Life," Subject Commencement Sermon Sunday

Rev. G. Goff, pastor of the First Baptist Church of McLean, at the high school commencement Sunday evening, said the subject of "Life" is a good beginning in life helps to a good ending," said the speaker. "There are two sides to every coin and only two methods of solving life's problems—the right and the wrong. No greater thing can be said of any man than that he has a right to do right. The man who is wrong with God is the man who is wrong with life. To place in life can the unsaved get along as well as the man who has placed his life in the right on with God."

Honor graduates include Catherine Patterson, Frances Landers, Gwynne Carpenter, Marie Landers, Mavis Brewer and Harold Rickard. The class is known as the Centennial class, but an interesting item is that they very properly could have been called the silver jubilee class of the McLean high school as the first class was graduated from McLean just 25 years ago. The class has carried out the Centennial idea all through their programs, invitations rings, etc.

Current Events in Review

By Edward W. Pickard

Italy Takes Addis Ababa; the Emperor Flees

EMPEROR HAILE SELASSIE of Ethiopia gave up the hopeless fight against the Italian invaders and fled from Addis Ababa with his family.

Mussolini's victorious troops soon after marched into the capital, the first to enter being a picked regiment representing all units of the Italian army, the Askari, infantry, artillery, air force, engineers, grenadiers, bersaglieri, Alpini, cavalry, marines and Fascist militia-men.

Their coming was welcomed by the foreigners who remained in the city, for as soon as the news left, the natives began to pillage, plunder and burn. The business center of the town was speedily wrecked and the government buildings were stormed and ravaged, these including the treasury from which the state's store of gold was stolen, and the armory. The streets were strewn with corpses and the Ethiopians, crazed by liquor, rushed about shooting at random and gathering up their loot to carry it to the hills.

Only one foreigner was reported killed. That was Mrs. N. A. Stadin, American wife of an Adventist missionary, who was struck by a stray bullet. Nearly all other foreigners were gathered in the well fortified British legation, but American Minister Cornelius Van H. Egbert with his wife and the male members of the staff remained in the American compound. They were armed only with rifles and pistols and were under orders from Secretary of State Hull not to risk their lives uselessly; but they were determined to hold the legation and radio station as long as possible. This plucky little group was attacked repeatedly by marauders but repulsed all onslaughts. Mr. Egbert was in wireless communication with Washington. The British legation offered to send a detachment of Sikhs to escort the Americans to the British compound, but Mr. Egbert declined to leave his legation at that time. Next day he and his staff evacuated the compound.

Haile Selassie went by train to Djibouti, French Somaliland, and was received with all honors at the governor's palace. He and his family boarded the British cruiser Enterprise and sailed for Palestine.

At first it was rumored the French would hold him for a time, but later advice held the French and British governments had decided that he remained a sovereign and must have full liberty of movement.

So ends the military part of Mussolini's African adventure, a success despite the opposition of the League of Nations and the imposition of economic and financial penalties. The duke announced the victory to his country from the chamber of deputies and there was wild rejoicing throughout Italy. It is taken for granted Mussolini will set up an Amharic state in part of Ethiopia under a puppet emperor; and presumably Italy, France and Great Britain will get together and determine their respective zones of influence in the ancient empire. The humiliated league can do nothing except lift the existing sanctions, which proved futile in halting the war. British Foreign Minister Eden and his fellows in the government must admit as gracefully as possible their failure to check Mussolini and get what they can for Britain out of the African tragedy. France probably is not sorry over the outcome, for her opposition to the duke's ambitious scheme always was half-hearted.

Vandenberg's Name Is to Be Presented

SENATOR ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG of Michigan has asked Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald of that state to present his name to the Republican convention in Cleveland for the Presidential nomination, but the senator insists this does not make him an active candidate.

"The Michigan state convention generously instructed the Michigan delegation in Cleveland to present my name," the senator said. "But the delegation is unpledged—at my request. It is free to vote as it pleases. I have not sought a delegation here or elsewhere and I shall not do so. I have not sought the nomination and shall not do so. My situation is not changed in the slightest."

Friends of Senator Borah in Utah replied unsuccessfully for a Borah pledged delegation from that state. The Republican state convention in Ogden voted to send an unpledged group to Cleveland, following the recommendation of the resolutions committee.

The Arkansas delegation also will be unpledged, though the state convention approved an "expression of good will" toward Gov. Alf Landon.

Col. Henry Breckenridge, who offered himself to the Democrats as a Presidential nominee aspirant merely so that disaffected members of the party might have some place to go, received about one-seventh of the votes in the Maryland preference primary. The rest, of course, went to Mr. Roosevelt. Colonel Breckenridge had made no campaign.

Radicals Control French Chamber of Deputies

FINAL elections in France put complete control of the chamber of deputies in the hands of the revolutionary "Popular Front," a coalition of Communists, Socialists, Radical Socialists and minor left wing groups. The new chamber does not meet until June, and the confusion is so great that there are fears of chaos and financial panic in the interim. Many believe the Popular Front will be unable to form a stable government to succeed that of Premier Sarraut. The lead must be taken by the Socialists, for they now form the largest group in the chamber with 146 seats. The Radical Socialists have 115, the Communists 72 and minor left parties 44. The National bloc, including center and right parties opposed to the leftists, have 236 seats.

Senator Hastings Will Not Seek Re-election

DANIEL O. HASTINGS, senator from Delaware, chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee and outspoken opponent of the New Deal, will not seek re-election when his present term expires. He so announced in a letter to the party leaders of his state, giving as his reason the necessity to devote himself to his law practice. This may have influenced his decision, but it is more than suspected that the real reason was the fact that the du Pont family, all-powerful in Delaware Republican politics, had decided that the senatorial seat should go to Gov. C. Douglas Bock, who is related to the du Ponts by marriage. Senator Hastings has always been ready and eloquent in defense of the du Ponts against attacks by the New Dealers.

Navy Expansion Measure Passed by the House

SINCE international naval disarmament efforts have failed, those who advocate adequate national defense rejoice in the passage by the house of the bill appropriating approximately $331,000,000 to build our navy up to treaty strength. Representative Marcantonio of New York and a few others put up loud opposition, but a record vote was not necessary. The objectors dwelt especially on a clause authorizing the laying of keels for two 35,000-ton battleships after January 1, 1937, should any foreign signatory to the London naval treaty start a battleship replacement program. Two days later they might have read dispatches from London saying rumors had reached there that Japan was considering laying down a 35,000-ton battleship armed with 21-inch guns.

Appropriations in the bill, along with other available funds, will give the navy a total of $592,237,807 for the next fiscal year, starting July 1.

