The Faculty Flag Pledge

CANTA MONICA, CALIF.-I I never heard of a law compelling a private individual in times of peace to take an oath to defend our flag and respect our institutions. Neither do I know of laws compelling us to give public jobs to men and women who refuse to take such an oath or requiring us to leave them in their jobs should they violate that oath. From the President of this country on down, the run of officeholders must swear to uphold the Constitution and support the government. Should any one of them wilfully fail to do so, the offender is liable to removalamld loud cheers! Irvin S. Cobb Then why not include teachers and college professors, those whose high task it is to mould youth Into stuff fit for citizenship and civic responsibility?

Why should they be suffered to peddle sedition and yet go on drawing salaries from the public fund-these people who claim they have conscientious scruples when what most of us think they really suffer from is Communistic biliousness? And for the students, as I understand it, the right of free speech and the gift of free education do not mean license to spout treason on a campus or scorn America in a classroom.

A red flag fits an auction sale, but I don't believe I'd ever get used to seeing it afloat over a district schoolhouse.

Political Plagiarism

DOLITICS certainly produces copycats. First, the young Republicans meet, being greeted by a typical bounding juvenile, who's the last surviving drummer boy of Shiloh. Then the young Democrats come rallying as fast as wheelchairs will bring them, with their breakfast shawls and their ear-trumpets. The self-proclaimed "young" leader of any party is usually somebody who hopes to set a pa-triotic example to his grandchildren and at the same time get the old job

The Republicans hold a Grass-Roots convention. So this month at Atlanta there'll be what you might call a grass-widow convention for the revolting southern Democrats-absolutely too revolting for words, to hear Jim Farley talk. You see, they've been divorced, but the decree is not yet final.

Southern Democrats are great hands for seceding and remaining so every day in the year except just one day. On election, they become reconciled long enough to vote the straight Democratic ticket. Twenty minutes later, they're off the reservation again. I hear a number of bankers will attend. This would seem to indicate a changing trend. For quite a while after 1929, very few bankers went to Atlanta voluntarily.

Going Nuts in Hollywood F, WHILE touring Los Angeles, you see a bushy-headed, wild-eyed, elderly gentleman aimlessly wandering about, don't jump too soon at the conclusion that he's a typical specimen of our famous coterie of hermits.

You see, they laid out Los Angeles and environs on the ground-plan of a drunken angleworm, and the system of numbering houses is further designed to encourage raving insanity. So what you behold may merely be an ex-resi dent of the Middle West, who came out here years ago to retire and bought him a cozy bungalow and incautiously went for a stroll and has been trying ever since to find his way back home again,

Not all the nuts were nutty when they first arrived. Many of them got that way trying to trace street addresses. After a year and a half here, I'm beginning to have trouble with the knee-reflexes myself.

But there's one consolation about going crazy in Hollywood. Unless you leave town, nobody would ever no tice it.

Gen. Liggett's Passing

So HUNTER LIGGETT is dead at seventy-eight-the only contemporary lieutenant general of the United States army. For 50-odd years, he wore with gallantry and with honor the uniform of his country.

He fought Indians; fought border bandits; fought Spaniards in Cuba; fought Germans in France; and, at the end, fought off death for many dragging months.

I saw him overseas, commanding our splendid First corps, which he made more splendid still. He was as plain as an old shoe, and as easy to get along with. His officers respected him, his soldiers loved him. They went where he sent 'em, and if they failed in their objective, they didn't come back. They went instead to report at the silis of the judgment seat the reason why they failed.

Behind his back, the Buck privates called him "Uncle Ligg"-that ought to give you the idea.

