegade and outlaw knowing that under the circumstances she can never marry Blake. From the "Servant" Sonya learns Stone is alive and safe.

Chapter 7.—An influenza epidemic among the Indians keeps Sonya busy for many days. Stone comes to her aid in caring for the stricken Navajos. Sonya and Stone declare their love for each other, all doubt in the mind of the girl being ended.

Chapter 8.—The Mexican bandit, surprising the pair at a meeting place, takes Stone away, and warns the girl hereafter to let his "lieutenant" alone. Sonya is surprised by the unannounced arrival of Rodney Blake from New York.

Chapter 9.—With Blake is an easterner, Marston, who announces himself as a secret service operator, on the trail of Mexican opium smugglers believed to be working in the vicinity of the Savarin ranch. Serge, recalling an incident at a dance they had all attended, connects Stone with the smugglers whom Marston is seeking. Sonya is forced to admit to herself that the man she loves is involved in the nefarious traffic. At the general store in the desert village Sonya inadvertently acquires knowledge of the store keeper's possession of opium. On her way home she is seized by men from an airplane.

For Sonya Savarin, fighting for her life, came out of her saddle, saw Darkness sailing away in a panic of fright, his empty stirrups flying—felt the sand giving under her stubborn feet, saw the ship loom large as her captors brought her, struggling, to it—felt her hands held behind her. She was lifted up and put over the side into the gray leather seat, a strap was buckled tightly around her. The man who had first approached her climbed into the pilot's seat, the other squeezed in somewhere at her back and side, the engine roared for a moment, the plane quivered, surged ahead, surged faster, its tail came up, and almost immediately the vast spread of the desert began to drop away beneath.

With a gasp stifled on her athen lips, Sonya Savarin was away among the stars.

CHAPTER 10

Across the Rio Grande

The world and all it held were gone. They were headed south! South toward Mexico! It was El Capitan Diablo who had her in his grip!

Yet El Capitan was—he must be riding slowly south somewhere in the dark land below.

Very soon her heart leaped to her throat, for the ship was falling by the nose it seemed, going sharply down. And then she saw some lights spread on the flat darkness—a landing field.

In an incredibly short time the feeling of falling passed and the ship came level again, touched, bounced, lifted beautifully, and came to rest on the earth. The man behind her reached around her, unbuckled her safety strap, put his hands under her armpits, and lifted her to her unsteady feet. "If you please, Senorita," he said in English, and Sonya climbed out into the unpeached arms of the pilot.

She looked around—at a small level field, a hangar, another gray ship beyond its open doors, all plainly visible in the floodlights that studied the field's four corners. Then the two Mexicans took her arms, and they all walked across the lighted space and out into the moonlit darkness beyond a grove of trees. Here the lights of a low, wide adobe house shone dimly; a door stood open; two women in dark low-necked dresses waited inside.

"La Senorita," the pilot said to them in Spanish. "You will take her to the guest chamber—and bear her company."

There was a marked significance in the last few words.

"Si," the older of the women said briefly. "I will take good care of her."

Sonya, speaking Spanish as well as they, listened tensely.

"And tender care, Carlotta," the man said, smiling meaningly. "She is, as you can see, very beautiful. I like this white skin, sunned though it is, and the curls in the hair. I am glad El Diablo cares only for pure blondes."

"You should wait, at least, the master's decision as to what he likes, Manuel," the woman said. "But why did Quatro send her?"

"Because she caught him red-handed with a five-ten can of black mclases—the blundering fool, to approach anyone with that in sight. Well, care for the pretty thing, Carlotta, until El Capitan returns. We'll all know more then."

And with a look at Sonya from under his level black brows he bowed and left the house.

"If thee Senorita weel come weeth me," the woman said in painful English. "You would eat? Drink? Some wine before you sleep, meebey?"

"No, thank you," said Sonya. "She stood hesitantly, her hands clasped before her. She had no possessions to pick up. She had lost her hat the first moment in the plane. And she realized suddenly that she was weary to the bone."

Whatever was to happen to her, she would not help matters any by giving way to fear and worry.

"I would sleep, Senora," she said. "I am very tired."

The woman went to a table of dark polished wood and picked up a candle burning steadily in a silver candlestick. Sonya followed her guide down a dark passage between thick whitewashed abode walls and into a spacious high-ceiled room.