Business Men Differ With Mr. Roper

DANIEL C. ROOPER, secretary of commerce, appeared before the Chamber of Commerce of the United States at its annual meeting in Washington and warned its members, most of whom are persistent critics, of New Deal policies, that unless private enterprise takes up the slack in employment, business must pay the relief bill out of earnings.

"It is the responsibility of all business and industrial enterprises," said Roper, "and not of one particular segment of the government to increase its efforts for greater employment. If a substantial measure of increased re-employment does not take place the taxation for relief purposes will come largely from business earnings. There must be re-employment or a longer period of increased taxation."

Roper admitted that the administration had fostered bureaucracy, but insisted that it was occasioned by an emergency, and responsibility for its increase again lay at the door of private business.

Various members of the chamber replied spiritedly. Roy C. Osgood, vice president of the First National bank of Chicago, predicted that if the administration embarked on a sound fiscal program that would inspire confidence, business would make rapid strides toward recovery. He criticized the pending tax on corporate earnings as impracticable and a brake on business expansion and stability.

Huge New Tax Measure Rushed Through House

WITH extraordinary speed which the opposition considered indecent, the administration's new $803,000,000 revenue bill was pushed through the house. The vote, 267 to 93, was almost strictly along party lines. The roll call showed 82 Republicans and only 11 Democrats voted against the measure, while four Republicans deserted the minority to cast their lot with the administration.

The bill was handed to the senate whose finance committee, headed by Pat Harrison, had been studying it in secret sessions in order to be prepared for the public hearings that opened two days after the house had acted. There had been predictions that this committee would modify the measure radically, but the opposition to it in Democratic ranks seemed to have faded away and its passage by the senate without material change was deemed probable.

As passed by the house the bill provides:

1. A graduated tax on corporation income which, it is estimated, will force distribution of $3,300,000,000 more in dividends and yield the government an additional $620,000,000 annually.
2. A "windfall" tax on unpaid or refunded processing taxes imposed upon the invalidated AAA, which is expected to yield $100,000,000.
3. Continuation of the capital stocks and excess profits taxes for six months to yield $35,000,000.
4. A refund of $35,000,000 to processors who suffered financial losses under the old AAA.

Hagood Holds New Command One Day, Then Retires

MAJ. GEN. JOHNSON HAGOOD, assigned to the command of the Sixth corps area with headquarters at Chicago, held the command only one day, as a matter of form, and then at his own request was relieved of the assignment and retired from active service. He said he would remain in Chicago several months to do some special work for a mail order house and then would select a permanent residence and write a book telling "how the United States can get a very much better national defense at very much less cost to the taxpayer."

Young Farouk Succeeds to Egyptian Throne

FUAD I, king of Egypt, died of a gangrenous throat infection at his country place near Cairo at the age of sixty-eight. The crown prince, Farouk, a sixteen-year-old pupil in the royal military academy at Woolwich, England, was immediately proclaimed king and started for Egypt, sailing from Marseilles on a British liner escorted by a British warship in order to avoid going by way of Italy.

Before his death King Farouk. Fuad named a regency council of three to govern the country until Farouk comes of age. The young king, who is six feet tall and well educated, hopes to return to England to complete his studies at Woolwich.

Egypt elected a new parliament, and though returns are not in at this writing it is believed the Wafd or Nationalist party won a clear majority of the seats. The Wafdists demand a free Egypt, completely rid of British influence and control. The negotiations for the new Anglo-Egyptian treaty were deferred until after the election.

Bringing Back CCC to Its Authorized Strength

DIRECTOR ROBERT FECHNER of the Civilian Conservation Corps moved to bring the corps up to its authorized strength of 350,000 by ordering state enrollment officers to disregard previous quotas and accept any qualified boy for a relief family.

At the same time, Fechner authorized enrollments in eight southern states omitted from the original schedule, while the War department ordered corps area commanders to report on the number of recruits needed in each state.

Estimating that between 50,000 and 35,000 new members would be required, Fechner attributed slowness of enrollments to improving business conditions. Vacancies also exist for 4,000 war veterans.

Urges New Compact on Neutrality and Rights

THROUGH Secretary of State Hull the United States has suggested the conclusion of a general convention to supplement and clarify existing rules governing the rights and duties of neutrals in wartime. The proposal is made to the nations that will take part in the American peace conference in Buenos Aires this year, but is intended to be open to all other nations in the world.

Floyd Gibbons ADVENTURERS' CLUB

Hello, Everybody!

"The Turn of a Wheel"
By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter.

WHATEVER you might say about gambling, it takes nerve to do it. The best of the professional card sharks are men who can keep a poker face and never bat an eye when they're betting their last nickel. Yes, it takes plenty of nerve to gamble with your money—but it takes a doggone sight more courage to gamble with your life.

I've got a yarn here from Adventurer William Joseph Brinkley, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and unless I'm good at all at reading between the lines of a story, Bill Brinkley is one of those lads who can keep a cool head and figure out the odds even at moments when his life is in the greatest of peril.

If Bill hadn't had that faculty he wouldn't be here collecting his ten and joining the Adventurers' club today. For back in 1915 fate tested out those iron nerves of his—and it was one of the most rigorous tests fate ever dished out to a guy, at that.

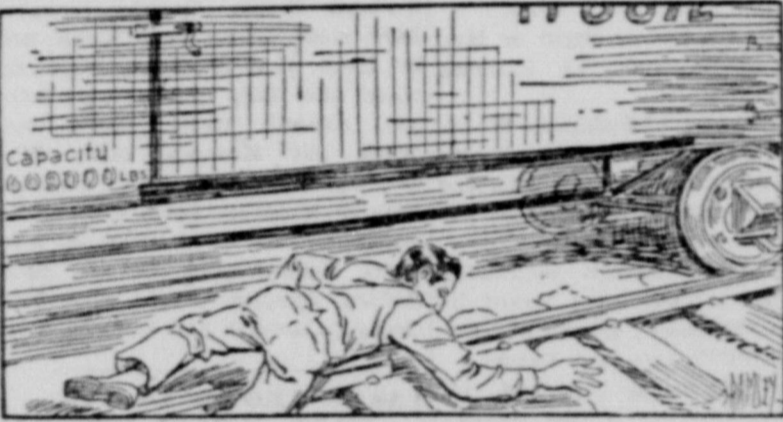

Iron nerve or no iron nerve, Bill admits he was pretty scared when it happened. Maybe "pretty scared" isn't quite the expression for it either. When it was all over Bill's nerves felt more like putty than iron.

Bill Had a Prosaic Job Checking Freight Cars

It was down in the town of Atlanta, Ga., where he was working as an interchange clerk for the Central of Georgia railroad. Bill was just a young lad then, and his job consisted of checking up on cars that were to be switched from one line to another. It was during the June peak season and there was a lot of traffic on the line. The railroad yard was full of box cars and it kept both Bill and his partner, Willie Baker, on the jump most of the time.