They'll like him over there-Israel Putnam, and Stonewall Jackson, and Forrest, and Grant, and all the rest of VOU know, boys and girls, a few weeks ago, I started looking for I automobile yarns. I figured that in an area where thousands of people owned cars, there ought to be a flock of guys who had adventures riding in them. Well, sir, those auto stories are just beginning to show up now. Not many of them-not nearly as many as I would like to see. But enough to show that, at least, I wasn't entirely wrong in

I've got another auto story for you now, incidentally, and-well-it's the funniest sort of automobile yarn you ever heard of. Because Harris Budner, the man whose story it is, wasn't even in the car when things started to happen to him. He got his adventure, just by standing alongside of a gas-buggy.

Now 85 East Bennington street is the address of the cobbler shop that he has run on the same spot, in East Boston, for 37 years. And It was right there that his adventure took place on the sixth of Aug-

"It still seems like a dreadful nightmare," he says. "It is the one experience of my life that I am lucky to be alive to tell."

It was a hot, muggy August day, and through the windows of his shop, Harris could see that it was getting dark a bit earlier than usual, Storm Clouds Cast an Ominous Darkness.

Taking a look at the sky, though, he saw the reason for that premature darkness. Storm clouds were gathering overhead, shutting out the sun. He started putting away his tools and cleaning up his shop. It was seven-thirty, and time he was getting home. But before he had finished, a car drew up in front of the door and a young lad came in and asked him if he could repair a torn auto top. Harris had done many a job of that sort so he picked up a needle and thread and one or two other tools, and went out to the curb.

In Which Harris Is Abducted.

He stepped on the running board and reached over the imitation leather top, looking for the tear. His hand probed the smooth surface in vain. There

In an instant Harris knew that something was wrong. But before he had a chance to move, he felt a push from behind.

The lad standing behind him shoved him into the rear seat of the car and four men, hiding inside, covered him with a couple of heavy blankets. Then the man at the wheel stepped on the gas, and the car shot away from the curb and went rolling down the street.

"It was hot enough outside," says Harris, "but it was hotter under those blankets. I screamed and they choked me. I gasped for air and they thrust a gun in my face. 'One more yip out of you,' they told me, 'and you'll be a

It Took a Tough Skull to Survive This.

They were going through a crowded section of the city then and Harris knew they wouldn't fire that gun. He began to kick and struggle, trying to

A gun butt crashed down on his head and he sank back to the floor. Again and again that gun descended on his cranium, Harris says. Dazed, and unable to move, Harris lay still. He lost all sense of time -all sense of everything except the rolling motion of the car.

They Literally Tore the Clothes Off Him,

He couldn't tell you how long he rode, but at length the car pulled up at a deserted spot on the edge of the Lynn marshes. The young thugs rolled him out and began going through his clothes in search of money.

They literally tore the clothes off him as they went through them, garment by garment. They then threw him into the marshes and left him there to die.

Cold Rain Revives Unfortunate Victim.

Still unable to move, Harris lay in the marsh, wondering if he would ever regain the use of his muscles. For half an hour he waited for his faculties to return. Then the clouds opened up and the cold rain, spattering on his face, He got slowly to his feet-looked around him. The locality was strange and he didn't have the slightest idea where he was but he saw a light in the distance and began walking toward It. The light came from a house, where two women occupants screamed when they saw the disheveled condition of his clothing. Harris turned away and staggered down the road. A short distance away, he saw the lights of a small store. He headed toward it, his feet dragging, but before he had gone far, he met a man and woman on foot who took him in hand and led him to the nearest police station. The police called a doctor and the doctor recognized Harris as the man who had mended his shoes for him when he went to school in East Boston. He dressed Harris' wounds and sent him to a relief station for further

The cops had Harris in two or three times to look over hold-up uspects but he couldn't identify any of them. And incidentally, he wishes it understood that in the future he will mend automobile tops only for those who come well supplied with references. Well, sir, that's another automobile story. However, many of the new velvets are gorgeously colorful. They abound in rich reds, purples, greens, sapphire and golden hues.