Here the woman left her, and soon returned with a pitcher of cold water and a silver cup.

She again asked if the senorita desired anything more, and finally departed. Sonya was dismayed to hear the unmistakable falling of a bar across the heavy door. Slowly she undressed herself, blew out the candle. But a thought came to her suddenly and she went softly to the one window in the deep walls. It was closely barred with iron and set hard in the old adobe—and on a little stone-flagged yard below, the two women were just seating themselves in low chairs. They were soft of manner, gentle seeming, and they carried fans in the hot moonlight.

She was to be cared for—to the very letter of the law laid down by Manuel.

"I am on Thy lap, O Lord," the girl said inaudibly. "Thy will be done." Then she laid her tired body on the bed and went to sleep.

Late morning waked her, or perhaps it was the sound of the bar being slid from its slot outside the door. She opened her eyes to see the senora with a little wooden tray on which were coffee steaming in a tiny pot, luscious fruit, eggs in a cup, and bread made of some dark flour.

The woman smiled at her with a crinkling of all her brown face, and Sonya smiled back.

"Good morning, Senora," she said in English. "I thank you for these things."

"Good morning, Senorita," the woman answered. "I 'ope you sleep verree fine."

"Yes, I did," said Sonya, getting out of the bed in her plain undergarments, which she had been forced to use as nightwear, "and I would eat."

She washed her hands and face in the ancient bowl where the senora had poured the water from the pitcher, dried on the towel she gave her from her arm. Then she dressed, sat down by the table near the iron-barred window, and fell to with a will. She was young and very hungry, and the excellent food put heart in her for what the day might bring.

It brought only the senora again to take the things away, and the hours dragged on leaden feet. She sat by the window looking out across the stone-flagged yard at the tall trees of the grove through which she had come the night before.

And the day drowsed itself away. Try as she would, her mulling brain would not relax. Thoughts raced through it, one on the heels of the other.

What had happened to Starr Stone? Where was he? What would El Capitan do with him? With he? So it was opium which Parks had dropped at her feet in the heavy brass container—and she having seen it, was a menace to them all. And El Diablo took few chances with those who knew too much. He—crucified them. There was no mercy in that wild dark face of his. A woman who knew too much was just a source of danger to himself, nothing more.

Parks—the bland owner of a simple store at a lost little station on the cross-continent railroad. Parks—who could so easily send small flat cans of contraband to New York city in crates of innocent western produce; lettuce, say, from the Imperial valley, or even bales of hides. She knew now why she had always disliked him, why she had felt a repugnance to his speech, the oily handshake.

And it was Parks who had sent the little gray ship, hidden no doubt on some flat among the weathered mesas south of town, to take her and bring her here. And what a get-away it had been!

She, Sonya Savarin, was gone completely, a helpless prisoner here in an alien country, in the very heart of El Diablo's stronghold, her fate resting in the hands of the cruellest killer in all the turbulent land. If only Fate permitted her to see Starr Stone again, to look into his eyes, to commune once more with the soul of him which, under all its wrong and sin and spiritual loss, was yet the soul of her predestined mate, gentle and steadfast and irrevocably her own. And she felt that it would be so, that he was coming, would soon be here, though for what dire destiny only heaven itself knew.

So the long hot hours wore away, and twilight came, and with it again the senora with more food. But Sonya could not eat this time.

Darkness fell again, and once again the late round moon came up, and one of the little gray ships warmed up and took off into the starlit skies.

Presently there were the soft steps of women on the flagstones just below, the little noise of creaking chairs. The low intonations of their voices came softly to Sonya by her window.

They spoke in Spanish, as did all the people here, without regard for the white woman who seemed so alien. Apparently they had not thought that she might understand.

Text: "If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse from all unrighteousness."

GOD FORGIVES US OUR NUMEROUS SINS

Some people are under the impression that after one becomes a Christian he cannot sin. Such a teaching is known as "Perfectionism." However, that is very distant from the truth. Even Christian sin much. Holy Scripture teaches us that "no man came sin into the world." Yes, "all have sinned and are short of the glory of God." If we are under the impression that we are not sinners, or, "if we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." Even the best of Christians commit serious sins that cause God to be angry and also that cause heartaches in their fellow-Christians. Even the greatest of men and women make mistakes and sin against God and man. No one is without sin in this world. The only man that ever existed in this world without sin was Jesus Christ, Who was God and true man.