The first job in Bill's routine was to get the seal numbers on the cars as soon as a train entered the yard. Bill would get them on one side while his partner, Willie, got them on the other. They were supposed to wait for those trains at the break-up track, but sometimes they would walk out to meet them and ride in on the first car. That's what they were doing when Old Lady Adventure swooped down and got Bill in her clutches.

They had walked out to meet the "Special" and the Special was late that night, so, without realizing it, they walked a little farther than they had intended. They met it quite a ways out of the yard when it was going at a pretty fast clip. Willie caught the first car, but Bill let three or four go by before he could make up his mind to jump for it. He caught the fifth car, and since he was supposed to check the other side of the train, he started to climb over the top.

But Falling Under a Train Isn't So Prosaic!

But Old Lady Adventure didn't ever intend that Bill should get to the other side of that train. As he reached for the top grab-iron with his right hand the one he was holding with his left broke away from the side of the car. His body swung out from the side of the car and started to fall.

As Bill fell he clutched at the top grab iron. He caught it, but his weight broke the hold. His body twisted—swung around between the cars. Then, as he dropped, his left leg hit the draw head. He swung head downward and fell—under the train.

"I lay flat on my back," says Bill, "and watched the bottoms of the cars whiz by only a few inches from my face. The wheels ground past only a few inches from my body on either side. I lay for a moment utterly unable to move. Then my mind began to race.

Underslung Hopper-Bottom Cars Meant Certain Death.

"In a flash I had figured everything out. I had been lucky enough to land between the tracks—not on them. As long as I did not move I was perfectly safe unless—and there was the horrible possibility—unless there was a hopper-bottomed coal car in that train. The hoppers of those cars are only a few inches from the ties. If one of them hit me I would be mangled—mashed to a pulp—spread along a half mile of track."

And there was a darned good possibility that not one but several of these hopper-bottomed cars were in the train. In long trains like the one Bill was under it was the custom to put short, empty coal cars between the refrigerator cars to cut down the side sway. Bill knew that. His mind was clicking on all four in his moment of peril—taking in every consideration.

There was just one way out—a perilous way—but something told Bill it was a better risk than waiting for one of those murderous hopper bottoms. He began watching the wheels as they clicked by—gauging their speed and their distance.

Courage Plus Quick Thinking Saved Bill's Life.

Where two cars were coupled together the wheels were only about four feet apart, but between two wheels on the same car there was a space of forty feet. If he could throw his body over the rail as the front wheel passed, and get across before the rear wheel hit him—he'd be safe.

There was no time to lose, but Bill gauged those moving wheels carefully. He nerved himself and tensed every muscle. Then, as a front wheel flashed by, he started to roll.

He hit the rail and started to go over. Would he get across in time? Bill didn't know because his eyes were shut. He didn't dare look at the thing he was doing. Then, all at once, he felt himself go over the top of the rail. He opened his eyes and saw clear sky overhead. He had made it!

"Then," says Bill, "came the reaction. I began trembling all over and got sick as a dog. And to this day the mere sight of a hopper-bottom coal car can give me a bad case of chills."

Primary Cause of Decay of Teeth Still Unknown

Teeth may decay in spite of a completely adequate diet, it is shown by experiments at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia university. Tests lasting three years contradict the theory, widely held in both scientific and lay circles, that tooth decay is caused by a dietary deficiency.

"The practical significance of this finding is that, while we know it is possible to reduce the amount of caries or dental decay by improving the diet, we now know that we cannot prevent decay completely by this last method," Dr. Theodor Rosebury, assistant professor of bacteriology, who conducted the research, writes in Scientific American Magazine. "The reason for this is that a deficient diet is a modifying influence rather than the primary cause of caries, which still remains virtually unknown."

Doctor Rosebury fed five generations of rats "a fully adequate diet." Over a period of three years, the rats continually developed caries. "This result," he explained, "checks with human experience to the extent that we know the disease occurs in human beings healthy in all other respects and giving evidence of adequate nutrition. We can produce caries more rapidly with diets deficient in mineral elements. But no matter how adequate we make the diet, dental caries is still produced."

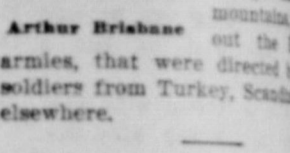

To Drop In; to Drop Up

Idiomatic phrases in the English language are the despair of foreigners; the phrases so rarely make sense if the words are considered separately. The idiom, "to drop in," meaning to happen in, as for a chat, is well established, and is an accepted part of our speech. "To drop up" is not generally accepted, possibly because of the utter incongruity.—Literary Digest.

JESUS INSPIRES HONESTY

Lesson text, Luke 19:1-10, 45-48.
Golden text, "Thou shalt not steal."
Verses 20:15.

The first incident in the scripture for this week took place likely Friday of the week before Jesus crucified. He had been in Perea His disciples and was on His way to Jerusalem. In passing from Jericho He likely crossed the Jordan River very close to the place where He was baptized. As Jesus passed through Jericho Zacchaeus asked about it, or saw the crowd became anxious to see the person who was causing so much excitement. Zacchaeus was the commissioner of taxes in that district. He was a rather high official, selfish and greedy.

That the urge was that made Zacchaeus so determined to see Jesus, we do not know. It may have been curiosity or it may have been the desire to be near Jesus. No doubt he tried to get near Jesus in Jericho, but because of the press of the people and the fact that he was very short of stature, it was impossible to see Jesus. Therefore, he climbed and climbed up into a sycamore, or what we would call a mulberry tree. There he waited for Jesus to pass.

Zacchaeus likely felt that he would not be noticed up in the tree. And it is more than possible that he did not, had it not been that he was already known that he was there, he stopped and called him down. The announcement that He was coming home with him. It was no doubt a shock to the man, for he was a sinner and likely had no desire to even talk to the Master. He came down and took Jesus home with him.

The multitude murmured, some because they were deprived of the cheering and companionship of the Master, others because He was associating with and going to the home of a tax collector. They thought Jesus ought to be above that. The word is not complete—because we know nothing about the conversation between Jesus and this sinner before he made his confession. Jesus had a purpose, and that was to win the man. He won him—and what a confession. In the first place, he gave up all that he had to the poor. The next he stood ready to reimburse any man four-fold for anything he had taken from him unjustly. Many times the last place conversion affects a man is at the bottom of his pocketbook. When it goes as deep into a man's pocket as did in this man's we may know he was genuinely converted. Jesus saw the possibilities in the man. He saw him sitting in the tree. Christianity presupposes honesty. A dishonest Christian is as poor a Christian as can be. In fact, it scarcely seems possible that a deliberately dishonest man can be a Christian. If the power of Christ does not in the end make a man honest—not only honest money but other matters also, is it indeed doubtful that the power of Christ has been manifest in his life.