The message of color is eloquently told in the trio of formal velvet modes pictured. Each is a Paris creation, for French couturiers are most enthusiastic in regard to the importance of velvet in the mid-winter style picture. For the striking evening ensemble as worn by the smartly costumed lady of fashion seated, Bruyere employs a magnificent stiff velvet in deep blue. Speaking of the color glory of the new velvets calls to mind a superb evening ensemble (not illustrated) which Lelong creates of cerise red velutia, a fabric woven like a semi-transparent bagheera. Its lack-luster surface and the fact that it is so sheer one can see through it almost as if it were chiffon, add infinitely to its charm. SILK MILITAIRE By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The military trend in fashions is in creasingly apparent. The afternoon gown pictured interprets the theme in a novel and attractive way. It is fash-loned of high-grade black silk crepe as is also the latticed cardigan. The blonse is likewise in matching crepe, overwoven, however, with silver threads to simulate a coat of mail in keeping with the military movement. The offface black felt hat is up to the moment in "lines."

ITALIAN INFLUENCE IN SLEEVE STYLES

The style of sleeve has been noticeably affected by the exhibition of Italian art in Paris. Very full sleves have the preference, with a few close-fitted ones, often detachable and shaped like those in Italian portraits, which resemble a long mitten reaching above the elbow. These mitten sleeves are often in velvet that contrasts in material and color with the rest of the

Some of the models are made en tirely of vivid colored transparent plastic materials, such as sequin on a dull black rayon velvet dress with matching band at the round neckline. The art exhibition has also inspired Bouffant sleeves, slashed over contrasting colored fabric, as well as very long medie val sleeves that fall to the hem of the skirt in panel style.

AAA Is No More Who Will Pay Now? Only 11 Can Run Fast The State of the Union

The Supreme court decision rejecting AAA, the "agricultural adjustment act," affects every American directly. Issued just as the President announced his program to balance the national budget within one thousand million dollars, the decision upsets that administration program. Men with large incomes, of whom few survive, may worry, for the decision takes from the government seven hundred million a year of processing taxes that will have to be made good elsewhere. The manufacturers', or processing, tax, handed along to the little people, was, in reality, a sales tax on life's necessities-cotton cloth, flour, meat.

The question is, Who will provide cash promised the farmers, since the Supreme court will not sanction the sales tax, disgulsed as a "pross" tax? Whence will come the hundreds of millions the government owes to farmers under its AAA promises and has not yet paid? The farmers did their part, the government could hardly fail to do its part by paying.

International News Service sports department shows that out of about 1,800,000,000 human beings on earth only 11 are known that can run a mile at really high speed. Of these not more than four would have any chance of beating an individual named Glenn Cunningham of Kansas. You would think that the billion unknown uncounted among the so-called "backward races," many with native energy, free of civilization's handicaps, could easily be trained to beat the 11 fast ones, but it is not probable.

The President's address "on the state of the Union" was, like nearly all Presidential speeches, an address on the state of the administration.

Lloyd George, playing a little polltics with his friend Prime Minister Baldwin, exults in the noble moral uprising of the British, rejecting the terrible, immoral plan to divide Ethiopia and placate Italy. Something "without precedent," Lloyd George calls it.

Where England is concerned, "dividing up" is, indeed, almost without precedent. England's custom as a rule is to swallow things whole, as she did with the Transvaal, India, and other territories that have kept her old fighting flag always in the sunshine.

Children will learn with pleasure that it is not necessary to eat spinach unless you like it. Other vegetables take the place of spinach with a menacing person called "Pop-Eye."

A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the real secret of relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has become. It gives the right kind of help, and right amount of help. Taking a little less each time, gives the bowels a chance to act of their own accord, until they are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin contains senna and cascara—both natural laxatives that form no habit. The action is gentle, but sure. It will relieve any sluggishness or bilious condition due to constipation without upset.

If not, you should get an electrician to estimate the cost of installing more of them in your home. Of course, this estimate will cost you nothing.

Work of this kind does not cost as much as you probably think it does, and really without enough outlets you can't expect to get the maximum benefit and pleasure you have a right to obtain from your electric appliances.