Therefore, it is very necessary that we confess our sins to those whom we have seriously offended, as well as to God, for every sin is a transgression against the law of God and direct insult to God Himself. We must implore the just God to forgive us our sins every day and ask Him to enable us to lead a holy Christian life in thought, word and deed.

We need not fear that the loving and merciful Lord will not forgive us our sins. "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." God thereby forgives us our numerous sins; yes, He cleanses us from all guilt, sin and unrighteousness. God cleanses us from all guilt, sin and unrighteousness through His only Son, Jesus Christ, Who died for our sins. Scripture teaches us in the first letter of John, 1:7b, "The blood of Jesus Christ, His Son, cleanseth us from all sin."

What great comfort for all sinners! Who else can give such comfort besides God in His holy and precious Word? To whom can a sinner flee for consolation? There is only one Rock of Ages to which we can cling and that is our faithful Savior Who always fulfills His gracious promises. Let us go to Him daily and confess our sins and plead for forgiveness.

This forgiveness is free to all. We must simply believe and rely solely on Him for forgiveness and comfort in our daily life in this tear-strewn world. Worldly philosophy cannot comfort us in any way. We are not to be fatalistic and consider the future ahead of us a dark and gloomy one. Let us go to Jesus at once "Jesus sinners doth receive."

Fair Boat Pilots Stage Moustache Race

Getting off to a clean start in a moustache raising contest, these boys of the World's Fair lagoon boats got busy with soap and razor. The one who got his moustache back the quickest will win the contest. To be utterly fair, each contestant used the same kind of razor, the same kind of soap and the same kind of brand new blades. Harry Rice, manager of the boats, in the right hand corner of the picture, gave the starting signal, and "beat the gun" a bit.

THAT BILLY GOAT

Our neighbor owned a billy goat With eyes so meek and brown. But if you took particular note You'd see he wore a frown.

He trusted me just like a friend: I played on him a joke. He quickly changed me end for end, And was gone when I awoke.

With trust now dead, he stayed away Then time went on a pace And brought a steaming sultry day That wrought sweat from my face.

That night I chose to spread my cot Between two nearby trees To shun my bedroom, burning hot, And try to get a breeze.

I quickly fell in slumber's grip, Then hastened on my way To climb aboard of dreamland's ship And sail—and sail away.

To fairy isles I laid her course, O'er dreamland's golden sea, To seek and find the very source Of love and constancy.

The ship was pushed by gentle breeze Through leagues of silver light—Reluctantly I furied her sail—But land was then in sight.

Wonderful fairy creatures there Greeted me on the shore; Each had a crown of golden hair, They all had charms galore.

I asked if this was fairy land Where love's bright fountains play; If love would, here, go hand in hand With constancy each day?

The queen then came and said to me: "You'll find on this fair isle That love here rules with constancy; With magic's cunning wile."

She led me to a sylvan nook That thrilled me with its charms, I grabbed the cue and boldly took Her in my manly arms.

I kissed her luscious lips, so red, I kissed them o'er and o'er; Sweet words of love to her I said, Then kissed her more and more.

Those blissful moments quickly flew—Oh, what a great surprise! I could not help but fume and stew When I opened up my eyes.

There was the proof, in broad daylight—My chest I vainly smote—Through all that sultry summer night I'd kissed that billy goat!

—John B. Vannoy.

TIGER POST STAFF INCOMPLETE

Miss Elizabeth Kennedy is sponsor of The Tiger Post and Juanita Brooks has been appointed editor-in-chief. The complete staff will appear in the next issue of the Post after the completion of the various class organizations.

McLean high school opened Sept. 3 with a varied but interesting program. Mr. Cryer announced the speakers, and several business men brought greetings from the various organizations in town. Many parents, visitors and friends were present to welcome all saudents, both old and new, and faculty members. We were especially favored by the presence of Dean Boswell, his wife and daughters, of Abilene.

The school opened with approximately 250 students, the largest enrollment in the history of the school. The increase was due to the cooperation of the Liberty, Back, Gracey, Heald and Skillet schools in sending their students to this high school. We are happy to have these new students and want them to feel at home. We are looking forward to the biggest and most successful school year in history, and with the cooperation of everyone, the success of M. H. S. will be assured.