The latter part of the scripture follows to an incident on another day. Monday of that last week—the forty-one year week—was spent by Jesus and the disciples in quiet in Bethany. On Monday Jesus made His triumphal entry into Jerusalem. That night He went back to Bethany. The following morning, Tuesday, He returned to Jerusalem. He found the temple empty and in a terrible condition. All sorts of sacrificial animals were being sold to the people at exorbitant prices. This was more than a disapproval to Jesus. He made a whip and began His work. Soon He had driven out the merchants and the money changers with their merchandise and money well distributed over the temple floor. Jesus made public His authority for once in the presence of the Jewish Jews.

Christ has set the places for worship. We fear Jesus might feel the same way about our church services today as about the temple of His day. God has set out a very definite plan whereby He expects us to do His work. We are to follow that plan and not place our own ideas in competitive business. It is the time that Christians in an un-Christian country begin to follow the plan of financing. When we have money to carry on our local work without emulating the world, but to care for the needs of the Gospel around the world according to the commands of Text: "But God said unto him, thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided?"—Luke 12:20.

MATERIALISM—BESSETTING SIN OF THIS AGE

Many people today are leading a hand to mouth existence. When there are some that are always harping against those who have possessions and are well-to-do financially and otherwise. We find people also that have enough but do not think so. They always want more; they never have enough. And then such also who do not care anything about spiritual matters. Materialism, earthly possessions are their ideas of an Utopia, a paradise.

Materialism certainly is a besetting sin of our age. We must fight against it. Spiritual things come first. Other things will then be added unto us.

The Bible gives us an example of a man who sold himself to materialism. He did not give any thoughts to his soul. His mind was set only on earthly riches. But God intervened and told him: "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee." Little did the rich man think of his unavoidable departure from temporal life. Little did he think of his Savior, Jesus Christ. But alas, it was too late. He was choked with materialism.

In regard to materialism, Dr. Henry Van Dyke, a fine scholar and keen observer, wrote the following just before his death:

"We must turn to our divine Savior, Christ. Materialism, gross or refined, is certainly the besetting sin of this age, and to it we owe most of our troubles. Christ attacks the fundamental and harm-working heresy by calling attention to the inevitable fact of death, which strips us of all material possession and leaves the soul naked. God says to the foolish man: This night thy soul shall be required of thee; and the things which thou hast prepared, whose shall they be?"

"We cannot find or invent a better question than this to put to the souls of men today. The only lasting values are spiritual. If we lose these we lose everything. There is no way of recouping that loss, even though a man should gain the whole world for a brief possession and lose his own soul at last. If the preacher no longer believes in the possibility of losing the soul, he is certainly not entitled to call himself a disciple of Christ. It was to save the human souls, great and small, that Jesus came into the world and gave Himself as a divine sacrifice on the cross of Calvary."

ABOUT CONTRIBUTED NEWS

The Review is always glad to receive proper news items from those who read it. However, if your news item is not published, don't blow up.

For one thing, you might have forgotten to sign your name. For another, you may have waited too long to send in the news, which may have been printed in an earlier issue, which you did not see.

"Yes," we hear a lady exclaim, "but my article was omitted last week when I sent it on time, and another account of the wedding printed that was not as good as mine." Now listen there! Ladies always present problems. Anyway, here's the answer.

Very often a newspaper gets two accounts of such important things as weddings. We have received, on occasion, an account of the wedding from the bride, the groom's mother, bridesmaid and one friend. We could not print them all. And, when the best account came in, we had already put another into type. So, the mystery is solved.—White Deer Review.

Some fellows can't go to a public dance or skating rink without wanting to match a scrap. Dogs do that way when they go to a social gathering. When dogs have a party there is always some smart dog to growl and fight. Some fellows are that way. I have often wondered if it was the dog in the man or the man in the dog that makes them do that way.—Uncle Bill Kellis, in Sterling City News-Record.

CHEVROLET A GENERAL MOTORS VALUE

A DOLLAR

A dollar is something the average business man enjoys more in anticipation than in realization. It is the price of a day's work for some men and the price of a drink for others. It is what the good wife frequently needs, but seldom has. It is the power that makes or unmakes men. It is the hardest thing to get and the easiest thing to get rid of known to mankind. It is a blessing in a small measure and a curse in many instances. No man ever had more than he wanted, and no man ever will. A dollar is a delusion, and all of us are chasing the delusion.

WHAT DOES YOUR HOME TOWN PAPER DO?

What is the value of your local newspaper? What service does it render? Is it a cold, hard machine that exploits the misfortunes of others, or is it a public institution that attains beneficial results?

When you subscribe to the local paper you are doing two obvious things. One is to support a home institution and furnish people work. Another is to keep abreast of the times in your home town and know when and where to buy advantageously.

But these are not the only reasons—and, incidentally, not the only important ones. Your home paper works for you. It is the first to come forward and boost business and industry, make your town inviting through favorable publicity so new citizens will locate, advocate beautification and clean-ups that will make your home attractive, urge building programs that keep the town in step with progress, let you know what the others are doing so you can cooperate.

The home town newspaper is the first to espouse the cause of the local merchant and urge you to patronize him. It is the first to show you the advantages of doing it. It gives him the opportunity of exhibiting his wares to you on a printed page so you may understand why. The local newspaper is the first to take the moral side of a question and fight for it to the end. Then it is helpful in giving credit where it is due, letting your friends know of your sorrows and your good fortunes so they may be sympathetic or congratulatory as the case may be.

There may come days when little news finds its way into the local paper. The reason is that there has been no news to put there. You do not have a right to criticize unless the paper has been negligent in getting all the news that has happened. And if you were negligent in giving it news you knew but kept to yourself, you still have no reason to be sarcastic and throw it down in disgust because it did not carry the item.

The home town newspaper helps you rear your children, helps you send them to school, helps provide advantages for your children you may have never known. The home town newspaper is with you from start to finish. It prints the news of your birth, the news of your accomplishments, the news of your death. It stays with you all through life. The home town paper fights your battles and reserves your support.—Cleburne Review.

WHISKEY ADVERTISING

A tip to the whiskey manufacturers: In your next series of advertisements, feature the results of drinking the stuff you produce. Show the bloody corpse of the drunken driver, as he smashes into the innocent driver; picture the reeling drunk as he wavers down the street; show the beady eyes and the drawn features of your victim as he sprawls unconscious of his surroundings; feature the hungry children and the neglected homes of your victims, the wife who has been beaten by the insanity which has been caused by your product. Yes, such a series of advertisements would be very appealing.—Canyon News.