French scientists who have been conducting experiments in east Greenland say there is a layer of ice in the air over the polar regions. This ice celling (congealed atmoshere a million times finer than water) is situated approximately 60 miles above the earth.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs is one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxines.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the system. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

JESUS PREPARES FOR HIS WORK

Lesson text, Luke 3:21, 22; 4:1-13. Golden text. Luke 4:3-"Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve."

The time for the ministry of Jesus arrived. But before considering that, cause for the incarnation less. God it seems well that the ministry of had a purpose, and Jesus was vic-John the forerunner should be recognized. The scripture says that the with a victory over evil and the de-Word of God came upon him. It had been almost four hundred years since that had been said concerning any man. John was the first prophet of God to His people in just about 386 years. "The place of John's ministry was in the wilderness or uninhabited area, presumably not far from Jericho, in which he had spent his youth and young manhood. (Luke 1:80). Speaking in fulfillment of prophesy (Isaiah 40:3) as the voice of one crying in the wilderness, John's message announced the coming of the Kingdom of God, called upon all men to repent of their sins, and submit to baptism as a public confession, and a public pledge to lead a new life."

This was a strange and new thing among the Jews, the children of Abraham. It did not take John long to inform the people that they could no longer rely upon the fact that they were the seed of Abraham, but from that hour on, every tree should be known by its own fruit. Further this public act was to signify that they were, as Sam Jones said, "to quit their meanness." Great numbers were struck by the preaching of John the Baptist, and many were led by the power of God to present themselves for baptism.

It was during this ministry of John that one day as some of the men were standing together between services or preaching times, Jesus walked along the river. John immed-cannot be wasted by waiting for the tately said, "Behold the Lamb of city surgeon. Many a local man has God." Soon Jesus presented Him- accomplished wonderful feats under self for baptism. Many have wondered why the Spirit led Jesus away to be tempted. We can only guess. Jesus' greatest difficulties in His world ministry were to be with Satan and not with men. It may have been that such a cirumstance of defeat of Satan would mean that Jesus was victor and Satan knowing his defeat would hinder the torious. Thus began the ministry stoyer of human souls.

YOUR SURGEON

A surgeon comes under the classification of Specialist. He should at least have considerable experience and have a better and more defined knowledge of anatomy; of course, all doctors must study anatomy and are required to pass rigid examinations on this very important subject. Last week I mentioned that the small pecialist, certainly no one needs a wider range of general experience than he man who intends to specialize as surgeon. While the cities are full of surgeons, many country towns and smaller cities get by with their local talent when the emergency arises and, strange as it may seem, the end results are just as good on the average. Many Cases Require Immediate

"But think again. Couldn't some on otice your rising interest in Bob and e disturbed at it?"

"It's absurd to pretend to misundertand you. Of course, you mean Roger Garth-don't you?"

"I do."
"Well, then, since you want plain speaking, that man also professes to care for me. But you must not take these things too seriously."

"It may be they need to be taken in serious way. You know, of course, that a large proportion of the murders that are done have love for their mo-

"Not real love, you mean a sort of fealousy or desire for possession." "Yes, that is just what I do mean. Now, two of the men who loved you ave been killed in the strangest, most inexplicable fashion." "But you can't assume any connection between Corey's death and Bob's!" "Perhaps not a connection, but may they not have been done by the same

"Who?" "Answer that question yourself. Who wants you so desperately that he would commit murder to get you?"

"How utterly absurd! No one does." "You know better than that, Mrs. Malden. Can you not think of one?" "I suppose you mean Mr. Garth. But it's too ridiculous! Do you mean that he killed Corey, in order that he might marry me? And that he then killed Bob Coles, because he, too, was fond of me?" "Something like that."

Stone spoke gravely, but Perilla heard the ring of conviction in his

"But," she went on, greatly puzzled, "how could it be done? How could Bob have been murdered? I don't believe that for a moment."

"What do you believe?" "I believe it was a natural death-"What! After your other experience?