Class organizations have not yet been completed and the details will appear in the next issue of the Tiger Post.

The steepest grade on the famous Pike's Peak highway is ten and a half per cent . . . the steepest grade on the mountainous road to Mexico City is less than seven per cent . . . but the new Chevrolet climbs hills of fourteen per cent in high gear. You will be astonished at the quiet, effortless way this car performs on hills. You can push the foot throttle down to the floor and the 80-horse-power Blue Flame Engine will continue to run as silently and as smoothly as it does on a level highway. The usual way to obtain such powerful performance is to add extra cylinders or build a bigger engine that uses more gas. Chevrolet engineers give you such performance by engineering skill—the development of the Blue Flame combustion in the valve-in-head Chevrolet engine.

The old saying, "To avoid criticism, say nothing, do nothing, be nothing," still holds good. We hear a great deal about constructive criticism, but we have never heard any that did not tend to tear down.

The chief of police of Bristow, Okla., has been instructed by the mayor to confiscate all playthings being used on the streets, explaining that the order is in the interest of safety for the children, as coasting on the streets and sidewalks with bicycles and skates is liable to result in the death of a child. A little thought will see the justice of the mayor's contention.

A recent visitor in McLean remarked at the amount of weeds allowed to grow in the streets, alleys and vacant lots, saying that with government money being spent on relief projects it would have paid the town to have included weed cutting in the program.

It is a strange thing that home folks will become accustomed to unsightly weeds and forget how such a condition looks to visitors.

If strikers generally succeed in getting the government to take care of them while without work, we may expect to see many strikes, and a spectacle of the willingly idle living off the taxpayers, along with the unwillingly idle who want to work.

No greater mistake could be made than for the government to agree to finance men who are idle on their own volition. This is not an argument for or against strikes, but workers who strike should be prepared to finance themselves, and if they deserve government assistance it should be provided and things adjusted for them while they are working.

KNOW YOUR CAR

Driving a modern motor car is serious business, says a bulletin issued by the accident prevention department of the Chicago Motor Club. It requires your full and undivided attention. Learn the feel of your car; make it one with yourself. Handle all controls gently—gas, steering, wheel, brakes. Let it "flow" smoothly, evenly—always under control!

The worst thing in giving charity is politics. We would guess that more money has been squandered in charity by the scheming politician than has ever been lost through the inexperience or lack of understanding of those who spend the public's money. It seems impossible to keep politics out of the work of helping people. That is not a new condition. It is as old as charity, itself.

Husband (rushing into room)—"Wife, the house is on fire! We must hurry and get out! There's not a minute to lose!"

Wife—"You beast. You're always hurrying me! I must have a few minutes to straighten up the rooms so they'll look decent when the firemen come in."

We can all remember when baking powder had a bigger sale than face powder.

Customer—"Are my clothes that you are cleaning and pressing ready?"
Tailor—"Not yet."
Customer—"But you said you'd have them ready if you worked all night."
Tailor—"Yes, but I didn't work all night."

WHERE WOULD BUSINESS BE TODAY WERE IT NOT FOR

Newspaper Advertising

Some business men still hold to the theory that "when folks want anything they know just where to buy it. They pay little or no attention to advertising." Thank goodness that isn't so.

The fact is—and especially nowadays when every penny saved is a penny earned—Newspaper Advertising is the guide to thrifty buying for more folks than ever before.

Supposing every store in McLean decided to "shut up like a clam" and do no more advertising. Good reputation might keep some of the stores going for a while, BUT, in the end, it would be "curtains."

The point is, the public is always on the alert for a message from you, Mr. McLean Business Man—for news of your merchandise and prices—and they expect you to tell them about your wares. Imagine, Mr. Merchant, what kind of a trading center would McLean be if there were no newspaper advertising?

HEZEKIAH LEADS THE PEOPLE BACK TO GOD

Text, 2 Chronicles 30:1-9,
Olden text, 2 Chron. 30:9.

In the last few Sundays we have been studying about the lives of the people who were warning the people of their wicked national life. Israel and Judah had fallen into a disgraceful state of degradation, spiritually and morally. Then the crowning climax of their iniquity. Ahaz was probably the Godless king Judah ever had. He had already fallen past reason, and soon after the time of his death Judah was led forever into captivity when Hezekiah, the son of Manasse, came to the throne.