MUNICIPAL POWER PLANTS

A number of towns in this section plan to build municipal power plants. DADDY'S DAY

There are good reasons for Daddy's Day coming late in the season.

It is calculated that the proper time to recognize him is after hot weather, when house flies are making life miserable anyway. You know Daddy is looked on as just a sort of family nuisance who spreads out in front of the radio dial to tune in on a political speech the very night a favorable blues crooner is on the air.

I don't think the average Daddy is so bad as the woman he smokes would indicate. The average Daddy, while he won't let sonny boy take the car out at night to set a new record for breaking traffic rules, is ready to lay down his life for any member of the family. He may be a hard-shelled turtle on the surface but he has a chicken-heart, and often-times when you don't know it he says a little prayer for his loved ones, as sweet as the breath of a rose at noon.—Annie Callan.

THE SCHOOL AT BANGS

"Home work" discovered the New News Sun, "is a relic of the Dark Ages, as far as school children in the little town of Bangs, Texas (population 700), are concerned. Their attitude is 'school work is school work' and adhering to this plan they have succeeded in making striking decreases in the number of failures in their month and finding more time for the development of individual interests.

The no home work plan was put into effect in the Bangs school about two years ago by Supt. Arthur L. Whisner, it is related by Earl Moore in The Texas Weekly.

"During the seven years of his teaching experience, Supt. Whisner had seen the children leave school each afternoon laden with books and the prospect of several hours of home study. Since the school closed its enrollment of about 400 pupils from a school district of 30 square miles, some of the children had to travel long distances to school, which left them even less time for home study.

"The superintendent felt that there was no reason why the students could not do it throughout the seven or eight hours they spent in school each day instead of having to do it at home in the evening. His first step was to divide the school day into longer classroom periods. As a second step he asked the teachers to prepare at the beginning of the school year brief statements of what they expected to teach their pupils during the year.

"The result of this," writes Mr. Whisner, "was that they began to think more definitely about what they had been employed to teach. They made guide sheets for use throughout the term; these guide sheets provided a basis for the instructor to do enough teaching and to require enough learning during each day so that home work would not be necessary.

"According to Mr. Whisner, the no home work plan has proved to be satisfactory not only from the standpoint of the students and teachers, but also from the standpoint of the parents and patrons of the school. "The operation of the plan has led to a striking decrease in the number of student failures. During the first year the plan was in effect, there were only two failures among the high school students and seven among the grade school pupils."

CHAPTER I

Bryn finished his story. Tall, lean, brown, he stood before the big crystal mirror hanging over the stone fireplace and examined his chin critically. It was a very nice chin, but Bryn was not in the least concerned with its appearance; he was trying to determine whether Burch had or had not nicked it incidentally. It seemed not. Burch had done his usual perfect job.

Turning, his eyes round and distracted, he stepped into one of the deep moorland chairs and stared out at the landscape as if he were pouring like smoke across a sifting through the Golden Gate. The sun was setting, the daisy-like fishing vessels, their sails a pale blue against the sky, were slipping out to sea to brave the perils of the open ocean. Below the house the waves were breaking at the white cliff, gentle and unassuming.

Bryn was not a philosopher, and he had very little imagination. To him a horse was a horse, usually with four legs and a tail. It was not something over which kingdoms might be fought or with which princesses might be wooed. Waves to Bryn were waves, always wet and often chilly. This now, as he stared down through the wide plate glass window, there was a look of positive inspiration on his mediately after breakfast, and you needn't prepare dinner until approximately a year from tonight. I will let you know. I shall be away during that time."

"Yes, sir. And the orders for Morton?"

Bryn swung round from the glass. He regarded Burch thoughtfully. "That's so," he said meditatively. "I might have forgotten. Tell Morton to take a spanner, will you, and remove the paint—not all of it, but large, uneven portions—from the Bellaire. Tell him to take a chisel and give it some nice deep scratches. Tell him to make it look like a car I might have bought for about forty-two dollars and fifty cents from a bankrupt gangster. He might bash up the fenders, and if anything further occurs to him..."

"The Bellaire, sir? The new French motor? The black car?"

"All of those things," Bryn said calmly.

Tubby stood up. His eyes rested on Burch's agitated countenance. He drew a deep breath.

"That's all," Bryn said crisply.

"Yes, sir," Burch muttered despondently, and went out.

Tubby was staring at Bryn. "Anybody would think you were in love with the girl," he said.

"Would they? How nice. It sounds so much better. So much more romantic and idyllic. To be in love with one's bride instead of marrying her for her money."

"Money!" Tubby said bitterly. "Money!" He shook his head miserably.

"You're making some kind of a damn fool out of yourself, Bryn. You're letting some gang pull a fast one on you, that's what you're doing. Do you think for a minute that that girl doesn't know who you are?"

"She doesn't," Bryn said calmly.

Tubby snorted. "That's a bright remark, isn't it? Very bright. Now, I ask you, how in God's name could anybody on the Pacific coast help having seen your ugly mug in the papers, how could anybody who can read help knowing about James Weldon Shipley Brynildson Third and his speed boats and his elephant tusks and his seven cars and his polo ponies?"

"I'm sure she can read," Bryn replied, unruffled. "The first time I saw her she was reading over a lot of legal documents up in Holworthy's office."

Tubby eyed him for a long moment. Then he said gustily, "Look here, Bryn. Did it ever occur to you that Ted Holworthy himself might be engineering this beautiful mix-up? Did it?"

"I can't say that it did."

"All this talking he's been doing about her. What did he tell you about her for in the first place? Oh, I know he said it was an interesting case, but that was just to get you listening. And now he's gone away just when she puts in her appearance. It all looks pretty funny to me."

"Didn't you think it was an interesting case, Tubby?"

"Well, if it was a case, yes. Certainly. Of course, I thought myself it was interesting. But you notice I didn't get all wrought up about it and start hanging around to get a look at the girl, and even if I had I wouldn't even dream of stepping into a game like this and marrying her myself."

Deborah Enters a Great Adventure

HONEYMOON MOUNTAIN

by Frances Shelley Wees
OUR NEWEST SERIAL

Far up in the mountains of the Pacific Coast, in the old-world atmosphere of a secluded estate, the lovely, sophisticated Deborah had been reared. Instead of marrying the fortune-hunting suitor named by her family, she offered another man $50,000 to act as substitute for one year to satisfy the stipulation of a will. But he fell in love with her!

START READING THIS FINE STORY NOW

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

Chronic Influenza.

PALM SPRINGS, CALIF.—I came out here to get rid of my influenza. But as I pen these despairing words, my influenza is cuddled up to this inflamed bosom. This is not the puny, trifling influenza of the interior, but the sun-kissed, extra-special influenza of golden California—the one outstanding product of this coast which our tourists do not advertise.