Do you believe Mr. Malden died a natural death?" "No, I can't believe that." "Then the circumstances are the same. Since, of course, you didn't kill "And you're imagining somebody killed both Corey and Bob, and by the same means!"

"I am considering such a possibility. This is not a case of clues and evidence and testimony; it is a subtle crime, planned with a diabolical cleverness. It has succeeded so far. It may go further. But if there is another murder it will be by the same method as these two."

CHAPTER IX

"But these two deaths weren't alike," said Perilla. "With Mr. Malden there were three people-myself, my maid and the chauffeur. They were not in the room, as I was, but well-how do you theorize the thing was done? You must have a notion how those murders could have been accomplished, no matter how improbable."

"Of course I have," replied Stone. "but my belief is not only so improbable but so unbelievable that I can't suggest it until I get a little more

"Look here, Mr. Stone, that room where Bob died was unenterable, wasn't It?" "You don't read many detective stories, do you?" "I so seldom find a good one. I don't care for gangster yarns and that sort of thing, but I do like a wellthought-out problem."

"One of the favorite plots of the detective story writers is the so-called 'hermetically sealed room.' This has been used over and over again and I confess it always has a charm for me. You know the formula. The expected man does not appear at breakfast, or whenever he is looked for. Servants are sent to his room, but fall to get a response. Then they break in. The victim is found dead in his room, to which there is no possibility of ac-

"Just like Bob!" "Yes. Now, if you've read many, you'll know these stories are always solved in a possible, plausible, interesting way. An experienced reader can usually tell what that way will be, for there are only about a half a dozen of them in all. Doubtless this type of plot first appeared in Zangwill's 'Big Bow Mystery.' A corking story, only second to 'Trent's Last Case.' in this tale of Zangwill's all the solutions are suggested and tried out. One, of course, is the right one. I am not sure it is the best one or the most likely one, but it is vastly entertaining. However, the point I am making is that if there are so many possible ways, in fiction, of solving a mystery of a sealed room, there must be the same ways in real life, and we cannot say any room is unenterable,"

"Then you've only to see which method suits the case of Bob Coles to know how his murder-if it is murder-was accomplished-and, can you explain Corey's death?"

"Well, Mrs. Malden, here's just the trouble. Of those six and perhaps more methods of getting into the sealed room not one fits the facts of our problems. Each method, though clever in itself, is lacking in some element necessary to fit it to our two cases."

"You will tell me about those different ways of getting into the room?

"Yes, I will, at the first opportunity." Perilla went off with Rosy to the lounge, and found Hilda waiting for ber with the news that she had concluded not to go back with her to New York.

"You don't entirely know just what you're up against now," Hilda said, "and if things should clear up and get more serene I could come along at any time, and stay as long as you'll have me."

"It would be better, Hilda," and Perilla really felt relieved at the new plan. "You see, the fairy godmother Madame Malden, so Mr. Stone informs me, is there waiting for me, and I shall have to play up to her more or less. Well, let's all try to be entertaining now."

But it was bard sledding. Bridge was tried, but the interest was slight They danced a few turns, but Perilla said she couldn't stand it. She excused herself and went off to her own room. Rosy followed her and the two had a little bedtime chat. "I don't know, Rosy dear," Perilla said, in answer to questions. "I am not exactly afraid, but I have a vague feeling of fear that things will happen. I dislike that whole Washington and Richmond element, though I don't know why I should. I feel so alone without Corey. Mr. Stone is doing all he can, and Mr. Garth is kindness itself. Yet I feel as if I were alone in a dark forest and all unable to find my way out."

"Well, do brace up, dear. You certainly have enough friends and help-

The next day Perilla's party found themselves en route for New York city. Perilla and Jane Latimer had a drawing room in one car and Stone and Garth had each a compartment in the next car. They all went together to the dining car for luncheon, and afterward Perilla said, "Won't you come to my drawing room and try a rubber or two of contract?"