Hezekiah was a wonderful king. He must have had a mighty influence over him. Her name was Hezekiah, which means "My father is God." Her training of her son, Hezekiah, means "Jehovah strengthened." He saved the nation. Of the condition of the country when Hezekiah came to the throne, Dr. Siemp says: "Hezekiah was confronted with an enormous task at the beginning of his reign. Sixteen years of licensed idolatry had left their mark on the Holy Land and its temple and on the whole country. In every corner of Judah were altars to heathen gods. In every city of Judah were innumerable high places devoted to idol-worship. Moreover, the temples had ceased, the temple itself had been polluted, its lamps put out, its sacred vessels destroyed, its blood scattered, and its doors were closed. One disaster after another characterized the reign of wicked kings. So unpopular was his reign when he died he was not buried in the sepulchre of the kings. Such was the fruitage of idolatry and the condition that Hezekiah faced at the beginning of his reign."

Hezekiah took the throne when he was twenty-five years of age. He had many things to face, but Dr. Moore says about him, "He selected the best men around him and must have chosen some of the young men who shared his moral ideals. He unhesitatingly took the cultural development of the people and capable leaders were chosen and trained. Particularly he hearkened to the prophets who revealed to him and his people the will of God. In this illustrious line were Amos, Hosea, Isaiah, Micah. With such advisers he steered right the ship of state. The doors of the temple had been closed which represented the turning of the back of God's children on their prophet's first move was to open those doors. This meant the regular worship of the Lord would be continued. But Hezekiah was not satisfied with that. He sent a message to God's people where, calling them back to worship, and to celebrate the passover feast. Time had to be given to the priests to sanctify themselves for the journey to Jerusalem. "And assembled at Jerusalem much to the joy of the people, a very large congregation."

There had been prophets calling the people for months and they had turned from their sin and evil ways, with no results. The people had not responded to them or to their message. But we will notice that the king who was the governmental head of the people sent out a message to worship there was a great response. It would only be natural to suppose that such a call, such a responsive answer was a natural result of the preaching of the prophets called of God. But the king did not move until their governmental leader called them out. The lesson with its example might well be taken to heart by the political leaders of our land. It might be a message to them to get right with God and come back to His worship. It is easy for a president to give people beer, to use the statement of our own president, but only God can give water, material or spiritual. It would seem more becoming to any president to call his people to prayer than to beer.

Hezekiah's reign, Dr. Rawlinson says: "Of all the monarchs who ruled the kingdom of Judah after the separation from Israel, Hezekiah is the most remarkable, and the one to which attaches to the history of the separated kingdom culminates in him. He was a statesman, a scholar, a poet, an antiquarian, an artist, and the leader of a most important religious movement. Judah in his day seemed to be at the point of dissolution; it was to him that the kingdom recovered, which gave her a half-century of peace."

It seems well to close with the words of Dr. Siemp, a man who studies national and world conditions in the light of God's Word, when he says: "It is beyond question that as a nation we have sunk to the depths of idolatry, to a degree comparable only with the low mark sounded by Israel and Judah. To a large degree the temple of our national religious life has been desecrated, its doors have been closed, and its services discontinued. We worship at the altars on the corners of the streets and pay our vows at the high places of the towering wealth and the mounting evils of commercialized civilization. Through greed and selfish desire we have allowed the spiritual to be absorbed by the material, until but little of the spiritual remains. Idols of high finance, the production of bigger and better factories, the accumulation of more and more of this and that, have all but extinguished our dependence on God and the sense of individual and national security that comes through devotion to Him."

God is always anxious to receive the contrition of His people. No nation has ever turned to Him in spirit and truth that He did not hear and answer. May our people turn to Him as the people did in following Hezekiah. They turned not only as individuals, but as a nation.

policies and practices long recognized as desirable, but which uncontrollable competitive forces have heretofore rendered inactive. There can be no misrepresentation, no selling of printing below cost of manufacture. Misrepresentation has cost many of the merchants in town a pretty penny when they have gone elsewhere to buy their printing. But now the out-of-town printer is controlled in his business practices under the Code, and because of the restrictions that make him deal fairly, The News has all the advantage over him, for it knows best how to serve home business with commercial printing and newspaper advertising.