In the chronic form, it's like visiting knife-folks from back East, arriving in the fall and hanging on all winter. The kind I have stays long enough to make you wish you were dead and not quite long enough to kill you.

After swallowing so many different remedies I am, as you might say, full of conflicting emulsions. When I sneeze my watch stops. When I cough sea lions get jealous and I seem to feel a lot of things giving way inside of me. When I open my mouth somebody sticks in either a pill or a thermometer and neither one helps.

Testing Drunken Drivers.

FOR testing drunken drivers the Cleveland police have a device named the ophthalmic televisual stereoscope. But why not just ask the suspect to pronounce it and abide by the results?

Old times back home, we had our own system. We didn't follow the New York scheme of inviting the alleged inebriate to say "Sissie Fitzgerald," because he'd probably take refuge in his constitutional rights as a southern gentleman and refuse to bandy a lady's name in any such place as the calaboose.

Under our plan, if a citizen was lying in the street and his fingers didn't move, he was intoxicated. But if even his little finger moved, he merely was resting.

But we didn't have alcoholic automobiles to pester us. The surplus population was reduced with firearms or cutlery, thus giving everybody a chance.

Mankind's Real Humanity.

WHAT with this and that, just when a fellow is almost ready to decide that the human race should be charged off as practically a total loss, something happens.

This time it happened in a little mine in Nova Scotia where the calm heroism of two men, panned with the body of their dead comrade at the bottom of a caved-in shaft, was matched by the magnificent gallantry, the incredible endurance of volunteer rescuers, who, by day and night, unceasingly labored on in momentary peril of death for themselves to save the lives of that trapped pair—and did save them.

And a week or so before that it happened when a young girl dragged the only other survivors of an airplane crash out of the flaming wreckage and ministered to them and forgot her own hurts while she waded long miles down a snow-drifted mountain to give the alarm, and, having given it, staggered back again to do what else she might.

Bankers Versus Politics.

POLITICS certainly makes estranged bedfellows.

But a Presidential campaign or two behind us and across the scene with thunderous tread stalked the sacred white cows of big money, their udders dripping wisdom, their gentlest bellows harkened to with eager ears by candidates and delegates alike. Statecraft mingled with high finance was what they offered in a rich and creamy measure to one and all—the pontifical Mitchell, the omnipotent Dawes, the infallible Insull, the wondrous Wiggin (subsequently known as the uncovered Wiggin). And lo, the voice of Owen D. Young was heard in the land.

But now, alas, where are the Baruchs of yesteryear?

Why, if this summer the average distinguished or, as the case may be, distinguished international banker tries to get into either national convention they'll charge him admission.

Meandering Horsemen.

A DARING soul, residing in a back corner of Brazil, decided to ride horseback to New York. After jogging along some weeks in what might be described as a series of general directions, he reached Rio Janeiro, only to discover he'd already traveled 1,200 miles out of his way.

The name is given as Senor Severino Moura Fonseca, but the gentleman certainly behaved as though he were a congressional investigating committee. Why, he even outwandered Senator Black of Alabama, and up until the other day, when the administration threw a net over him, the senator held the world's championship for loose wandering.

It's startling, isn't it, how suddenly the great silence descends upon a statesman who gets out of line with the top bosses?

Life was that, Tubby was convinced.

Tubby put his head down into his coat and groaned. It sounded like a groan, although he was certainly not about it; and even if it was a situation, which it wasn't, he felt someone ought to react to it

THANK YOU, McLEAN NEWS

The Tiger Post staff, speaking for the high school, wishes to express appreciation to The McLean News for giving space and time to the school news each week. The home town paper spends money each year in allowing this, and we do thank this institution for this service.

EDITORIAL

This final issue of the Tiger Post for the school year of 1935-36 is hereby dedicated to the seniors of the Centennial class. The seniors will be greatly missed next year, but everyone is rejoicing with them because of their accomplishments. The entire student body wishes the seniors much luck, success and happiness in the future. Those who plan to attend college have not finished their school days, but the dearest days of their life have been spent. The graduates who will not have the wonderful opportunity of attending college can cherish the dear memories of their high school education. The seniors this year have enjoyed many privileges and have been allowed many social activities, therefore, the class should be very grateful to the faculty, school board, and the many others who made all these pleasures possible.

SCHOOL CLOSSES FRIDAY, MAY 15

The last day of this school term is May 15. It will be given over to the classes for their class picnics.

McLean high school has had a very successful year in all of its phases. The enrollment for the year has been slightly over three hundred. The school has produced winning football and basketball teams, winning agriculture teams, and many literary winners. A most favorable report was made on this school by the supervisor from the state department of education. McLean high school ranks higher than most schools in towns the size of this, and is one of the highest ranking schools in the Southern Accredited List of Secondary Schools and Colleges. The band, which is a young one, has many outstanding members, and as a whole has made a good record. The Tigerettes form an organization that is an asset to our school. The home economics girls represented the high school at the state rally with some very good work. All in all, the entire district represented should be proud of the McLean high school.

COMMENCEMENT SERMON PREACHED SUNDAY NIGHT

Rev. D. D. Sumrall of Wellington brought a most inspirational commencement sermon to the Centennial senior class, with their assembled parents, on Sunday evening. His subject was "Life."

The song leader for the evening was Mrs. Cecil G. Goff, and Mrs. Willie Boyett was pianist. Ministers assisting were: Revs. Goff, Bonine and Sharp. Mr. Leeds and R. L. Floyd played an instrumental duet and Mrs. Goff sang a solo.

SENIORS ENJOY PICNIC

The room mothers of the senior class entertained them at a picnic at Lake Sand Spur, last Friday evening, with Mrs. Chas. E. Cooke as cabin hostess.

Boating, swimming and eating could not help but make those present have a good time. After dark, the entire group gathered about the camp fire and sang until a late hour. They were accompanied by Leonard Brawley, on his guitar. All room mothers and their husbands, Misses McCarty and Kennedy, and Mr. Harding were with the seniors. Clyde Andrews and friend were guests.

LAST ASSEMBLY TUESDAY

Supt. Cryer was in charge of the last assembly exercises of the year, on Tuesday morning. The first thing on program was a style show by the second year clothing class. They displayed tailored dresses and children's play suits.

The last half of the program was a pep meeting with the Tigerettes on the stage. Many songs and yells were participated in. Each senior made a short farewell talk and each faculty member spoke a few words, then the seniors left the hall while the student body sang the school song, "That Good Old Tiger Line." M. H. S. for two days and nights.

Many guests were present, and they were welcomed by the assembled students and teachers.