They did, and though a trifle crowded it was pleasanter than to go to the club car to play. After three rubbers Perilla said "I wish we had arranged to return by plane. I want to get home and see how things are. When will you be over to New York, Roger?" "As soon as you want or need me, dear. I have to attend to some few quick action matters, and then I'll come along." Stone watched the speaker from the corner of his eye. Not so much the words as the tone in which they were uttered surprised him. He hadn't heard Garth speak to Perilla before with quite that note of affection.

Could he be a murderer? That finelooking man, with the calm, serene countenance-no, it was too ridiculous But these two baffling deaths must be explained, whether the explanation were ridiculous or not.

Garth did not look like the type of man whose deep emotions are concealed but ready to break out on occasion. Suppose he had been so desperately in love with Perilla that he killed Corey to get her, and then fear ing a rival in Bob, he killed him, too.

But it was unthinkable. Stone had said he knew the criminal, but he couldn't be sure. How could one be sure when there was nothing to be sure of? And yet, he had watched Garth closely all through this trip, and he felt there was something wrong about him. Something secret and sinister. But so vague and elusive it could not be put into words. Nor had he been able to get an opportunity for a long talk alone with the other. Several times he had tried and failed. He had wanted to sound him about his views on the Washington situation and as to his views on crime generally, but Garth, without seeming to evade the detective, pre vented any such occasions,

As the train drew into the station at New York, Perilla felt a deeper premonition of impending trouble.

She had schooled herself to the presence of Madame Malden in her home, for Corey's mother must always receive her best attention, but it seemed to her tortured mind that the presence there of Farman, the lawyer. was more than she could bear up un der. And why should he be entertained there, anyway? Let him go to some hotel-She was roused from her thoughts by the voice of Tony Gaskell, who piloted her out to his waiting car. Malcolm was there, too, already welcoming Jane,

Fleming Stone and Garth sald goodby for the present and went their ways, as the quartet started towards

"Take me right home, Mal," she asked, "but Tony, you take Jane around to see mother; she'll be hungry for news."

"I'm certainly going with you," said Malcolm. "I want to protect you from the old 'un."

"Yes, send Tony along with me," said Jane, laughing. "You don't want too many breaking in on the dowager duchess.'

When Perilla entered her apartment the sour-faced creature ensconced on a "love-seat" favored her daughter-inlaw with a baleful glance and seemed to shrink from her as the girl came forward. But Perilla bravely put forth a welcoming hand, which the old lady ignored.

"Well," she said, biting off her words, "so you're up to your tricks again. I suppose you killed off that poor young man, for reasons of your own, just as you killed my son."

Perilla drew herself up with a new

"Madame Malden," she said, "you shall not remain under my roof and talk to me like that. I am in my own home now, not yours, and I forbid any remarks or hints suggesting that I would harm the man I loved. One more such speech, and I shall have you removed, forcibly, if necessary."

"Hoity tolty," almost screamed the dame. "Who are you to dictate what I shall say or leave unsaid?"

"I am the woman your son loved enough to make his wife, and as his widow I shall protect his memory, even from his own mother." "Fine talk!" said the old lady, "very fine talk, but you must know there's another side to that story. Where's Farman! Farman, where are you?" The lawyer, who must have been within hearing distance, came into the room, sheepishly. Like all bullies, to be afraid of this new Perilla. Still wearing her hat and furs she stood facing Madame Malden, and her attitude, as Malcolm said afterward, was "terrible as an army with banners."

"What are you doing here, Mr. Farman?" Perilla asked, scornfully, "Is it your habit to settle down in houses where you are not invited?"

"He is invited," Madame Malden squealed. "I invited him myself. This is my son's house, and as such I am mistress here."

"No," said Perilla, quietly, "no, Madame Malden, you are not mistress here. Any more than I am mistress of your house. And unless you make yourself more possible, you cannot stay here."

"You may not be staying here yourself, Mrs. Malden," said Farman, his little eyes glaring at Perilla. "You may find yourself in that building that New York boasts, with an unbeautifu. name, The Tombs."

"And you may find yourself in prison for that very speech!" cried Malcolm angered beyond caution. "Shall I put him out, Perilla?"

"Yes. Ring that second bell for Dillon."

"Don't trouble," sald Farman, striving to be sarcastic but only succeeded in showing fear. "I'm only too glad to go, anyway. You see, Madame Maiden, I can't stay here.'

"You're right, you can't," and Malcolm took him by the arm and put him through the door into the hall, "You'd be out of this house in fifteen minutes, or I'll know the reason why."

Farman, really glad to get away from conditions that seemed to be getting more formidable, basely deserted his employer and fled.

"Come back here!" Madame Malden screamed. "Come back, Farman, 1

"I don't think they'll be used again by an interloper. Now, Madame Malden, do you want to stay here, on condition that you behave with common decency, or do you want to go elsewhere for your stay in New York?"

"Here I am, and here I shall stay! Don't think you've heard the last of this matter!"

"No, I didn't think that," and Perilla spoke soberly. "But why do you hold these stupid opinions? You know I didn't kill Corey, and you know I didn't kill Bob Coles. Why should 1?"

The old woman glared at her, having no definite answer. "Oho," said Malcolm, "so von're tak ing that tack again, are you? I see by the fire in your eye that your dementla is coming on again. Well, we have good asylums in New York, and it is easy here to slip patients in. As I told you in Richmond on another occasion. I'll see that you have a good room, and careful attendance."

Something in Malcolm's glance frightened his hearer, and she began to whimper, like a tired child. "Go away, Mal," said Perilla to her orother; "Leave her to me for a while, Perhaps it will help." Malcolm left the room and Perilla turned a sweet, sad face to the old

"Dear Mother Malden," she said. using the term for the first time, "can't we learn to love each other? Can't you believe-you must believe-that I loved Corey, just as you did. That we about." looked forward to a happy life together, shared now and then by your presence; you know-you must know that I would have given my life for him, had that been called for. This odd notion of yours that I could or would harm him is a thought put into your brain by some evil chance, and you must get rid of it. We both loved our darling." Perilla dropped to her knees beside the other. "Now that he is gone let us give that love to one another."

The girl's voice was vibrant with truth and sincerity, and for a moment the old woman gazed at her as if she meant to accede to her plea.

But at that moment Farman appeared in the doorway, a black frown on his face.

"I am leaving," he said, tersely, "but I will come here as often as I choose. A lawyer may visit his client at will. And after your treatment of me, Mrs. Malden, I may as well inform you that I will have no mercy on you. I will immediately take steps to have you accused of your husband's death. The evidence is so definite, so overvhelming, that you cannot escape arrest, trial and conviction. So be prepared for these things."

Malcolm, following, spoke sternly. "I suppose you knew you are putting yourself in grave danger. You will find New York investigation more drastic than in your home town. You will find that your legal knowledge will not go far, pitted against our great criminal lawyers. You will be adjudged the criminal, charged with malicious slander against this young woman, who, it can be proved a thousand times, had no thought toward her husband but that of loving affection."

"Well, we'll see about all that," returned Farman, with his ugly leer. "But just realize, young Mr. Fairfax, your sister is in desperate straits, and she will soon come to recognize that the way of the transgressor is hard." "What have I done?" cried Perilla, piteously. "Why are you so cruel to

And then Madame Malden tuned up again. Afterward, Perilla always said that it was only Farman's arrival at that critical moment that kept the old lady from succumbing to Perilla's plea for reconciliation, and frustrated her hopes of peace in the family.

"What have you done?" the termagant screamed. "You killed my boymy Corey-"

"Hush that," said Malcolm, striding toward her. "Hush that, or you'll find that this talk of lonatic asylums is real and not just make-believe. An expert brain doctor would send you to a retreat as soon as he had given you the once-over, and by Jove, it would be a good thing all round. I believe I'll send at once for a specialist."