SENIOR PARTY

BAND MEMBER TO CLEVELAND

Jesse Dean Cobb, accompanied by his instructor, Mr. C. H. Leeds, left Tuesday morning to attend the national music festival in Cleveland, Ohio. Jesse Dean won the right to enter this contest when he was accorded the rating of highly superior in the music festival at Amarillo. If he wins that rating in this contest, he will receive the title of "All American Cornet Player in the 18-year-old Group." Jesse Dean is playing in the 18-year-and-over division, although he is only 16.

This young musician is bringing an untold amount of fame to his high school, and he went with the entire school system hoping that he would have much success.

SENIOR RECEPTION

The annual reception for the parents of the seniors, and the high school faculty, was held in the beautifully decorated showroom of the Chevrolet garage, Tuesday evening.

The receiving line was formed by the seniors and faculty. A most unusual and entertaining program was presented to the large audience, as follows: orchestra, cowboy songs, J. T. Graham, Eugene Greer and Leonard Brawley; one act play, "Mary Jane's Feather Bed." Ava and Eva Swafford, Maxene Downer, Leonard Brawley and Cecil Jones; "Pioneer Women of Texas," Marie Landers; class history, Gwynne Carpenter; accordion and saxophone duet, Mr. John Harding and J. T. Graham; class prophecy, J. D. Back; pioneer songs by girls' quartet, Marie Landers, Duella Mann, Ava Swafford and Mavis Brewer.

The napkins and other motifs carried out the Centennial idea. Delicious refreshments were served and a social hour followed.

SENIOR FLAG FLOATS ON HIGH

The usual junior-senior fight was engaged in with fervor during the last part of last week. The senior flag stayed on the flag pole longer than any other in the history of the school. It was removed by the juniors after it had floated over M. H. S. for two days and nights.

HOME ECONOMICS REPORT

The second year girls presented their tailored dresses in assembly Tuesday morning. A number of attractive dresses were made at a very nominal cost, the prices ranging from $1.75 to $5.00. Several of the play suits that were made during the first part of this semester were modeled by Nancy Wilson, Wynette Caldwell, Dorothy Humphreys and Laveta Jo Gunn.

AGRICULTURE REPORT

The agriculture boys attended the state judging contest on April 24-28. There were over 2000 boys competing, representing 323 schools. There were 103 poultry teams and 135 livestock teams.

The McLean poultry team placed fourth, which is considered very good. There were two boys who made a perfect score on the examination, out of 309, and those two boys were Wilbur Lee Wilson and George Chambers of McLean.

The reports from the livestock and dairy teams have not yet been received, so the boys do not know how they placed. The boys report that they saw some of the best livestock they have ever seen. The boys made a pleasure trip to Galveston and saw some very interesting sights. This was the first time these boys had seen the gulf.

The agriculture judging teams made the following records this year:

Poultry—4th at A. & M. or state, competing with 103 teams; 2nd at Clarendon, competing with nine; 1st at Quail, competing with 9; 1st at Lubbock, competing with 33.

Team members are: Wilbur Lee Wilson, George Chambers, J. D. Back, Vern Harris and Cecil Jones. Out of the 309 boys taking part in the state contest, Wilbur Lee Wilson and George Chambers made the highest score on examinations, with a score of 100.

Livestock—3rd, Tulla, 14 teams; 1st, Shamrock, 11 teams; 7th, Amarillo, 17 teams; 6th Lubbock, 36 teams.

Team members, J. L. Rice, K. D.

McCoy, Bill Webb and Paris Hess. Dairy—3rd, Tulla, 16 teams; 3rd, Amarillo, 14 teams; 1st, Lubbock, 43 teams.

Team members, Joe (Plout) Hefner, Morse Ivey, W. L. Shelton and Wilson Shaw.

More Gay Prints! More Gay Flowers!

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

"what to wear." You will know.

The white pique bow and gilet trend sound a winsome note of freshness. The short pleated sleeves are distinctively chic. The little jacket is double-breasted and belted at the back. These brief perky youthful-type jackets, some of which look like basques, others flaunting animated peplum, are quite the rage. You may, however, if you wish, go to just the extreme opposite and have the coat made of print that tops your print dress, full-length buttoned down the front from neck to hem. Long or short, be sure your print dress has its matching coat, jacket, or cape.

If you are looking for something distinctively new and out of the ordinary in prints, here it is, pictured to the left. White shadow flowers on a dark background such as this is the very latest print news. Fancy, if you will, white shadow-outlined flowers against a rich Dubonnet red, or contrasting a vivid green ground, or gray or black or the color you like best. No happier choice could be made than this cool frock made of triple sheer print of bengal. It is dark enough to be practical and it is light enough to look and to feel summery and sheer. Marquisette sleeves cut full and shirred at the wrist with appliques of the flower motif cut from the print itself and a very feminine jabot of the marquisette, contribute to the charm of this gown.

We couldn't resist including the cunning flower-trimmed hat in this group. It fits so perfectly into the scheme of things colorful and entrancingly spring-like. It is just such a headpiece as will crown any flower-print dress with glory. The shiny black of its basket-weave straw is contrasted by a spray of gay posies—yellow bachelor's buttons and blue cornflowers. The bow is of silk taffeta in matching cornflower blue.

OF NOVELTY COTTON

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Contours for swank is the message from fashion headquarters. This gay design is of checkerboard patterned cotton woven in navy and white. The cotton suitings and contours for this season are thrilling. A one-piece frock in white twill is worn under a coat. A printed silk scarf at waist and waist adds tone and gaiety. The hat is white felt embroidered in black and orange.

The White Ensemble of the loveliest ensembles seen was white in every detail—the ermine wrap, long white two strands of pearls, diamond necklace, a diamond hair clip and pure-white orchids pinned to a shoulder strap.

SECRET OF FEATS OF ENDURANCE ARE BARED BY FAKIR

Tells Writer How He Is Able to Walk on Hot Coals and Resist Stabs.

London.—Tahra Bey, who intrigued both science and romance by walking unscathed over a live bed of coals in England last summer, who later reposed peacefully on a bed of scythe blades, and submitted to dagger thrusts in throat and chest and a burial of 48 hours, has revealed how he can stand these things—some of them—and still live. Paul Brunton has recorded what the fakir told him in "A Search in Secret Egypt," just published in London.

Mr. Brunton had seen Tahara Bey fall into a trance ending in "catalepsy so rigid that he would have fallen like a dead man to the floor if his assistants had not caught him in their arms."

Supports Heavy Stone.

Stripped to the waist, he was then supported by the shoulders and ankles on sharpened scythe blades. A rough cube of solid rock granite, weighing a little more than a hundredweight and a half, was placed upon his bare stomach and struck, time after time, with a blacksmith's hammer. The body, remaining as taut and rigid as if made of iron, never yielded under the combination of terrific pressure and weight.

"Eventually," writes Mr. Brunton, "the stone split into two pieces, which fell resoundingly to the floor. Tahara Bey was lifted up, placed on his feet and supported by his two men. Apparently he was quite unconscious of what had happened and had not suffered any pain.