As always, Madame Malden began to quiver and shrink at this, for Malcolm's tone denoted a firm intent. And Malcolm was frightened. He well knew, however absurd it was to suspect Perilla of crime, the mere men tion of such a possibility would stir up trouble, which would radiate in many directions. He tried a new argument.

"Do you know Fleming Stone is on this case?" he demanded. "You needn't think you can buck up against a man like that. Why, be'll turn your silly Farman inside out, once he gets at him. You'll see. He'll have that olly fathead to jail before he knows what's happened to him. And then, Madame Malden, what are you going to do, without a friend to help you? I mean a learned friend, a man of legal attainments and knowledge. You will be growled Malcolm. "I wish, Pril, you'd glad to fall back on Perilla's kindness, but I'm not sure even her kindness will memorial room in a hospital, you survive forever the shocks you are giving it."

"I'm not afraid," and the old lady masterful, convictions.

Man Still Is Rated As "Forest Enemy No. One"

Man still ranks as "Forest Enemy No. 1." More than half the fires is national forests this year, reports the Forest Service, were caused by man. The number of these fires was 5.777, as compared to 5,282 last year, and to an annual average of 4,691 over the 1931-34 period.

These fires were started by brush burners, by residents on land newly acquired by the forest servicemany of whom still believe that an annual "burning-over" is good for the woods-and by campers, hunters, recreationists, and tourists who have made greater use of national forest facilities this year than ever before

Briefly, the company will hereafter give the mortgagor a chance to enter a three-part partnership agreement. whereby the company assumes some farm is properly taken care of, and in return grants the privilege of skipping a payment of principal and interest any year when the price of corn on the Chicago market is below

The company in question recognizes that forced foreclosures, such as we have had too many of in the past, as well as the farmer, so the company is willing to enter into this sort of partnership agreement.

Perhaps it represents a new era of relationship between debtor and creditor. There are times when the debtor does not want any interference with his business on the part of the creditor, but it is safe to assume that in most farm mortgages such an arrangement as is above referred to would be to the advantage of both

Another thing: In agreeing to waive the annual payment on a mortgage any time the price of corn on the Chicago market is less than 51 cents this large eastern insurance company is admitting that the farmer should have at least that much money for his corn. An admission of that kind may be a long step in better understanding between the industrial east and the agricultural middle west .-Sac Sun, Sac City, Iowa.

KEEP HOPPING OR YOU DIE!

To be sure it's an old fable, but there is a daft creature in the animal kingdom called a frog. It is claimed that if you put a frog into a shallow pan of cold water and the water is very slowly brought to a boil, the frog will be so unconscious of the gradual change that it will be boiled to death when, at any moment, it might have jumped out.

Of course, there is a moral to this fable for all who are engaged in commerce. We should ask ourselves, "Are we adapting ourselves and our activities to changed and changing conditions? Or are we unaware of them, obstinately unwilling to admit that there are any changes, hiding in false security until the peaceful end comes?" If you have any reason to suspect that you are a frog, it might be a good time right now to do a bit of hopping. There's no telling how hot the water is-it may come to a boil before you know it .- Bulletin, Lachute,

What Do You Think?

There is more competition between towns now-a-days than there is between individual merchants, and the only way to meet this competition successfully is through cooperation.

The town newspaper offers a better method of meeting competition from other towns than any other way. The home paper is striving each week to attract trade to the home town, but without the cooperation of others, the task is only partly done.

A few merchants may offer special prices which will help to attract trade, but so long as others fail to assist in community building and take advantage of the others' advertised prices, just so long will most of the trade be attracted elsewhere.

With every merchant cooperating, refusing to take advantage of the others, but offering inducements of their own, then and only then, may we expect to attract the trade that our town justly deserves.

The newspaper is working for every person in the community, and advertising schedules in the home paper can be made flexible enough to suit every business house in town.

An advertisement from each business house in town every week for a few months would work wonders in the business life of the town.