"Doctors examined him with interest and found that the scythe-blade edges had not left the slightest marks upon his skin! Nevertheless, the block of granite had left a strong red mark all over his abdomen."

In an interview later Tahara Bey explained that the two secrets—"though that is hardly the correct term"—which enabled him to perform his feats, were pressure on certain nerve centers of the body and ability to enter into the cataleptic coma.

In Cataleptic Coma.

According to the fakir, after finger pressure to draw the blood from the brain, certain nerve centers were struck with anesthesia. Cataleptic coma supervened when this pressure—combined with a "concentration of thought on the state of losing consciousness," and a relaxation of muscles and nerves, followed by a complete swallowing backward of the tongue and a brusque inhalation of air.

"Then," Tahra Bey added, "for about 25 minutes the flesh, automatically, will become totally insensible to pain, no matter how intense, how atrocious the latter might be."

"After countless stabs, his body remained unscarred. He explained to Mr. Brunton that, temporarily, he accelerated the circulation of the blood. This, in turn, accelerated the heart without over-driving it, and so swift a blood-flow helped to heal the wounds with surprising speed.

Tahra Bey's second action was to raise the temperature of the blood to fever heat, so destroying all germs and actually disinfecting the wounds. As a result, the wounds never suppurated and always healed completely within a few minutes, or, at worst, a few hours.

Witch Brings Rain but Is Struck by Lightning

Harrisburgh, Orange Free State.—A witch doctor who is credited with having "brought" rain to two farms in the Harrisburgh district was struck dead by the lightning in the storm that followed.

This remarkable story is vouched for by two leading farmers on whose properties the "magic" is said to have occurred.

The natives on the farms collected money to pay an old witch doctor on Mr. Bronn's farm to "make" rain. The old man was away but his son, who had been partially initiated into witch doctor's mysteries, accepted the offer.

The money was handed over and the young witch doctor took up his position outside his hut with a wife on either side. Then followed incantations and mystical signs.

Within half an hour, rain fell from a cloudless sky. It was confined to the two farms.

Not enough rain had fallen to satisfy the natives. They collected another subscription, which was offered only on condition that sufficient rain fell next time.

Again the incantations and signs. This time there was so much rain that not only were dams filled in the farms but fences were washed away in the flood.

There was a flash of lightning and the "doctor" was struck dead. The native women beside him were uninjured.

Elephant With Six Tusks

London.—An elephant suffering from tooth trouble is the scientific explanation given at Nairobi of the discovery in the Lamu district in Kenya of a unique six-tusked elephant. One tusk is normal, but the other five branches, some one foot and others two feet long and of a few inches diameter, each have a separate nerve cavity. An expert said that no natural dentistry had been observed in the case of elephants and this was a clear case of long-standing toothache.

Simple Lines in This Exclusive Model, Which Is a Perfect Utility Frock

Checks in crepe, silk, pique, linen or cotton lend the way to chic in this easy, casual, day dress. While the design emphasizes smooth slim lines, comfortable fullness for the skirt is provided by a wide inset at the front.

The model cuts quickly and easily, with only seams to join at the sides, panel and waistline. No troublesome armholes to discourage amateur dressmakers, as the sleeves and shoulder line belong to "one family," and a slim waistline is assured the minute you insert the back darts. This is a perfect utility frock for a multitude of daytime needs. You can make it as a house frock, too—it's so simple and quick to launder and, being collarless, even easier to iron.

Hard Work

THERE is no real success in any pursuit in life without hard work. "I find," said Livingstone, the great missionary explorer, when addressing the spinners of Glasgow, "that all eminent men work hard. Eminent geologists, mineralogists, men of science, work hard, and that both early and late." It matters not what position a man may occupy, as a general thing, his labor will constitute the measure of his success. Eminence in any profession or calling is only attained by toil. There is hard, earnest, persistent work somewhere before this end is reached.

COMMITTING SUICIDE?

Since the first newspaper went to press, advertising has been, and always will be, the most sensible method of direct contact between the merchant and the consumer. When a merchant fails to take advantage of this fact—when he sits idly by without placing his merchandise before the people—he is taking the life of his own business. Suicide is a crime—especially when the well-being of the entire community is at stake. You cannot blame the people of Farmersville when they go out of town to buy their needs if you make no effort to prevent it. The people who buy out of town do so because other towns flood Farmersville with all kinds of advertising. They do not realize the home merchant can furnish the same merchandise at the same cost, simply because the home merchant will not place his merchandise before the people. You are cutting your own throat when you fail to advertise. When you cut your own throat the blood of your business is lost, and your own fellow citizen turns his back on you and gets his supplies from the man who knows "advertising pays."—Farmersville Times.

CROOKED ROWS

How the world does change. Just about the time we have reached the zenith of perfection in almost any given line of endeavor, we suddenly discover we are "all wet" and our whole procedure, developed through years of study and application, is thrown into the discard. This even applies to agriculture, the oldest of livelihoods. When I was a boy on the farm, the man who could plow the straightest rows was considered the best farmer in the neighborhood. The farmer who carelessly laid off his field with crooked and point rows, was almost despised by his neighbors for his apparent carelessness and indifference. But after we have spent a generation in cultivating the art of making straight rows, we are suddenly informed that that practice must be discontinued in favor of terracing and contouring — and the farmer who permits straight rows to be plowed on his field is committing an unpardonable sin against himself and his neighbor. Such is life.—State Line Tribune.

LOWER WATER RATES

Thanks to the city council for making low summer water rates. This will tend to make Friendly Farmersville more beautiful this summer by allowing the people to water flowers and shrubs.—Farmersville Times.

With the continuance of the drought many Leonard yards will go without blossoms this year. A great deal of effort by many home owners and house holders in this city will be wasted unless some provision is made to water the lawns and yards. At the present, water rates are too high to be used for watering yards and lawns. Unless the city council follows the example set by Farmersville, Leonard will not reap the harvest sown in the Centennial clean-up and beautification program of recent weeks.—Leonard Graphic.

PEOPLE YOU KNOW

On every street in town there are lovers of flowers, yards, gardens, trees.
They love their tulips, jonquils, roses, as much as some love the dogs that destroy the blossoming beauty.

Last night when the moon came up the dogs on a certain street had a big party. They ran, jumped and rolled. If there was a fence they jumped it.

They came to a yard that had freshly-planted beds of petunias, zinnias, pansies, sweet peas, sweet alyssum, moss roses—beautiful names of beautiful flowers!

The dogs jumped, rolled, pounded. The little plants were no more. 'Too late, their beauty-loving owner arrived and saw the ruins of spring.

Do you wonder that he will poison dogs?
